- Visited eleven families. Had a conversation with a Colonizationist; he thought we were fanatical on the subject of our reform operations; but when I quoted texts of Scripture, and endeavored to prove that all men have equal rights, he seemed to take a different view of the subject.

"-- Visited ten families; sold them six volumes of books. Brother D- has been with me to-day, and assisted me in conversing and praying with these families, and I trust a good impression was made. One man, who lives on a slaveholder's farm, while in conversation on the wrong of the system of slavery, remarked:

'No man has any right to meddle with the subject of slavery.'
"—— Supplied a slave who could read with a Rible, and one with a Testament. Had a conversation with a man who has been quite active against me in persecution, and he commenced in the usual way of the pro-slavery arguments by saying: We have them (the Africans) here amongst us, and we can not buy them, and send them off.' But stop, sir,' said L. 'If every person in the United States were to act upon the principles and teachings of our Saviour, by doing to others as we would they should do unto us—by loving our neighbor as ourselves, and by remembering those in bonds as being bound with them, how many slaves would there be left in bondage to-morrow morning at sunrise?' 'None,' said he. 'Well, then,' I replied, 'if we obey the injunction of the Bible, that will do away with slavery. And is it not safe to obey the Lord?' 'Yes,' said he, and after a lengthy conversation made all the concessions that I could ask of him for past offenses, and on parting, he held my hand in a manner indicating much feeling. To "--- Visited ten families, and had an interesting conversation with some slaveholders, to whom I spake more freely on the subject of our anti-slavery Christian reform than formerly; and they seemed to see more clearly their inconsistent posi-tion than before the late outrage, where they tried to accuse and banish from the State a civil, law-abiding, native citizen, but all in vain.

"— Spent a season with a young minister who seems to see the evil of the system of slavery, and the wrong of admitting slaveholders into the Church. But still he refuses to come out from them. May he yet receive the truth in the love of it.

"- Conversed with some professors of Christianity, who cling to the popular feeling of the South, as though the salvation of their souls depended upon yielding obedience to the goodness of Southern popularity.

"- I have given two Bibles and two Testaments to slaves that can read, besides distributing a large amount of religious tracts, which I trust will exert a good influence. Opposition seems to be receding, and persons may be approached on the evil of slavery, who, a year ago, would avoid conversation on that subject with an anti-slavery man, and who utterly refused to reason, now give us a hearing; and the young, on whom our hopes are founded, have access, in many places, to our documents, so that upon the whole, our prospects are encouraging. May God speed the right!"

NORTH-CAROLINA.

In North-Carolina we have but one missionary. He preaches in an extensive district to six churches, organized on the principle of non-fellowship with slaveholders. In the autumn of 1854, a revival of religion existed, in which, he says, "probably one hundred souls have been converted." His annual report of statistics is incomplete. He was, at the time, absent for a season in another State. Some individuals, formerly members of the "Methodist Episcopal Church. South," have joined the anti-slavery churches since that body expunged that portion of its discipline which referred to slavery. This State is an important missionary field, and it is hoped that means will be provided to enable the Executive Committee, as soon as practicable, to increase the number of missionaries, and to prosecute the work vigorously.

"Our Missionary writes, (April 28th:) "We have had refreshing times at some of our appointments; the cause of religion advances, though there is no general revival at present. The members of our churches as a general thing stand firm. We have dedicated one new house of worship where we some time since organized a church, of which you have been informed. We have no Sabbath-schools yet this season, but hope to have some in operation soon. There are, however, peculiar difficulties in the way. We are forbidden by law to teach colored children in our schools. There are free schools for the white population. Our country is thinly settled, and it is difficult to get up much interest in the way of Sabbath-schools, and every thing of this kind drags along.

"There is considerable excitement here, and throughout the South generally, on the subject of the extension of slavery. There is a strong effort made by the pro-slavery party to suppress the light. Some of the schools in the South have excluded Wayland's Moral Science on account of its anti-slavery sentiments. The slave-power knows well that if the people were enlightened, they would not toler-ate abominations practised by slaveholders, such as the selling of their own offspring, and causing female slaves to submit to the most shameful examinations before purchasing them."

He wrote July 25th, after stating his efforts in protracted meetings in two counties: "The anti-slavery cause is gaining ground here to some extent. George C. Mendershall, an eminent lawyer, recently sent his liberated slaves—a large number, I have heard that there was upwards of seventy-to Ohio. They were all well prepared, and a trusty man was employed to accompany them. I trust that this example will be influential, and be followed by others. Temperance is gaining among us. In nine sections candidates in favor of the Maine Law are out, and there will be a goodly number of votes given in their favor."

record observed by the strates of the contract of the strates of the strategy of the str

KANZAS.

In the Territory of Kanzas we have five missionaries. They are all located south of the Kanzas River, except one, who is at Leavenworth City; one is at Council City, one at Wabonsa, and two others are at Osawatomie.

All our missionaries go out from their several localities to various points to preach, a portion of their time, and must continue to do so while the settlements are small. The missionaries, with their families, in several instances, have been subjected to much hardship. They are making great sacrifices, and are experiencing trials which should secure for them the warmest sympathy of Christians and philanthropists everywhere. Some of them have suffered from sickness, the result mostly of exposure, from the want of suitable shelter in stormy weather.

The Territory in all its relations commands, and must continue to command, universal interest. The fraud and high-handed iniquity of the National Government in the matter of the repeal of the prohibition of slavery in the North-Western Territories, and the subsequent acts and delinquencies of the administration, together with the outrages of Missouri invaders, and the foreible election of a Missouri Slaveholding Legislature for Kanzas, with its enactments of despotism and blood, have at length moved the people of the Free States, and aroused them to abate these enormities, and slavery, at whose demands these outrages upon justice, freedom, and humanity have been perpetrated.

So long, therefore, as the slavery power shall, by violence, attempt to crush the people of Kanzas, and to establish slavery and its traffic in human flesh in that Territory, so long it will be the battle-ground for freedom; and the humanity, the religion, and the political power of the Free States will be commanded to save the Territory from the power of the invaders, and from the crime and curse of slavery.

We are giving, from time to time, in our papers, the Reports of the Missionaries relating to the state of things in Kanzas, and should quote from them more largely were it not that the press generally is, in regard to political affairs, in advance of our reports.

It is evident that for a time, the work of our missionaries in Kanzas must be peculiar; whether we look at it in view of the newness of the country, the difficulty of erecting any suitable buildings for dwellings, or for public worship, or at the excited and desperate state of the public mind, occasioned by the invasion of the Territory by hordes of organized barbarians from Missouri. While, therefore, the grand idea of Christian missions is salvation, the planting of Gospel institutions and the laying of all true foundations of society by our missionaries, in conflict with powerful opposing influences—political, mobocratic, and violent—will be regarded with the highest satisfaction by good men, though for a time, the direct efforts of the missionaries for the conversion of souls may be somewhat circumscribed by the circumstances in which they are placed, and the friends of the missions will be led to make greater efforts, and to struggle more earnestly at the "throne of grace" for the removal of the grand hindering cause—slavery.

Our missionaries are establishing Sabbath-schools, and will soon organize churches. Their labors in preaching are abundant, and as extended as health, distances, and limited means of conveyance will permit. Their audiences are attentive. The people are about to make efforts to erect houses of public worship, in part relying upon aid expected from their brethren of the States. It is hoped that there will be no want of aid in these important enterprises.

It is an encouraging fact that most of the missionaries in Kanzas of other societies, and of various denominations, are anti-slavery, and are strong against the slave-system; but there are a few missionaries and ministers there who are its supporters. Our missionaries give no heed to the laws prohibiting preaching against slavery, and praying for the slave, and are making full proof of their ministry in these respects as heretofore. They may be called to persecution, perhaps to imprisonment, or death itself, but their purpose is fixed.

From the correspondence of our missionaries we make some brief extracts.

FROM A MISSIONARY AT OSAWATOMIE, MARCH 13, 1855.

"This is the name of a town laid out between the Osage and the Pottawatomie creeks, and near their junction. On Sabbath I preached in a private house to a small but very attentive congregation; a few seemed deeply interested in both the forenoon and afternoon services. There are a few warm-hearted Christians here, who came to Kanzas for the express purpose of establishing and maintaining a free Gospel and free institutions, and to make Kanzas Territory a free State.

"This region of country is fast filling up; they come from the East, the North, and the South though at present there are more coming from North and South than from the East.

"The section of country in this part of the Territory, now open for preemption, is thirty miles square, and will doubtless soon be as densely settled as any now open, unless it be along the Kanzas river. Timber is here generally better, and more abundant than in most regions.

"Sabbath, April 8. I preached in a log cabin fourteen feet square, twelve miles from here. It was well filled; a good impression seemed to be made. I expect to spend one half of my Sabbaths here, and one Sabbath in four in the vicinity, about twelve miles from this; and employ the remainder of my time in visiting destitute places wherever I can find them. I may occasionally make trips that shall occupy a number of weeks."

He notices (Aug. 17) the sickness prevailing, induced by unusual and prolonged rains following the extreme heat of the summer, and various causes peculiar to the circumstances of the settlers, which may hereafter mostly be avoided; and adds:

"Our meetings and Sabbath-school have both been interesting, and at times solemn; but for a few weeks, in consequence of sickness, and partly owing to our having to leave the house we had formerly occupied, and go to the grove, they have been but thinly attended. We much need a meeting-house. A committee has been appointed to consider the matter, propose plans, etc."

At a later date he wrote:

"The mass of the emigrants who remain here are above par for enterprise and sharpness of mind. A few are devoted Christians—some moralists; but many swear, drink, and break the Sabbath. Perhaps one tenth part of the people are Germans, Scotch, English, and Irish. Not much of a public nature has yet been done on Temperance and Education. Slavery and Anti-slavery discussions and efforts are made all the time. Errors—Universalism, refined modern Infidelity. Now and then a Romanist is met with.

"To me it seems manifest that the frequent outrages committed by the Missourians on the people of Kanzas are developing not only a warlike spirit, but also many unhallowed passions in bosoms hitherto strangers to them. The outrages are often told over, and the blood boils anew at every recital. Children also catch the fire. The carrying of deadly weapons by Northern men is also becoming quite common, and is a practice very painful for me to witness. In never carry them. In all ordinary cases I feel much safer without them. I may be mistaken, but to me it seems that a war with a foreign national enemy would not rouse so many evil passions, and present so great a hindrance to the Gospel, as the outrages committed by the Missourians, and connived at by our national government, do in the minds of the people of Kanzas."

Another missionary, who at first resided at Lawrence some six months, and labored some there, but more extensively in the country about, located in the spring at Osawatomie. He wrote, (Osawatomie, May 26:)

"We had to commence anew again. We put up a small log-house without one foot of lumber, split our stuff for floors, doors, and window-casing, and were under the necessity of going into our house before we had the large cracks filled up. Yesterday there came up a tremendous rain-storm with heavy winds, so that we were perfectly drenched with water, not a dry thing in the house. I fear that such exposures will prove serious to my family, for my wife's constitution is very weak at best. I am at home but a part of my time, and when here need rest, which I can not obtain under such circumstances.

"I have been obliged to prepare a field in which to keep my pony and cow.

Labor is so high that my means will not admit of hiring much. Provisions of all kinds are also very high here; flour is $16 per harrel.

"I presume you will get the facts in regard to the Missourians coming into the Territory to vote, and of their abuse and violence, long before my communications reach you, so I will not state the proceedings of the Atchison men. But the worst accounts you have received of the brutal conduct of these creatures does not tell the whole story.

"Last Sabbath I spent at the Baptist mission among the Ottawa Indians, and preached to them through an interpreter. It was the first time that I ever presented the Gospel to the poor Indian. There was good attention, and much interest manifested."

He wrote, Aug. 29:

"I preach at this place, also at Pottowatomie—on the California read—at Hickory Point, and also at other places where we have not regular appointments.

"We have formed a small class (Wesleyan) at Osawatomie. The community, generally, where I go are profane—Sabbath-breakers, and many are dissipated. The majority of the emigrants are irreligious, but a large number of them are of good morals, and a portion of them are pious. The settlers of the Territory called a general meeting at Lawrence last June to take into consideration the relation the Hissouri Kanzas Legislature sustained to the people of Kanzas, at which they unanimously agreed that it was illegally got up, and that they would trample its laws under their feet.

"Its laws prohibit ministers preaching against slavery, or praying against it. Those who violate the law are liable to be punished and driven from the Territory.

I have violated those laws, and shall continue to do so."

FROM A MISSIONARY AT WABONSA.

"I preach at four points; at Wabonsa, where I reside, seventy miles west of Lawrence on the south side of the Kanzas river; St. George's, five miles above, or north side; Ashland, twelve miles farther up, and Zeander, seven miles south-west.

No churches have yet been organized. There are numbers of evangelical Christians at two of my preaching places, (Congregationalists and Baptists,) but at the other places there are scarcely any professors of religion except Campbellites. Our congregations are composed almost entirely of adults, and more than two thirds of them are men. There are but few children here. We have a Bible-class at Zeander, and expect to have a Sabbath-school at Wabonsa when our school-house is built, which will be within a few months.

"There is no other evangelical preaching at any of the four points at which I preach. The people listen with interest and solemnity to the word, and some seem anxious, and to feel the force of the truth; yet, like most new countries, we have few professors of religion, and few of those who do profess to be Christians, give much evidence of Christian character. In regard to morals, perhaps few communities even in the East are much superior to the one in which I labor. I must make one exception, however, and it is a serious one. There is much Sabbath desceration here. There are but few that scruple to travel on the Sabbath, when convenient, and it is by no means uncommon for even professors of religion to work on the Sabbath. Many deny the sacredness of the day. We very much need, for general circulation, such a work as that of 'Edwards on the Sabbath.' It would, I think, do great good here. If I had fifty or a hundred copies, I could use them to advantage. The contribution of ten, or twenty, or fifty dollars, by some benevolent individual at the East, to have this little work scattered widely here would, I think, do much for Kanzas. The American Tract Society, I believe, are accustomed to furnish the numbers of Dr. Edwards' work for three dollars per hundred.

"On the Temperance question the people are nearly all right—are in favor of a prohibitory law. We fear, however, that we will have a strong contest on that subject soon. We expect quite a large colony of Germans to settle in our vicinity. There is a disposition manifested on the part of the American settlers to insist upon the Maine Law as the law of our community."

He notices the opposition to slavery in the Territory, but repudiates, as do all our missionaries, the black-law feeling which to a great extent prevails among free State men. The prospects of freedom, however, are encouraging, notwithstanding the dark cloud that seemed to hang over them. He adds: "The authority of the Missouri mob convened at the Shawnee Mission we utterly repudiate."

FROM A MISSIONARY AT COUNCIL CITY.

"The first Sabbath after our arrival, the people assembled at nine o'clock, and organized an Union Sabbath-school. They appointed me Superintendent, with an assistant, and at eleven o'clock I preached, and also at 4 P.M. The people seemed to be interested in the word of life, and we closed the exercises with a prayer-meeting.

"The slave was mentioned in prayer, and a few words spoken against slavery. Some Missourians were present, and it was thought that they would report, on their return home, that there was an abolitionist minister at Council City, and that slaveholders would be exasperated to deeds of violence. The influence of slavery in Kanzas is powerful, and many who have settled here from the free States, though opposed to slavery extension, are at the same time enemies to Abolitionism.

"There is a great battle to be fought between Slavery and Freedom, and if a few thousand genuine anti-slavery men could settle here, not only Kanzas, but even Missouri would be redeemed."

Mark Street Control of the Street

He wrote at a later date:

"Our meetings for preaching, prayer, and of the Sabbath-school and Bible-class are regularly kept up, are well attended, and are interesting. Last week we had a debate in the Lyceum, on the question, 'Is it right, in the formation of a State Government, to exclude free negroes?" It was decided in the negative.

"We have no church organization yet. The people are much divided in their religious sentiments, and many are not sound on the slavery question; but they are generally moral, and a large proportion of them are professors of religion."

Our missionary has not yet built a house, and has, with his son, lived in their large covered wagon. They have of late suffered severely, in common with many of the people, from sickness. Measures are being taken in reference to the erection of a house of worship, which is greatly needed.

FROM A MISSIONARY AT LEAVENWORTH CITY.

He wrote, July 17th:

"This town is situated on the Missouri River, three miles below the fort of the same name. It was laid out last October, and now contains about two hundred houses, and a population of nearly one thousand, and is increasing with great rapidity. Present indications point it out as the future commercial emporium of the northern part of the State. What will interest you more is, that this town which was laid out mainly under pro-slavery influences, now contains a decided free State majority. Free State men claim at least two thirds of the population, and the pro-slavery party confessed to a minority by obtaining from Missouri large numbers of voters at the last as well as the first election."

He wrote, August 5th:

"In my discourse last Sabbath, I took occasion to speak calmly but decidedly on the subject of slavery; some were pleased, others raged. It is proposed to give me a coat of tar and feathers, if I dare to preach in town again. Such threats do not at all move me. I expect to preach as much as I expect the coming of the Sabbath."

August 27th, he wrote:

"I have appointments at Leavenworth City, Grasshopper Falls, on 'Seven Mile Creek,' 'Nine Mile Creek,' and in 'Salt Creek Valley,'

"At Leavenworth City a Methodist, (North,) Church is organized; the preachers and members are the friends of liberty and of God. In their meeting-house, when completed, I expect to preach for the present. A Lutheran minister is here; a free State man, who preaches and teaches. There is a Methodist, (South,) minister who has a church of about a half-dozen members. The Roman Catholics are building extensively here for school and church purposes.

"The Sabbath is much desecrated. You must remember that we have been without law for the most part.

"The question of free State and slave State absorbs every other topic of in-

GENERAL VIEW.

From the preceding tables, statistics, extracts, and brief notices of the separate fields of missionary labor in different States and Territories, some idea may be formed of the work in the Home field. Some further facts and views, bearing not upon specific fields alone, but upon the entire case, may be appropriate.

It will be noticed that twenty "Revivals of Religion," have been enjoyed at our Mission Stations. The larger number of hopeful conversions reported have taken place in these revivals. As these seasons of refreshing are secured only by the aid of the Holy Spirit, the most humble dependence upon him should be felt, the most earnest prayers be offered, and efforts be made by ministers and churches to secure so rich a blessing. Nothing so exorcises the unclean infidel spirits and delusions abounding in our land, as the word and spirit of God in revivals of religion.

Home missionaries are greatly encouraged when the friends of Missions rightly estimate and pray for the revival of God's work in the several fields of their labor, and are strengthened when reports reach them of revivals in the old States. When the Spirit is poured out from on high, the worth of souls is felt in our churches-prayer abounds-the claims of the world and of Christian Missions are realized, and the "willing mind" presses its "whole-souled" offerings to the treasury of the Lord joyfully.

Sabbath-school and Bible-class instruction can not be too much valued, and we rejoice in the evidence that an increased interest is being secured in these departments. One of their benefits, and not the least, is their influence in preventing Sabbath desecration. Where Sabbath-schools are neglected, the children and youth are to a fearful extent left to profane that day, and but comparatively few attend upon divine worship. The habit of attention and study in the Sabbath-school gives them the power of listening with increased advantage to the word preached in the sanctuary. The impressions made by faithful teachers, also, are often the means of salvation.

It is an object of the Association to give, by seasonable aid, strength and early independence to the missionary churches. As in the case of individuals, so with churches, there is danger that some, by receiving aid, will imbibe the habit of dependence so as not to assume their own support. It is the conviction of the Executive Committee that aid should be given but for a moderate period, and that it should so be understood when the first appropriations are made.

It is desirable, when it is practicable, that each church should have its pastor, and as soon as possible wholly maintain him. It will, however, be seen that we aid missionaries, having often two or more very feeble churches. The Home Missionary cause might be relieved, and in its necessary work be greatly strengthened, if two or more feeble churches, contiguous, would unite with a purpose to sustain unaided a minister. The Association would then have more means at command to aid single churches, that from their location could not unite; or to employ missionaries in extended and sparse districts where churches are not yet formed. A minister could deliver one sermon on each Sabbath to each congregation. The brethren could. when the preacher was not with them, at different times, in connection with the ordinary service of worship, read the Scriptures and exercise their gifts in presenting the truth, in exhortation and prayer, and often also in reading printed sermons of high value. If, however, one part of the day was spent by the whole congregation, as is now the case in some instances, in giving and receiving Bible and Sabbath-school instruction, it would give great spiritual strength to a people, and result under God in salvation and an increase of the Church, especially from the youth, who thus trained would be prepared for good service in the cause of Christ. With this plan more churches could be supplied with the preaching of the Gospel, and the great ends of the Church and the ministry might be carried out.

Although emigration from other countries has been reduced this year, the work goes on; new causes may early give it fresh impetus. The emigration from the Eastern States is great, and from the West the tide rolls on to the last habitation in the far West. The sickness of this year at the West has not, it is believed, resulted in the loss of life as extensively as in some former years, and will probably not hinder much the emigration of 1856. Whether this shall be from the old States or from foreign lands, the varieties of unbelief and immorality will abound, and nothing but the pure Gospel and Christian Missions can control their power.

Emigration, so rife in some of our Western States, is one grand cause of the weakness of the churches. It has its evils as well as advantages, and where Christian professors are so charged with its spirit, and the desire to advance their temporal interests, as to remove every few years to new States and Territories, the effect upon their peligious character is very injurious. But its greatest evil, perhaps, lies in its influence upon their children, who with their parents tossing upon the wave of adventure, rarely have the necessary advantages of regular training at home, or of intellectual and religious education in society.

It will be seen in the several notices in this Report of the different States, especially the free States, and of the work of our missionaries, that essentially the same forms of error exist in all. From the hoary system of Romanism, down through the varieties of infidelity and delusion, society suffers and it is constantly laboring under their impositions and evil influences. At brief intervals of time, new forms of mischief, or old forms revived with slight changes, arise and flourish, carrying souls to perdition. Spiritualism is the latest bait thrown out to the credulous, and is sought after by some who, having no confidence in God, are seeking to fill a void in their souls, which end their evil natures can not accomplish. It professes benevolence, and claims to be the liberator of the mind from darkness. But it hates evangelical religion and casts contempt upon the word of God, admitting or rejecting its several parts, as is found convenient for its ends.

The importance of establishing missions of the right character throughout Kanzas has given to the past year a new interest in this particular. We have felt some disappointment that the plan of going out as organized churches has not been pursued, and hope that Christian emigrants will organize for this purpose before starting, or as early as possible after arriving there. Society must be formed there upon the true Christian model. Let the people of God decide this matter by a quick and earnest movement, and give the means to carry forward the missionary enterprise, to promote the establishment of churches, the erection of houses of worship, and the means of education. The sickness existing in Kanzas, it is believed, is owing to extraordinary causes, which may not soon arise again. A great increase of population there, and the establishment of a free State government in 1856 is anticipated, notwithstanding the violence which opposes the object.

Should State auxiliaries, after the model of the Illinois Home Missionary Association, be formed in several of the Western States, that have gained some strength, and succeed in raising funds, great advantages would accrue to the cause, and more could be done by the Association to extend the work in the new States and Territories.

Increasing interest is felt in our missions in the slave States, and it is believed that if Christians would now aid liberally in the work their highest hopes might be realized. The very struggles with slavery, and the unsuccessful efforts of the enemies of liberty to put down freedom of speech are encouraging, especially as our missionaries make opposition to slavery a prominent point of their instructions and discussions, and increasingly so as the struggle in Kanzas has had a tendency to excite not merely the North, everywhere, to efforts against slavery, but the South also for its defense and extension. Never were our operations in Kentucky more interesting, and Mr. Fee and other missionaries are pressing on with high anticipations. We wish to accelerate their work, add to their number, and extend and make more efficient the labors of colporteurs. Among the whites, the slaves, and all, the importance of reading the Scriptures to families and groups, with prayer and exhortation, can not be over-estimated. Bible-reading and instruction prevent superstition, fanaticism, infidelity, and immorality, and store the mind with converting and saving truths.

From the foregoing reports and extracts something is indicated, not only of the work done, but of the aims, principles, and anticipations of the Association. Being at once a Home and Foreign Missionary Association, we are called directly to survey our own new world, with its multiform and wonderful interests, its rapid growth, and all its institutions. It is our business so to bring the Gospel to bear upon the whole people in all their variety, as God may give us wisdom, power, and facilities, and thus to make, as far as we may, this vast country the glory of the earth and a sample of what the world will be in its new and regenerated state.

It is evident that the practical effect of working at home, in a field of such vast dimensions, while it secures individuality and minute application, enlarges our vision and gives scope to our efforts, so that we are prepared for practical working abroad. The Gospel is the same, and the human heart the same, the world over. Our experiments here, under God, will solve many problems, and fit us for labors in individual missions in foreign lands, and for cooperation in enlarged efforts for the salvation of the entire race. Besides, it will be seen that we have by nature, or incorporated from other lands, many of the cardinal difficulties to contend with that exist in the foreign field. While we are not open idolators, we are, as a people, worshippers of Mammon; while we have not Mohammedanism in form, Mormonism, with its vast harems and its wives in indefinite numbers, exhibits in this country a polygamy far exceeding that of the ordinary heathen. We have also, in the system of American slavery, the abrogation of marriage and the family ties, with universal concubinage.

The old world has its despotism, but where does it exist so absolute and cruel as in the slave system here? where is governmental action, state and national, so entirely against the rights of colored men, and of those who virtuously oppose the wrongs done them?

Have they Papacy in Europe? Have we not the same system extending here? Are not the crimes of the older nations rapidly increasing among us? Have we not as well as they infidelity, and are we not tending to their practice in the abolition of the Sabbath? Have we not intemperance and licentiousness, degradation and ignorance in our cities, and in vast sections of the country? If we have not cannibalism, we have the lynching and murder of white men, and the burning of slaves!

From this view it is obvious that the Home Missionary work is unique, and its policy must correspond with the state of things existing among us. If we are to succeed, it will be through the Gospel of Christ; its practical bearing upon iniquity must be understood and its applications made. Godlike principles must be adopted, and self-sacrificing missionaries, Christians, and churches, must carry them

Who that loves his country; that grouns in spirit in view of its sins; that trembles when he remembers that God is just, yet hopes still in his mercy; who that has liberty in his soul, that sympathizes with millions of slaves, with the panting fugitive and with freemen struggling in Kanzas; who that hates iniquity and would give purity, temperance, freedom, and salvation to this land; who that would prepare the Church to go with clean hands to teach heathen nations the Gospel of Christ; who that relies upon the promises of God and looks forward in hope of the Jubilee of the world, the Millennium of the "latter day glory," would not consecrate himself, his heart, his hand, his tongue, his all, to this glorious service?

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Missionaries-Rev. S. V. BLAKESLER, Mrs. BLAKESLER.

In our last Annual Report it was said that large expenditures would be required for this mission during the year then commencing, or some change must be sought in the direction of its labors. The mission had been commenced, in accordance with a vote of the Association, passed at the sixth annual meeting, more particularly for the benefit of the large number of Chinese who were at that time flocking into California. Mr. Blakeslee had resided in San Francisco, and felt a very strong desire that this class of foreigners should be met on their arrival by those who should show themselves their friends in all things, while they labored especially for their spiritual welfare. His acquaintance with California, his ability to meet a portion of the foreigners that were continually arriving there, and speak to them in their own tongue, the deep interest he felt in an effort to give the Chinese the Gospel, and the fact that there was then no missionary or minister laboring for the religious welfare of the foreigners there, led the committee and the Association to resolve on the commencement of a mission for the Chinese and other foreigners of California, and appoint Mr. and Mrs. Blakeslee as missionaries there.

Upon their arrival at San Francisco they found that they had been preceded by a missionary of the Presbyterian Board, directly from China, well prepared by a knowledge of the language, habits, etc., of the Chinese to enter immediately upon effective labors in their behalf. For a time Mr. B. felt confident that the number of immigrants of this class was sufficiently large to warrant the labors of two missionaries with them. A lot of ground was therefore purchased for the mission, a building erected for the missionary, and the duties of the station entered upon.

As Mr. Blakeslee could speak the Spanish language with facility, his labors were directed more and more towards the Spaniards, until he was almost entirely occupied in efforts to promote their welfare, and in preaching once each Sabbath to a small Congregational church of Americans, formed in a destitute part of the city.

He says he has

"Sabbath after Sabbath, and often day by day, gone through the foreign portions of the city, particularly among the Spaniards, 'visiting families and small gatherings of friends or fellow-boarders, reading the Bible, talking with them upon the great truths of Christianity, pointing out to them the way of salvation through Jesus Christ, urging upon them the obligations of religion and the importance of a holy life, distributing Bibles, religious books and tracts, and in every possible way endeavoring to do the work of an ambassador of Jesus to the perishing.' He regularly visited the foreigners in the hospitals, and sat by the sick and the dying, telling them the story of a crucified Redeemer, and reading to them from the Gospel and

 Mr. Blakeslee was encouraged to hope that these labors were owned of God, and that some were led to receive Christ, and were instructed in the way of holiness. He adds:

"I have also been nearly all the time engaged in teaching a few persons, and preparing the way for reaching them more effectually than through their own language. In all cases I have been cordially welcomed among the foreigners whom I have visited, and I think I can say with confidence my field is one of importance, of hope, and of promise, though one accompanied with pecular difficulties. I have endeavored to acquaint myself fully with the feelings, the wants, the characters, and the means for the improvement of the foreigners, here, and I do not see occasion to change my opinion that this mission occupies a position of vast importance for exerting an influence upon the heathen and Romanists who come here, and through them back upon their native countries."

He gives the following reasons for preferring to labor among the Spaniards rather than the Chinese:

"I can speak their language; I have access to greater numbers of them; no other missionary is laboring among them. I prefer it also, because of the relations we sustain through them to the nations south of us, with whom we are coming into nearer and more intimate connection, and because their minds are more open to the

Mr. Blakeslee continued these labors, and his services in the American church until May. He had, however, advised the Executive Committee that to prepare him to labor efficiently for this class of foreigners would require an expenditure of four or five thousand dollars, besides his salary, which he reckoned only $600. The Executive Committee had not the means of making such an appropriation, if they had deemed it wise to do so, which they did not, and it became to them a question whether they should not abandon the mission and in vite Mr. Blakeslee to another field of labor. At this juncture a committee was appointed, at a joint meeting of Presbytery and the Congregational Association convened at San Francisco, to request the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association to release Mr. Blakeslee from our service, to permit him to be associated with Rev. Mr. Brayton in conducting the "Pacific," a religious paper sustained by the above-named denominations, and published in San Francisco. As Mr. Blakeslee regarded the field of labor thus opened to him as a very important one, which he was quite willing to enter, the committee consented to his release, and his relations to us as a missionary ceased.

The expenditure from our treasury in behalf of this mission, for the eight months of this year in which Mr. B. remained in it, was but $100. It is believed that the property belonging to the mission there will, when sold, refund to the Association nearly all that has been expended by us for the mission since Mr. Blakeslee landed in California.

MISSION TO THE COPTS-EGYPT.

Missionaries-Rev. C. F. MARTIN, LARARUS S. MURAD, Mrs. MARTIN.

MR. and Mrs. Martin and Mr. Murad sailed from New-York for London, on their way to Egypt, Oct. 12, 1854. They left London the 10th of November, and arrived at Cairo, December 2.

While at London Mr. Martin and Mr. Murad were present, by invitation, at a meeting of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, and met with a very cordial reception. Mr. Martin says:

"At the invitation of the secretary, I made a brief statement in regard to the occasion of our mission, and our reasons for believing that the providence of God called to the occupation of that field. I also referred to Brother Murad, and some matters of interest in his history. He was called on and made a few remarks, which were very well received. I was afterwards desired to make some statements in regard to the American Missionary Association, and accordingly did so. The Committee seemed much interested. At the close of the remarks, Rev. Mr. James led in prayer, committing us to the care of our Heavenly Father. Much feeling was manifested, and each of the members gave us his hand as we retired, affectionately commending us to God. It was a precious privilege to be there, and the more grateful because so wholly unexpected."

At Cairo, our missionaries were very kindly received by Rev. Mr. Leider, the English missionary to the Copts, and welcomed to the field. "There was," he said, "room for a dozen missionaries, were they the proper men, who would labor together in a brotherly way."

On their way from Marseilles, the missionaries found they were accompanied by four Jesuit priests and several "Sisters of Mercy" going to Cairo, to establish a large school and a hospital. Arriving at Alexandria they found that two missionaries of the Associate Reformed Church, whose Board is located in Philadelphia, had preceded them a few days. At Cairo they were joined by Rev. Mr. Barnett, from a mission of the same Board, at Damasous. The labors of these brethren are to be chiefly for the Jews. In about four months' time eight missionaries, male and female, among them four ordained ministers, arrived in Egypt, and commenced their labors there.

The population of Cairo Mr. Martin supposes to be at least 300,000, of whom the greater number are Mohammedans. Of the Copts there are thought to be 20,000 in the city, and 217,000, according to the last census, in all Egypt.

The location of our missionaries at Cairo is only regarded as temporary. At the time they reached there, it was not thought safe for them to ascend the river Nile, or occupy much time in explorations. Some facilities for studying the languages of the country, and acquainting themselves with the influences operating upon the people were offered by a residence at Cairo, that could not be so well had elsewhere. These and other reasons determined them to spend the first season at Cairo.

The labors of Mr. and Mrs. Martin are at present almost wholly preparatory, as they are compelled to give nearly all their attention to the study of the language. Mr. Murad, besides giving them assistance in this, has been able to labor some as a colporteur, selling Bibles and Testaments, distributing religious publications, and conversing with the people. In these labors he has been active. Mr. Martin wrote, March 29:

"We recently obtained a small number of Italian Testaments, which Brother Murad has been selling with some success. We have just seen Rev. Mr. Loundes, agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society at Malta, and have made arrangments with him to send us a full supply of Bibles and Testaments of all kinds needed here. It is the result of the experience of those long in the missionary work, that in ordinary cases the giving of Bibles and Testaments is injudicious, often an absolute waste. Formerly, it was the custom to give indiscriminately; and it was thought a great matter that persons would receive the Word as a gift; but in many such cases the Bibles have been sold for a mere trifle for wrapping-paper, and the covers used to bind other books. In one case in Damascus the Romanists burned four hundred Bibles at once on the roof of a church."

For themselves, and the English and American travellers in Egypt, Mr. Martin says:

"We have an English service in the afternoon of each Sabbath. In this service we unite with our brethren of the Associate Reformed Church. Mr. Leider's service (of the Episcopal order) is held in the morning. We have as yet had but a small congregation, but quite as many as we had expected."

Mr. Martin intimates that we may not expect to hear of opposition to the work yet. But he hears of hindrances sought to be placed in the way of their labors, like the following:

"As I have written you we have been most cordially received by Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Leider, the missionary of the Church Missionary Society. But a clergyman of the Church of England, who has been staying in Cairo for some months on account of his health among other reasons, has taken the opportunity to warn the ecclesiastics of the churches here against us; telling them that their ordination is better than ours; indeed, that ours is no of validity; giving them, also, questions to propose to us; for example, 'Are you a bishop?' 'By whom ordained?' etc. This is nothing new for this gentleman; he has done the same thing for other American missionaries elsewhere."

NINTE ANNUAL REPORT.

American slavery, as a reproach to American Christians, and inconsistent with the spirit of the Gospel, meets the American missionary in Egypt, as everywhere else, hindering the progress of his work, and the conversion of the world. In Alexandria, Mr. Martin says:

"Brother Murad received from a gentlemen a copy of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' in Armenian, printed in Vienna. He was afterwards told by the Armenian bishop here, that a large edition of this was published at the expense of an Armenian, who wished its circulation among Armenians, particularly in Turkey, for the express purpose of injuring the influence of the American missionaries with that people. He wished to give them an opportunity to reply to the missionaries when urging duty upon them: 'Physician, heal thyself;' 'Purify first the churches at home, then come and seek to cleanse us."

Mr. Martin attended a religious service held by the Coptic Bishop, at Alexandria, which he thus describes:

"The church is divided into three apartments of nearly equal size. The first is separated from the second by a partition of lattice-work; the second from the third by a solid partition, with occasional openings for doors, overbung with curtains. This third may be called the Most Holy Place, in which is the altar, etc.; the second is the place of worship, and those who enter it are expected to take off their shoes; this, however, is not required of strangers. On the walls are rude pictures of the Virgin and St. George. The outer portion is not much used ordinarily. The apartments for the women are on each side, running crosswise, and separated from the others by partitions of close lattice-work.

"The Bishop was scated in the second portion, near the entrance, having in one hand the crosier or staff of office, surmounted by the brazen figure of a dragon, and in the other a small cross. Soon the vestments of some boys who were to officiate in the services were brought him, which he blessed, making thrice the sign of the cross over each. These vestments were of white, with the figure of the cross upon them, in colors of red and green. The Bishop alone was seated; but as soon as we entered, he sent for chairs for us. The service consisted of reading from the Coptic Scriptures, of prayers and services mostly in Coptic; some of the prayers in Arabic. It was a dull and uninteresting performance to a spectator. except as a novelty. There was some appearance of devotion in a few of those present; but for the most part it seemed rather a dead form. There were not more than half a dozen persons present, besides those who took special part in the services. Much of the reading was by the boys above mentioned, who seemed quite pleased with an opportunity to show off, and accordingly 'spoke up loud and plain,' occasionally looking at us to observe the effect of the services. Sometimes the boys made mistakes, and then were chided in no gentle terms, such as, 'You are blind,' 'What are you doing, you dog?' The priest had a censer, which he filled, and carried into the Most Holy Place; then brought it out, and swung it until the and carried into the Most Boly Place; then brought it out, and swung it until the whole space was filled with incense, being also careful to swing it sufficiently before each picture of the saints in the room. Each one who took part in the ceremonies prostrated himself before the Bishop, touching his face to the ground, then rising kissed his hand and the cross which he held in it. Yet the 'succession' of this Bishop was, I suppose, unquestioned, and he was a professed representative of Him who said to his disciples: 'He that is greatest among you shall be your servant; and whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased.'

"When the services, which occupied something more than an hour, were concluded, we were invited up into the Bishop's room. He informed us that, on our account, he had ordered the services to be shortened, as they would regularly have occupied two hours or more. He informed us that the Patriarch was about establishing a school at Cairo, designed to be of the first class, in which, he said, twelve languages were to be taught. This shows that the people are at least moving a little. The same reverence which we had seen paid to the Bishop during the service, was continued elsewhere, although not carried to the same extent; for none of his attendants approached him, but with uncovered feet; none sat in his presence without his permission; and when they approached to give him any thing, or to receive from him, they uniformly kissed his hand. Our souls were saddened by the sight of such superstition as we had seen in the service, and the subjection here apparent; and indignant at such assumption on the part of a professed representative of Christ. We longed to proclaim to these people that sublime truth, so vital to true Christianity: 'Ye have one Master, even Christ, and ye ALL are BRETHREN.

"All we saw at these interviews, and during the service, confirmed our previous ideas of the essential formality and corruption of the Coptic Church, and of the futility of attempting to reform the present organization; while it gave us clearer ideas of the greatness and difficulty of our work, and of the necessity of the influence of the Divine Spirit to regenerate this people. If the Lord be with us, we have no idea that, with our present views, we shall be able long to maintain friend-ship with the ecclesiastics of the Coptic Church."

It is expected that our missionaries will ascend the Nile, leaving Cairo by the middle of November, to obtain personal acquaintance with places where the population is more exclusively Coptic. Whether they will select a location and remain there, or return to Cairo, after an absence of three months, can not yet be determined. They will go instructed to remain, if they can do so consistently with health and the best ultimate interests of their mission.

From a carefully prepared estimate of the probable expense of this mission for the coming year, the committee are led to conclude that it will be from $1500 to $1800, a sum considerably larger than was at first apprehended, and for which they hope the friends of missions, and of this mission in particular, will make enlarged contributions.

MARQUESAS MISSION.

In April last the Secretaries of the Association published an "Appeal" in the Independent (N. Y.) for aid in behalf of the Marquesas Islands. It contained a brief description of the islands, their number, extent, population, and productions, and stated that Robert Mills, accompanied by his wife, a native Marquesan, and daughter of the principal chief of one of the largest of the group, was then in New-York endeavoring to obtain a missionary to go to those islands with him, and establish a mission there. Mr. Mills' account of the condition of the people, the cessation of cannibalism, and the introduction of commerce, and of his unsuccessful efforts in various quarters to obtain missionaries for them, was given somewhat at length, together with a portion of the testimonials received by the committee concerning Mr. Mills and his purpose, from distinguished clergymen in New-York City and elsewhere, and from ship-masters and owners of vessels, and persons who had known him on the islands. These were of such a kind as to leave no doubt of the sincerity with which he was prosecuting his efforts, nor that his influence among the natives, which was very great, had been always on the side of order and good morals. It was also stated that this matter had been laid before the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, and that they would gladly have undertaken the work of establishing a mission at the Marquesas Islands, if their funds would have allowed, but that they had previously undertaken as much for the foreign field as the state of the treasury would at that time permit. So peculiar, however, were the circumstances of this case, that the Committee declared their willingness to commence this mission if two thousand dollars could be raised for this special purpose; and they requested contributions for the object.

NINTH ANNUAL REPORT.

This Appeal was afterwards published in the June number of the American Missionary, and was so generously responded to that the Committee soon resolved that with the divine blessing they would proceed to execute the work thus providentially committed to them, and establish the mission. Mr. B. N. Seymour, a graduate of Williams College, Mass., and a licentiate of the Union Theological Seminary, was appointed the missionary. He was ordained at Granville, Mass., June 20.

Mr. Seymour was subsequently married to Miss Morse, of Triangle, N. Y., whose testimonials of qualifications for the missionary work were highly satisfactory to the committee.

At a special meeting of the Executive Committee, held Aug. 4, Dr. Thomas C. Coxhead, a graduate of the Medical College at Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Phebe R. Platt, of Oberlin, Ohio, were appointed to this mission. Dr. Coxhead had been under appointment of the Executive Committee for the Mendi mission.

. A farewell meeting was held with these missionaries and Mr. and Mrs. Mills, Sabbath evening, Aug. 5, in the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, at the close of which Dr. Coxhead and Miss Platt were united in marriage.

The missionary company sailed the next day, Aug. 6, in the George Law for San Francisco, expecting to take passage from there for the Marquesas, in some of the numerous vessels visiting the islands of the South Pacific for fruit, or in vessels sailing for Australia.

Former Attempts to Christianize the Islands.

In the month of April, 1797, Messrs, John Harris and William Cook, under the care of the London Missionary Society, landed in St. Christina, one of the Marquesas Islands. Before the departure of the ship in which they had just arrived, Harris determined to abandon the island, which he accordingly did. Cook, then a young man twenty-two years of age, was thus left there alone. He was kindly treated by the chiefs, and in a time of scarcity was supplied by them with food. one year after his arrival he boarded a passing vessel, and was providentially prevented from returning to St. Christina, and was left at what he called Sir Henry Martyn's, sixty miles N. W. of St. Catherine's, (probably Roa Poua, or Adams' Island.) He remained there seven months, and was very kindly treated by the chiefs and people, when he sailed for England for the purpose of more effectually serving the cause of his mission, and to represent to the Society the propriety of sonding more missionaries to the islands. He landed in England, May, 1799.

In October, 1834, after a lapse of thirty-six years from the time Mr. Cook left, Messrs. Rodgerson and Stallworthy landed at St. Christina to renew the mission, but the circumstances were now changed, and "were so trying and discouraging that after a few years they left it." (Brown's History of Missions.)

In 1832, the missionaries of the American Board at the Sandwich Islands, became very much interested in an effort to commence a mission in the Marquesas Islands. The Prudential Committee discouraged the undertaking, and advised against it. The missionaries, however, went forward, and in August, 1833, Messrs. Alexander, Armstrong, and Parker, from the Sandwich Islands, landed at Nun-Hiva. Mr. Armstrong, in giving a description of the island, says:

"Its elevation is not so great as that of either the Society or Sandwich Islands. This is also true of all the group." . . . "The valleys are exceedingly fertile and beautiful. Nature seems to revel in luxuriance. Numerous rivulets running from the mountains, and plentiful showers of rain, keep every thing that grows in a flourishing state, so that the spontaneous productions of the land more than support the inhabitants without any industry on their part."

He then describes the people as first seen, and adds:

"The Marquesans are, however, a fine race of people. Their form and physiognomy please my fancy better than those of any other tribes of the Pacific I have yet seen. Many of the women are truly handsome, and perhaps the men would be equally so, were it not for the tatooing, which blackens and disfigures most of them very much. . . . They are a shade lighter than the Tahitians and Hawai-

The journal of this missionary contains an account of cannibalism that occurred on one of the islands, three weeks before they landed. It also states that the principal chief received them with kindness, offered them his house to live in, and said he would build one for himself near them, for their protection. He gave the captain of the vessel liberty to take away from the islands two of his wooden gods. The people were displeased with this. The chief whose protection they were then enjoying, was at the time at war with another neighboring chief. The people are described as "a heathen people" having the vices of heathen. Chastity was said to be unknown by them, and they were apt to steal from one another. Yet the missionaries say: "This people do not appear to be so flithy either in their persons or in their houses, as either the Society or the Sandwich Islandera." "We are hospitably received at every house, and frequently desired to eat of their food.

The mission was given up in less than a year, and the missionaries returned to the Sandwich Islands in May, 1834. In giving their reasons for this, they say they did not visit the windward group, or the Marquesas proper, but they had heard that an English captain had been murdered at Ohiva-oa a short time before. The reasons assigned by them for the giving up of the mission, as published in the Missionary Herald for 1834, are not such as would operate against the present mission, as undertaken by the American Missionary Association.

In 1853 a mission was commenced at Fatouhiva, one of the smaller islands, by native Sandwich Islanders. Matunui, a chief from that island, went to Lahaina to obtain, if possible, a white missionary, but said he would rather have natives than none. Two Hawaiian pastors and their wives, with two married deacons, sailed from the Sandwich Islands in June. 1853, and reached Fatoubiya in August. Five days after their arrival, a Catholic priest and teachers landed there in a French

The captain and priest demanded that the Protestants should be sent away, but this was not done. Later intelligence from them states that the continuance of the mission is regarded as uncertain.

Note.—After this report was read at the annual meeting of the Association at Chicago, and ordered to be printed, and before the return of the Secretaries to New-York, the painful intelligence of the death of Mrs. Mills, at San Francisco, September 3, was received at the rooms of the Association. The prospects of this mission thus suddenly darkened by so afflictive a dispensation of Providence, have since been rendered more doubtful. Letters have been received from the missionaries, stating that they have entirely lost confidence in Mr. Mills, and giving reasons why they prefer not to go to the Marquesas Islands in his company.

AUXILIARIES.

Our oldest Auxiliary, the Penobscot County Missionary Association, has continued its efficient operations this year as usual.

THE WESTERN HOME AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION OF Cincinnati, have not made to us a report of their operations. The commissions of missionaries under appointment at our last Annual Meeting, have expired, and it is not expected that any others will be commissioned by that Association.

The North-Western Home Missionary Association. In November last the Executive Committee of this Association passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we now propose to modify our present mode of operations, and become auxiliary to the American Missionary Association, of New-York, on the general plan and principles of the American Home Missionary Society and its affiliated auxiliaries, and that we take the name of the Illinois Home Missionary Association."

The outline of the plan of coöperation now agreed on, provides that the Illinois Home Missionary Association should confine its labors to Illinois; that it would investigate the necessities of the field, examine the claims of churches applying for aid, and the qualifications of the persons proposed as missionaries, and report thereupon to the Executive Committee of the present Society in New-York; and that it would employ an agent or agents to visit the churches, obtain funds and promote the general interests of the Auxiliary.

After the payment of agents' salaries, and incidental expenses, the funds received by the Auxiliary are to be held by it, subject to the drafts of the parent Association in paying missionary appropriations for that State, or in case of a surplus, for the general purposes of the Association. The appointments, and commissions of Home Missionaries, are to issue from the Society in New-York, to which the reports of the missionaries are to be sent. The Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association subsequently resolved to assume the care of the missionaries under appointment of the Auxiliary, and to pay the appropriations that would fall due to them for services rendered after December 1, 1854.

At the Annual Meeting of the Auxiliary at Princeton, August 29th and 30th, it was voted:

"That the constitutional changes made by our Executive Committee, be approved, and that the constitution be changed so as to limit our field of action to Illinois, and so as to correspond with our relation as auxiliary to the American Missionary Association."

Rev. S. G. Wright has been laboring with much success, as an agent for this Association, a large part of the year.

"THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY."

The monthly circulation of this paper is about 22,000. It is sent without charge to every donor to the funds of the Association, who expresses a desire to receive it. It is also sent, for a limited period, at the request of donors, to others who, it is thought, will take an interest in the principles of our Association or the progress of its mission. It has hitherto proved a valuable agency in increasing the number of our friends and enlarging our receipts, and we shall continue to use it as such.

· CONCLUSION.

THE argument in favor of the existence of Missionary Societies. embracing the principles incorporated in the organization of the American Missionary Association, is not weakened by the events that have transpired since our Society was formed. The abstract truthfulness of those principles remains indeed unaltered. Divine truth does not change. The precepts and instructions of the law and the Gospel, are as much opposed, no more, no less, to the spirit and practice of slavery, polygamy, and caste as they then were. The duty of the Christian Church, of Christian organizations and Christian individuals, to have no fellowship with these unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, stands on the same basis of reason and Scripture that it ever did. The inherent wickedness of these evils has not been mitigated, perhaps not much increased since then, but the spirit of slavery has become more clearly manifest. Its arrogant demands on ecclesiastical organizations, on missions and missionary bodies, have been increased and strengthened by the concessions that have been made to it, and its determination to rule or ruin both the Church and the State, is fast becoming known and read of all men.

The Fugitive-Slave Bill has been enacted, and in some measure acquiesced in, and amongst its most deplorable instances are those exercised over men, high in position in the Church and honored above their equals by some of the "benevolent organizations" in our land, who, seduced from their integrity, or terrified and blinded to its real nature, have apologized for its existence and advocated its claims to obedience. Compacts designed to secure freedom and its attendant blessings have been ruthlessly swept away, free territory has been violently taken possession of by the slave-power, the purity of the ballot-box has been destroyed, and men professing godliness and wearing the livery of ministers of Christ's kingdom, have (a few of them) been prominent in these acts. And now benevolent and ecclesiastical organizations, whose policy it has been to keep silence on this exciting subject, and to embrace in their ample folds both the friend and foe of this system, the oppressor and his victim, "until the master shall be prepared to break the bonds of the slave," are continually agitated and threatened with rupture, by evils growing out of their fellowship with those living in this sin. Surely the time is near at hand when the Church will clearly see that the moral evils of slavery can not be abated while those who are involved in its support are received into good standing in the Christian Church, and have a voice in the control of benevolent or missionary societies.

The signs of the times seem also to point out the approach of a conflict with almost a nation of polygamists, now rapidly growing into importance on our western borders. The time may be near at hand when missionary labor will be demanded for this people, and when the question will be a practical one and demand discussion, whether the Gospel is to be so preached and its ordinances so administered, that men practising polygamy and enacting laws to prevent missionaries from laboring for its overthrow, shall be received into missionary churches as men fearing God and loving righteousness; or whether the axe shall be laid at the root of the tree before its branches spread within the inclosure of the Church, and missions sustained by American Christians be required in fact to apply the principles of our Association in the organization of their churches.

7

It is a cause of thanksgiving to God, that the Christian brethren who organized the American Missionary Association were providentlialy led to adopt principles well adapted to meet these evils at the threshold, declaring their essential sinfulness, as violations of the precepts of the Gospel, and their utter incompatability with the witness of a good confession of Christ; and that the number of those who are ready to coöperate with us in sustaining these views, and in giving them a practical efficiency, is steadily increasing.

The growth of the Association, and the increase of its income is to be accounted for, not merely by the intrinsic interest of its missions, and the great good they have already accomplished in heathen lands and in this country, but from the force of these principles, which it has been our aim to make prominent, and to press upon public attention, and which must not be withheld because obnoxious to those of opposite views and policy.

opposite views and policy.

By means of our Annual Meetings, Reports, Discussions, and Resolutions, and by our publications, we have endeavored to the extent of our ability, to mould the public mind, and prepare it for the great work yet to be accomplished. Already, thousands who were opposed to our principles and measures are heartily cooperating with us. The past is instructive, and the present and future require that we press our objects with increasing devotion.

Providential causes at work in this land, make more and more evident to all the necessity of our principles in the work of Christian Missions and philanthropy. A burden of responsibility thus rests upon us, and if we are found faithful in the use of the power committed unto us, we shall, by the aid of Divine wisdom and grace, succeed triumphantly.

Sustaining this responsibility, it may well be a matter of serious inquiry, on this occasion, by all connected with the Association, its missionaries, its officers, and its members, Whether we have done what we might have done to "fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ, for his body's sake, which is the Church;" whether we have labored and prayed, and planned, and given as we ought to have done, to fulfill the last command of our Redeemer, and "preach repentance and remission of sins in his name among all nations;" whether we have felt for those in bonds as bound with them, and, under the influence of the constraining love of Christ, been ready to endure privation and suffering for the conversion of the world to him? Three millions in our land are groaning in bondage, and increasing thousands are destitute of the ministrations of the sanctuary and the preaching of God's Word. Five sixths of the world is yet pagan or heathen. A population at least once and a half as large as the world contained when Christ died for it and issued his command, are now living with no knowledge of him or his Gospel. Twenty-three parts out of twenty-four of all those for whom the atonement was made, make no profession of obedience to Him, or trust in him for salvation, and all these must be reached by some of us now living, or they will be added to the twenty thousand millions who have gone before them since Christ suffered, having no knowledge of the only name given under heaven whereby men can be saved.

REMARKS

In relation to Slavery as an obstacle to Christian co-operation in the Home Missionary work, and to the progress of the Gospel in this country.

Presented by the Home Secretary at the Annual Meeting at Chicago, Sept. 27th, 1855.

In pursuing our work, the grand obstacle in the way of the ultimate triumph of the Gospel in this land can not be ignored; its various phases must be traced, and its virus exposed.

That system of cure which does not investigate disease, except in some of its external developments, would be regarded as too imperfect and unphilosophical for adoption, except by the ignorant and credulous. The same principle should rule in morals, in Christian ethics, and in political economy; in the ministry, in the missionary work, and in every effort for the reformation and salvation of individuals, of nations, and of the world.

In the present state of things touching politics in this country, it requires no acumen to discover that the great disorder and corruption here is slavery. The danger of that system to the body-politic is rarely denied at the North, except by demagogues and interested parties; and at the South its multiplied evils and crushing power are felt and declared by masses of the people who are non-slaveholders.

That a system so destructive to the state, and to every interest, should not be regarded as having in its moral nature all the elements of evil, and should be less dreaded in ecclesiastical relations, and in benevolent associations, than in political organizations, is indeed marvellous.

Scarcely less remarkable is the fact, that the greatest difficulties among different denominations of Christians and benevolent associations, long used to fellowship and cooperation, should be but partially apprehended as baying their origin in a high sense in slavery; and that Christians do not see that all attempts to reconcile parties at variance, with this cause of mischief ever operating, must be unavailing.

NINTH ANNUAL PRPORT

In the relations subsisting between the New-School Presbyterian Church and the Congregationalists in connection with the American Home Missionary Society. strong as may have been the native denominational feeling, that feeling alone would not have perilled all that was regarded as desirable in the relations sustained. Ultimately, and with kind feelings, these relations might have been changed, from a conviction that separate action in the two denominations would result in greater efficiency in each body in missionary operations-but the event could not have been precipitated without the direct or indirect influence of slavery. The increasing anti-slavery spirit in the Congregational Churches gives them favor with the mass of the people at the North, and in the North-west, who are fast fusing in hostility to slavery, aroused by the Fugitive-Slave Bill, the passage of the Nebraska and Kanzas Bill, and the recent outrages upon Kanzas; and such is the feeling that any denomination implicated with slavery, that will not divorce itself from it, is destined to repudiation by the people, especially by the rising generation, who must ever be the main dependence of the Church for her increase and extension. This fact is seen and felt by large numbers of the New-School Preshyterian Church and by very many of her ministers, and from right principle as well as from true policy, they would cut the cord of slavery in their ecclesiastical relations. But the dominant, spirits, ambitious for national extent as a denomination, risk all at the North to retain their slaveholding presbyteries at the South-and prompted also by the hope of greater success in their struggle and competition with the Old-School Presbyterian Church, which in extent of numbers, wealth, and power, must have the advantage, so long as the New-School Church, like itself, remains in fellowship with slaveholders, and is in part composed of them.

Were it not for these grand miscalculations of the New-School body, it would purge itself of slavery, and sever its connection with slaveholders. It would then relatively gain at the North, and at no distant day, upon the Old-School body at the South, and might coöperate in strength and confidence on right principles, with true Christians everywhere, without fear.

If, on the division of the Presbyterian Church in 1838, the New-School body had taken a decided stand against slavery, and stood forth in direct contrariety with the Old-School on the sin of slaveholding, treating it as other great enormities, and excluding it from its churches, wherever existing, who can doubt its greatly increased relative power and number, and influence, for the salvation of our country and of the world?

Instead, however, of doing this, there has been a continuous attempt in this body to arrest the natural action of anti-slavery within it, and it has in the main dealt with individuals and Presbyteries, who sought the separation of the Church from slaveholding, as troublers of its peace, whose claims were to be evaded or pacified from time to time by defective resolutions touching slavery. At length the pressure, two years since, led to some action designed to secure returns from their Southern presbyteries relative to the treatment of slaves by members of their churches. Such a storm, however, was created by this action, that the timid early gave way, and by the skillful operating of certain metropolitan leaders, and some others, the whole matter was disposed of quietly, and the requisitions upon slaveholding presbyteries were abandoned. Resolutions have again been passed reaffirming those of former times, but the heart is too faint to attempt to carry out even the most gentle measures, looking to the discipline of slaveholding members, who have exceeded what it regards as the legitimate bounds of slavery in the Christian Clurch.

That the contemplated action would have been unconstitutional as some affirm, is denied by others; but if it would have been so, and no action can be taken in that direction until slaveholding presbyteries themselves move, that fact alone must place the body in a dilemma most prejudicial to its interests.

It is not singular that master spirits in the New-School Presbyterian Church, while pursuing their course on the subject of slaveholding, should be opposed to our action as they are to our principles. Nor that in their controversy with Congregationalists, since the late action of their General Assembly at St. Louis on Church extension, disparaging comments should sometimes have been made upon our Free Mission Churches. It is, however, matter of much gratification, that not a few in that Church—as in various other denominations—appreciate our principles, and some give freely to our missions.

We oppose no body of Christians, not in our view hindering the cause of God and humanity by wrong principles and action. We are catholic in principle, and Presbyterian Churches and their ministers, not entangled with slavery, are aided by us in common with those of other evangelical denominations.

The Presbyterian Church, Old-School, so extensive in the slave States, and the New-School body, from their united numbers, wealth, and influence, have probably more responsibility for the continuance of slavery in this country, than any other denomination of Christians. Let but the New-School throw off that responsibility, come out from slavery, and avenge themselves upon the Old-School, by efforts in love most efficient for their reformation on the question of slaveholding; and most salutary would be such action—most important the results.

If any apology were necessary for these remarks it should be this. Our missionary aim, in this land, embraces not only the West and the North-west but the South—its entire population, bond and free, of which the slaveholders are comparatively but a fraction. Having begun this work in Kentucky and North-Carolina, we desire to extend it to the other slave States. But how shall the South, so debauched in its life and conscience by slavery, be converted to God? How, while large and influential denominations refuse to make slaveholding a disciplinable offense, thus ignoring the claims of millions in bonds the most terrible the earth knows; who are denied the Bible, and who are, in the mass, in circumstances of ignorance and degradation too appalling to be viewed without horror?

Until various religious denominations who, more or less, affect every department of society in this country, and give shape to the policy of our larger missionary, benevolent, and religious publishing societies, shall change their course in regard to the sin of slaveholding, we can not, in faithfulness to them—to God—to the enslaved—to the country and the world—fail to oppose their practice, and to remonstrate with them in view of delinquencies so injurious to the highest interests of man, and vitally opposed to pure Christianity.

Christian Missions illustrated by the Acts of Paul in Ithens.

A SERMON,

PREACHED BEFORE THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION,

AT TTG

NINTH ANNIVERSARY,

IN CHICAGO, ILLINOIS,

SEPT. 26, 1855;

BY REV. JAMES A. THOME,

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONS

TENEDUCE PERCENTAGE

at the beautiful and produce any architecture in the part of a bender, eventorists and to the encount of the field with

ILLUSTRATED BY THE ACTS OF PAUL IN ATHENS.

ACTS 17: 22-3.

Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, To The Unknown God. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

The missionary enterprise is the preëminent glory of the present age; but it is not because to this age belongs the honor of originating Christian missions, or of contributing to them any new principle or power. They are not the offspring of the nineteenth century; but the nineteenth century, with its advanced civilization, its boasted institutions, its marvellous energies, is the maturing offspring of Christian missions. They are not of modern nor of human origin. They are as old as Christianity; and they originated, with it, in the mind of God.

The enterprise was instituted by Jesus Christ, inaugurated by the Holy Ghost, and set in full operation under the Apostles; and its early successes illustrated the perfection of the scheme, and proved it to be the wisdom of God and the power of God.

To succeeding generations of Christians was committed the work, not of inventing new mission systems, nor of improving the original, but of carrying it out in strict pursuance of authoritative directions and primitive usages. Bound to conduct missions, yet laid under interdict touching any material change of them, the Church ought to be thoroughly acquainted with the divinely-prescribed principles, measures, and forces of Christian missions.

These are developed in the instructions of our Lord; and they are exemplified; under the direction of the Holy Ghost, in the apostolic labors, especially in the acts of the great apostle to the Gentiles; and preëminently so in the discourse of Paul in Athens. Of this discourse a distinguished modern author observes, it "was the crisis and consummation of the meeting of Christianity and Paganism;" and it may be regarded as a manual for missionaries in every age.

The ACTS OF PAUL IN ATHENS claim our study, as illustrative of the established principles of Christian missions.

As missions, though simple in purpose are complex in plan, we shall accordingly discuss the proposed subject by a consideration

I. Of the Field.

II. Of the Work.

III. Of the Agency.

I. The Field. Christ in one word defined it: "The field is the world." One brief pregnant sentence of inspiration declares its moral condition, "the whole world lieth in wickedness."

But Christ's instructions, as he sent forth his disciples to preach, and the general course of his Apostles, before and after his departure, point to GREAT CITIES as at once the representatives of the state of the field, and the strongholds of the powers of darkness in it, and therefore as the principal points of missionary attack.

The Holy Land was a field within the field, a little world amidst the great world, the favored seat for ages of partial light. Through successive judges, law-givers, and prophets, God revealed himself to his chosen people, and through kings and priests he ruled over them, and maintained among them his worship. A long process of theocratic culture trained the nation in the knowledge and fear of the true God; and gave a religious stamp to that extraordinary race. Their literature, their civilization, their politics, their wars, even, were religious. On every institution was inscribed, Holiness to the Lord. Grievous departures from God were frequent; but divine messages or chastisements brought back the wandering people.

The national life of the Jews had a local centre: Jerusalem was the seat of power, the place of worship. That city, crowned with the Temple, sat amidst encircling hills, a queen, to whom all the generations from David unto Christ paid tribute, and whose heritage was the memory of all the holy men of old. Jerusalem was the chief seat of Judaism, and it was the principal scene of the evangelical efforts which were expended on the field of Palestine. Within its gates, and in the courts and precincts of the Temple, Christ spoke a large share of his words, and wrought many of his mighty works; and within those inclosures the Apostles labored: there they prayed, and there the Spirit was poured out at the pentecostal revival.

Contemporaneously with the process of Jewish training, on the great field of the Gentile world was advancing the work of Pagan culture, conducted by priests, philosophers, and rulers, under the auspices of the god of this world. History denotes the successive stages of this culture in the arts and religions of Egypt, Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome, and marks its culmination in Greece. At each period we notice the predominance of the religious element; and we see Paganism concentrating its attainments, and consolidating its powers in the great cities. Thebes, Nineveh, Babylon, were the earlier seats of the old world; where humanity congregated, where heathenism flourished, where royalty had its courts, philosophy its schools, art its galleries, commerce its marts, war its munitions, and religion its altars.

At the advent of Christ, both these cultures, Jewish and Gentile, had reached their acme, and begun to decline; and we see the signs of this in the condition of the principal cities. The glory had departed from Jerusalem. Rome and Athens, the metropolitan foci of the Gentile world, had seen the sun of their circle pass the zenith. From the flood Paganism had held the field, had trained nation after nation, had reared and ruled a succession of imperial cities; and these were its latest master products; Rome embodying the results in arms and government—Athens in philosophy, the fine arts, and religion. Rome was empress, and grasped the sceptre of political power; but Athens was priestess, and held the wand of spiritual supremacy. Rome gave Paganism a throne; Athens gave it more, an altar, for every divinity an altar. Hence, although but a provincial town in the Roman empire, Athens was, at the beginning of the Christian era, the metropolis of the empire of Paganism.

The ancient rhetorician uttered more than a fine rhetorical flourish when he said of the Acropolis, "Where the spirit that rested over Athens concentrated, and which was one vast composition of architecture and sculpture dedicated to the national glory and to the worship of the gods, that it was the middle space of five concentric circles, of which the outer four were Athens, Attica, Greece, and the world." And if Athens at length waned, it was because Pagan culture could go no farther, and tended strongly to decay. What Christianity had not yet gained in any city, Paganism had long held in Athens—the supreme control of institutions, usages, and classes; it consecrated to piety, taste, genius, learning, wealth, and authority: the city was wholly given to idolatry. Yet Athens was sinking in effeminacy and debase-ment. Her philosophy had degenerated into the rival systems of the Stoics and the Epicureans. Her fine arts, pandering to voluptuousness in the name of virtue, and decorating galleries, streets, dwellings, and temples with the fascinating forms of shamefulness, had made beauty the patron of pollution. The public games and festivals, theatrical exhibitions and Eleusinian rites, were occasions of shocking obscenities, sanctioned by custom and sanctified by religion. Dead to moral incentives, the people cherished no manly aims, and made no earnest endeavors. They were confirmed idlers, and desperate news-mongers; "they spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell or to hear some new thing." The popular mind floated between philosophy and gossip, or fluctuated from devotion to debauch. Religion was supreme in Athens, but it was a religion that neither purified nor enlightened its votaries. What though the Agora, the Areopagus, and the Acropolis were studded with sacred monuments? What though every god from Jove to Bacchus, and every goddess, from Juno to Venus, had temple or altar ?-this did not prevent ignorance nor vice, but fostered both.

Of the ignorance of the Athenians there could be no proof more palpable than that which was presented to the eye of Paul, as he, a stranger, and alone in the city, walked amidst countless edifices consecrated to devotion: it was the altar with the inscription: To the Unknown God. When we consider that there was not one such altar. alone, but many, we are at a loss whether to regard this as the expression of a yearning after something higher and better than the Greek mythology furnished, or to see in it the very excess and madness of polytheistic lust, which, unsated with the multitude of familiar gods, sought to swell the number with nameless deities conjured from the dark unknown. Paul, who may have met with but one of these altars, or, seeing that each had the same inscription, attached to all the same significance, read in this an avowal of ignorance. A religion which enshrouded the mind in impenetrable darkness concerning God, could not promote enlightened philosophy or sound piety. When the world by wisdom knew not God, its wisdom was folly. Thus in Athens, the summit of pagan light, stood that monument at once of the best and the worst aspect of idol-worship, for it spoke of a yearning after God which idolatry suffered to find substantial expression, but could not satisfy with all the resources of polytheism. That altar, really the highest achievement of paganism, was a confession of its utter failure. It betrayed the poverty of mythology. It revealed the vulnerable point of paganism. To carry Athens was to conquer heathendom; and Athens showed that open door to the Gospel assailant. When, therefore, Paul stood on Mars' hill, and pointed to that altar, he stood where he might command the entire field of the heathen world, and deal a fatal blow at paganism. And he did not fail to seize the opportunity.

Such was the relation of the cities to the old pagan world; and as heathenism has not essentially changed in character, it has not ceased to fortify and glorify itself in cities. While, therefore, to-day, as at the first, the field is the world, the fortresses of paganism are the Calcuttas, the Bombays, the Bangkoks, the Jeddos, the Pekins, the Timbuctoos. And the primitive policy, commended if not enjoined by the sanctions of Jesus Christ and the Holy Ghost, should be adhered to in modern missionary operations. The cross should be planted in every heathen city. Neither expense, nor difficulty, nor danger, should deter from the occupancy of these citadels of Satan. They are the measure of the strength of paganism, and they should be the measure of the strength of missions. The estimates of men and means, of power and wisdom requisite to conduct Christian missions should be made on this basis. It would cause a greater outlay of resources at once, and make the struggle sharper, but the campaign would be shorter, and the expenditure in the end be less; and the energy of the movement, being founded in a just apprehension of the scriptural method, would honor God by displaying that faith which believes that with him all things are possible.

There is no economy in conducting missions on low estimates, made on the scale of ability, liberality, or missionary zeal in the Church. The work is God's, and his is the power, and he has said: "My people shall be willing in the day of my power." He who said, The field is the world; and who sent his Apostles into the proud cities of the Jewish and the Gentile world, He has counted the cost, and will supply the necessary forces and funds. He now only waits for his people to exercise mightier faith, and to show a commendable courage and earnestness by assailing the god of this world in his most impregnable fortresses; then he will give Zion glorious victories, and subdue the nations under her.

The field of Home Missions differs from the foreign in these two particulars, apposite to this discussion, namely, it embraces no systems of paganism, and no cities given to idolatry. It belongs neither to Heathendom nor to Christendom, it is peculiar to the New World. The great West, embracing the largest half of the territory of this republic, is the field of Home Missions. This is rapidly filling with a promiscuous population of unexampled energy; the potent and manifold elements of a vast social state are now seething in the gigantic caldron; oriental magic is here outdone by the magnificent creations of cities and states.

Preserved by a gracious providence from early discovery and conquest by the pagan powers, from the subsequent incursions of Mohammedans and Catholics, and opened at so late a period to the occupancy of chosen companies of Christians, purged and disciplined by persecutions, the North-American Continent has clearly been destined for the planting and growth of Gospel institutions, and for the predominance of Gospel principles, with ultimate reference, no doubt, to the issuing hence of influences for the evangelization of the Old World. The Church here flourishing amid favoring circumstances, might stamp the growing communities around with the right impress, and send forth also saving agencies abroad. Thus a two-fold work of evangelization devolved on the American Zion, the Home and the Foreign; both are imperative, and are coordinate branches of one great system. While this new world can never be pagan, it may be indefinitely more or less Christian: and in proportion to the moulding energy of the Gospel in the home field will be its success in foreign lands. A great problem, to be solved by home missions, is, Whether Christianity or worldliness shall predominate in our Western cities? It can hardly be expected that the Gospel will do more for Canton than for Chicago. And what light is cast on this problem by the actual results of the Gospel agencies in the older cities of our Eastern States? Is Boston a Christian metropolis? Is New-York a stronghold of godliness? They are the centres of missionary operations, the seats of Foreign and Home Boards; and wherever the American missionary has gone, in the far West or in pagan lands, these cities are known, and associated with Christian missions. But are Boston and New-York wholly given to the worship of God?

Allowing that they may as properly be styled Christian cities as any in the world, will it be denied that the Gospel has but partially overcome, even in the churches, the dominant forms of worldliness? Do not error and mammon, with divers minor divinities, dispute the ascendency with Christ, or hold it in defiance of his claims?

The partial influence of Christianity in its chief seats in America admonishes us that the field is emphatically the world, that it comprehends not only the far-off pagan lands, and the distant West, but the centres of Christendom, the cities of this Christian nation; the earth is one broad mission-field; and so intimately related are the several parts, that what is done at home will determine endeavor abroad. The Church will not send forth a more energetic Gospel than it cherishes in its own bosom. Hence, when we remonstrate against the toleration of caste in the mission-churches of India, we may expect to be answered by a reference to the covetousness tolerated in the churches of America. And what shall we say to this? That the one evil can not atone for the other; that rather the covetousness at home betrays, even more than the caste abroad, the defect of Gospel power, for which not the Gospel but our faith is to blame, and proclaims that the field is still the world, not one spot having yet been gained wholly to Christ; and the organized forces of sin remaining still predominant in the heart of this land, in the very city of the Pilgrims.

II. The Work. What is the missionary work? What is the message? What are the measures?

The Apostle's course in Athens is in all material points a safe directory in the operations of the foreign field.

1. We notice the promptitude with which he seized every opportunity to present saving truth. This is displayed in his disputations in the synagogue with the resident Jews and devout Greeks, in his speaking daily in the market with citizens and strangers, in his contending with philosophers of variant schools, who, suspending their own con. tradictions, joined to encounter the new teacher; wherever the missionary could find hearers, regardless of their gibes, he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection. He despised not the humble, he dreaded not the great. He accepted the lowest places, he spoke to few or to many, discerning in every opportunity an opening prepared by the Spirit; and confiding in the power of the Holy Ghost to render the work effectual, and to open wider doors. And when the Spirit inclined the Athenians to conduct Paul up to the Areopagus, and gave him that most desirable position, he was ready to take advantage of it. He stood before the most august tribunal in the pagan world, not, however, to be tried, but to be heard; for the grave-judges of the Areopagus had caught the infection of curiosity. A great concourse had gathered about the preacher, priests and philosophers, learned citizens and strangers, artists, traders, functionaries, even women unused to such assemblages; the Pireus, the Agora, the Porch, the Garden, poured their confluent streams to the Areopagus. Christianity and Paganism were there to encounter, as the true religion and Baalism did a thousand years before on Mt. Carmel. And as on that occasion our prophet of the Lord stood alone against the heads and hosts of heathenism.

Had Paul refrained from speaking in the name of Christ till this eminent post was accessible, he probably would never have stood on Mars' hill. His previous labors in humbler localities, extending through several days, had prepared the people, had paved the way to the Areopagus, and had honored the guidance granted from on high.

On the other hand, had the solitary missionary shrunk from so conspicuous and trying a post, and deemed it more becoming his humble character to teach in the market, or in the synagogue, he would have lost a grand occasion of proclaiming the true God, and of inflicting a stunning blow on paganism.

2. We learn what was the subject of the preacher's communications. on each successive occasion; whether he broached it at once, or approached it gradually, with every precaution of courtesy, and every prerequisite of instruction. He preached Jesus and the resurrection. With this proclamation he entered the synagogue; with this announcement he made his appearance in the Agora; with these strange words he encountered the philosophers; with these new things he attracted the people of Athens. Nor did he, by any want of explicitness, leave room to doubt whether he were setting forth deities or doctrines, or both a deity and a doctrine. He made himself understood, as a setterforth of strange gods, and also of a new doctrine. The resurrection was that which most excited his curious and cavilling audience, and impelled them to take him up the Areopagus; for when there they said: "May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?" A God and a Resurrection were the missionary's theme in Athens: a God who had been on the earth in the form of man, and had suffered and died for the sake of man, and who had gone away, to return again at the end of all things; a resurrection of the dead, of the buried Jesus, (which had already transpired,) and of all the dead.

3. We notice the excellent wisdom with which the preacher approached his subject in the discourse he delivered on Mars' hill.

(1.) He conciliates his captious hearers by a respectful acknowledgment of their distinguished devotional habits, and by a courteous allusion to their numerous temples and monuments sacred to religion. He does not, as our version unhappily represents, censure them for excessive superstition, but commends them for their extraordinary zeal in the worship of the gods. He could consistently express approval of the giving to religion that preëminence which it held in Athens, without sanctioning the kind of religion which prevailed there.

(2.) He startles his hearers, of every class, and rivets on himself their excited attention, by referring to an altar dedicated to the unknown God. That altar represented an awful mystery, it marked the limits of Athenian knowledge, and pointed to boundless regions of doubt and darkness beyond: and the Grecian mind, inquisitive and speculative though it was, recoiled from that dreadful verge. Yet the preacher took his audience thither, and with an assured air, advanced as if the void beyond it were full to him of glorious truth, which he could reveal to them. That was a master measure, that passing at one step from the boasted domain of Athenian wisdom to the brink of their acknowledged ignorance, and looking thence into the vast obscure with a knowing eye, and starting from that boundary with intrepid discourse.

Paganism gives to Christianity this vantage ground. After it has multiplied its deities indefinitely it still falls indefinitely short of fulfilling the conception of God which is in the mind; and where it stops it must raise the altar to the Unknown, and thus give a stand-point to the Christian preacher. Every missionary should find this point, and occupy it as boldly as did the Apostle.

4. We notice that the inspired preacher undertook to enlighten the confessed ignorance of his hearers. This was the next step in the order he pursued, but is the first in the proper missionary work: to make known God. "Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." This included two things-declaring God's nature, and also the worship acceptable unto him. Herein as just before, the preacher set forth both a deity and a doctrine. Jesus and the resurrection are not more intimately connected than are God and worship. We have an example of the joint instruction requisite on these topics in the teaching of our Lord: "God is a spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." In all false religions great prominence is given to worship; but the fault lies not in this, but in the rendering of worship to things that are no gods, and in the corrupting of the rites of worship. Worship was not carried to greater excess in Athens in the time of Paul than it was in Jerusalem in the days of Solomon; yet in the latter instance it was well pleasing in the sight of Jehovah. Christianity is misunderstood if it is supposed to make little of worship. It should never be said with truth that the saints of the most High God are behind Mohammedans or idolaters in devotion.

(1.) In declaring God, the Apostle taught that He is the maker and ruler of the world, and of heaven, and of all things in the universe; that He is the creator of all peoples, the disposer of all nations, and the provider of all supplies; and that He has made all the different races of men of one blood.

From the first of these doctrines it appeared that God could not dwell exclusively in temples made by men, that no walls could inclose him, no spot contain him. He must be vastly superior, therefore, in this to the gods of the Athenians, who were included in their several edifices, and confined to them.

From the second doctrine it was a plain inference that God needed not any offerings of food, or of money, or costly array: and in this he must be far above the Pagan deities, who were supposed to be dependent on their votaries for "material aid."

From the third doctrine it followed that God was one, that there could be no God besides; and hence it was obvious that the polytheism of Greece was utterly false and impious. Hence, too, flowed this humiliating inference that the Athenians were not a superior race, but brothers to all mankind. Thus in one statement the unity of God and the unity of man was declared.

The ignorance concerning God's nature was, in this simple way effectually enlightened; the Unknown was made known. And the process that revealed God, exposed the absurdity of pagan mythology, of idols, altars, and temples.

Moreover, the Athenians were hereby enlightened negatively touching the nature of divine worship; they were taught that it was not necessary to repair to temples as the exclusive residence of deity, nor to bring to the altars of devotion offerings of a costly sort, smoking viands, and first fruits of the field. Their worship was thus clean swept away, with their gods; and little glory was left to their extraordinary devotions.

(2.) They were then further and more positively instructed concerning the right worship of God. They were taught that the Creator and Ruler of nations had appointed to every people the bounds of their habitations, that they might worship Him, and render their devotions where he had cast their lot. They were informed that true worship was communion of soul with God; and that the sincere and earnest endeavor to seek and feel after him, and to approach unto him in prayer was acceptable service; that nevertheless he was very near unto all men; insomuch that in him we live, and move, and have our being: hence that it was not necessary to go to some distant favored abode of God, nor to grope about blindly with a mere chance of finding him here or there in charmed circles of air.

(3.) The Athenians were still more fully instructed in the nature of God and of worship, by a revelation of the spirituality of both. God was declared to be the Father of men, of the souls of men; and, there fore, himself a soul, or possessed of a spiritual nature, like in kind to the human spirit, but superior; the author of all spirits, divine, uncaus ed, and infinite. Seeing, then, that enlightened men recognized an essential difference between mind and matter, and asserted the exaltation of the human soul above the most precious materials in nature, and the most elaborate works of art, they should own the same unlikeness and exaltation, in a far greater degree, in reference to God; and accordingly they should not think "that the godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone graven by art, and man's device." The Father of spirits and supreme over them, he should receive the homage of the soul, he should have a spiritual worship, rendered out of the heart, and tendered without intervening image or cumbrous ceremony.

So Paul enlightened the religious ignorance of the Athenians; by revealing to them one God, creator of matter, and therefore above matter; Father of spirits, and therefore the Supreme Spirit; universal provider and ruler, and therefore over all, and independent of all; omnipresent and omniscient, and therefore every place filled with his being, and every spot the house of God. (4.) In the course of this instruction, the Apostle revealed God's sovereign disposal of nations, asserting that he determined the times of their rise, growth, and decay, and appointed the bounds of their habitation or fixed their land-marks. He thus taught the Athenians that if they enjoyed superior local advantages, a more congenial clime, a more smiling sky, than other peoples', they were indebted for these blessings not to fate or fortune, nor to their patron-gods, but to the Lord God of heaven and earth. He also admonished them that they owed to Him undivided praise and grateful homage, in the ratio of their benefits; and that the persistent withholding thereof would forfeit their blessings, and provoke God to terminate their national existence. It could not but appear from this teaching that though unacknowledged, and hitherto unknown by them, God was and ever had been their Supreme Ruler, and had absolute authority over people and magistrates, temples and altars, customs and laws, philosophers and judges, over their gods and goddesses, their institutions and organizations, over every thing belonging to the complex entity of a nation.

From the broaching of this radical doctrine in the midst of a course of elementary instruction concerning the true God and his worship, we may infer somewhat decisive touching the duty of all the ministers of Christ to mingle with the spiritual teaching they impart sound instruction in relation to the religious obligations of nations, and to assert the supremacy of the law of God over the laws of men.

5. The work of instruction having been completed, the missionary steps from the position of a teacher to that of an ambassador; and, as though God himself spake, he said: The times of your ignorance have passed, and the forbearance of the Supreme Being toward you because of your ignorance, has ceased; now, God commandeth you, and all men everywhere, to REPENT. This is the first word of the Gospel message. The humble preacher proclaims God's new message; and the authoritativeness of his manner is only equalled by the imperativeness of the manifesto. That stern word comes from God, it is his command to all men everywhere, to barbarians and Greeks, Jews and Gentiles, to all the Athenians, to their wise men, to their venerable judges, Repent. And it was sterner, more comprehensive, because it was uttered alone, because it was not carried into specifications. It was not repent of image-worship, repent of polytheism, repent of false philosophy, of pride, of caste, of idle curiosity, of lasciviousness; but repent. Specific wrongs belonged to individual men; but the command was addressed to all men; the forms of evil in Athens were different from the forms in remote places, but the word came to all men everywhere. It was aimed, therefore, at that which was common to all nations on all the face of the earth, namely, moral depravity. Repent of sinfulness, repent of that wickedness of heart, out of which proceed idolatries, blasphemies, darkness, and every evil work. The axe was faid at the root of the tree. The message was urgent; repent now, put away at once the heart of sin, uproot instantly the accursed tree; respect not its comeliness, pause not before its stateliness, hesitate not because of its venerableness, spare it not a day, pluck it up now. There were various points involved, which sinners then. as now, might have pressed in favor of delay; as, inability, want of conviction, insufficient emotion, and the like. Other pleas of a different nature might have been used in limitation of the command to repent, the modern forms of which are, organic sins, deep-rooted prejudices. ancient customs, public institutions, property interests, national concerns, wickedness in high places. All such considerations were disregarded; no more deference was shown to the prerogatives of nations than to the pleas of individuals. The instant command-repent, swept the entire field, reached every altar and temple in Athens, demanded the renunciation of every idol, and required the immediate establishment of the worship of God in the metropolis of pagamism.

6. The Apostle next announced that God had appointed a day to judge the world in righteousness; and that the judge should be Jesus Christ. The command to repent was sustained by the assertion of final judgment, involving the certainty of punishment, without repentance

The doctrine of the unity of God and man had not been more mortifying to Athenian piety and pride, nor the preaching of repentance more humiliating, than was this proclamation of a day of judgment, when all the world should be arraigned, without distinction of race, nation, or class, to be tried, on principles of strict righteousness, by that Man whom all the world had united to condemn and reject. It placed all men on a common platform—of depravity. It proved that God was in earnest with his creatures, and that he held them to a moral accountability, as his offspring. It brought to light a future state of existence, in which the condition of each soul should be determined by the conduct in this life. As the preaching of repentance involved the doctrine of depravity and the present fact of man's lost estate, so the preaching of final judgment involved the doctrine of future and endless rewards and punishments.

7. This all implied the reappearing of the dead; hence the Apostle declared the general resurrection, and established it by the assertion of the actual resurrection of Jesus.

Thus far the preacher held the attention of his pagan hearers; he had conducted them to the point where conviction of sin, and dread of judgment should have extorted the cry, What shall we do? How shall we flee from the wrath to come?—and so opened the door to preach Christ, the Saviour of guilty and perishing sinners, when Athenian pride, prevailing over Athenian politeness, drowned in discordant clamors the preacher's voice, and abruptly terminated the great discourse in the midst of its progress, or rather at the crisis of its power. "When they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked, and others said, we will hear thee again of this matter."

Some mocked; and not a few were these, nor inconsiderable persons. The stoics mocked, whose morality had been weighed in the balance and found wanting, whose philosophy had been reproved by the wisdom from above, and whose proud indifference to all things had been sensibly disturbed. The Epicureans mocked, whose skepticism was stunned, whose sensuality, disguised under the name of happiness, was rebuked, and whose frivolity was confronted with the soberness of piety and the solemnity of the judgment. The devotees mocked, whose zeal, at first complimented, was finally shown to be without knowledge and without merit, and whose gods, and altars, and offerings, were exposed. The Areopagites, too, forgetting their dignity, or fearing for its security under the preaching of a judgment higher than theirs, mocked. There was a great mocking then on Mars' hill-a fearful jeering, a fiendish scoffling. The temple of the Furies echoed the hisses, the statue of Minerva looked down derisively, the Acropolis shook with the laughter of the gods; paganism had a jubilee; Paul, the babbler, was silenced. While the proud ones mocked, the curious ones, greedy for novelty, said: "We will hear thee again." The extreme strangeness of the doctrines commended the discourse to them; the revealing of the unknown God gratified their morbid craving for some new thing; the command to repent. entertained them by the utter novelty of the message; the story of a coming general judgment enchanted them, it was tidings from another world remote, and it opened to them glimpses into distant futurity; the news of the resurrection of Jesus, and of the final resurrection of the dead, set them all agape with wonderment. Surcharged with such and so many marvels, they cried: "We can hear no more now, but we will hear thee again." If Paul was silenced by the mockers, he was sickened by these merry-makers; and neither able nor disposed, perhaps, to say more, he departed from among them. He had said enough to enlighten, convict, and startle his hearers; but he had not preached the truth which converts and saves. He had delivered the mandate of the law which kills, but he had not proclaimed the message of the Gospel which makes alive. The offers of salvation, the invitations of Christ, the terms of mercy, were smothered in the utterance; and the missionary of the cross went away from Athens never. as it would seem, to return thither again.

A few persons only followed him, and hearing more fully of the way, believed : one, a man of eminence, Dionysius, the Areopagite : another, a woman of sufficient note-worthiness, or notoriety, to be mentioned by name, Damaris. Athens, like Jerusalem, rejected Christ; these two chief cities, and centres of the two reigning systems of Paganism and Judaism, judged themselves unworthy of everlasting life; and they were forsaken of God. In neither, however, was the missionary work a failure : Christ conquered them, if not by conversion, by consignment of them to remediless destruction; for while Jerusalem soon met a fate whose horrors are unparalleled in the history of Roman warfare, Athens sunk into a despicable insignificance worse than the ruin of overthrow. Therefore, notwithstanding the small success of Paul's labors in Athens, estimated by the number of converts, we may say, with another, "the speech on the Areopagus is an imperishable monument of the first victory of Christianity over Paganism."* And, with the same distinguished authority, we may add: "It was 'no mere effort for the moment,' but it is a 'perpetual possession,' wherein the Church finds ever-fresh supplies of wisdom and guidance," and it would be designed a studyout fellers - that ferm

From the labors of Paul in Athens we derive the following instructions concerning the mode of conducting the missionary work in the cities of the Pagan world.

1. That opportunities are to be improved as in the providence of God they occur. However small, they are not to be despised, and however great, they are not to be dreaded.

2. That the character, habits, and tastes of the people are to be studied, and their religious customs especially noticed, and that in these particulars they are to be treated with unaffected courtesy.

3. That their idolatry is to be traced to the point where its own inherent defectiveness appears and stands confessed, or may be exposed; and there the Christian pulpit planted.

4. The missionary must then declare the true God, his unity, supremacy, and spirituality; then teach the nature of acceptable worship; then declare the common brotherhood of man, and the moral deprayity of the race; and the amenability of nations to God.

This is the process of enlightening the heathen.

5. Then he must preach repentance, as God's command, radical, universal, immediate repentance; and he must enforce this duty by alleging the certainty of a future righteous judgment, at which all the world shall be assembled, and stand before the crucified Jesus, the judge; and this he must confirm by the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead.

This is the preaching of the law and the testimony. And it must precede the preaching of the Cross.

If the missionary, having proceeded thus far, and opened the door by regular process to present the atoning Lamb of God, is interrupted; if the clearness of the light, and the claims of the law, and the authority of the summons, Repent, and the awful sanctions of judgment and resurrection, alarm or enrage the people, so that they will hear no further, the missionary has nought left him but to depart from the city, his work there is done; nor shall it be in vain. Let not the modern missionary presume that he is authorized to shun an apostolic example, that has so little to recommend it in its apparent results; and that he shall exhibit a superior wisdom, by avoiding the great cities of paganism, adjudging them hardened and hopeless beforehand, or by adopting more moderate measures, with the view of securing a permanent footing in them. Rather let him give due heed to this rule of missionary labors, to be drawn from the acts of Paul in Athen: "Preach the word, and leave the work with God,"

Of all his mission-labors, successful and unsuccessful alike, the great Apostle speaks in these inspired words of grateful approval "Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savor of his knowledge by us in every place. For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish; to the one we are the savor of death unto death, and to the other, the savor of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?" And he subjoins these emphatic words: "For we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God; but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God we speak in Christ."

^{*} See "Life and Epistles of St. Paul," in loc.

Still more emphatic, if possible, is his language following: "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ,*

III. The remaining topic of the present discourse is, the Agency that Christ has been pleased to engage in the work of Missions.

This is the main topic, for it relates to the rower—the executive power. We might presume that herein the wisdom of God would be most illustriously displayed. We might pre-suppose that a work of such magnitude that none but God could project it, and that weapons of such sort and temper that they could be furnished only from the heavenly magazine, would require nothing short of divinity in the agency. And so the Scriptures teach when rightly understood. The agency is indeed two-fold, divine and human, the Holy Ghost and the Missionary. But the Missionary is to be filled with the Holy Ghost, employed by him, controlled by him, energized by him, and subordinated in all things to his will.

The human part of the agency, as brought to view in the commission of our Lord, and exemplified by the first Missionary to the Gentiles, demands our special attention. When we have said, Christ has called men of like passions with others to be his missionaries for the conversion of the world to himself, we have declared what is true; yet, we have spoken but a small part of the truth touching the matter. The best and mightiest men are wholly unfit for this agency, of themselves; they need, in all respects, to be fitted by special divine training, and by ample divine endowments, to be co-workers with God in the salvation of the world. Neither human training, nor natural talents are disregarded; on the contrary, physical powers, mental gifts, and whatsoever qualification is derived from nature or from education, is, or may be, accepted. God has called both the foolish and the wise, both the small and the great, both the despised and the admired; but in either case he has trained and qualified them to be his servants, deeming the infirmities of some no disqualification, and the abilities of others no sufficiency, and esteeming it absolutely essential that the power of Christ should rest upon all.

In the great Apostle Paul we see an early proof that distinguished talents were sometimes respected in the choice of missionaries; yet, while we are struck with the adaptedness of Paul's versatile genius and varied acquirements to the work committed to him, we are far more impressed with the qualifications he received from God, partly by discipline, and partly through the impartation of the Holy Ghost. We can not well avoid the conviction that his native endowments were the gift of Heaven, with reference to the holy vocation whereunto he was predestined: and that his extraordinary educational advantages were providentially afforded and secured to him with a divine regard to the same purpose. He more than intimates this himself in these words of Gal. 1:15: "But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace." Nevertheless, these extraordinary powers did not qualify Paul to be a minister of Christ; but, after his conversion, when God revealed his Son in him, that he might preach him among the heathen, immediately he was put on a course of preparatory training. And this was not committed to the apostles, but was conducted by the Holy Ghost himself; so Paul testifies: "Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me, but I went into Arabia;" and there he lived three years, under the tuition of the Holy Ghost. During this time he had not conferred with flesh and blood, he had not seen the apostles, and "was unknown by face unto the churches of India, which were in Christ." Called to be a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, Paul must needs be taught by him, and could be properly qualified only by the training of his Spirit, during a term of years. Nor did this suffice. He must be endowed with divers spiritual gifts, some strictly miraculous, (for special reasons needed in order to the fulfillment of his ministry,) and others supernatural, and needed by every minister of Christ. And, moreover, the Apostle must be filled with the Holy Ghost, not only as a Spirit of Inspiration, which was requisite in his case, but also as a "Spirit of love, and of power, and of a sound mind," which was requisite alike for all missionaries to the end of the world. It was necessary that Paul should be made a new man, a holy man, a wise, a spiritual, a strong man; and, in order to all this, he must be "full of faith and of the Holy Ghost." "Our sufficiency," saith he, "is of God, who also hath made us able ministers of the New Testament, not of the letter, but of the spirit." This God-given sufficiency constituted Paul AN AMBASSADOR of Christ, and of course every qualification for the duties of this office was secured, so that he was fully empowered to administer the New Testament, and to communicate the life-giving spirit of that Testament. With all these spiritual qualifications, superadded to his natural and educational, and with the spirit of Christ in him to energize his soul, and to superintend his motions of thought, word, and deed, the Apostle was "a workman that need not be ashamed," a worthy co-worker with the Holy Ghost. The earthen vessel was divinely fitted to hold the heavenly treasure. Yet it was not necessary that he should be freed from all human infirmities; rather there must needs be left, for his humiliation, the thorn in the flesh, that he might be ever reminded of his dependence on all-sufficient grace; and we know that he learned to glory in his infirmities more than in his abilities, because they were the occasion of the power of Christ resting upon him.

^{*} Dr. Macknight's paraphrase of this passage (see 2 Cor. 10: 4-5) makes it apply particularly to such missionary labors as those of Paul in Athens: "For the weapons wherewith we carry on our war against the heathen religions, and against those who support them, are not weak, but very mighty for the overturning of fortresses erected by human policy in defense of idolatry. With these weapons we overturn the reasonings of statesmen and philosophers, and every proud imagination raised up like a rampart by the lusts and passions of men, against the knowledge of God, to prevent its entering; and we load captive every thought, and make it subservient to the obedience of Christ."

The amplitude of the Apostle's spiritual qualifications is truly wonderful. Independently of his miraculous gifts, which were the special prerogatives of the apostles and primitive teachers, he had many supernatural endowments, and withal he enjoyed in such fullness the indwelling of the Spirit, that he was thereby enlightened, emboldened, strengthened, sustained, and guided; and the result of all this enduing from on high, was his being fitted for every department of his arduous service, and fortified for every hardship and peril that awaited him. He was raised above fear, care, doubt, and want; he was independent of worldly policy; he sought not earthly favor, he envied not human wisdom, he deferred not to existing institutions, he dreaded not "principalities and powers." He has left us in his own words, recorded in the Acts, an account of his labors and of his fearlessness amid persecutions. Addressing the Elders of Ephesus, he said: "Ye know how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house; testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. And now behold I go bound in the Spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there; save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying, that bonds and afflictions await me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto me, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the Grace of God. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men, for I have not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God."

Paul's separation from the ministers of Ephesus, on this occasion, was like the separation of Elijah from the young prophet Elisha: "They all wept sore, and fell on his neck, and kissed him, sorrowing most of all for the words he spake, that they should see his face no more.' But in that final prayer with them all, what grace, wisdom, and power he besought to rest upon them, we may infer, assuredly, from his foregoing words: "Now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the Word of his Grace, which is able to build you up."

This great Apostle, so mighty through the Spirit toward the Gentiles, at length finished his course, and rested from his labors. The work, as yet but begun, must be committed to other laborers; and what manner of persons ought they to be who should succeed Paul? They surely ought to be like him, if not in native talents and in learning, and in gifts of miracles, yet in training, teaching, and endowments of the Holy Ghost, so as to be suitable co-laborers of the Spirit. And that this was the divine intent from the beginning is put beyond a doubt by Scripture testimony. Not, however, that there was to be a mystical transmission of powers and prerogatives by laying on of hands, constituting an apostolical succession; but that there should be fresh impartations from the Lord-that each one called to be a servant of Christ in the Gospel, should receive the necessary gifts from on high. This is implied in the injunction of Christ to all his disciples: "Pray ye, the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest." This virtually prescribes the committing of the matter of choosing, fitting, employing and directing successive ministers and missionaries to the Lord of the harvest; this whole matter being really too vital to the success of the Gospel to be intrusted in other hands. Whatsoever instrumentalities God might see fit to use in the training of his servants, as the early precepts of godly parents, the instructions of pastors, the tuition of schools, the salutary influences of the Church, still the work is His, and the chief preparations (immeasurably so) must come from him, and are to be sought by believing prayer. In this prayer of the Church must be embraced the separating of future ambassadors of Christ from the womb, the superintending of their physical conditions, their mental development, and intellectual acquirements, the seasonable securing of their conversion, and the discipline of their souls in faith, obedience, and spirituality; also, the imparting to them of ministerial qualifications of a supernatural kind or degree, general and special—the former making them able ministers of the New Testament, and the latter fitting each for the particular work or field to be assigned to him; moreover, the renewal and increase of these gifts by repeated baptisms from the Holy Ghost during the course of the ministry, and the guidance of the labors, and the upholding of the laborers by the Indwelling Spirit, which is pledged in the promise: "Lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

The men thus gotten from the Lord by earnest prayer, would be esteemed by the Church as worthy of confidence and support; they would be regarded as God's workmen, competent and trustworthy, needing little supervision of Mission Boards. They would be men full of faith, of love, and of heavenly wisdom; therefore, fearless and strong, not ashamed of the Gospel, not daunted by opposition nor-moved by persecutions, not abashed in the presence of mercenary rulers nor confounded in the midst of cities crowded with the monuments of paganism. They would stand confessed the foremost men in heavenly gifts and graces; quite in advance of the ministry at home, as it now is, and of the Church; insomuch that it would be difficult to find in the bosom of Christendom, the men spiritually qualified to undertake the management of Foreign Missions. Whatever modifications of the present mode of conducting missions might result, it would be altogether likely to be an improvement. So whatever changes might take place in the education of youth destined for missionary service, or in the standard of qualifications, or in the number of laborers sent forth, or in the contributions of the Church for the support of missions, might confidently be expected to be for the better. And with such a vast augmentation of spiritual power, through the supernatural endowments liberally youchsafed, the results of missionary efforts must be indefinitely enlarged. Every foreign mission station would be invigorated, and every pagan stronghold would tremble; "One should chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight."

REMARKS.

In closing this discourse, I would call attention to the fact, that nearly every question of moment concerning the operations of Christian Missions, depends on the amount of power and wisdom from on high that shall accompany and endue the missionaries. The questions above discussed: of heathen cities as the principal seats of evangelical operations; of the relations of Home and Foreign Missions, and of Christendom to both, and of the cities of each section to the whole field, the world; of the methods for presenting the truth to the heathen mind; of the boldness required to preach repentance without qualification; of the degree of home superintendence necessary, and many other questions of principle and of policy, that engage the attention and divide the counsels of the friends of missions, will find their solution readily in the adequate supply of laborers, whose sufficiency, as able ministers, shall be of God. Every thing relating to the management of missions must be under the direction, not of human sagacity, but of the wisdom which cometh from above; and none but those who are liberally gifted in that heavenly grace is fit to have a voice in the counsels, or a vote in the control of this great work of God on earth.

Let me then urge with much earnestness on your hearts, my brethren, the duty of prayer for laborers of God's choosing, of his fitting, of his sending forth and superintending. The field is the same as when Paul wrought in it, the same world lying in sin, and presenting its city-seats of idol-worship; the truth is the same, the self-same sword that Paul wielded; the agency of the Holy Ghost is the same in power, the same in readiness: but where are the Pauls-the greater than Paul? Evangelization waits for men of God. The sword of the Spirit waits for a hand strong enough to grasp it, for an eye steady enough to direct its blows, for a soul strung to exploits worthy of it. Men of supernatural endowments have lived since the days of miracles. Many of the Reformers were such men, and many of the Pilgrims too. Luther was a mighty Reformer, endued of God with energy and dauntless courage; Whitfield was a preacher of apostolical zeal, trained and empowered by the Lord; Martyn was a mighty missionary, whose extraordinary genius and acquirements were eclipsed by the gifts of God's Spirit; James Brainerd Taylor was a young man, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, whose early death deprived the Church of a minister of whom it might almost be said, he was more an angel than a man. Why are there not at this day a host of men of like heavenly endowments? Why are not the ministers at home, and the missionaries abroad, largely endued with power from on high? Why should we be skeptical concerning supernatural gifts, and essay to carry on the enlarged operations of Christian Missions, without men trained, enlightened, and energized by the Spirit of Christ? Shall we pretend that the cause now does not demand such men? Rather must we not be convinced that missions have never required more imperiously the power and wisdom that come from above? Old cities, the centres of empires of darkness, closed since the Christian era began, are now opening their gates to the Gospel. Blows may be struck in them which will be as decisive, and may be more redeeming, than those of Paul in Athens.

Obstacles, which to ordinary faith look mountainous, obstruct the progress of evangelization, and will continue to obstruct until some Zerubbabel shall be sent of God, before whom the great mountains shall become as plains. Look at our Home Missionaries; what are they now doing? Inlaying in the foundations of cities and states the elements of soundness, strength, and stability which the Gospel contributes. What manner of men, then, should they be? common men? feeble men? time-serving men? Nay! but men of holy valor, of divine wisdom, of preëminent spiritual gifts; this is God's work, and God's workmen should be employed in it. Is not God from on high calling on his people that they "pray the Lord of the harvest, that he would send laborers into his harvest"? Have we ever offered this prayer in faith, and with consideration of its import? Have we ever sounded its depths, and comprehended its breadth? Have we perceived how the sending forth of laborers is but one act in a series of acts, beginning with the separation of them from the womb, the superintending of their early and advancing education, the securing in due time of their sound conversion, the furnishing them with every requisite qualification, both natural and supernatural, the going with them into the harvest, and the working with them, and the supplying them with all needed resources? Shall we have faith to embrace all this in our prayer, and to bear this mighty suit to the throne of grace? Let the officers, members, and patrons of this Association earnestly unite in this prayer. Let every monthly concert throughout Christendom groan beneath this burthen. Let all pastors strive to inspire their people with this great desire, till every closet shall be vital and every sanctuary shall be vocal, with this supplication. Let the soliciting agents, as they visit our churches, press on the people of God, on

The Executive Committee are pointing us to the new fields that the good hand of the Lord has so signally opened before this Association, and they are calling for men and for means to occupy those fields. Do not these favoring providences, and these pressing calls, crowd us to the mercy-seat? It is the Lord's prerogative to send forth; it is our privilege to pray Him to do this. If liberality is requisite, faith is far more. If the Lord will stir up his people to pray for men of might and wisdom, he will doubtless move them to give the means laborers into his harvest."

pious parents, on Sabbath-school teachers, on all who, from love to missions, contribute money to the cause, the importance of praying for laborers. Let the Foreign and Home Missionaries, as they send to us the Macedonian cry, accompany it with the carnest charge to the churches, "that they pray the Lord, that He would send forth of their support. It would be a luxury to such to minister of their abundance to the needs of missionaries like Paul. They would pluck out their eyes, if need be, and give them.

The world, lying in sin and shrouded in darkness, is outspread beneath the pitying eye of God; and to His view it is one wide field, white for the harvest. To Zion has been committed the instrumentalities divinely ordained for this work, and they are perfectly adapted and entirely adequate. With God is the power to execute and the wisdom to direct, the patience to continue and the purpose to complete what has been undertaken. Let now the Church, by the utmost energy of faith grasp the whole work, and throw it into the arms of God; and then say, May we thy people, O Lord! be willing in the day of thy power; we consecrate to thee our sons and our daughters, our children, our infants; graciously accept the offering, and choose from among them the best, the most promising, and take them under thine own training, put thy spirit in their hearts, endow them with wisdom, endue them with strength, make them able ministers of the New Testament, and send them forth into thy harvest; and, Saviour, go with them, and use them to bring the heathen tribes to thy feet. Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly!

[1856]

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

American Missionary Association,

AND THE

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING,

HELD AT

FULTON, OSWEGO CO., N. Y.,

TOGETHER WITH A

LIST OF LIFE-MEMBERS.

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED BY THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.
OFFICE, 48 BEEKMAN STREET.

1856.

PRINTED BY Edward D. Jenkins, 26 Frankfort St. N. Y.

OTHER STREET

LIFE MEMBERS

SARREM STATE

OF THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Abbott, Moses, Woodville, N. H.
Abbott, Dea. Zebadiah, Winchester, Mass.
Adair, Rev. S. L., Kansas.
Adair, Rev. S. L., Kansas.
Adams, Calvin, Binghamton, N. Y.
Adams, Alanson, Amber, N. Y.
Adams, Mrs. Chanucey, Galesburgh, Ill.
Adams, Cyrus. West Medway, Mass.
Adams, Henry, Peoria, Ill.
Adams, Dea. Milton, Wellington, Ohio.
Adams, Peter, Franklin, Mass.
Adams, Stephen, West Medway, Mass.
Adams, Mrs. Susan, Grafton, Mass.
Adams, Mrs. Susan, Grafton, Mass.
Adams, Mrs. Garoline B., Windham, Vt.
Alden, Mrs. Lucy G., Cambridgeport, Mass.
Alken, Mrs. Caroline B., Windham, Vt.
Alden, Mrs. Lucy G., Cambridgeport, Mass.
Allen, Amos, Bethehem, Conn.
Allen, Chauncey H., Ellsworth, Ohio.
Allen, Elisha, Leominster, Mass.
Allen, Ams. Esther H., So. Amherst, Mass.
Allen, Mrs. Eitzabeth B., Bangor, Me.
Allen, Mrs. Elizabeth B., Bangor, Me.
Allen, Mrs. Elizabeth B., Bangor, Me.
Allen, Rev. J. B., Gustavus, O.
Allen, George W., So. Amherst, Mass.
Allen, Rev. J. B., Gustavus, O.
Allen, Miss Mary F., So. Amherst, Mass.
Allen, Rev. Alanson, Rupert, Vt.
Amos, Rev. Marcus, Paterson, N. J.
Amsden, Adam, Walden, Vt.
Amsden, Mrs. Sarah, South Deerfield, Mass.
Anderson, Rev. Charles, Sennett, N. Y.
Amderson, Thomas D., Baltimore, Md.
Andrews, Rev. Ebenezer B., New Britsin, Conn.
Andrews, Rev. Ebenezer B., New Britsin, Conn.
Andrews, Rev. Henreltis, O.
Andrew

Ashley, Rev. Samuel S., Northborough, Mass. Atkins, Rev. L. S., Lenox, O. Atwator, Rev. Edward E., Salmon Falls, N. H. Austin, Rev. F. D., Tolland, Mass. Austin, Rev. F. D., Tolland, Mass. Austin, Rev. F. D., Tolland, Mass. Avery, Rev. Charles, Pittsburgh, Pa. Avery, Rev. John T., Cleveland, O. Avery, Nathan P., Greenville, Conn. Ayres, Perley, Oakham, Mass. Babbit, Mys. Mary, Madison, N. J. Bacon, Joseph T., Franklin, Mass. Babbit, Mys. Mary, Madison, N. J. Bacon, Joseph T., Franklin, Mass. Bacon, Rev. Leonard, D.D., New Haven, Conn. Bacon, Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn. Bacon, Nrs. Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn. Bacon, Nrs. Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn. Bacon, Nrs. Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn. Bacley, John, Georgetown, Mass. Salley, Dana, Townsend, Vt. Balley, Rev. Kiah, East Hardwick, Vt. Bain, Mrs. Mary, Marion, O. Eaker, Calvin, West Nassau, N. Y. Baleh, Henry B., Harwinton, Conn. Baldwin, Rev. Curtis O., North Ridgeville, O. Baldwin, N. C., MD., South Britain, Conn. Baldwin, N. C., MD., South Britain, Conn. Barber, Mrs. Anna M., Granville, O. Banks, David, Stanwich, Conn. Barber, Chester H., Torringford, Conn. Barber, Miss Mary E., West Meriden, Conn. Barber, Oliver, Sherburne, Mass. Barber, Orrin, Harwinton, Conn. Barber, Oliver, Sherburne, Mass. Bardwell, Mrs. Cornella, Oberlin, O. Bardwell, Rev. Horatio, Oxford, Mass. Barker, Rev. Davis E., Mercer, Pa. Barnas, Mrs. Elmirs. Troy, N. Y. Barnes, Blakeslee, New York City. Barnes, Marous, Keeseville, N. Y. Barnes, Barser, Rev. William T., Wethersfield, Ill. Bartlett, Rev. E. N., Olivet, Mich.

Bartlett, Miss Emily, Olivet, Mich. Bartlett, Rev. John, Avon, Conn. Bartlett, Mrs. Jane, Avon, Conn. Bartlett, Sumner, Brookfield, Mass. Bartlett, Mrs. Jane, Avon, Conn.
Bartlett, Summer, Brockfield, Mass.
Bassett, Rev. Archibald, Walton, N. Y.
Batcham, Mrs. Josephine C., Columbus, O.
Batchhelder, C. B., Oberlin, O
Batchelder, C. B., Oberlin, O
Bates, Abner, Syracuse, N. Y.
Bates, Rev. Merrit, Gloversville, N. Y.
Bates, Rev. Samuel, Brockfield, Y. Y.
Batherick, Elias, Perry Center, N. Y.
Batton, Rev. Henry, Southampton, Mass,
Beach, Rev. Henry, Southampton, Mass,
Beach, Rev. Asron C., Wolcott, Conn.
Beach, Hon. Moses, Harwinton, Conn.
Beach, Hon. Moses, Harwinton, Conn.
Beach, Hon. Sarah G., Kingsborough, N. Y.
Beadle, Joseph B., West Meriden, Conn.
Beaman, Mrs. Eliza M., Princeton, Mass.
Beardslee, Rev. William, Victoria, Ill.
Beatty, Caroline, New Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatty, Games, New York City.
Beatty, Robert, New Hamburg, Pa.
Beckwith, Barzillai, Great Barrington, Mass.
Beecher, Alfred, Oberlin, O. Bockwith, Barzillai, Great Barrington, Mass. Beecher, Aifred, Oberlin, O. Beecher, Mrs. Sarah, Oberlin, O. Beecher, Rev. Henry Ward, Brooklyn, N. Y. Beecher, Rev. Henry Ward, Brooklyn, N. Y. Beecher, Rev. William H., Reading, Mass. Beers, Lewis, Jr., Stratford, Conn. Beers, Rev. Henry N., Westborough, Mass. Beleher, Deff. A. P., Berksbire, N. Y. Belden, Rev. Henry, New York City. Belden, Henry A., Lennox, Mass. Belden, Mary E., Lennox, Mass. Belden, Mary E., Lennox, Mass. Belden, Mary E., Lennox, Mass. Belden, Henry A., Lennox, Mass. Belden, Mary E., Lennox, Mass. Benson, Rev. Henry, Fulton, N. Y. Benson, Mrs. Ruth, Fulton, N. Y. Benson, Mrs. Ruth, Fulton, N. Y. Benson, Mrs. Mellssa, Richland City, Wis. Benton, Eli, Lodd, Mich. Benton, Mrs. Mellssa, Richland City, Wis. Benton, Mrs. Maria W., Cleveland, O. Benton, Rev. John E., San Francisco, Cal. Benton, Mrs. Mary F., San Francisco, Cal. Benton, Mrs. Mary F., San Francisco, Cal. Biglow, Edward B., Grafton, Mass. Biggham, Dea. Asshel, West Cornwall, Yt Bigham, Errs, Hanover, Conn. Bigghow, Buwan Ch., Gridnon, Mass. Bingham, Doa. Asahol, West Corawall, Vt Bingham, Erra, Hanover, Conn. Bingham, Rev. Joel, Loeminster, Mass. Birge, George H., Torringford, Conn. Birge, George H., Torringford, Conn. Birge, Luther, Farmington, Ill. Birge, Nathaniel, Torringford, Conn. Biscoe, Rev. Thomas C., Grafton, Mass. Bishop, Harrison, Warren, Mass. Bishop, Nathan P., Lisbon, Conn. Biscoe, Kev. Thomas C., Grafton, Wis. Biackmer, Mrs. Bilzabeth, Dane, Wis. Biackmer, Luther, Shawangunk, N. Y. Biackmer, Mrs. Julia, Shawangunk, N. Y. Biak, Harry, Winehester Center, Conn. Biake, Harry, Winehester Center, Conn. Biakeley, Rev. Abraham, Sodus, N. Y. Biakeley Dan, Pawlet, Vt. Blakeley, Rev. Advanam, Soulas, N. Y. Blakeley, Dan, Pawlel, Vt. Blakesley, Milo, Terrysville, Conn. Blanchard, Rev. Jona, D. D., Galesburgh, Ill. Blanchard, Dea. Joshua, Andover, Mass. Bliss, Samuel, East Woodstock, Conn. Bliss, Miss Della, Fort Covington, N. Y. Bond, Rev. Alvan. D.D., Norwieh, Conn. Bond, James A., Lafayette, Pa. Bond, Joseph, Arcade, N. Y. Bonner, Elder John, Yellow Springs, O. Booth, Edwin, Springfield, Mass. Booth, Mrs. Mass. Olisco, N. Y. *Bostwick, James G., Olisco, N. Y. Bostwick, Mrs. Edwin, D., Fairport, N. Y. Bostwick, Mrs. Mary Ann, Otisco, N. Y.

EMBERS.

| Bostwick, Mrs. Nanoy, Otisco, N. Y.
| Boughton, John F., Nassau, N. Y.
| Boughton, John F., Nassau, N. Y.
| Boughton, Benber R. West Nassau, N. Y.
| Bowen, Caleb A., York, O.
| Bowen, Caleb A., York, O.
| Bowen, Caleb A., York, O.
| Boyd, David, Darlington, Pa.
| Boyd, Miss Louisa J., Greigsville, N. Y.
| Boyes, Bebert, Georgectown, Mass.
| Boynton, Honry, Mount Vernon, Mass.
| Boynton, Honry, Mount Vernon, Mass.
| Boynton, Honry, Mount Vernon, Mass.
| Bradley, Zalmon T., Yandeuzenville, Mass.
| Bradley, Zalmon T., Yandeuzenville, Mass.
| Brainerd, Adeliza, St. Albans, Vt.
| Brainerd, Adeliza, St. Albans, Vt.
| Brainerd, Mrs. Fidelia B., St. Albans, Vt.
| Brainerd, Mrs. Fidelia B., St. Albans, Vt.
| Brainerd, Lawrence, St. Albans, Vt.
| Brainerd, Brainerd, Brainerd, Rochester, N. Y.
| Brewster, Brainerd, M. Middletown, Conn.
| Brewster, Brainerd, M. Middletown, Conn.
| Brewster, Hon. Henry, Le Roy, N. Y.
| Brewster, Hon. Henry, Le Roy, N. Y.
| Brewster, Hon. Henry, Le Roy, N. Y.
| Brewster, Honry A., Rochester, Bullard, Nathan, Medway, Mass, Burges, Rev. Dyer, Constitution, Pa. Burnap, Ethan, Lowell, Mass, Burnap, Hervey, Windham, Vt. Burnap, Mary B., Townsend, Vt. Burnap, Mexter S., Milford, N. H. Burnell, Strong, Davenport, Iowa. Burna, Danele, Milford, N. H. Burns, George W., Milford, N. H. Burns, George W., Milford, N. H. Burns, George W., Milford, N. H. Burnt, Ellin, Norwich, Conn. Burr, Milo, Torringford, Conn. Burr, Milo, Torringford, Conn. Burr, Bars, Berrelle, Conn. Burr, Milo, Torringford, Conn. Burr, Burs, Burryllle, Conn. Burton, Albert, Mendon, Ill. Burton, Daniel F., Plymouth, Ill. Burton, Daniel W., Mendi Mission. Burton, Mrs. Elizabeth D., Mendi Mission, Burton, Nanoy, Mendi Mission.

Bush, Rev. Charles P., Greenville, Conn.
Bush, Dea. Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass.
Bushnell, Rev. George, Worcester, Mass.
Bushnell, Rev. Horaco, Cincinnati, O.
Bushnell, Susan, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Buttor, Charles, Newburyport, Mass.
Butter, Mrs. Elizabeth S., Newburyport, Mass.
Butter, Mrs. Elizabeth S., Newburyport, Mass.
Butter, Hev. Joremiah, Eiga, N. Y.
Butterfield, William, Francistown, N. H.
Buttoph, J. F., Essex, Vi. L.
Buttoph, J. F., Essex Cable, Rev. Jonathan, College Hill, O. Cable, Mrs. Sarah B., College Hill, O. Cady, Rev. Daniel R., Westborough, Mass. Cady, Mrs. Teresa, Collamer, O.
Camp, Denis, Durham, Gonn.
Camp, Denis, Durham, Gonn.
Camp, Mrs. Anna, Durham, Gonn.
Camp, Gondo, Gonn.
Camp, Gondo, Gonn.
Camp, Gondo, Gonn.
Campell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Galesburgh, Ill.
Campbell, Rev. James B., Felicity, O.
Campbell, Rev. Samuel M., Paris, N. Y.
Campbell, Rev. Samuel M., Paris, N. Y.
Campbell, Rev. Samuel M., Paris, N. Y.
Campbell, Foxborough, Mass.
Carpenter, Nelson, M.D. Warren, Mass.
Carpenter, Philo. Chicago, Ill.
Carpenter, Mrs. Ann T., Chicago, Ill.
Carpenter, Mrs. Elizabeth M., Warren, Mass.
Carter, Seth May, Winthrop, Me.
Carver, Rev. Shubael, Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Rev. Shubael, Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Mrs. Annada, Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Mrs. Annada, Union Valley, N. Y.
Caree, O. B., Andover, O. Cady, Mrs. Teresa, Collamer, O. Carver, Mrs. Amanda, Union Valley, N. Y. case, O. B., Andover, O. caswell, Mrs. Anns T., Shoreham, Vt. catlin, Frederick S., Harwinton, Conn. catlin, Roswell, Harwintos, Conn.
chamberlain, Ephraim H., Southborough, Mass,
chamberlain, Ephraim H., Southborough, Mass,
chamberlain, Rev. Uriah T., Conneantville, Pa.,
chamberlain, Palmer, East Woodstock, Conn. chandler, William, East Woodstock, Ct.
Chard Palman Vanderwoodlik, Ves. Chapin, Phineas, Vandeuzenville, Mass, Chapin, Phineas, Vandeuzenville, Mass, Chapman, Julius C., Hartford, Ct. Chapman, Theodore W., Beichertown, Mass, Chase, Rev. Benjamin C., Camden, Me. Chase, Hon. Salmon P., Cincinnati, O. Chase, Dea. Tappan, Haverhill, Mass. Chatfield, Charles J., Pininted Post, N. Y. Chatfield, Charles J., Pininted Post, N. Y. Chatfield, Charles J., Jr., Pininted Post, N. Y. Chatfield, Charles J., Jr., Pininted Post, N. Y. Chatfield, Francis A., Pininted Post, N. Y. Chatfield, Ida E., Pininted Post, N. Y. Change, John, Reading, Mass. Oheney, Nathaniel, Esq., Townsend, Vt. "Chidester, Betsey, Canfield, C. Chidester, Bybli, Canfield, O. Child, Miss Julia A.; Greigsville, N. Y. Childs, Dec. William, East Woodstock, Conn. Chase, Hon. Salmon P., Cincinnati, O. child, Miss Julia A. Greigsville, N. Y.
Childs, Dea, William, East Woodstock, Conn.
Chipman, Samuel, Waitsfield, V.
Churchill, Dea, Chas, East Bridgowater, Mass.
Clafin, Mrs. Mary B. Newtonyille, Mass.
Clafin, Mrs. Mary B. Newtonyille, Mass.
Clapp, Mrs. Lucinda H., Chatham, O.
Clapp, Rov. Luchter, Wauwatosa, Wis.
Clark, Eara, North Andover, Mass.
Clark, Eara, North Andover, Mass.
Clark, Eara, North Andover, Mass.
Clark, Dea, John, New Ipswich, N. H.
Clark, Dea, John, New Ipswich, N. H.
Clark, Rov. Josiah, East Hampton, Mass.
Clark, Mary A., Great Valley, N. Y.
Clark, Nathaniel, Medway, Mass.
Clark, Row. Nelson, Quincy, Mass.
Clark, Thomas, Andover, Mass.
Clark, Rev. William E., Middletown, Conn.
Clark, Rev. James A., Southwick, Mass. Clarke, Rev. James A., Southwick, Mass. Clarke, Miss Janet, Fulton, N. Y. Clary, Mrs. Alma A., Deerfield, Mass. Cleaveland, Rev. James B., South Egremon

Mass.
Cleveland, Prof. Charles D., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Mrs. Alison Nisbet, Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Samuel M., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Miss Alison N., Philadelphia, Pa.

Cleves, Joshua, Elmira, N. Y. Coan, Mrs. Jane L., Chelsen, Mass. Coan, W. L., Chelsea, Mass. Cochran, Rev. Samuel D. Cochran, Rev. Samuel D.
Coe, John, Beason Hill, Conn.
Coe, Mrs. John, Beacon Hill, Conn.
Coe, Oren, Oberlin, O.
Codin, George, Ludlow, Vt.
Coffin, George S., Boston, Mass.
Coffin, Levi H., Ludlow, Vt.
Coffin, Slas, Rindge, N. H.
Coder, John E., Georgetown, Mass.
Colton, Emily H. Galesburgh, Ill.
Comings, Randrew, East Berkshire, Vt.
Comings, Rev. Elam J., Globe Village, R. I.
Comings, Benjamin, Greensborough, L. Comings, Rev. Elam J., Globe Village, R. Comings, Benjamin, Greensborough, Vt. Comings, William A., East Berkshire, Vt. Comstock, Miss Fanny A.. Le Roy, N. Y. Conant, Peter D., Harvard, Mass. Conant, Peter D., Harvard, Mass.
Conant, Dea. William, Mount Vernon, N. H.
Conklin, Mrs. Almira, Freeport, Me.
Conklin, Rev. Charles, Le Roy, N. Y.
Cook, Miss Abby P., Clinton, N. Y.
Cook, Mrs. Clementine, Lewiston Falls, Me.
Cook, Mrs. Elizabeth A., Half-Day, Ill.
Cook, Dea. Isaac, Hanover, Mass.
Cook, Lamareus, Plymouth, Ill.
Cook, Rev. Philos G., Ludlowville, N. Y.
Cook, Margita, Plymouth, Ill. Cook, Lamareus, Plymouth, III.
Cook, Rev. Philos G., Ludlowville, N. Y.
Cook, Marietta, Plymouth, III.
Cook, Rev. Neison, Half-Day, III.
Cooke, Rev. Neison, Half-Day, III.
Cooper, Harris M., Gewego, N. Y.
Cooper, Obadiah A., Gewego, N. Y.
Cornwell, Rev. Isaac D., Hancock, N. Y.
Cortwin, Mrs. Roxanna B., Gloversville, N. Y.
Cottirins, Rev. N. P., Plymouth, III.
Cowdery, Mrs. Zeruah, Hartland, Conn.
Cowley, Mrs. Zeruah, Hartland, Conn.
Cowles, Benezer, Oticoo, N. Y.
Cowles, Rep. Henry, Oberlin, O.
Cowles, Samuel Hooker, Farmington, Conn.
Cowles, Walter C., Buffalo, N. Y.
Coy, Benjamin, Livonia, N. Y.
Craig, Rev. David, New Athens, O.
Crane, Hiram, Elmira, N. Y.
Crittenden, Richard, Oberlin, O.
Crosby, Freeman, Milford, N. H.
Crosby, Freedrick, Milford, N. H.
Crosby, Dea, Judah, Lowell, Mass.
Cross, Dr. E., Newburpport, Mass.
Cross, Rev. Edward N., West Haven, Conn.
Crothers, Rev. Edward N., West Haven, Conn.
Crothers, Rev. Samuel, Greenfield, O.
Cunningham, Rev. Edward N., West Haven, Conn.
Conningham, Rev. Edward N., West Haven, Conn. Crossman, Rev. Edward N., West Haven, Cot Crothers, Rev. Samuel, Greenfield, O. Cunningham, Rev. John, Gainesville, N. Y. Curlis, Jonathan, South Woodstock, Conn. Curlis, Eld. Silas, Lowell, Mass. Curlis, Mrs. Wm., West Brookfield, Mass., Cupler, Rev. Ebenezer, Worcester, Mass., Cutter, Mrs. Eunice P., Warren, Mass. Culier, Hev. Ebenezer, Worcester, Mass.
Cutter, Mrs. Ennice P., Warren, Mass.
Cutting, Asa, Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Asa, Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Flavel, M. D., Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Flavel, M. D., Westminster, Mass.
Dale, Mrs. Joanna, Albany, N. Y.
Dalzell, David, South Egremont, Mass,
Damer, Mary, Emmettsburg, Md.
Damon, Thomas, Westminster, Mass.
Danna, Rev. Edijah, Grafton, Mass.
Dana, Rev. Edijah, Grafton, Mass.
Dana, Rev. Hannah C., Strongsville, O.
Danforth, Timothy, Milford, N. H.
Daniels, Albert H., Oxford, Mass.
Daniels, George F., Oxford, Mass.
Daniels, George F., Oxford, Mass.
Daniels, Mrs. Lorissa, Osberlin, O.
Darling, Joshua H., Warsaw, N. Y.
Darrow, Leavitt, Plymouth Hollow, Conn.
Davis, Charles, Worcester, Mass.
Davis, Mrs. Sarah J., Ashby, Mass.
Davis, Mrs. Sarah J., Ashby, Mass.
Davis, Mrnas C., Harwinton, Conn.
Davis, William W., Boxboro', Mass.

Davis, Woodbury, Esq., Belfast, Me.
Dean, George E., Mount Vernon, N. H.
Dean, Silas, Stoneham, Mass.
De Berard, Mrs. Hepsabeth, Racine, Wis.
De Groff, Jacob, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Denning, Chauneov, Farmington, Conn.
Denning, Frederick, Farmington, Conn.
Denning, Trederick, Farmington, Conn.
Denning, Sannel, Farmington, Conn.
Denning, Mrs. Icatherine, Farmington, Conn.
De Sellem, Haver John L. Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Mrs. Naney W., Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Mrs. Maper, W., Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Mrs. Mongo, W., Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Howard Chase, Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Mrs. Mongo, W., Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Howard Chase, Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Howard Chase, Port Homer, O.
De Sellem, Mrs. Aloga, Mrs. Co.
De Witt, Eunice Mariette L., Lee, O.
Dickty, Rev. William, Bloomingburg, O.
Dickty, Rev. William, Bloomingburg, O.
Dicktinson, Mrs. Edeanor, Bloomingburg, O.
Dicktinson, Mrs. Abigall, Hudson, O.
Dicktinson, Rev. N. S., Chatham, Mass.
Dicktinson, Roxcey M., Hudson, O.
Dicktson, Mrs. Sarba, Harvard, Mass.
Dodge, Rev. Benjamin, Acton, Mass,
Donge, Charles M., Salmon Falla, N. H. Dodge, Lewis W., Grafton, Mass.
Donnell, Sammel, Sand Creek, Ind.
Douglass, Rev. J., Rutland, N. Y.
Dove, John, Andover, Mass.
Downs, Charles M., Salmon Falls, N. H.
Downs, Rev. Henry, Norridgewock, Me.
Downs, Rev. Henry, Norridgewock, Me.
Downs, Bes. Timothy F., Fitchburgh, Mass.
Dowse, Benjamin, Sherburne, Mass.
Dowse, Benjamin, Sherburne, Mass.
Dowse, Nathaniel, Sherburne, Mass.
Drake, Rev. A. J., Lodl, O.
Drennan, Dohn P., Mansfield, O.
Drennan, Rebecca R., Mansfield, O.
Drennan, Rebecca R., Mansfield, O.
Drensser, Rev. Amos, Braceville, O.
Drew, Zebulen M., Howell, Mich.
Drury, Joseph B., Westminster, Mass.
Drury, Samuel F., Olivet, Mich.
Dridley, Charles Augustus, Champlain, N. Y.
Dudley, Hirau, Champlain, N. Y.
Dudley, Hirau, Champlain, N. Y.
Dudley, J. Hervey, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Duncan, Charles, North Brookfield, Mass.
Duncan, Mrs. Lydla G., North Brookfield, Mass.
Duncan, William, Jr., North Brookfield, Mass.
Duncan, William, Jr., North Brookfield, Mass.
Dunham, Rey, Isaac, Dusbury, Mass.
Edon, Miss Busan, Framingham, Mass.
Eager, Mrs. Sally, South Laneaster Mass.
Easton, Miss Busan, Framingham, Mass.
Eaton, Miss Busan, Framingham, Mass.
Eaton, Miss Busan, Framingham, Mass.
Edwards, Rey, Joseph, Greenwich Station, O.
Eegeleston, Rey, Nathaniel H., Madison, Wis.
Eliott, Mrs. Sarah H., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Elilis, Frances B., Warren, Mass.

Ellis, Frances B., Warren, Mass.

Ellis, William, New Britain, Conn.

Emery, Rev. Samuel Hopkins, Taunton, Mass.

Emerson, Kimbail W., Francistown, N. H.

Emerson, Kimbail W., Francistown, N. H.

Emmerson, William H., Harvard, Mass.

Eston, Geo. W., Boonton, N. J.

Evans, Thomas W., Rijley, O.

Everson, Dea. Ephrain, Andover, Mass.

Everson, Mrs. Rhods G., Andover, Mass.

Everson, William H., Fittsburg, Pa.

Fairchild, Grandison, Oberlin, O.

Fairchild, Grandison, Oberlin, O.

Fairchild, Mrs. Nancy H., Oberlin, O.

Fairchild, Mrs. Ling, F., Medina, O.

Fairchild, Mrs. Ling, F., Medina, O.

Fairchild, Mrs. Ling, R., Medina, O.

Farington, Oliver, Brewer, Mc.

Faukan, Rev. Lucien, Newark, Ill.

Farington, Oliver, Brewer, Mc.

Faukan, Rev. Lucien, Newark, Ill.

Farington, Oliver, Brewer, Mc.

Fellows, Rev. Linus H., Durham, N. Y.

Fellows, Rev. Linus H., Barberough, Mass.

Flield, Mrs. Nancy M., Marlborough, Mass.

Flield, Rev. Leve Lavier, A., Barberough, Mass.

Flield, Rev. Leve Lavier, A., Barberough, Mass.

Flisher, Rev. Cale E. A., Andover, Mass.

Flisher, Rev. Cale E. A., Andover, Mass.

Flaber Foster, Rev. Andrew B., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Braiford P., Genesee, Mic.
Foster, Daniel, Templeton, Mass.
Foster, Daniel, Templeton, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, Mrs. Irene C., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Mrs. Irene C., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Mrs. Lydia C., Atlanta, Ill.
Foster, Mrs. Lydia C., Atlanta, Ill.
Foster, Mrs. Lydia C., Atlanta, Ill.
Foster, Miss. Refoorgette, Andover, Mass.
Foster, Sanuel, Worcester, Mass.
Foster, Sanuel, Worcester, Mass.
Foster, Rev. S. H., West Chazy, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Susan M., Woburn, Mass.
Foster, Rev. S. H., West Chazy, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Philiss. Cheman, Penn.
Fowler, Mrs. Philiss. Lenox, Mass.
Fowler, Kemas M., M.D., Washington, Conn.
Fowler, Dea. Samuel F., North Danvers, Mass.
Freeman, Rev. Joseph, Hanover, Mass.

Freeman, Mrs. Susan B., Parma, O.
French, C. B., Granville, Ill.
French, Rev. Daniel L., Nashua, N. H.
French, Rev. Daniel L., Nashua, N. H.
French, Rev. Daniel L., Nashua, N. H.
French, Rev. Baniel L., Nashua, N. Erisbie, Mrs. Sarah, Granville, Ill.
Frisbie, Mrs. Loits, Brownhelm, O.
Grisbie, Mrs. Loits, Brownhelm, O.
Grisbie, Mrs. Loits, Brownhelm, O.
Gamble, Dawland, Good, O.
Gamble, Dawland, C. Banettsburg, Md.
Gant, Joseph E., Ebnettsburg, Md.
Garland, Rev. Joseph, Bristol, N. H.
Garland, Rev. Joseph, Bristol, N. H.
Garland, Rev. Joseph, Bristol, N. H.
Garner, Thomas, Davisburgh, Mich.
Garner, Thomas, Davisburgh, Mich.
Garner, Thomas, Davisburgh, Mich.
Garte, Lucy, Townsend, Mass.
Gates, Lucy, Townsend, Mass.
Gilbert, Thomas, North Browkfield, Mass.
Gilbert, Thomas, North Browkfield, Mass.
Goddard, Benjamin, 2d, Worcester, Mass.
Goddard, Benjamin, 2d, Worcester, Mass.
Goddard, Benjamin, 2d, Worcester, Mass.
Goddard, Dean David, Marbro', Mass.
Goddard, Den David, Marbro', Mass.
Goddard, Den David, Marbro', Mass.
Goddell, Mrs. Harriet L., Woburn, Mass.
Goddell, Galvin E., Woburn, Mass.
Goddell, Gran, Millbury, Mass.
Godde Greenwood, Calvin S., Gardner, Mass. Greenwood, Dea. Holland, Grafton, Mass. Greenwood, Dea. Holland, Grafton, Mass. Greenwood, Dea. Holland, Grafton, Mass. Grieg, James, Williamson, N. Y. Cridley Addison, South Hadley, Mass. Grier, Rev. Laferty, East Springfield, O. Grier, Rev. R. S., Emmettsburg, Md. Griffin, Charles E., Roseville, III. Griffin, Henry Martin, Roseville, III. Griffin, Henry Martin, Roseville, III. Griffin, Henry Martin, Roseville, III. Griffin, Mrs. Sarah. Lewiston Falls, Me. Griffith, Edwin H., Nassau, N. Y. Griffith, Smith, Nassau, N. Y. Griggs, Harvey D., Brimfield, Mass. Griggs, Rev. Leveret, Millbury, Mass. Griggs, Rev. Leveret, Millbury, Mass. Griggs, Rev. Leveret, Millbury, Mass. Griggs, Groue, Lowanna, N. Y. Grimnel, Rev. Josiah B.; Sugar Grove, Iowa. Grosvenor, Rev. L., Jerseyville, III. Guilliver, John T., North Brockfield, Mass. Guilliver, John Philadelphia, Pa. Guilliver, John T., North Brockfield, Mass. Guilliver, Rev. John P., Norwich, Conn. Hudlock, Levi J., Bangor, Mo. Hadlock, Nathan, Bangor, Mo.

Hale, Bor. John G., Grass Valley, Cal. Hale, Mrs. Lucindo, Chelsea, V. H. Hale, Simeon, Weathershield, Conn. Hall, Rev. Heman B., Jamaica Mission. Hall, Rev. Heman B., Jamaica Mission. Hall, Myron S., West Bloomfield, N. Y. Hall, Stephen, Ashtabula, O. Hall, Mrs. Stephen, Ashtabula, O. Hall, Mrs. Stephen, Ashtabula, O. Hamilton, Miss Caythla M., Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss Stathida, Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss Stathida, Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss Matlida, Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss Ashtabula, Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss Lender, Wallon, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss. Ennice, Wallon, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss. Ennice, Wallon, N. Y. Hanks, Rev. B. W., Lowell, Mass. Hanna, Mrs. Mary, Mercer, Pa. Hanson, Dea. George, Globe Village, Mass. Hardwick, Benjamin C., Onliney, Mass. Hardwick, Charles, Jr., Quincy, Mass. Hardy, Nathan, Brower, M. Hardy, Nathan, Hardy, Georgetown, Mass. Hardy, Wathan, Hram, Georgetown, Mass. Hardwick, Milliam G., Bangor, Me. Hardy, Nathanel, Bangor, Me. Hardy, Mrs. Bitarlet L., Guilford, Conn. Hart, Miss Catherine, Guilford, Conn. Hart, William, Guilford, Conn. Hart, Wi

Hitchcock, Mrs. Sarah M., Painesville,
Hodge, Mrs. Mary E., Janesville, Wis.
Holbrook, Lewis, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Amos B., Westfininster, Mass.
Holden, Francis P., North Abington, Mass.
Holden, Francis P., North Abington, Conn.
Holden, Mrs. Sarah H., Woburn, Mass.
Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn.
Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn.
Holman, Elijah, Millbury, Mass.
Holmes, Andw., Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Dan Geo. W., Bridgewater, Mass.
Holmes, Ang. Geo. W., Bridgewater, Mass.
Holmes, Bell. Brook, O. Holmes, Dea. Geo. W., Dringewater, Mass. Holmes, Vev. Israel C., Hartford, Wiss. Holmes, John, Bell Brook, O. Holmes, Mrs. Mary, Bellbrook, Ohlo. Holmes, William, Bellbrook, Ohlo. Holmes, Rev. William, Baboock's Grove, Ill. Holton, Dea. Francis, Bellevne, N. Y. Holtslander, Mrs. Electa F., Oberlin, O. Holtslander, Mrs. Jane, Oberlin, O. Holyoke, Rev. William B., Eigin, Ill. Hopkins, Erastus, White Lake, Mich. Hopkins, George B., Granville, Ill. Hopkins, George B., Granville, Ill. Hopkins, Geo. W., Sand Creek, Ind. Hopkins, Grow, Mrs. Mary, Oberlin, O. Hosford, Prof. Oranol, Olivet, Mich. Hosford, Mrs. Abby, Olivet, Mich. Hosford, Mrs. Abby, Olivet, Mich. Hosford, Sand, Sand, Harvard, Mass. Houghton, Cephas, Harvard, Mass. Houghton, Mrs. Sarah, Harvard, do. Howard, Mrs. Orinda, Fort Covington, N. Y. Howard, Mrs. O'llida, Fort Covington, N. Y. Howe, Ann Sophia, Cambridge, Mass. Howe, Dea Frederic, North Danvers, Mass. Howe, Joseph, Methuen, Mass. Howe, Nehemiah, Greenwich, Conn. Howe, Joseph, Methuen, Mass.
Howe, Joseph, Methuen, Mass.
Howe, Nehemiah, Greenwich, Conn.
Howe, Rufas, Cambridge, Mass.
Howe, Mrs. Sophia, Mount Auburn, Mass.
Howe, Mrs. Sophia, Mount Auburn, Mass.
Hoye, James F., Coventry, N. Y.
Hoyt, Mrs. Maliada S., Strongsville, O.
Hoyt, Mrs. Rebecca A., Stanwich, Conn.
Hubbard, Drankin B., Mcreer, Penn.
Hubbard, Drankin B., Mcreer, Penn.
Hubbard, Drankin B., Mcreer, Penn.
Hubbard, Brankin B., Mcreer, Penn.
Hubbard, Brankin B., Mcreer, O.
Hudson, Dr. William, N. Lee, O.
Hudson, Dr. William, N. Lee, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Monnal, Dr. Lee, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Ann Jennette, Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Ann Jennette, Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Joanna, Pomeroy, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Joanna, Pomeroy, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Joanna, Pomeroy, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harriet L., Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Betsey B., Oberlin, O.
Hughson, Rev. S. S., Rushville, N. Y.
Hullurd, Hiram, Stockholm, N. Y.
Hull, Rev., Joseph D., Farmington, Conn.
Humphrey, Rev. John P., Winchester, N. H.
Humphrey, Rev. Litter, Windham, O.
Hunt, Samuel, Ava, N. Y.
Hunt, Sereno D., North Bridgewater, Mass.
Hunt, Rev. Samuel, Franklin, Mass.
Hunt, Samuel, Ava, N. Y.
Hunt, Sereno D., North Bridgewater, Mass.
Hunt, Samuel, Ava, N. Y.
Hunt, Sereno D., North Bridgewater, Mass.
Hunt, Samuel, Mrs. Liey R., Litchfield, O.
Huribul, Mrs. Luey R., Litchfield, O.
Hurth, Thomas K., Danville, Iowa.
Hursh, Thomas, Dover, O.
Hutchins, Hamber, Mrs. Hurst, Miss Sarah Elizabeth, Dover, O. Hutchins, Isaac, West Killingly, Conn. Hutchinson, John B., Milford, N. H. Hutchinson, Royal, Milford, N. H. Hyde, Florence E. Corning, N. Y. Ide, Daniel M., Claremont, N. H. Ide, Baniel M., Claremont, N. H. Ide, Rev. Jacob, D. D., West Medway, Mass.

Ingersoll, Bey. Alvan, Rochester, N. Y.
Ingersoll, Joseph, Stanwich, Conn.
Jacks, Aaron, Methucn, Mass.
Jackson, Mrs. Charlotte B. Prattaburgh, N. Y.
Vakson, Hon. William, Newton, Mass.
Jackson, Mrs. William, Newton, Mass.
Jackson, Mrs. William, Newton, Mass.
Jacobs, Clark, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Jay, Hon. William, Bedford, N. Y.
Jay, Hon. William, Bedford, N. Y.
Jenkins, George R., Mount Pleasant, O.
Jonkins, Gharles, Warren, Mass.
Jonell, John Henry, North Brookfield, Mass.
Jonell, Ghort T. Lakrgeville, N. Y.
Jowett, Mrs. Harriette E., Boston, Mass.
Jowett, Harriette E., Boston, Mass.
Jowett, Harriette E., Boston, Mass.
Jowett, Marriette B., Boston, Mass.
Jowett, Mass.
Jowett, M. J., Johnson, M. J.
Johnson, Mrs. Anna, Oberlin, O.
Johnson, Homer, M. D., Oberlin, O.
Johnson, Mrs. Hannah, Gleversville, N. Y.
Johnson, Mrs. Calsina, Cambridgeport, Mass.
Jones, Rev. Warren G., Hartford, Conn.
Jones, R

Knowles, William, Knowlesville, N. Y. Knowlton, Mrs. Amanda, Utica, N. Y.
Knowlton, Mrs. Amanda, Utica, N. Y.
Knowlton, Pomeroy. Worcester, Mass.
Ladd, Silas, Painceville,
Ladd, Silas, Painceville,
Language, Miss Mercy, Winthrop, Mc.
Language, Miss, Lauphear, Rev. O. T., Lowell, Mass.
Lauphear, Rev. Arose E., South Britain, Conn.
Lawrence, Mrs. Hannah B., South Britain, Conn.
Lawrence, Henry, Gardner, Mass.
Leavich, Mrs. Lydia, Ellington, N. Y.
Learoud, John A., North Danvers, Mass.
Leavitt, Kev. Harvey F., Vergennes, Vt.
Leavitt, Kev. Joshua, D. D., New York City
Leavitt, William, Washington, Conn.
Lee, Josh R., M. D.
Lee, Sarah M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee, Dea William, Lisbon, Conn. Knowlton, Mrs. Amanda, Utica, N. Y. Lee, John R., M. D.
Lee, Barah M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee, Dea. William, Lisbon, Conn.
Le Moyne, F. Julius, M. D., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. Maney, Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. Maney, Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. Maney, Washington, Pa.
Leonard, Rev. A. L., Burlington, Iowa.
Leonard, Rev. A. L., Burlington, Iowa.
Leonard, Rev. S. O., Mount Vernon, O.
Lewis, Ichabod, Lee, O.
Light, Joseph, Worcester, Mass.
Litchield, Jairus, Leominster, Mass.
Little, Rev. E. G., Ashburnham, Mass.
Little, Rev. George B., Bangor, Mc.
Little, Rev. George B., Bangor, Mc.
Little, Rev. George B., Bangor, Mc.
Little, Rev. George B., Cangor, Mc.
Little, Rev. George B., Cangor, Mc.
Little, Rev. George B., Comm.
Locke, John, Brownhelm, O.
Long, Capit, Ozias, — Coyn.
Longley, Rev. Moses A., Pern, Mass.
Loomis, Wolcott R., Hartford Conn.
Lord, Mrs. Mary Jane, Futton, N. Y.
Lord, Mrs. Mary Jane, Futton, N. Y.
Lord, Rev. T. N., Auburn, Me.
Lord, Mrs. Sarah T., Olivet, Mich.
Love, Mrs. Sarah T., Olivet, Mich.
Love, Mrs. Matilda, Berlin, Conn.
Love, Mrs. Julia O. H. Oakham, Mass. Love, Rev. William Delos, Berlin, Conn.
Love, Mrs. Matilda, Berlin, Conn.
Lovel, David, Oakham, Mass.
Lovell, Mrs. Julia O. H., Oakham, Mass.
Lovell, Mrs. Julia O. H., Oakham, Mass.
Loveloy, Rev. Joseph C., Cambridgeport, Mass.
Loveloy, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cambridgeport, Mass.
Loveloy, John, Lowell, Mass.
Loveloy, Lowell, Mass.
Loveloy, Lowell, Mass.
Loveloy, Lowell, Mass.
Mass.
Lowell, Mass.
Mass.
Many, Rev. Lyman, Honeoye, N. Y.
Mann, James, West Medway, Mass.
Marshell, Dea. C. G., Salmon Falls, N. Y.
Martin, Reuben, Fort Covington, N. Y.
Mattison, Ira, Mount Jackson, Pa.
McCielland, J. S., Mount Jackson, Pa.
McCielland, Mrs. Marty, Weston, Pa.
McCielland, Mrs. Marty, Weston, Pa.
McCielland, Mrs. Marty, Mansfeld, O.
Maxwell, Mrs. Marty, Mansfeld, O.
MacCielland, Mrs. Marty, W. Hordon, Pa.
McCielland, Mrs. Marty, W. Hordon, Pa.

McCoy, Kenneth, West Alexander, PaMcFarland, Lovens, Brookfield, Mass.
McFarland, Mrs. Mary, Washington, PaMcGarland, Samuel, Washington, PaMcGarland, Samuel, Washington, PaMcGalbeny, James, Mount Vernon, O.
McMaster, Thomas A., Andover, Mass,
Meacham, Dea. Simon, Pulaski, N. Y.
Mead, John, Walton, N. Y.
Mead, Dohn, Walton, N. Y.
Mead, Dea. Jonas, Greenwich, Conn.
Melville, Dea. Jonas, East Jaffrey, N. H.
Melville, Mrs. Betsey, Jaffrey, N. H.
Melville, Mrs. Betsey, Jaffrey, N. H.
Mendenhall, Anna T., Mount Plensant, O.
Merriam, Albert W., Harpersville, N. Y.
Merriam, Caroline D., Hobart, N. Y.
Merriam, Caroline D., Hobart, N. Y.
Merriam, Caroline D., Mandusky, O.
Merriam, Lucy M., Hobart, N. Y.
Merriam, Eeed, Westminster, Mass.
Merrick, Mrs. Emma, South Amherst, Mass.
Merrick, Mrs. Dorcas, N., N'th Wilbresh, Mass.
Merrick, Mrs. Dorcas, N., N'th Wilbraham, Mass.
Merrill, Mrs. Anna, Oberlin, O.
Merrill, Mrs. Anna, Oberlin, O.
Merrill, Mrs. Anna, Oberlin, O.
Merrill, Mrs. Anna, Oberlin, O. "Morrill, Mrs. Anna, Oberlin, O.
"Morrill, Benjamin.
Morrill, Mrs. P. G., Williamsburg, Me,
Morrill, Rev. David N., Gt. Barrington, Mass.
Milea, Rev. James B., Charlestown, Mass.
Milea, Rev. James B. Charlestown, Mass.
Milea, Rev. Milo N., Lawn Ridge, Ill.
Miller, Rev. Daniel R. Lisbon, Ill.
Miller, Rev. Jane C., Lisbon, Ill.
Miller, Rev. Jacob G., Harwinton, Conn.
Miller, Alba, Rellevine O. Miller, Rev. Jacob G., Harwinton Con Miller, John, Bellevue, O. Miller, Henry, Torringford, Conn. Miller, Lewis B., Torringford, Conn. Miller, Lewis B., Torringford, Conn. Miller, Rev. Ovid, Syracuse, N. Y. Minor, Mrs. Lucy C., Danville, Iowa. Mitchell, Miss Eliza, Oberlin, O. Moffat, Addison, Madison, O. Moffat, Mrs. Sarah B., Madison, O. Montager, Den. J. S. Brooffield Meantager, Den. J. S. Brooffield Montague, Dea. J. S., Brookfield, Mass. Montgomery, John P., Haverhill, Mass. Montgomery, John P., Haverhill, Mass. Moore, Mrs. Caroline M., Champlain, N.Y. Moore, Mrs. Harriet Storer, Concord, N. H. Moore, Mrs. Caroline M., Champlain, N.Y.
Moore, Mrs. Harriet Stover, Concord, N. H.
Moore, Moodlah, Champlain, N.Y.
Moore, Rev. D. M., Hipley, C.
Moore, Rev. Humphrey, D. D., Milford, N. H.
Moore, Rev. Humphrey, D. D., Milford, N. H.
Moore, Rev. William H., Torringford, Conn.
Morgan, Rev. H. H. Hannib J. N. Y.
Morse, Abel, East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, Rev. Alfred, Maumee City, O.
Morse, Mrs. Caroline F., Union City, Mich.
Morse, Rev. Jason, Brimfeld, Mass.
Morse, Nathan E., East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, Nev. Jason, Brimfeld, Mass.
Morse, Nathan E., East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, O.D., Great Falls, N. H.
Morse, Parker, Sen., Metamora, Ill.
Mosely, George T., Union City, Mich.
Mosely, Catherine, Westminster, Mass.
Murdock, John Franklin, St. Johnsbury, Vt.
Mundock, John Franklin, St. Johnsbury, Vt.
Mundock, John Franklin, St. Johnsbury, Vt.
Mundock, John Franklin, St. Johnsbury, Vt.
Muntahal, Marquesan Islands.
Muzzy, Nathan, Worcester, Mass.
Neal, Thomas, Oberlin, O.
Neal, Mrs. Sarah, Oberlin, O.
Nells, Mrs. Elizabeth, Ashtabula, O.
Nelson, Thomas L., Elyria, O.
Netleton, George W., West Haven, Conn.
Nettleton, Lyrman, Washington, Gonn.
Nevion, Des. Gaylord, Durham, Conn.
Newton, Des. Gaylord, Durham, Conn.
Newton, Des. Gaylord, Durham, Conn.

Norris, Mrs. Eliza M., Hyannis, Mass. North, John H., Torringford, Conn. North, Omri, New Britain, Conn. Nowell, Mrs. Bangor, Me. Noyes, Hiram N., Georgetown, Mass. Officer, Rev. Morris, Findley, O. Olds, Rev. Abner D., Zariton, N. Y. Nowe, Hiram N., Georgetown, Mass.
Officer, Rev. Morth. Pindley, O.
Officer, Annell, Carlton, N. Y.
Olda, Mrs. Annell, Carlton, N. Y.
Olda, Mrs. Annell, Carlton, N. Y.
Olda, Mrs. Annell, Carlton, N. Y.
Osborne, James W., South Ablagton, Mass.
Osborn, Seldon, Dover, Ohlo.
Otis, Ephraim R., Greenville, Conn.
Otis, Mrs. Hannah, Kanona, N. Y.
Oughton, Mrs. Maria A., Spanishtown, Jamaica,
Packard, Mrs. Elizabeth, Chatham Center, O.
Page, Rev. Benjamin S. J., North Haven, Conn.
Paine, John A., M.D., Albany, N. Y.
Paine, John A., M.D., Albany, N. Y.
Paine, John A., M.D., Albany, N. Y.
Paine, Hornee M., M.D., Cinton, N. Y.
Paine, Hornee M., M.D., Cinton, N. Y.
Paine, Rev. Rodney, Honeove, N. Y.
Paine, Hornee M., M.D., Oxford, Mass.
Paine, William W., New Hartford, N. Y.
Paine, Horne, W., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Jalia, M., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, Mest Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, Mest Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, Mest Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, Mest Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, Wes Pease, Hiram, Oberlin, O. Pease, J. Byron, Springfield, Mass. Pease, Peter P., Oberlin, O. Peck, Abigail G., East Bloomfield, N. Y. Peck, Abigail G., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Pea. Charles, Jewett, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Esther M., Oberlin, O.
*Peck, Krs. Esther M., Oberlin, O.
*Peck, Everard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Martha Farley, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Alice B., Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Rev. Henry E., Oberlin, O.
Peck, P. P., Sandusky City, O.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y. Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Jesse, Boston, Mass
Peck, Mrs. Evelina H., Boston, Mass.
Peck, Watrous, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Jasper C., West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Mary F., West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peckham, Rev, Samuel H., Leominister, Mass,
Peckham, Mrs. Sarah O., Leominister, Mass,
Pelroc, Rev, Charles H., Kowanee, III.
Perkins, Mrs. Clarissa Ann, Paterson, N. J.

Perkins, Miss Eliza D., Glovorsville, N. Y.
Perkins, Rev. George W., Chicago, Ill.
Perkins, Mrs. Mary E., North Brookfield, Mass.
Perkins, Rev. Willi am, Ripley, O.
Pettengill, Moss. Peoria, Ill.
Pettengill, Mrs. Luoy, Peoria, Ill.
Phelps, Mrs. Logv T., Elisworth, Me.
Phillips, Mrs. Charles, West Haven, Conn.
Phillips, Mrs. Gharles, West Haven, Conn.
Phillips, Mrs. Gharles, West Haven, Conn.
Phillips, Mrs. Harriet W., Methuen, Mass.
Phillips, Dea. Rufus B., Fitswilliam, N. H.
Pickett, Rev. Aaron Bandisheld, Mass. Pincket, Rev. Aaron Sandisfield, Mass.
Pierce, Mrs. Anne B., Amboy, Ill.
Pierce, Ezékole, Paris HIII, N. Y.
Pierces, George, Norwich, Conn.
Pierce, Rev. Willard, N. Abington, Mass.
Pitts, Cyrus, Moline, Ill.
Pitts, Mrs. Margaret B., Moline, Ill.
Pixley, Albert, Detroit, Mich.
Pixley, Irs. East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, Mrs. Jane, East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, Lobbens M., Great Barrington, Mass.
Platt, Daniel G., Washington, Conn.,
Plumb, Edward B., Clay, Iowa.
Plumb, Bamuel, Lenox, O.
Plumb, Samuel, Lenox, O. Plumb, Samuel, Lenox, O.
Plumb, Mrs, Caroline, Lenox, O.
Plumb, Mrs, Caroline, Lenox, O.
Plumer, Samuel, Georgetown, Mass.
Poage, Rev. James S., West Alexandria, Pa.
Pomeroy, Alanson, Strongsville, O.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Keziah, Strongsville, O.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Martha, Warren, Mass.
Pond, Burton, Torringford, Conn.
Pond, Lucy, Newark, N. J.
Pool, John, Granville, III.
Poor, William O., Belfast, Me.
Pope, Mrs. Orpha C., Strongsville, O.
Portar, Rev. Charles G., Bangor, Me.
Porter, Elizur, Danville, Iowa.
Porter, Mrs. Maria M., Danville, Iowa.
Porter, Mrs. Maria M., Danville, Iows.
Porter, Samuel D., Rochester, N. Y.
Potter, Ebenezer, Fitzwil liam, N. H.
Potter, Mrs. Susannah, Fitzwilliam, N. H.
Potter, Mrs. John D. Potter, Ebenczer, Fitzwi liam, N. H. Potter, Mrs. Susannah, Fitzwilliam, N. H. Potter, Mrs. Susannah, Fitzwilliam, N. H. Potter, Mrs. John J. Middlefield, Conn. Powell, Mrs. A. V. Middlefield, Conn. Powell, Mrs. A. V. Middlefield, Conn. Powers, Mrs. Chie, West Cornwall, Vt. Pratt, Mrs. L. S., Grafton, Mass. Pratt, Rev. Parsons S., Dornet, Vt. Pratt, Mrs. S. B., Ornet, Vt. Pratt, Samuel, A., Worcester, Mass. Pratt, Dea. William, Quiney, Mass. Pratt, Dea. William, Quiney, Mass. Pratt, Dea. William, Quiney, Mass. Prentic, Samuel, Greenville, Conn., Prentics, Thomas, Waitsfield, Vt. Preston, Mrs. Catherine, Pittsburg, Pa. Priest, Rev. Josaha A., Homer, N. Y. Prindle, Rev. Jurnan, Waitsfield, Vt. Prindle, Rev. Josaha A., Homer, N. Y. Prindle, Rev. John M., Dunbarton, N. H. Putnam, Levi, Milford, N. H. Putnam, Rev. Rufus A., Epsom, N. H. Ramsay, Charles, West Hartford, Ct. Ramsdell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Warren, Mass. Rand, Rev. Asa, 'Asburnham, Mass. Randall, William H., Albany, N. Y. Rankin, Mrs. Amanda K. Rankin, Rev. S. G. W. I. Portland, Conn. Ranny, Rev. D. H., Willmington, Vt. Rapp, James, Utlea, O. Ray, Mrs. Jane H., Lenox, O. Ray, Mrs. Jane H., Lenox, O. Ray, Mrs. Sally M., Olivet, Mich. Reed, Carlo, Olivet, Mich. Reed, Mrs. Sally M., Olivet, Mich.

Reeves, James H., Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Mrs. Cordelia Ann, Newark, N. Y. Reeves, James H., Nowars, N. Y.
Reeves, Marc Cordella Ann, Nowark, N. Y.
Reeves, James D., Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, Mars E., Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, Mary E., Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, Mary E., Newark, N. Y.
Reloe, Rev. Bernell, T., Kiantone, N. Y.
Rice, Rev. Each H., Jamesport, N. Y.
Rice, Rev. Each H., Jamesport, N. Y.
Rice, Rev. A., Kingston, Fenn.
"Rich, Rev. Ezckiel, Deep River, Conn.
Htchards, Miss Elizabeth H., Albany, N. Y.
Richards, Charles, Bristol, Conn.
Richards, Mrs. Emily, Sunderland, Mass.
Richards, Mrs. Emily, Sunderland, Mass.
Richardson, Mrs. Eliza W., Lenox, O.
Richardson, Rev. A. M., Lenox, O.
Richardson, Elisha, Franklin, Mass.
Richardson, Miss Republish, Stoneham, Mass. Helhardson, Elisha, F., Frankin, Mass. Richardson, Miss Hepibah, Stoneham, Mass. Richardson, Mrs. Mary E. D., Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Capt. Stephen W., Medway Mass. Richardson, Dea. Stephen, Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Sally, Stoneham, Mass. Rider, Samuel, East Bridgowater, Mass. Richardson, Sally, Stöneham, Mass.
Rider, Samuel, East Bridgewater, Mass.
Rider, Ramuel, East Bridgewater, Mass.
Ritchie, Rev. Andrew, Greenfield, O.
Ritter, Thomas, M. D., New York City.
Ritter, Delia M., New York City.
Ritter, Balla E., New York City.
Ritter, Isabella G., New York City.
Ritter, Harla, New York City.
Ritter, Anna, New York City.
Ritter, Anna, New York City.
Roberts, Rev. George, Williamsfield, O.
Robertson, Mrs. Lemíra J., Raymond, Wis.
Robbins, Rev. S. W., North Haven, Conn.
Robinson, Rev. Reuben T., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Rithu, Augusta, Me.
Robinson, Mrs Chara C., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Mrs Chara C., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Mrs Chara C., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Mrs Clara C., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, T., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, T., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Robinson, T., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Hartford, Conn.
Rogers, Declus, St. Albans, Yt.
Rogers, Declus, St. Albans, Yt.
Rogers, William B., Southampton, Mass.
Ross, John, Hartford, Conn.
Rowe, Mrs. Phebe L., Stoneham, Mass.
Rowe, Mrs. Phebe L., Stoneham, Mass.
Roy, Rev. J. E., Chlegag, Ill. Rowe, Mrs. Phebe L., Stoneham, Mass. Rowell, Henderson, Acton, Mass. Roy, Rev. J. E., Chicago, Ill. Ruloofson, Mrs. L. M., West Gilbon, N. Y. Russell, Mrs. Catey W., Perry Centre, N. Y. Russell, George W., Wercester, Mass. Sath, Rost, Elijah S., Oberlin, O. Sabin, Dea. Wm. C., Sakton's River, Vt. Sabine, William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y. Sabine, Miss Eva, Onondaga Valley, N. Y. Sabine, Miss Eva, Onondaga Valley, N. Y. Sabine, Miss Eva, Conondaga Valley, N. Y. Safford, John, Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. Charlotte, Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. Aura B., Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. Aura B., Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. Aura B., Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. The Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. Mrs. Rocket, Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. W. Sanford, Revo W. H., Seavytile, Ky. Salisbury, Dr. Stephen, Medway, Mass. Samford, Rev. David, Medway, Mass. Samford, Rev. W. H., Boylston, Mass. Sawer, Rev. John, Garland, Me. Sawyer, Rev. John, Garland, Me. Sawyer, Rev. John, Garland, Me. Sawyer, Rev. John, Garland, M. Sawyer, Rev. John, Garland, B. Y. Scofield, Rev. Wm. J., Milford, Conn. Scott, Martha Ann. South Salem, Olio. Scott, Martha Ann. South Salem, O

Seaton, Rev. Charles M., Charlotte, Vt. Sedgwick, Harriet L., Oakfield, N. Y. Selkregg, Osee, North East, Pens. Seymour, Sarah H., Seneca Falls, N. Y. Shafer, Rev. Archibaid S., Gaines, N. Y. Shafer, Win. E. Elmira, Gaines, N. Y. Shafer, Wm. R., Townsend, Vt. Shaw, Ebenczer, North Abington, Mass. Shaw, Josiah, North Abington, Mass. Shaw, Josiah, North Abington, Mass. Shaw, M. G., Ouiney, Mass. Shaw, Ebonczer, North Ablington, Mass.
Shaw, Joslah, North Ablington, Mass.
Shean, Wu. G., Quliney, Mass.
Shealdon, Rev. Letther W., Toonssend, Mass.
Sheidon, Rev. Letther W., Toonssend, Mess.
Sheidon, Rev. Pror. George Boomfield, M. Y.
Sheidon, Rev. Pror. George Boomfield, M. Y.
Sheidon, Charles G., Penn Yan, N. Y.
Sheipard, Mrs. Jane B., Penn Yan, N. Y.
Sheipard, Mrs. Gabartine, Polaski, N. Y.
Sheipard, Mrs. Cathartine, Polaski, N. Y.
Shipherd, Jacob R., Watertown, N. Y.
Shipherd, Julia M., Pulaski, N. Y.
Shipherd, Julia M., Pulaski, N. Y.
Short, H. N., Bergen, N. Y.
Shimmay, Loriston, Oxford, Mass.
Sikelto, George E., South Hadley Falls, Mass.
Sikelton, Mrs. Almira, Woburn, Mass.
Sketton, Mrs. Almira, Woburn, Mass.
Sketton, Mrs. Almira, Woburn, Mass.
Sketner, Jason, Harwinton, Conn.
Smalley, Rev. Elam, D. D., Troy, N. Y.
Smith, Ann Eliza Brainerd, St. Albans, V.
Smith, Ann Eliza Brainerd, St. Albans, V.
Smith, Rev. Carlos, Tallmadge, O.
Smith, Rev. Carlos, Tallmadge, O.
Smith, Rev. Carlos, Tallout, Bangor, Me.
Smith, Lerwin S., Mason Village, N. H.
Smith, George, Andover, Mass. Smith, George, Andover, Mass. Smith, Hon. Gerrit, Peterborough, N. Y. Smith, George, Andover, Mass.
Smith, Hon-Gerrit, Peterborough, N. Y.
Smith, Rev. Hervey, West Hampton, Mass.
Smith, Hiram, Worcester, Mass.
Smith, Hiram, Worcester, Mass.
Smith, Hiram, Worcester, Mass.
Smith, Jefferson, Prattsburgh, N. Y.
Smith, Jesse, Gioversville, N. Y.
Smith, Jesse, Gioversville, N. Y.
Smith, John, Andover, Mass.
Smith, John, N., Andover, Mass.
Smith, John, N., Andover, Mass.
Smith, Hon, Long, Gloversville, N. T.
Smith, Rev. Joseph, Lovell, Me.
Smith, Mrs. Long, Gloversville, N. T.
Smith, Rev. Luchus, New Philadelphia, O.
Smith, Mrs. Lydia H., Unionville, O.
Smith, Lyman, Montague, East Hömpton, Mass.
Smith, May C., Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Mry C., Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Mry C., Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Mry C., Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Stanuel, Mansfeld, O.
Smith, Miss Sarah, Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Stephen, Mason Village, N. H.
Smith, Willis, New Haven, Conn.
Snow, Rev. Porter H., Whately, Mass.
Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brookfield, Mass.
Solander, Cheney, Brimfield, Mass.
Solander, Cheney, Brimfield, Mass.
Solander, Eliza Ann, Brimfield, Mass.
Solander, Da. John. East Bridgewater, Mass. Soule, Dea. James, South Abington, Mass. Soule, Dea. John, East Bridgewater, Mass. Soule, Dea John, East Bridgewater, Mass.
Southworth, Francis, Holden, Maine,
Sparks, Mrs. Elizabeth, South Onondaga, N. Y.
Spaulding, Harriet N., Townsend, Mass.
Spaulding, Leonard, M. D., Millbury, Mass.
Spaulding, Rev. Samuel J., Newburyport, Mass.
Speas, Francis, Cass Lake Mission, Min. Ter.
Spencer, David B., Ojibne Mission.
*Spencer, Rev. Levl, Peoria, Ill.
Spooner, Dea. Andrew, Oakham, Mass.
Spooner, Benjamin T., North East, Penn.
Sprague, Lee, Worcester, Mass.

Spring, Laura E. Brimfield, Mass.
Spring, Luther 2d, Worcester, Mass.
Stackpole, Joseph, Dover, N. H.
Stacy, Mrs. Eliza, Concord, Mass.
Stanley, Angustus, New Britain, Conn.
Stanley, Ira, Jr., New Britain, Conn.
Stanley, James, New Britain, Conn.
Stanley, Noah, W. New Britain, Conn.
Stanton, Mrs. Sarah, West Dennis, Mass.
Starks, Amanda, Chateaugay, N. Y.
Stearns, C. H., Westminster, Mass.
Stearns, Hannah L., Charlestown, Mass.
Stebblins, Mrs. D. S., West Brockfield, Mass.
Steel, Mrs. Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Thomas B., Elizabethtown, N. J.
Steele, Rev., George M., Warren, Mass.
Steelo, James, Stoneham, Mass.
Sterling, Sylvanus, Bridgeport, Conn. Spring, Laura E., Brimfield, Mass. Sterling, Sylvanus, Bridgeport, Conn. Sterry, Rev. De Witt Clinton. Stetson, Miss Elizabeth B., Marlborough, Mass. Stetson, Dea. Jotham, Medford, Mass, Stetson, Dea. Jotham, Medford, Mass. Stetson, William, Marlborough, Mass. Stevens, Rev. Asahel A., Newton, Iowa. Stevens, Miss Philenia, Stoneham, Mass. Stewart, Mrs. Harriet, Penn Yan, N. Y. Stewart, Mrs. Jane, Bloomingburgh, O. Stillman, George, Wethersfield, Conn. Stone, Jon. Washington, Oakbam, Mass. Stone, Hon. Washington, Oakbam, Mass. Stone, Rov. W. B., West Brookfield, Mass. Stowell Rev. Abilah, Gardner, Mass. Stowell, Rev. Abijah, Gardner, Mass. Stranahan, Mrs. Anns, Litchfield, O. Streeter, Rev. S. W., Henrietta, N. Y. Strieby, Rev. Michael E., Syracuso, N. V. Strieby, Rev. Michael E., Syracuse, N. Strieby, Ellon S., Syracuse, N. Y. Strong, Dea. Abner, Leo, Iowa. Strong, Butler N., Xenia, O. Strough, Rev. Joseph, Cohocton, N. Y. Sturges Mrs. Mary M., Mansfield, O. Sturges, Rev. A. A., Micronesia, Sumner, Mrs. Mary, Oberlin, O. Tatt, Ira, Kingaville, O. N. M. Taft, Lewis, Fitzwilliam, N. H. Talcott, Henry, New Hartford, Conn. Tanner, Edmund P., Canfield, O. Tapley, Nathan, North Danvers, Mass Tapley, Nathan, North Danvers, Mass.
Tappan, Mrs. Sarab J., Brooklyn, N. York.
Taylor, John, Chelsea, Mass.
Taylor, Mrs. Hannah T., Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Mrs. Lucinda B., Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Rev. Lathrop, Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Rev. Lathrop, Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Nathan, Pittsfield O.
Taylor, Zophar, Harvard, Mass.
Terel, Mrs. Electa, Plymouth, Ill.
Tefft, Rev. J. Cutler, Mendi Mission.
Terry, Rev. J. Gutler, Mendi Mission.
Terry, Rev. James P., South Weymouth, Mass.
Terry, Rev. Parshall, Unionville, O.
Tahlimer, Henry B., Brooklyn, N. Y. Terry, Rev. Parshall, Unionville, O. Thahlimer, Henry B., Brooklyn, N. Y. Thomas, Rev. O. A., Middletown, Wis. Thome, Rev. James A., Ohlo City, O. Thome, Mrs. Ann A., Ohlo City, O. Thomes, Mrs. Ann A., Ohlo City, O. Thompson, Arba U., Swainsville, N. Y. Thompson, Rev. Aaron, Manchester, O. Thompson, Charity, Jersey, O. Thompson, Mrs. Elizabeth, Southboro, Mass. Thompson, Mrs. Elizabeth, Southboro, Mass. Thompson, Rev. J. C., Washington, Pa.
Thompson, John, Augusta, N. Y.
Thompson, Rev. Leander W., Amesbury, Mass. Thompson, Mrs. Ann A., West Amesbury, Mass. Thompson, Rev. Loren, Jamaica Mission.
Thompson, Mrs. Nanoy M., Jamaica Mission.
Thompson, Theodore T., Knox Corners, N. Y.
Thompson, William, Jersey, O. Thorp, Curtis, Binghamton, N. Y. Thrall, Rev. Samuel R., Tremont, Ill. Thrail, Rev. Bamuel R., Tremont, III. Thrasher, Mary Ann, Stafford, Conn. Thurston, Brown, Portland, Me. Thurston, Levi S., West Brookfield, Mass. Thurston, Rev. David, Brown's Corner, Me.

Thurston, Mrs. Prudence, Brown's Corner, Me. Thurston, Rev. Stephen, Searsport, Mo. Tobin, John, Newark, N. J. Todd, Rev. David, Providence, Ill. Todd, Rev. David, Providence, Ill. Todd, Rev. John, Gaston, Iowa. Todd, Res. Samuel, East Berkshire, Vf. Todd, Mrs. Martha A., Gaston, Iowa. Todd, Rev. William, Polo, Ill. Tompkins, John B., Paris Hill, N. Y. Toops, Rebecea A., D. Torrey, Mrs. Mehitabel, Chatham Center, O. Torrey, Rev. David, Delhi, N. Y. Torrey, Mrs. Mehitabel, Chatham Center, O. Torrey, Ziba, Abington, Mass. Torry, Rev. Charles W., East Cleveland, O. Townsend, Rev. Ebenezer G., Syracuse, N. Y. Tracy, Jessiah, Mansfield, O. Trask, Rev. George, Fitchburgh, Mass. Track, Lev. Joshua T., Holliton, Mass. Tucker, Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass. Tucker, Lyman, Canden, Rev. Josha W., Or. Barrington, Mass. Pumer, Rev. Josha W., Or. Barrington, Mass. Pumer, Rev. Asa, Dommark, Iowa. Pumer, Rev. Asa, Dommark, Iowa. Pumer, Rev. Josha W., Or. Barrington, Mass. Pumer, Rev. Josha W., Or. Barrington, Mass. Pumer, Rev. Josha W., Or. Barrington, Mass. Tuttle, Leveritt, Torringford, Com. Tuttle, Thomas, Clinton Corners, Wis.
Tyler, Caleb G., Georgetown, Mass.
Underwood, Rev. Almon, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Mrs. Elizabeth S., Newark, N. J. Underwood, H. Beman, Newark, N. J. Underwood, Henrietta P., Newark, N. J. Underwood, Miss Rhoda, Newark, N. J. Underwood, Des. Sydney, Harwich, Mass. Underwood, Des. Sydney, Harwich, Mass. Upham, Zenas H., Windham, Vt. Upson, Miss Sarah Ann, Jamalea Mission. Van Alstine, Rev. N., West Sand Lake, N. Y. Vandike, Rev. S. A. Winchester, O. Van Houten, Rev. Henry, Boonton, N. J. Van Valkenburg, Mrs. Lydla, South Egremont, Mass. Mass.
Van Wagner, Rev. James M., Wakeman, O. Venning, Rev. Charles B., Jamalea Mission. Viall, Mrs. Elizabeth F., Jerseyville, Ill. Wakefield, Rev. William, Madison, O. Wakeman, Rev. Joel, Almond, N. Y. Wates, Samuel, Sen., Windham, O. Waldo, Rev. Le. F., Kewanee, Ill. Waldo, Mrs. Lucy E., Kewanee, Ill. Walker, Mrs. Hannah A., North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Mrs. Hannah A., North Brookfield, Mass. Mass. Mass. Mass.

Walker, Mrs. Catherine, Mansfield, O.
Walker, Freeman, North Brookfield, Mass.
Walker, Horace D. East Abington, Mass.
Walker, Rev. James B., Mansfield, O.
Walker, Mrs. R. H., Mansfield, O.
Walker, Dea. Lyman, Townsend, Vt.
*Ward, Rev. Horatio G., Lyndon, Ill.
*Ward, Rev. Horatio G., Lyndon, Ill.
*Ward, Rev. Horatio G., Lyndon, Ill.
*Ward, Rev. Horatio G., Lyndon, Ill. Ward, Jonathan, Birmingham, O. Ward, Langdon Storer, Boston, Mass. Ward, Langdon Storer, Boston, Mass.
Ward, Miss Mary A., Newton Center, Mass.
Ward, Rev. Samuel R., Torento, Canada West.
Warner, Charles A., Chicago, Ill.
Warner, Svander S., Chicago, Ill.
Warner, Julia A., Chicago, Ill.
Warner, Meldon, Pitcher, N. Y.
Warner, Mrs. Lucy C., Pitcher, N. Y.
Warner, Mrs. Lucy C., Pitcher, N. Y.
Warner, Step. H. S. Fericho, Ill.
Warner, Seth, East Hampton, Mass.
Warner, Mrs. Almira, Grafton, Mass. Warren, Mrs. Almira, Grafton, Mass. Warren, Mrs. Horatio, Westborough, Mass. Warren, Rev. Israel P., Plymouth Hollow, Conn. Conn.
Warren, Rev. Waters, East Berkshire, Vt.
Washburn, Dea. Ichabod, Worcester, Mass.
Waterbu y, Lewis, Polo, Ill.
Waterman, Mrs. Almeda, Annsville, N. Y.
Waterman, Daniel, Taberg, N. Y.
Water, Rev. John, Southfield, Mich.
Waters, Lucy Burbank, Millbury, Mass.

Waters, Tyler, Millbury, Mass.
Watson, Mrs. Ellzabeth H. Woburn, Mass.
Watson, Harvey, Torringford, Conn.
Watson, Milo, Harwinton, Conn.
Way, Mrs. Ann Amella, Newark, N. J.
Way, Rev. Palmer M., Newark, N. J.
Woaver, Philip, Bangor, Me.
Webb, Walter, West-Meriden, Conn.
Warder, Lawrence Springfield, N. Y. Weber, Lawrence, Springfield, N. Y. Webster, Rev. J. C., Hopkinton, Mass. Webster, Mrs. Susan A., North Brookfield, Webster, William, Sennet, N. Y. Weed, Ebenezer, Darlen, Conn. Wellington, Rev. H., St. Johnsbury Center, Wellington, Mrs. H. L., St. Johnsbury Center, Vt. Welsh, Rev. Rawson B., Oswego, N. Y. Welsh, Rev. Rawson B., Oswego, N. Y. Wels, Dea. Daniel, Bloomfield, Me. *Wells, Rev. Elias, Sandwich, Mass. Wells, Mrs. Mary S., Mansfield, O. Wort, Rev. David, Henry, Ill. Wort, Rev. David, Henry, Ill.

West, Jesse, Tabor, Iowa.

Wheeler, Dea. Elanson H., Charlotte, Vt.

Wheeler, Dea. Elanson H., Charlotte, Vt.

Wheeler, Eric C., Milford, N. H.

Wheelock, Mrs. L. P., Cambridge, Vt.

Whipple, Rev. George, Belleville, N. J.

Whipple, Rev. George, Belleville, N. J.

Whipple, Rev. J. N., Brunswick, O.

Whipple, Henry E., Hillsdale, Mich.

Whipple, Samuel L., Jacksonville, Ill.

Whitcomb, Mrs. Harriet L., Stoneham. Nass.

Whitcomb, Reuben, Harvard, Mass.

Whitcomb, Mrs. Merey, Harvard, Mass.

Whitcomb, Mrs. Merey, Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Reuben, Jr., Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Mrs. Mercy, Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Mrs. Abby F., Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Rev. W. C., Stoneham, Mass. White, Mrs. Betsey, Woburn, Mass. White, Charles, Worcester, Mass. White, Charles S., Woburn, Mass. White, Charles S., Woburn, Mass. White, George H., Shelburne Falls, Mass. White, Rev. Jeane C., Oroth Abington, Mass. White, Rev. James C., Cleveland, O. White, Dea, John Actor, Mass. White, Dea. John, Acton, Mass.
White, Samuel C., Worcester, Mass.
White, Thomas A., Bangor, Me.
White, William Angustus, New Road, N. Y.
Whitford, Mrs. Bethiah, Woburn, Mass. Whitford, Hiram, Woburn, Mass. Whitbam, Mrs. Elizabeth, West Alexander, Pa Whitham, Mrs. Elizabeth, West Alexander, Pa. Whitham, George D., West Alexander, Pa. Whitham, Rev. Joseph E., West Alexander, Pa. Whitham, Rev. Joseph E., West Alexander, Pa. Whitham, Rev. Jo. D., Westfield, Pa. Whitmore, Mrs. Cynthis A., Becket, Mass. Whiting, Daniel N., Erookfield, Mass. Whiting, Daniel N., Erookfield, Mass. Whitney, Abigail G., Strongaville, O. Whitney, Frederic, Westminster, Mass. Whitney, Dea. Jubil, Strongaville, O. Whiton, Channeey, Westford, Conn. Whiton, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth, Boston, Mass. Whiton, James Morris, Jr., Boston, Mass. Whiton, James M., Boston, Mass. Whitton, James M., Boston, Mass. Whitton, Granes M., Boston, Mass. Whitton, Fer. Politip, Hyndesville N. Y.

Wieting, Rev. Philip, Hyndesville N. Y. Wieting, Mrs. Philip, Hyndesville, N. Y.

Wilcox, Joel, Sandisfield, Mass.
Wilcox, Bev. Philo B., East Bridgewater, Mass.
Wilder, Luchida E., Hanover, Mass.
Wilder, Roy. M. Hale, Salem, Mass.
Willard, Hon, John D., Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Mrs. Laura, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Henry, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Clarence, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Clarence, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, East Hartford, Conn.
Williams, Austin F., Farmington, Conn.
Williams, Mrs. Hariette W., Burfalo, N. Y.
Williams, Mrs. Hariette W., Burfalo, N. Y.
Williams, Mrs. Jeanette C., Farmington, Conn. Williams, Anna Maria, Farmington, Conn. Williams, Miss Catherine D., Farmington, Conn. Williams, George Austin, East Hartford, Conn. Williams, George Austin, East Hartford, Cor Williams, George, Areade, N. Y. Williams, Rev. J. M., Farmington, Ill. Williams, Rev. Wolcott B., Charlotte, Mich. Willison, Michael, West Bloomfield, N. Y. Williston, Mrs. Ceclia, Northampton, Mass. Wills, Mrs. Charlotte L., Washington, Pa. Wilson, Alexander, Francistown, N. H. Wilson, Alexander, Francistown, N. H.
Wilson, Rev. Hiram, St. Catharlines, C. W.
Wilson, John, Knowlesville, N. Y.
Wilson, Mrs. J. Adeline, West Union, O.
Wilson, Dea. Samuel, Harwinton, Coun.
Wilson, Dames, Francistown, N. H.
Wilson, Mrs. S. H.
Wilson, Mrs. Mary B., Chicago, Ill.
Wilson, John, Dover, O.
Wilson, Ev. Levi B., Windham, O.
Wilson, Samuel, North Danvers, Mass.
Winchester, Melan T., Austinburg, O.
Winn, Francis, Grafton, Mass.
Winslow, Rev. Horace, New Britain, Conn. Winslow, Rev. Horace, New Britain, Conn. Wiswell, Rev. Luther, Windham, Maine.
Witherby, Rufus L., Grafton, Mass. Witherby, Rufus L., Grafton, Mass.
Witherby, Dea. Thomas H., Millbury, Mass.
Witter, Rev. Dexter, Benton, O.
Wolcott, Rev. Samuel, Providence, R. I.
Wolcott, Rev. Seth T., Jamaica Mission.
Wolcott, Mrs. Mary J. C., Jamaica Mission.
Wood, Den. Aaron, Westminster, Mass.
Wood, Abijah, Westborough, Mass.
Wood, Mrs. Hannah, Westborough Mass. Wood, Franklin, Monticello, Min. Ter. Wood, Benjamin F., Westminster, Mass. Wood, William W., Brasher Falls, N. Y. Woodruff, Edward Payson, Strykersville, N.Y. woodward, Austin, Franklin, Mass Woodward, Austin, Franklin, Mass Woodward, Rev. J. B., Westford, V. Woodward, Mrs. Mary, Cazenovia, N. Y. Work, Alanson, Hardord, Conb. Wright, Mrs. Ann W., Westfield, Pa. Wright, Rev. Edward, West Haven, Cons. Wright, Rev. Edward, West Haven, Conn. Wright, Mrs. F. P., Walnut Hills, O. Wright, Ira B., South Hadley, Mass. Wright, John M., Canton, Ill. Wright, Des. Lyman, Toulon, Ill. Wright, Pes. S. G., Toulon, Ill. Wright, William E., North Brookfield, Mass. Wright, Rev. S. and B. D. D., Philadelphia, Pa. Pa. Pa.

Young, George L., Chelsea, Mass. Zug Samuel, Detroit, Mich.

3962258

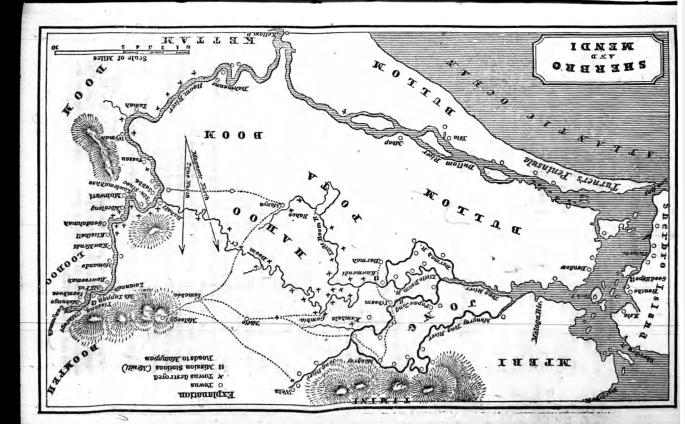

TREASURER'S REPORT.

TREASURER'S REPORT FOR 1855-'6.

| RECEIPTS. | | EXPENDITURES. | 0.52 |
|--|---|---|--|
| Cash on hand 1st September, 1856, Balance for which the Association is now in debt, | $3,852 74 For Mer 3,489 85 4,774 40 40 Cog 2,576 90 83 6,582 71 8,280 85 6,698 81 4,468 67 4,468 67 4,468 67 67 67 67 67 67 67 67 67 67 67 67 67 | ne Missions, including Illinois Home Missionary Association 48), 48), 401 Mission, 481 Mission, 482 Mission, 483 Mission, 484 Mission, 485 Mission, 486 Mission, 487 Mission, 487 Mission, 488 Mission, | $15,429 4
9,614 4
4,955 2
2,495 2
2,187 1
2,752 1
231 2,752 1
78 4
8,889 754 6
86 8
66 8
66 8
4,96 5
5,496 8 |
| | 00,101 90 | LEWIS TAPPAN, Treasurer. | 400,101 |

WE hereby certify that we have examined the accounts of Lewis Tappan, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the year ending 81st August-1856, with the vonchers, and find the same to be correct, leaving a balance against the Association, after paying all liabilities to that date, of four thousand four hundred and sixty-three dollars and sixty-seven cents.

JAMES O. BENNETT, Auditors.

MINUTES

OF THE

TENTH ANNUAL MEETING.

The Association met in the Presbyterian Church, Fulton, Oswego Co., N. Y., September 24th, at 2 o'clock, P. M. In the absence of the President, Rev. J. B. Walker, of Ohio, was called to the chair. Rev. Josiah Brewer, of Connecticut, and Rev. T. A. Weed, of Mexico, N. Y., were chosen Recording Secretaries, pro tem.

Prayer was offered up by Rev. E. Lord, of Fulton.

t The following Committees were appointed by the Chairman:

Business Committee.—Rev. E. Strieby, of Syracuse, N. Y.; C. G. Case, Fulton, N. Y.; Rev. Henry Cowles, of Ohio; Rev. W. W. Patton, of Connecticut, and Lewis Tappan, of New York.

Nominating Committee.—A. Leomis, Fulton, N. Y.; Rev. E. N. Bafflett, of Michigan; Rev. J. B. Cleveland, of Mass.; Rev. A. M. Richardson, of Ohio, and Rev. George Thompson, from Africa.

The Treasurer of the Association, L. Tappan, read his Report of Receipts and Expenditures, which was referred to an Auditing Committee, consisting of J. O. Bennett and Anthony Lane, of New York, and ordered to be published with the Annual Report.

The Secretary for the Foreign Department presented an abstract of the Annual Report of that department. The Association then united in singing Heber's Missionary Hymn, after which the Secretary for the Home Department read extracts from the Annual Report of his department.

A proposed amendment to the Constitution, and certain requests for the relinquishment of legacies, were referred to the Business Committee.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

THE ANNUAL SERMON before the Association was preached by Rev. W. W. Patton, of Hartford, Conn., from Matthew v. 14: Christians the light of the world. He was assisted in the religious exercises of the occasion by Rev. Mr. Lord and Rev. Mr. Walker.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The Association met at 8 o'clock for prayer and conference; Rev. Fayette Shepherd presiding. At 9 o'clock the meeting was called to order for business. The Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Department read some extracts from the concluding part of the Report, whereupon, on motion of Rev. Mr. Bartlett, it was Resolved, That the propriety of preparing and publishing a Tract, on the subject of Polygamy, embracing the substance of the matter relative to that subject, contained in the Annual Report, be referred to the Executive Committee of the Association.

The Business Committee reported, recommending an Amendment to the 4th Article of the Constitution, by inserting after the word September, the words October or November, so as to read as follows:

ART. IV. This Society shall meet annually, in the month of September, October, or November, for the election of officers, and the transaction of other business, at such time and place as shall be designated by the Executive Committee.

This amendment, having been submitted to the Executive Committee, and published in the official call for the meeting, was unanimously adopted.

The following resolutions, reported by the Business Committee, were read and adopted, viz.:

Whereas, An application has been made to the Association, by the Executor of the last Will and Testament of R. J. Roys, deceased, for a relinquishment of a legacy, on the ground that the legal construction of the Will is not agreeable to the intentions of the testator.

Resolved. That the application be referred to the Executive Committee, with full power to act in the premises, and in case they see fit, to authorize the Treasurer to execute such relinquishment in any form and manner they deem proper, and to affix the seal of the Association thereto.

Whereas, The late R. G. Williams, of Brooklyn, N. Y., bequeathed to the several religious and benevolent societies certain sums of money, and among them to this Association a legacy of thirty-five hundred dollars; and whereas, some of the immediate heirs have memorialized said legatees to relinquish for their benefit said legacies, on the alleged ground that, owing to the insufficiency of the assets to pay all the legacies, and the omission of a clause which the testator directed to be inserted in his Will, some of the relatives will be greatly injured, if the property is distributed agreeably to the provisions of the Will, therefore.

Resolved, That said application be referred to the Executive Committee, with full power to make such relinquishment, or any compromise that they may deem equitable and just.

On motion of Mr. L. TAPPAN, it was Resolved, That the thanks of the Association be presented to Rev. W. W. Patton, for the discourse delivered by him before the Association, and that a copy be requested for publication.

The Annual Report was ordered to be printed under the direction of the Executive Committee.

The Business Committee also reported a series of resolutions.

Those numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, were discussed and adopted, as follows:

1. Resolved, That, inasmuch as Christianity is itself a missionary enterprise, it is incumbent upon all the disciples of Christ to be the friends and supporters of missions as a test of discipleship; and the sincerity and devotedness of their Christian character are to be measured by their prayerful activity and pecuniary offerings, according as the Lord has prospered them.

- 2. Resolved. That, according to the rule thus laid down, the churches in our land have but too slight an appreciation of the requirements and privileges of the Gospel, or of the last command of the Great Head of the Church, and need to be aroused from their stuper by the faithful inculcation of truth, accompanied by the influences of the Holy Spirit.
- 3. Resolved, That the examples of fidelity to the cause of the Redeemer, in this degenerate age, on the part of those who lay their bodies upon His altar as willing sacrifices, consecrating to Him their property, their time and their influence, should call forth our gratitude to God, and inspire us with hope that the germ of piety in the Church will yet strike deeper root, and spring up and bear fruit to the praise of His great and holy name.
- 4. Resolved, That while the Association recognizes the hand of God in the afflictive strokes of His providence, as disciplinary and monitory in their intent and influence, we feel abundant cause of gratitude for the manifestations of the Divine favor in all the success with which the Society has been favored in its receipts, in the success of its schools, in revivals of religion, and in its prospects of enlarged usefulness.
- 5. Resolved, That the response recently given to the appeal for a Special Offering for the discharge of the pecuniary obligations of the Association, and for the supply of its Missionaries, affords gratifying proof of the strong hold its principles have taken upon the hearts of many friends of the cause, and furnishes gratifying evidence that they will not suffer the missions to languish for want of timely and generous aid.
- 6. Resolved, That we urgently solicit the prayers and contributions of all the friends of the Redeemer, and especially of those who receive our monthly journal, the ' AMERICAN MISSIONARY,' for the support and increase of our Home and Foreign Missions, for the more extensive circulation and usefulness of the paper, and for the success of the efforts now making to obtain the practical recognition by Christians of every denomination, of the great reformatory principles upon which the American Missionary Association was founded, and has been prosecuted.

During the discussion of the 7th, the meeting was adjourned for the morning.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated by the members of the Association, and Christians present. Rev. Henry Cowles made the opening address, and officiated in the distribution of the bread. Rev. E. Strieby followed in an address, and in the distribution of the cup.

The Association was then again called to order, for the transaction of business, and the 7th resolution was further discussed and adopted. The 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th resolutions were then read, discussed and adopted, as follows:

- 7. Resolved, That while we bow with resignation to the Divine will in the removal by death of three of our Missionaries during the past year, and deeply sympathize with those, at Home and in Foreign lands, who have been called to suffer from sickness, bereavement, or other calamities, especially with those in the Slave states and in Kansas, who have been subjected to ruffian violence, we gratefully recognize the hand of the Almighty in preserving the lives and health, and continuing the usefulness, of so large a number, and we commend them to His continued protection and guidance.
- 8. Resolved, That we mourn over the criminal apathy so extensively prevailing in the American churches in respect to the wickedness of slaveholding, the encroachments of the slave-power, the wrongs of our free and enslaved brethren, and the impending ruin denounced by the great Ruler of nations upon people that contemn His authority, disregard His warnings, and trample upon the rights of their fellow-men; and that we fervently pray that the professed followers of Christ may be reclaimed from their backslidings, and the Church and the country, by their sincere repentance and thorough reformation, be saved from the retributive justice of the God of the oppressed.

9. Resolved, That the present eventful crisis, when life, liberty and all that is dear to the friends of civil and religious freedom are put in jeopardy by crafty and unprincipled men, under the sanction of an unscrupulous administration of government, for the purpose of sustaining and extending human bondage, demands of every true friend of his country, and every disciple of Christ, unceasing watchfulness and prayer, increased liberality, and more strenuous exertions for the extirpation of slavery, and that the reins of government may be committed to honest, unselfish and Christian men.

10. Resolved, That it is the duty of religious men to free themselves from all participation in the sin and orline of American slavery, in their business and ecclesisation as well as political relations, and not suffer the religious and benevolent societies of the country to stand aloof from the great question of the age, or be in complicity with the stupendous system of iniquity that threatens the peace, welfare and salvation of the Church and the nation.

11. Resolved, That it is the duty and privilege of Christians to be systematic and constant in their contributions to the treasury of the Lord, laying by and giving, as He prospers them, such a portion of their property and gains as they are willing to have recorded in God's book of remembrance, choosing rather to be their own executors than endanger the welfare of their children for time and eternity, by bequeathing large portions of their property to them; and that we remind professors of the religion of Him who though he was rich for our sakes became poor, that it hath been said, "If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his."

The Committee on Nominations reported, and the following officers were elected.

For President.

Hon. LAWRENCE BRAINERD, Vermont.

Vice-Presidents.

Rev. DAVID THURSTON, Maine, Rev. S. E. CORNISH, New York, F. D. PARISH, Esq., Ohio, J. P. Williston, Esq., Massachusetts, Prof. C. D. Cleveland, Penn., Rev. Jonathan Blanchard, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Department.

Rev. George Whipple, New York.

Corresponding Secretary for the Home Department.

Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, New York.

Recording Secretary.

Rev. Henry Belden, New York.

Treasurer.

LEWIS TAPPAN, Esq., New York.

Executive Committee.

ARTHUR TAPPAN, New York,
HENRY H. GARNET, New York,
THOMAS RITTER, New York,
WILLIAM E. WHITING, New York,
HENRY BELDEN, New York,
D. M. GRAHAM, New York,

W. T. Dawley, New York,
A. N. Freeman, New York,
J. O. Bennett, New York,
George H. White, New York,
William B. Brown New Jersey,
Josiah Brewer, Connecticut.

Ex-Officio Members of the Executive Committee. GEORGE WHIPPLE. S. S. JOCELYN, L. TAPPAN.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The meeting was opened with reading of the Scriptures, and prayer, by Rev. Dr. Willis, of Toronto, Canada West. The Treasurer and Secretaries made brief statements relative to their several departments. Rev. A. M. Richardson, of Ohio, late of the Jamaica Mission, made an address relative to that Mission, and Rev. Mr. Thompson, relative to the African Mission.

The following resolutions were then read and adopted:

Resolved, That the magnitude of the work providentially committed to the American Missionary Association—sending the Gospel to the emancipated in the British West Indies—establishing a mission in Western Africa—sustaining a missionary in the Sandwich Islands and in Siam—sending the Word of Life to the ancient Copts of Egypt—endeavoring to make the waste places in our own land ancient Copts of Egypt—endeavoring to make the waste places in our own land rejoice in view of a preached Gospel—penetrating the slave States and building up churches consecrated to Freedom as well as to Christ—deputing devoted missionaries to accompany the ploneers of Kansas—carrying civilization and Christianity to the Indians at the far West—furnishing the Bible to slaves who can read the blessed volume—giving the Gospel to the fugitives from slavery in Canada read the blessed volume—giving the cospet to the right-vest form havery in canada—and in all appropriate ways acting out the great principle of the Redeemer, that as the field is the world, so his disciples should go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature—powerfully calls upon Christians in all parts of the country, of every name and denomination, to come up to the help of the Lord, that by prayer, contributions and personal effort, they may be co-workers with Him in the conversion of the world.

Resolved, That the thanks of the American Missionary Association be presented to the Pastor and Trustees of this church for the use of the church edifice ; to the Choir for their appropriate and excellent services; and to the inhabitants of this village for their hospitable entertainment of the members and friends of the

The Association then adjourned, to meet next year, at the call of the Executive Committee.

IF M. Claration film Year of the address Research Consections:

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

Assembled at our tenth annual meeting, at a time when every department of our country, social, ecclesiastical and political, from one extremity to the other, is agitated as it never before has been by evils growing out of "man's inhumanity to man," his disregard of the second great commandment, the early friends of the American Missionary Association need not be reminded of the principles adopted at its organization. Apprehending that they saw in some quarters a disposition to accommodate the demands of God's law to the selfish and wicked institutions of men, to pass by unrebuked popular and legalized offences, and to receive into the Church men guilty of manifest violations of the great law of love, when they had been sanctioned by long usage, or the forms of law, or governmental approval, they declared not only the abstract truth, that "Christianity wages an uncompromising warfare against all forms of sin, public as well as private; sins sustained, authorized, legalized, and even required and enjoined by civil rulers, as well as sins forbidden and punished by them :" but also as a practical application of it, that "ministers of the Gospel, Christians and Christian churches, should themselves abstain from and reprove in others the one class of these sins as fully as the other; making no distinction between them in their teachings, their examples, their terms of church membership, or their administration of church discipline."

They declared it to be a perversion of Christian institutions, to receive into the churches without "fruits meet for repentance." the oppressive ruler, the polygamist, or the slave-master refusing to break the "bonds of the slave;" and that "the practice of receiving such habitual and determined transgressors into the churches, under the idea that they were converted, while refusing to abandon their cherished and darling sins," was a glaring departure from the principles and usages of evangelical Christians.

and tended to foster the grossest delusions.

The sin of slaveholding was alluded to, not because it was thought to be the only, or even the greatest, enormity with which the missionary of the cross would have to contend, in his effort to bring this lost world to Christ, but because it reared its giant form right before us, and more than any other one transgression, threw its baleful shadow over all the American Church, giving to a small portion of our community power over one-eighth of the population, "to deprive them of the entire earnings of their labor;" to reduce them to the necessity of UNIVERSAL CONCUBINAGE, by denying to them the civil rights of marriagebreaking up the dearest relations of life, and encouraging univer-SAL PROSTITUTION; to deprive them of the means and opportunities of moral and intellectual culture-in many States making it a high penal offence to teach them to read even the word of God; to set up between parents and their children an authority higher than the law of God-breaking up the authority of the father over his own offspring, and, at pleasure, separating the mother at a returnless distance from her child-thus abrogating the clearest laws of nature; outraging all decency and justice in its practical operation; involving a violation of every command of the decalogue, and bringing upon our nation, and our churches consenting thereto, the displeasure and the frown of the most high God.

From our present point of observation, when our nation seems about to be given up to the chastisement of its own iniquities, we cannot but look back with profound regret that every ecclesiastical, benevolent and religious organization had not seen that slaveholding was in its very nature an offence-a violation of God's law, and that they did not cleanse themselves from all connection with it. If we might not thus have been saved—as we think we should—from the terrible visitations that now afflict our nation, the Church at least would have had clean hands relative to it, and could have, with hope, grayed for the speedy removal of these judgments, and the establishment of the truth. That these reflections are not unsuited to the present occasion is the more manifest, that now, in a territory of the United States, one at least of our missionaries is a prisoner in the hands of ruthless men, clothed with the power of our National Executive, and another, after witnessing the slaughter of two of his kinsmen, was driven from his flock and his home, and others still are in danger of a like fate, because they will not, as teachers of Christ's religion, in compliance with the requisition of civil rulers, lower its standard, compromise its claims, and cease to unfold its doctrines, declare its precepts and prohibitions, and insist upon its

During the year just closed, eight missionary laborers have joined the missions to which they were severally designated, and four are now under appointment. Although the income of the Association has been somewhat less than in the previous year, it will be seen, by the Treasurer's Report, that its indebtedness has been considerably reduced, being now less than $4,500 00. The number of life members has been increased 309, and is now 1,696.

SUMMARY OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

| The v | whole r | number | of m | ission | s is | | 4 | | | | | | | | 1 | 7 |
|-------|---------|----------|-------|--------|------|-------|------|-------|------|------|------|------|-------|------|-----|----|
| 7. | • | - 66 | of st | ations | and | out | -sta | tions | | | 7 | | | . 1 | | 29 |
| | 1000 | 46 | of or | daine | d mi | ssion | arie | B. 01 | wh | om | two | are | physi | cian | s | 17 |
| The 1 | numbe | r of ass | istan | t miss | iona | ries | sen | t fro | m th | is e | coun | try, | of wl | nom | two | |
| | | sicians | | 1110 | 1/1 | 3.0 | N To | 161 | 10F | 211 | | 70 | . 100 | 200 | | 47 |

The number of native assistants is

The whole number of missionaries and assistant missionaries, including those under appointment, is

The number of churches connected with our foreign missions is 18

The number of colporteurs is

98

The number of colporteurs is

MENDI MISSION, WEST AFRICA.

WEST AFRICA-THREE STATIONS.

Missionaries.—Rev. J. S. Broors, Rev. D. J. Lee, M. D., D. W. Burton, Mrs. Lee, M. D., Mrs. Burton, Mrs. Tefft, Miss Hannah More, and Miss Sarah J. McIntosh.

In our last Annual Report of the condition of this Mission, it was stated that the number of missionaries then connected with it was entirely inadequate to meet the pressing wants of the field, and that they were earnestly appealing for additional help. They were distressed by their inability to comply with the entreaties of the people, and were mortified by the reproaches they endured for not having regularly preached the Gospel, or opened Mission Stations in towns to which they had given encouragement that they would do so. They assured the Committee that many more missionaries could find open fields of labor, and full employment in that region, if the right kind of men and the necessary means could be furnished. Every pious heart will be afflicted on learning that, by a series of distressing events, the number of missionaries there has been greatly reduced, and that they are more than ever unable to preach the Gospel, and establish Christian institutions in numerous places to which they would be cordially welcomed.

A reinforcement, consisting of Dr. and Mrs. Lee, and Miss S. J. McIntosh, sailed from New York for this Mission, September 29th, 1855, and arrived in Africa November 21st; but before their arrival, the number of missionaries connected with our Mission had been diminished, by the death of Rev. J. C. Tefft and Mrs. Susan Brooks, and the return of Dr. and Mrs. Cole (formerly Miss Aldrich) to the United States. The more recent return of Mrs. Flickinger (formerly Miss Wolsey,) Mr. and Mrs. Burton, Mr. Thompson, and Miss More, leaves Mr. Brooks, Dr. and Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Tefft, and Miss McIntosh, the only American missionaries at present at the Mission. Mrs. Flickinger expects to return to Africa with her husband, Rev. D. Flickinger, of the United Brethren's Board of Missions. Mr. Thompson may be constrained to remain in this country, on account of the continued feeble health of Mrs. Thompson. He joined the Mission in the spring of 1848; but she has been able to be with him there but a small part of one year. Mr. and Mrs. Burton first sailed for Africa, Dec. 25th. 1855. Mrs. Burton returned the following autumn, to accompany Mrs. Thompson, then in ill health, and sailed again for the Mission, January 3, 1855. Her health there has been good. Mr. Burton's health has been such that he has been able to perform a great amount of labor, until a short time before his return.

He was then so ill that Dr. Lee and others advised him to leave Africa immediately, and come to the United States. It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. B. will return to the Mission this fall. Miss More embarked for the Mission January, 15, 1851. Although she has suffered from the effects of the climate, her labors were continued, with but slight interruptions, until about the time of her return here. She has been connected with the Mission five and a half years. This is her first return to America; although the rules of the Association, like those of most other societies having missions in Africa, allow of missionaries returning after a residence there of three years.

Mrs. Brooks, (Susan Teall,) who died at the Mission-house, Good Hope Station, September 30, 1855, had, before going to Africa, been for a number of years a missionary among the fugitives in Canada, and become deeply interested in the welfare of the colored race. She joined the Mendi Mission in March, 1855, and was soon after united in marriage with Rev. J. S. Brooks, to whom she had been under an engagement previous to her appointment. She labored a few months at Good Hope Station, and then went with her husband to the Boom Falls, and took the charge of the girls of the school and the mission family. She was the first white woman that had ever visited the Boom and Boompey countries. Up to that time woman was regarded as but the slave of man, and all the efforts of our misionary to inculcate the true theory of woman's position effected but little; example was necessary. Her piety, meekness, and unyielding Christian principle, owere more potent than any amount of oral instruction. To do some good every day she continually labored for, and those who knew her best are confident that she accomplished this purpose in no small degree.

Mr. Tefft first sailed for Africa December 9, 1850. He died at Kaw Mendi, October 16, 1855. During the intervening time, he was permitted to perform much labor in that field, and to rejoice in its apparent success. Some of those who have there joined themselves to the Church of God, ascribe their conversion to his agency, under the influences of the Holy Spirit, and, we doubt not, will ultimately be gathered with Him before the throne of the Lamb. In his last sickness he felt that the Saviour was near to Him, and said, that death never before looked so like a friend. "He died," wrote his wife, "in the triumphs of faith."

Kaw-Mendi Station.

At the commencement of the year under review, the church at this station numbered seventy-two members, and the school had eighty scholars. Mr. Thompson, the pastor of the church, subsequently reported, that four of the school-boys were baptized, and received into the church the first Sabbath in January, and that five more new members (three adults and two school-boys) were baptized, and received to the communion the first Sabbath in March.

The following extract is taken from a communication of Mr. Thompson, giving an outline of the ordinary routine at this station:

"At 6½ o'clock the school comes together for morning prayers, (now conducted by one of the large boys.) after which study and recitation are the order till 10 o'clock. From 10 to 11 there is an intermission, when the children and workmen breakfast—the large bell is rung at 11, to call them to work and school again. School continues till 2 o'clock, when the boys go to their respective work, and the girls to sewing, till 4 and after. Wednesdays, the boys and girls' classes for religious improvement meet immediately after school—there are 4 classes and some 40 or more children. Thursday, P. M., there is a female prayer and sewing meeting in the chapel. Saturday, I teach singing, from 11 to 12 o'clock in the chapel. Sabbath morning the children are studying their Sunday-school lessons. At 0½ the first bell rings, as a warning for all to get ready for meeting, and at 10½ it rings again, and children and people, in various garbs, are seen focking to the house of God. I preach, through an interpreter, to an audience varying from 150 to 200 persons. The old interpreter is very often so affected by the truth, that he chokes, weeps, and sometimes 'breaks down.' After sermon he generally leads in prayer, in Mendi, with many tears, and a heart overflowing with love to sinners. 'Strangers,' who hear the Gospel for the first time, are present nearly every Sabbath.

"At 1 P. M., our Sabbath-school meets, consisting of 12 classes, 9 of which are taught by our older boys and girls. After the lessons, I catechise the whole school on the lesson, make remarks, &c., all occupying from 1 to 1½ hours. After school many come to recite from 10 to 15 verses each, which they have learned in the Testament, in addition to the regular lesson, and which cannot be heard in school for want of time. In this way some have recited nearly all the Gospels and part of Acts. At 3 P. M., I generally preach in the town, in the open air, where are some old people who cannot get to the chapel; if I cannot go, the sisters meet and have a prayer meeting. At 5 I have preached much at willow over by ... It the oversity of the sisters were the state of the sisters were the state of the sisters meet and have a prayer meeting.

a village near by. In the evening I preach again.

"The first Monday evening in each month is monthly concert, when from $7 to $9 are contributed with willing hearts, 'to help the Mission.' On other Monday nights, I meet inquirers in the Mission House, while the children have a prayer meeting, and the interpreter and others conduct a meeting in the town. Tuesday evening, meeting in the chapel and in the town—women's class after meeting. Wednesday evening, general prayer meeting, and one in town. Thursday evening, lecture; Friday evening, meeting in chapel and town; Saturday evening, meeting in chapel and men's class after meeting, and Sabbath-school teachers' meeting. After the meetings are family prayers; our manner is for each one to repeat a verse or more of Scripture, which they have learned; (and their selections are very interesting and instructive;) then we all sing and join in prayer.

"During the day we are variously occupied in the school, about the house, waiting on visitors, buying rice, oil, fish, &c., (brought by natives,) overseeing and directing workmen, paying them, keeping-the mission accounts, giving out clothing to children, writing letters, &c., &c.; besides judging minny little and great palavers, (for the missionary here has to act as a judge among all who are gathered about him. They all call him Father, and his word ends their palavers,) and the many things which cannot be described, but which try and take up the missionary's time."

In last year's Report, it was said that the site of this station was selected not because of any peculiar advantages it was supposed to possess, but because the country was engaged in war when the Mission was established, and this was the only place that could be obtained, which promised facilities for getting into the interior, towards the Mendi country, for which the first missionaries had started. The continued prevalence of wars for a long time confined the labors of our missionary to that locality, and made it the principal station of the Mission, giving it a comparative importance above that which its natural advantages would have secured for it. Some of the Mission had always regarded the location as unfavorable for the health of the missionaries, and had suggested the expediency of the ultimate removal of the station : but the interests involved there were so great, that a vote of the Mission recommending it was never adopted till December last. At a mission meeting, held on the 5th of that month, a resolution was introduced, contemplating such changes as would reduce the station to the form of an out-station. This, it is said, was assented to by every member of the Mission. In January, Mr. Thompson resigned his position at Kaw-Mendi, in view of visiting some parts of the coast, and returning to the United States; and in February, in view of the weakened condition of the Mission, and their consequent inability to carry on all the stations, and the necessity of making immediate provision for the approaching rainy season, the changes contemplated in the resolution above referred to were effected; the school was reduced, and the station was placed under the care of two native assistants, one of whom was a minister, to whom was given the immediate charge of the church.*

In a letter written a few weeks after the passage of the above resolution, Dr. Lee stated that, after a vacation of two weeks, during which the children had all been allowed to go home, the school had recommenced with forty-five scholars, under the care of two native teachers from Freetown. He said that many inducements had been laid before the children to prevent their return, but that none whom the Mission desired to return had remained away; that the missionaries regard the school as being a nucleus of great good to Africa, and more interesting and promising than ever before. He closed his letter by reiterating the cry for more missionaries. He says: "We need more missionaries to 'come over and help us.' We are fearful that the amount of cares, which we must necessarily bear, will soon break up our small number, and consign some of them to the tomb, even at the most healthy stations. We need help."

Boom Fall Station, (Mo-Tappan.)

This station is located on high land, near the Falls on the Boom river, and is surrounded by a large number of small towns, under the care of different chiefs, who express an earnest desire to have missions established in their territories. It is under the immediate charge of Mr. Brooks, who has, however, been providentially detained from personal labor there, during a considerable portion of the year just closed. At the commencement of that period, the brightest hopes were felt relative to the prosperity of the station. Mrs. Brooks had just joined her husband, after having, as was supposed, acclimated at Good Hope; and, for the first time, the advantages of a full Christian family circle were enjoyed there. The scholars were favored with the tender care and the pious example and instruction of one who made it her chief happiness to recommend to them the religion of her blessed Redeemer. The influence was salutary; and Mr. Brooks says: "The children, charmed with the new arrangement, readily and quietly entered upon the duties of their new relations, and acted their part with much credit to themselves. During this period the school at Mo-Bungo was re-opened, and new schools were started in the neighboring towns, Sumbwea and Mo-Fogi. Each of these furnished an opening for preaching the Gospel on the Sabbath." The early death of Mrs. Brooks, and the subsequent necessary absence of Mr. Brooks, cast a dark shadow over these pleasing prospects, and disturbed the operations of the station.

The trials of our missionary were aggravated by the immediate prospect of an extensive and devastating war all around him.

Concerning this he wrote:

"The fact is as evident as that this people are heathen, that we shall be bitterly tried by war before many years roll round. The same state of things, in most respects, now exists, which has existed and desolated this country time and again, until there are no traditions of former generations whose relics of idolatry are found scattered over the earth. And what is worse, this state of things must continue until the Gospel has done its work for the people. There is no other salvation for this country but by means of continued missionary effort. These truths are no less true and dear to my heart now, than when they led me to determine to risk all upon them, and open this station, while the death-notes of the war-horn, and the report of guns fell heavily on my ear, and in the distance was seen the curling smoke of the sacked and burning villages. I cling to them still as the hope of Africa, and I believe God will sustain efforts entered into, and continued under this conviction, though the civil arm of other powers withhold its protection."

In another place Mr. Brooks names the several parties who are making preparations for the war, and then adds:

"But from our experience in the wars of this country, may we not expect God's protection, his grace and mercy? He has defended us heretofore, and will he not do so again, if we trust him? It would be an easy matter to defend ourselves; with our castle-house a few strong-hearted men could protect themselves against any warring party. But how much wiser and easier to trust God and keep the conscience clean? May the Lord help us."

Again, after the death of his wife, Mr. Brooks wrote:

"Aside from the war question, I feel more confident of success, than at any other time in the short history of our Boom Station. The Lord hath blessed, and doth still bless. The field is widening; we are obliged to occupy more ground, to do more, have more schools, preach more, and visit more, every week that we occupy the Boom station. It seems we have no power to hold back. O, that we could have help. By the grace of God, peace shall reign on this river."

The church at this station, Mr. Brooks says, is small but interesting. At the date of his last letters, he was detained at Good Hope; and Boom-Falls station was under the immediate care of Mr. Bennet, (the husband of one of the girls taken captive in the Amistad), who has been at the Mission more than six years, and two "excellent and faithful young men" trained at the Mission.

Schools.—The schools at Mo-Tappan, Sumbwea, Mo-Bungo, Mo-Fogi and Mo-Kadja, (near Mo-Bwavi,) five in number, are under Letters since received from some members of the Mission assign as an additional reason for these resolutions, and the changes effected in carrying them out, that the Mission House at Kaw-Mendi could not, with prudence, be occupied during the approaching rainy season, without very extensive repairs, involving great expense, and nearly as much alteration in the building as has been made in it.

the care of native teachers and the general superintendence of Mr. Brooks. At Mo-Tappan there were sixteen scholars. At Sumbwea, in opening a school and establishing religious meetings, Mr. Brooks says:

"We were happily seconded in our efforts, and rather unexpectedly to us, we met with a very warm welcome. The chief Yemana, after getting the consent of his people, threw open his own house for the school, and called all the little ones of his family to 'learn book.' In a few days the school numbered 17. It now numbers 19, and the prospect is that we shall soon have more. So interested is the old chief in this matter, that he has sent abroad to other members of his family, and his associate chiefs, to invite them to send their children to his school. He often takes his seat with the pupils, and says with them his A B C's, until he is now able to read some little words of two or three letters. The children are also highly interested. A few days since the teacher was unable to get to the school, when the children, unwilling to lose their day, assembled in their school-room, and elected one of their number to be teacher pro tem., and went through their lessons. Often the teacher meets them reviewing the lessons they have been over. They are also learning to sing, which pleases them much.

"Connected with the school we have preaching on the Sabbath, and public prayers daily. The meetings are unusually full and interesting. The Chief has commanded that the trading be suspended during the Sabbath, and most efficiently sustains his commands; so that in Sumbweathere is no selling or buying on the Lord's day. He is prepared to go further, and stop all work on the Sabbath, for the school and meetings."

The school at Mo-Bungo numbers sixteen. The meeting there is sustained, with some promise of good. At the other two places the number of pupils is less than at Mo-Tappan.

The slave trade, notwithstanding its partial suppression along the coast, is still the great desolating curse of Africa. The vigorous efforts made by the British Consul to suppress it, were, for a time, greatly hindered by the opposition of interested parties at Sierra Leone, and the slave factories at some of the interior towns near the Boom-Falls station were in active operation, and producing much suffering and woe. At a later date, we learn that the wishes of the Consul have been more respected, and that he has obtained assistance that will make his efforts effective. It seems, however, to be Mr. Brooks' opinion, that its entire suppression cannot be effected, until slavery itself is abolished in all civilized communities, or all Africa becomes Christianized. "For money," he says, "the people of Africa seem prepared to do anything but labor honestly; and while the slave trade continues, there will be no lack of causes for outrage and war. While it exists, habits of industry cannot be formed. Honest trade and gain by small quantities will be too wearisome for the aspiring native, and he will much rather set a snare for the weak, and catch and sell him for forty bars at once. The clank of chains mingles with the drum and song every night in some of the towns near me, that rest under a heavy load of sighs and groans from the stranger and captive."

The following extracts, from one of Mr. Brooks' letters, reveal a phase of heathen character not hitherto well understood by the friends and supporters of Christian missions, and may guard them against the indulgence of too bright hopes, based only on the readiness of the African to welcome the messenger of Christ, do many things, and hear him gladly; and, at the same time, prevent them from expecting too much from those of them who are really converted to God. The first idea which the African receives of the Christian religion, and one which it is exceedingly difficult to correct is, Mr. Brooks says.

"A new system of greegree worship; and as they see that we have more fine things, more 'money,' as they call our necessaries and comforts of life, they conclude that our greegrees are more potent than theirs, and our devils wiser; but no idea of purity is connected with their notions of religion. They pray, but for what? They speak of their desire to be like us, to hold 'God palaver,' &c.; but what does such language in their mouths mean? Their prayers (until they are instructed) are such as they make to their wood and stone, to the bugabug, the devil, the tree, or their country fashion. They pray for wives, for slaves, for rade, for success in war, to be kept from witchcraft, to be helped by spirits and devils to hide their works in darkness, to be kept from palaver, from serpents, crocodiles, sickness and death; and they call upon God, in connection with the earth, the reputed wife of their chief deity, and their idols. They pray, but they know not what they do. To me the asked act is of no moment—I must know the motive, the hope accompanying their prayer. Boys connected with our schools have lately declared to their associates, that we had a great devil in America, on whom we were dependent for our fine things. If their heathen confidence in greegrees is transferred to our Bible, prayer and confession, we have strong grounds to fear and tremble for the issue. This is the case among a great many professors of religion, of early heathen education, with whom I am acquainted.

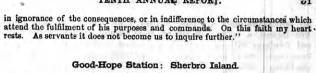

"We are not to look for freedom from all the influences of heathenism in our converts, I grant, but we should not overlook them, or shut our eyes to the blending of heathenism and its superstitions with the outward forms of true religion. We must inquire into the motives of men. Their exterior, especially in this country, where deception and hypocrisy are esteemed virtues, is no reliable index to what men are—it simply shows which way the wind blows. 9 O Some of our professed converts do understand and know the way of life, but others are full of darkness and superstition. These things are to be expected. Early education will not soon quit its hold on the mind. It does not do so in America—why should we expect different results here? Men form a wrong opinion of the effects of our labors, the purity of our converts, &c., in the same way that they suppose missionaries to be better, more holy, and nearer heaven than others. On these false opinions arise many false hopes and expectations which must necessarily be disappointed."

And again he says:

"If we expect ignorant heathens to be at once made to understand the doctrines of the New Testament, so as to live consistent Christian lives in as short a time as would be reasonable in America, we show ourselves as ignorant of human nature, and the working of Divine Grace in the heart of the ignorant, as are the heathen of God and his works. I am not surprised at the ignorance and vices of our converts. I am only surprised that any could regard them in the light of consistent, intelligent Christians. Our best members of the Church deserve more charity, and less censure for gross departures from virtue, than the ignorant in our American Churches deserve, when slightly turning from the life of a Christian."

To guard against the idea, that these views of the heathen character, and their knowledge of the halting progress of some of their most hopeful converts, lead the missionaries to hopeless discouragement, he adds:

"I am as confident, as hopeful, as interested, as before I left America. As sure as God liveth, so sure shall Christ reign till all enemies in Africa, as well as other parts of the world, be put under his feet. What I see in the field has never been the ground of my hope. My feet stand on a stronger rock—my hope for the salvation of Africa rests on the promises of God's word, a single word of which shall not pass unfulfilled. The discouragements or encouragements weigh but slightly in this matter, if God be for us. If God hath purposed to save the heathen; if he has said, 'Go unto all the world,' he has not done so

The principal charge of this station, during the year past, hasrested on Mr. Burton. He has not been set apart to the ministry. and the station has been without the regular services of an ordained missionary. The mission buildings at Good-Hope, a wood engraving of which is here given, are now nearly finished. The preparation of them has thrown a great burden upon the missionary in charge, from the impossibility of obtaining suitable workmen, to whom the work could be entrusted, without constant supervision. The physical labors of our missionaries in Africa are considerably increased, from the entire absence of any circulating medium among the natives. The whole business of the country is carried on by a system of barter, hence our missionaries are under the necessity of keeping constantly on hand a supply of goods such as the people will take of them in exchange for labor, or for whatever necessary articles may best be obtained there. This burden falls heaviest on the missionaries in charge of Good-Hope station, through which all missionary supplies must be sent from this country, or from Sierre Leone, and is increased by the want of any public conveyance, and the consequent necessity of keeping a supply of boats, and employing boatmen to communicate either with the other stations, or with Freetown, where vessels from this country usually land.

At the commencement of the year, Dr. Cole and Miss Aldrich (now Mrs. Cole) were associated with Mr. and Mrs. Burton at this station; Miss Aldrich having the principal charge of the school, consisting then of twenty scholars. Dr. and Mrs. Cole left Good-Hope on their return to the United States early in October last; and Mr. Burton, after a severe and dangerous illness, was advised by Dr. Lee to make a visit to the United States without delay, as apparently the only means of saving his life. He accordingly sailed from Freetown, accompanied by Mrs. Burton, in May last, and arrived here in June, with health somewhat improved.

The latest intelligence from this station is from a letter from Mr. Brooks, dated at Good-Hope, June 30: He says: "At this station, four or five children have been received into the school lately, so that the family now numbers twenty-four, twelve of whom are boys and twelve girls—an interesting and very promising group of children. A school has been opened in the Factory, numbering seventeen pupils. Mrs. Tefft first collected this school; it is now in the care of an excellent native teacher."

No church has yet been formed at this station; but Mr. Brooks writes, that they hope soon to form one. An ordained missionary is greatly needed at Good-Hope; and the Executive Committee would rejoice if they could send out one early this fall. The position of the station is, in the opinion of all our missionaries,

SHERBRO ISLAND. GOOD HOPE STATION,

arly opposite the mouth the year, under the sup twenty-four children. completed gitude west from London, on the Sherbro ggs, represented above, have been complete to accommodate the an important one. It has, within easy access, on the Sherbro Island, a large number of small towns, to which the Gospel minister will be cordially welcomed, and where respectable congregations of natives may be gathered every Sabbath, to hear the Gospel message. The providence of God seems to have thrown upon this Association and its friends the responsibility of giving to them the glad tidings of salvation, through a crucified Redeemer. Are there not to be found among us men prepared of the Lord, who will joyfully hasten to their aid, and others who will as cheerfully give liberally of their means in furtherance of the work?

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

What has hitherto been said of the importance and promises of the missionary field in Africa, might here be repeated and enforced.

This brief view of the present condition of our African Mission cannot fail to produce a painful conviction of the utter inadequacy of our present Mission to accomplish more than the smallest fraction of what they are striving to do. At the three principal stations, and five out-stations, which they were constrained to enter upon, when they were stronger in numbers, and almost daily expecting further increase, there are but two male missionaries and three females, who have gone out from this country, assisted by a few converted natives, when there ought to be at each station an ordained missionary and a male assistant, together with suitable female assistants, to supply the wants of the present Mission, to say nothing of the twice twenty towns near them, spoken of by our missionaries, where the missionary of the cross would be gladly welcomed and listened to, and a morsel of food given him in return for his message. Will not every friend of missions earnestly unite in praying the Lord of the harvest to thrust forth laborers into his harvest?

The cry of our brethren and sisters in Africa for more help has continued, and still continues; they ask for help to enable them suitably to man and efficiently operate the stations already occupied; for help to fill the places of those who have fallen in death, or been compelled to return to this country; for help to save themselves from being crushed by excessive care and toil; for help to enable them to fulfil the command of Christ, and preach the Gospel to the world around them, providentially opened to receive it; for help to enable them to save Christianity from the reproaches of those who know its theory, and witness the tardiness of those who should be first to fulfil its commands; and their appeals become more and more distressing, as the assurance increases, that the number of missionaries, at first too feeble for what they had undertaken, was being diminished, while the importance of the work was being magnified, and the demand for it largely increased. They plead for help for their own sakes, in behalf of and in the name of the multitudes of that continent; in the name and for the sake of that Redeemer, whose cause they seek to promote, and whose commands they are endeavoring to fulfil. It is, under God, for American Christians to respond to these pleas.

JAMAICA MISSION.

ISLAND OF JAMAICA, W. I.

| BRAINERD Missionaries, Rev. H. B. Hall, Mrs. Hall. Teachers, Mr. A. B. Halls, Mrs. Halls. |
|---|
| ELIOT |
| UNION(Embracing Hermitage and Chesterfield.) Missionaries, Rev. C. B. VES-
NING, Mrs. VENNING. Teacher, Miss MARY J. MCGRAINE. |
| OBERLIN Missionary, Rev. C. C. Starbuck. Teachers, Mr. Thaddaus Hoppin, Mrs. |
| PROVIDENCE Teacher, Miss SARAH A. UPSON. |
| BRANDON HILL. , This Station will be supplied for the present by the Missionaries resident at the other Stations. |
| RICHMOND Missionaries, Rev. S. T. Wolcott, Mrs. Wolcott. Teacher, Miss MARY DRAN. |
| GOOD HOPE At the latest dates the school at this place was vacant. Miss STUART, an |

Of the missionaries under appointment for this mission, at our last annual meeting, Rev. Mr. Starbuck and Miss McGraine sailed from New York for Jamaica, Nov. 21, 1855. Miss Stuart, it is expected, will join the mission this fall. Mr. and Mrs. Moffat, who had been teachers at the Brainerd Station, and who returned to the United States on account of the failure of Mrs. Moffat's health, we regret to say, have, from the same cause, felt constrained to request a release from their connection with the mission. Their request has been granted. Since Mr. Moffat's return to the United States, he has aided the mission by making collections for the Richmond Estate.

The Jamaica mission has suffered embarrassment during a part of the year from the want of both men and means. Applications for appropriations to enable the mission to make much needed repairs in the buildings of the mission, were made to the Executive Committee some months before the condition of the treasury enabled the Committee to grant them. In June last, nine hundred dollars were voted to the mission for these purposes.

Up to the time of Mr. Starbuck's arrival in Jamaica, the Brainerd church, the largest one in the mission, was without a pastor, or stated supply, and dissensions and disorders crept into it. After his arrival, Mr. Starbuck acted as a stated supply for the church till April, when they passed a vote requesting that he should become their pastor, and appointed a committee to communicate with the mission relative to it. In the opinion of the mission, the interests of the Brainerd church and station required that the pastor in charge of them should be a married man; they accordingly, by a unanimous vote, recommended to that church to give Mr. Hall, then having charge of the Providence Station, a call, and encouraged them to hope he would accept of it. This was subsequently done by a unanimous vote, and Mr. Hall removed from Providence to Brainerd, the last of April.

A letter from him, dated May 29, said : "We have been very cordially received by the people here. There are prayer meetings Tuesday evenings, in six different neighborhoods. We have visited most of them, and have started in time to see many of the people in the neighborhood before meeting. There are generally about thirty persons at each of these meetings. We find a wide, I think a promising field, which we must work assiduously to cultivate."

Mr. Starbuck is at present at Oberlin. He will preach at Oberlin, Providence, and Brandon Hill. He says, "I like preaching to the people very much, and find it not at all hard to make myself understood. I have always studied simplicity, and find the good of it now. However much or little good I may do the people, I am sensible of reaping the highest good myself from my work; and as the effect of it is continually to increase my solicitude for their good. I trust the Lord will not leave my labor fruitless."

At the regular meeting of the executive committee in July, the following preamble and resolution were passed:

Whereas, our missionary in Jamaica, Rev. S. T. Wolcott, has been, and now is ngaged in the purchase of an estate, called the Richmond Estate, on that island, with the view of establishing a school of a more elevated character than any at present existing at the mission stations, and of re-selling the land in small parcels, at reasonable prices, to the emancipated inhalitants; and, whereas, the treasurer of this Association is acting as the agent of the trustees of said estate, and receiving moneys from the friends of emancipation and the elevation of the colored race in this country, in aid of the above plan—

Resolved, That the moneys already contributed, and such as may be hereafter contributed, to the Richmond Estate, be credited on the books of the Association to said estate, and acknowledged in the American Missionary; that the same be paid to the trustees as wanted; and that certificates of life-membership be issued to contributors of $30 and upwards, if the same is requested by any of them.

In the August number of the Missionary, the following communication was published:

RICHMOND ESTATE, JAMAICA.

Our readers will perceive in the list of receipts on another, page that a few hundred dollars have been acknowledged under the above head. It will doubtless be interesting to all the friends of the Jamaica mission to be informed of the use to which the money has been put. About a year and a half since, the missionaries were offered an estate consisting of upwards of a thousand agree of land, for which, with the buildings thereon, the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars was required. It was thought that an excellent opportunity offered of securing this valuable property for the two following purposes: 1. The establishment of an Industrial School, in which could be educated a promising class of young men and women as teachers and assistants in the missionary schools: and 2. The sale of a considerable portion of the land to the emancipated people, in small lots of five to ten acres, at a small profit, and thus gathering a colony of freeholders upon the premises, whose families should be within the reach of educational and religious privileges.

Mr. Wolcott, one of the missionaries, became the purchaser of the property, and has associated with him, as trustees, two gentlemen who have long been residents on the island, one of them a merchant and the other a lawyer. The American Missionary Association has no responsibility respecting the property, American Missionary Association has no responsibility respecting the property, although the treasurer acts as agent of the trustees.

Two or three of the Missionaries, being in this country, made applications for aid in different places, to enable Mr. Wolcott to pay for the property. They met with gratifying success, and had it been possible for them to continue their efforts, the whole sum would, it is believed, ere this have been raised.

The property has been divided into 500 shares of five dollars each, redeemable when the estate (reserving the buildings, and such portion of the land as may be necessary shall have been sold.

be necessary) shall have been sold. Several persons have purchased and paid for shares, while other persons have chosen to make donations in aid of the plan. Together, rather more than half the requisite sum has been secured.

Should any friends of the emancipated, on reading this statement, be inclined to make investments in this noble scheme of usefulness, or make donations, they can address the undersigned, who will, on receiving the money, transmit receipts or certificates of stock, as the case may be. On the completion of this purchase, and the reimbursement of those who aid it, the trustees propose to purchase other estates for similar purposes. In order that those interested may understand the great importance of the enterprise, the following facts are sub-

1. The results of emancipation in Jamaica, though highly advantageous to the emancipated, have not been attended with all the benefits that might have ensued. The British Government liberally compensated the slaveholders, but made no allowance to the emancipated, who had to struggle as well as they could. Justice required that part of the bounty should have been expended in supplying education, agricultural implements, and small lots on reasonable terms, to the freedmen.

2. It has been the settled policy of large landlords in Jamaica to keep the soil, as much as possible, in their own hands. They have refused to sell it in small quantities to the emancipated. Thousands of acres have consequently been lying waste and yielding the owners no profit, yet they have stubbornly persisted in holding the land back from those who would be glad to purchase it at 18 or 20 dollars an acre. The majority of the colored people are thus compelled to work at day labor on the estates, or rent land at four or five dollars an acre per annum. In this way a spirit of servility and dependence, hostile to a free and healthful development of character, is fostered, and the degrading influence of slavery perpetuated.

3. Richmond Estate, with its numerous buildings, in the hands of one nonresident proprietor, was formerly worth some fifty thousand dollars, as a sugar estate, and in a few years, under free cultivation, might be worth as much, or more, in the hands of 150 families of free laborers.

4. It is important to have a school different from the station schools connected with the mission; one for the education of promising youth, with a view to their being teachers and missionaries. They will need a different training from that afforded the majority of young persons who attend the missionary, schools. They need to be educated physically as well as intellectually and morally; they need to be taught the mechanic arts, to be impressed with the dignity of labor, and the importance of self-exertion and self-dependence.

5. The locality of Richmond Estate renders it peculiarly favorable for the purposes stated. It is convenient of access, the surrounding district is populous, the soil is fertile and well watered, the climate is salubrious, and the scenery delightful. Abundance of employment, both agricultural and mechanical, could be furnished to all the pupils, with a small outlay of expense. There is an excellent water privilege on the property; the buildings, including the sugar works, are large and substantial, and in a tolerable state of repair; there are 200 to 300 acres of arable land lying upon the banks of the river, well fenced, and a portion of it still under cultivation.

6. There is a fine plantation adjoining, (but less eligibly situated,) containing 18,00 acres, that is offered at the same price, viz., $2,500. Should the purchase of the Richmond Estate succeed, as is expected, other properties might be purchased for similar purposes, and thus the beneficial plan proceed until the island becomes what nature has intended it, a flourishing abode for free and independent tillers of the soil.

It will doubtless occur to many, who read this statement, that the plan not only invites the co-operation of those who can give or loan small sums, but solicits the attention of benevolent persons whose means allow them to purchase one of these estates as a charitable investment, appoint an agent, and sell the land to the emancipated for cash in small parcels. The cost of such an investment might be returned in a few years with interest, and the person who had made the investment have the satisfaction of knowing that a vast deal of good had been done without loss.

LEWIS TAPPAN, Agent for the Trustees.

Seven hundred dollars of the appropriation made by the Committee for repairs of buildings were to be applied to this station. In their application for this aid, the Mission wrote:-

"If we continue this station, it is indispensable that we have a teacher, a place for him to live, a school-room, and room to accommodate a limited number of advanced scholars. The building upon which we propose to operate, and to turn to some good account at last, is the old 'still-house.' It is built of hewn stone, 92 feet long and 35 feet wide. The walls are 2 feet thick, and 12 feet high above the foundations."

With repairs, they expect to make it answer an admirable purpose for a mission building.

The statistical account of the schools and the churches, which we learn has been sent by the mission, has not been received. The brethren of the mission have from time to time acknowledged the presence of the Holy Spirit among them, and repeated applications for admission to their churches, but the reported results of the year's labors have failed to reach us, owing, as we suppose, to the lack of mail facilities.

There are eight stations and out-stations in the mission, and the same number of churches.

The following extract from an article prepared by four of our missionaries in Jamaica, shows that they regard the imported Africans as in some respects more hopeful subjects for missionary labor than those who have been born and reared amidst the debasing influences of West India slavery. A comparison of the reports received from our missionaries laboring in Africa, in Jamaica, and among the fugitives in Canada, long ago forced on us the conviction that, of these three classes of Africans, or their descendants, the most hopeful were those who in their own land had least contact with the whites; and the most difficult those who had suffered most in slavery, or who had gained their liberty by flight:

"We would first remark that our solourn here has made our hatred of slavery more, not less intense. We do not think slavery was abolished too soon ; we sometimes fear it may have been abolished too late. And here we cannot but remark on the inconsistency of those who denounce slavery as poisoning the fountains of manhood and virtue, yet are dissatisfied if its bare removal fails to regenerate a land; who listen eagerly to exaggerated and bombastic panegyrics on emancipation, that can only be believed by forgetting every principle of human nature, but have no care for the candid and simple narratives of those who have studied to know the people truly, that they might fit their efforts to their real condition. But we wish to know how a horde of heathen barbarians, plunged for several generations into an even deeper darkness of a compulsory heathenism, are likely, when set free, to be anything else than a depraved and sensual multitude? Were it otherwise, how could slavery be justly asailed as destroying both body and soul? But a residence here has shown us that it does both. Emancipation was then a noble measure—a noble and beneficent one. But the removal of a pestilential miasm does not always remove the disease which it has generated. The latter may still prey upon its victim, and bring it to the grave. And that, we think, illustrates the state of Jamaica. The heathen Africans brought here had the vices of heathens. But we have many of them still, and we see in many a simplicity of character, a docility of temper, and susceptibility of conscience, which do not appear in their children and grandchildren. If slavery then has caused even heathenism to degenerate, who that knows the self-propagating power of evil will expect that process of degeneracy to be arrested by the merely negative measure of emancipation? Emancipation dispersed the miasm; but to remove the disease, more positive measures must be applied. What are these? do you ask. Nothing more than what have blessed our own country-faithful preachers, abundance of Christian teachers, and an example given by those to whom the people look up, of honoring labor and practising economy. If we are anxious for Jamaica, it is because we fear that the agencies for evil are more numerous and powerful than the agencies for good. On a liberal estimate we cannot make out that more than a third of the peoplehear the true Gospel. The rest do not neglect religion, they are only too religious. Native chapels swarm among the hills, in which ignorant preachers may delude the people with a vain show of religion, while indulging them in every abomination. Moreover, these societies have within them a system of clanship that makes them almost as impregnable as the forts of Sebastopol, and like thoseonly to be carried one by one. They hem us in on every side, and not only keep-their members from our influence, but their children too. Swarms of youth are growing up in ignorance, not of books only, but of every good and holy influence. The government, which deriving its inspiration from England, seems to have the good of the colony sincerely at heart, has proposed plans of universal instruction. Its benevolent purposes have thus far been thwarted, but we hope that they will finally prevail.

"As to the last-mentioned means of good, the honoring of labor and the promotion of economy, we ask you to conceive Virginia twenty years after emancipation. Would the pride of hereditary laziness, think you, so soon be broken, or scorn have ceased to be cast on labor and the laborer? The best counter-check to this is the system of small freeholds, which seems likely to become the prevailing one, and promises to be the best basis of that temporal good and of those moral virtues which spring from independent and self-respecting industry. If this be secured, we may well spare that glitter of false prosperity, that once, like the paint on a sepulchre, beautified outwardly what within was full of dead men's bones, and all uncleanliness. Such, hastily and imperfectly portrayed, are some of our causes of fear, and some of our grounds of hope. We confess that in our apprehension the former outnumber the latter. Yet the evil, though appalling, is not inveterate, and the agencies for good, if inadequate, are not scanty, and may be much increased. We shall strive, God helping us, to do our part. We ask your prayers and your interests that, while occupied with thoughts of extending the Gospel into every land, you may not overlook this goodly isle at your door, nor your old associates who are laboring here."

OJIBUE MISSION-MINNESOTA TERRITORY.

Stations .- RED LAKE, CASS LAKE, LAKE WINNIPEG and St. JOSEPHY.

Missionaries.—Rev. S. G. WRIGHT, Rev. A. BARNARD, Rev. S. BLANCHARD, JOSEPH R. FISHER, DAVID B, SPENCER, E. W. CARVER, ROBERT LAPPERTY, BENJ. F. ODELL, MYS. WRIGHT, MYS. BARNARD, MYS. BLANCHARD, MYS. FISHER, MYS. SPENCER, MYS. CARVER, MYS. LAPPERTY, MYS. ODELL and MISS STRONG.

The causes that led to the suspension of the missionary operations at St. Josephs were stated in our last report. The hostilities between the Sioux Indians and the Ojibues still continue, and as this station is so located as to be particularly exposed in the strifes between these bands, it has not been thought safe for our missionaries to remain there. Mr. Barnard has not, therefore, returned to that station. Mrs. Barnard has been sick during the greater part of the year, and they have not joined either of the other stations. While thus providentially prevented from laboring in connection with the mission, Mr. Barnard has sustained himself, without drawing upon the funds of the Association. He is at present at Belle Prairie, Min. Ter.

Mr. Spencer, who, at the date of our last report, did not expect to return to the mission, has had his appointment renewed, and is now at the Cass Lake station. Mr. and Mrs. Odell and Miss Strong have joined the mission during the year; and Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard have felt constrained to retire from the mission, and return to the States, in consequence of the continued ill health of Mrs. Blanchard.

Some of the friends of this mission, who have contributed funds for the support and education of Indian children at the mission school, have been disappointed that scholars have not been selected as beneficiaries of their liberality. The delay that has occurred has been as painful to the missionaries as to the donors. Early in the year, Mr. Wright wrote from Red Lake, hoping that they would soon be able to satisfy the reasonable expectations of all who had contributed for this purpose. He said:

"We have had it in our minds for three years past to erect suitable buildings to accommodate some twenty-five or thirty children; but before this could be done, it was necessary to build a saw-mill. To do this, has cost us an immense amount of labor and time. It is at length completed, and does a good business. We are now getting out timber for the dwelling-house, school-house and meeting-house, which we wish to erect, and we hope to have all completed within one year from this time; but 't will cost us a year of severe labor.

"We hope the people will not be discouraged and withhold their assistance, for that will break up the whole work. Please give the public the facts in the case. We shall take the children just as soon as we have a place to put them."

The mission have been again disappointed, and the year has been to them one of severe trial; first, from the scarcity of food in all that part of the country, afterwards from the unreasonable demands of the Indians. Just at the commencement of winter they wrote—

"Our stock of food is less than half the usual quantity; the worms entirely destroyed the crop of corn we depended upon. The Indians raised but very little, for the same reason. They have taken, however, a good supply of fish, but they go fast where there is no other food. We have no money with which to purchase and transport flour from St. Paul, and if the friends do not or cannot supply this necessity, why, we must live by faith, if we live at all. It is a dark point in our labors here to have to begin a long dreary winter, with a family of nearly thirty, with so small a quantity of food; but we feel that the Lord will provide, if it is for the best on the wholer

"If nothing is done, we shall be obliged to kill all our cows, to prevent starvation. The station at Cass Lake is no better supplied. How sweet it is at such times to leave all in the hands of Him whose is the 'Earth and the fullness thereof!' How can He let His people suffer any more than is for their good, while His love for them is infinite, His resources so boundless!"

Supplies were sent them in season to prevent the suffering with which they were threatened,

The progress of the mission buildings was soon after arrested. What had been done by our missionaries for the temporal welfare of the Indians seemed to encourage them to make new and larger demands upon the mission.

The opposition of the Indians at Red Lake, arising from the refusal of the mission to comply with these demands, became so great, that, by the advice of the executive committee, Mr. Bardwell, formerly a missionary among them, and of late years an agent of the Association, made a visit to the Ojibue country, to endeavor to settle the existing difficulties. The following extracts are from his report:—

"As you are already aware, the brethren at Red Lake have had a great deal of trouble with those Indians. I think this has mostly grown out of a bad beginning of the mission at that place. That station was commenced by a missionary of the A. B. C. F., fourteen years since. He bought the privilege of going there to serve the Indians, and of locating their lands. He promised to plough for them all the new ground they would clear off, assist them in building houses, furnish them a certain amount of lumber, supply them with medicines, and give clothing to a certain number of old and infirm people every year. The missionaries of the A. M. A. went to Red Lake, and labored in connection with this brother while he remained there, and when he left assumed his responsibilities, and endeavored to carry out his plans. In doing so, they have really made themselves slaves to the Indians, and have expended much of their time and strength in doing secular labor for them.

"There are two parties among the Indians at Red Lake: The party in power have been but little benefited spiritually by the mission. All the converts have been from the other party, and are mostly located near the mission. The dominant party have always been jealous, lest the other party should receive more favors from the mission than themselves, and consequently have been the more exacting. The chief has been somewhat disposed to favor the mission, but has always been overruled by his 'party;' and in order to maintain his popularity must take sides with them. When it was determined to build a mill, this class raised many objections to it, and to satisfy all, it was agreed that the mission should give them fifty nets, for the privilege of building the mill and taking what lumber they wanted to use. It seems that the chief, in order to satisfy his party the more effectually, gave them to understand that the mill would belong to them, and that the missionsries would grant them many additional favors.

"Our missionaries commenced last winter to get out some timber for some new buildings, but the Indians soon forbade their cutting any more, unless they would first supply their wants. As the missionaries are entirely without the pale of law, and unprotected, they were obliged to suspend their operations. The Indians held another council, and resolved that the missionaries might go on and put up their buildings first. But then they must furnish fall the materials, and build them a large council-house; and a dwelling-house for every Indian that wanted one; and they must further agree to do all the ploughing they wanted done, together with blacksmithing, and many other things. They gave the missionaries to understand further, that when they should make a treaty, and sell their lands to the white men, they should make no provision for doing these things for themselves, but should even then look to the missionaries to do these things for them for nothing. Thus things stood when I visited Red Lake, last June. After seeking direction from the Lord, and consulting with the missionaries upon the subject, I concluded that it would be best to remove all the laborers from that station, except Rev. S. G. Wright, and his family."

Mr. Bardwell had been requested by the authorities at Washington to name persons suitable to occupy some government offices, instituted for the welfare of the Indians. He says:

"I gave Brother Carver the appointment of Government Farmer at Case Lake, and Brother Lafferty that of Government Blacksmith, at Lake Winnipeg. These brethren will still co-operate with the missions at those stations, and sustain themselves upon their salaries.

"I do not think the time has yet arrived, when we ought to abandon the Red Lake Station. I therefore advised Brother Wright and family to remain there for the present, and see what course the Indians would take. I removed most of the cattle from Red Lake, so as to cut the Indians off from all hope that Brother Wright would do anything for them, except to preach the Gospel. If they sell their lands to the United States of America, as they anticipate doing, this step will reduce them to the necessity of making some provision for farmers and mechanics in their treaty. The children that were in the mission school at Red Lake, have a part of them been removed to Cass Lake, and the remainder have returned to their parents. A few months will probably enable us to determine whether it is best to sustain that station, or abandon it altogether. There are a few lambs of the flock here that have been gathered into the fold of Jesus, that ought not to be abandoned hastily."

Mr. Bardwell subsequently received a letter from the chief, begging him not to remove the mission; and in reply, had stated to him the reasons for removing so many of the missionaries as he had, and that he could do no more for them at present, but that Mr. Wright would remain there, to see what the Indians would be willing to do to retain the mission.

Mr. Bardwell says that the Indians on the north side of Red Lake have long been asking for teachers; that they raise considerable corn and potatoes, and have, without any assistance, built for themselves comfortable log-houses.

The station at Cass Lake, he says, is in a more prosperous condition than it has been for many years. The boarding-school numbers fourteen, and the children are making good improvement. He does not know that there have been any conversions at that station.

At Red Lake, Mr. Wright will devote his whole attention to preaching the Gospel in the Ojibue language, and visiting and talking with the people in their lodges. He hopes he will be more useful to the Indians than before.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.-MAKAWAO, EAST-MAUL

Missionaries.-Bev. J. S. GBEEN and Mrs. GBEEN.

It is now more than twenty-eight years since Mr. and Mrs. Green landed on the Sandwich Islands. With the exception of about nine months spent on an exploring tour, on the North-west coast of North America, he has remained there ever since; first as a missionary of the American Board, and since, of our Association. At the close of twenty-eight years' service, he testifies to the fulfilment of the Saviour's gracious promise to his people, Matt. xix. 29: "And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, * * * for my name's sake, shall receive a hundred fold."

The American Missionary for October contained a report of an address of Mr. Green at the laying of the corner-stone of a church edifice, to be of stone, in one part of his field, showing how great and salutary have been the changes that have taken place there.

In that address he said:

"Let us look back to-day over these years, and see what God hath wrought, and enumerate some of the benefits which we have received at His hands. In the first place, there has been an increase of worldly prosperity; the oppression of chiefs and head-men has greatly decreased, not to say ceased wholly; the right of suffrage has been accorded you; a constitution and a code of laws have been granted, so that you may now each sit under his own vine and fig-tree, having none to molest or make afraid; you are no longer mere serfs depending upon the will of chiefs for permission to tread your mother earth; you are allowed to purchase, lands and hold them in fee simple; you may now all of you have homes of your own, of which none can deprive you without cause; you have now ample scope for the exercise of industrious habits; you can build yourselves houses and yards; may plant fruit and ornamental trees and flowers; you may cultivate your lands, fill them with wheat, corn, beans, potatoes, kalo, pia, and other things which you need; you may all possess and feed cattle, sheep, swine, fowls; may manufacture pis, make fish nets, and hew timber: all these, an increasing number of yon, are doing, hence the increase of wealth among you, hence the ability for building a house of God. There has been a steady advance of knowledge among you during these twenty-eight years; the means of instruction have been increased greatly; you have now the entire Bible with all its rich treasures; you have a sweet volume of hymns, have a church history, a work on Moral Science, Bunyan's Pilgrim, a volume of Sermons, Arithmetic, Geographies, Maps, &c. ; you have teachers of much better qualifications than formerly, and children are now being taught both in day-schools and Sabbath-schools; knowledge has therefore been steadily increasing; many of you are constant readers of the Bible; many also correspond with their friends on other islands; knowledge has greatly increased. But a greater source of joy I find in the hope that some in this district have embraced the truth as it is in Jesus, and become truly pious ; a branch of the Church of Christ has been formed here; about two hundred have united with this Church since its formation; some members have faltered in their course, have 'gone out from us because they were not of us,' and some have died in the Lord, as I trust. There remain in regular standing 172 members; most of them seem to be active and self-denying men and women, who contribute for the spread of the Gospel and for the relief of the enslaved, and for other good objects; several meeting-houses, three at least, have they built, some of them quite large, and good for the kind; but at length wearled with building houses of so frail a character, you have made preparations to crect a substantial stone house, and we are here now to lay the corner-stone. Let us, then, in the language of Samuel the Prophet of the Lord, who, on a certain occasion, 'took a stone and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it Ebenezer, saying, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us," lay this stone in the name of the Lord, and with an humble desire to honor Him whose we are and whom we

"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us,' truly may we say thus: hence our spared lives, hence the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places, and we have a goodly heritage, hence we have in our hands the precious book of God, enjoy the Sabbath, and indulge the hope of heaven; therefore, we lay this corner-stone with the mementos of this church enclosed, praying to be divinely aided in erecting a temple to the glory of Him whose is the temple made without hands."

The following are extracts from Mr. Green's report of this Mission:

STATIONS, OUT-STATIONS, CHURCHES.

"There are now three stations connected with the Mission at the Sandwich Islands. To each of these there is a distinct congregation and church; each has its neeting-house, its Sabbath-school, and its schools for children; each, too, has its out-station.

"1. Keokea in Kula. A distinct church was constituted here about the time David Malo commenced preaching there as a candidate for settlement. He was ordained in 1852, and labored about a year with commendable judgment and energy, when he was removed to a higher sphere of labor, leaving the church to mourn the greatest loss which they have sustained.

"Connected with this station is Kalepelepo, some six or eight miles distant, formerly an out-station of Wailuku, having a meeting-house, church and schools, as Keckea, and the ordinances are administered alternately at the two places. Kamaole is a large district adjoining Keckea, where meetings are sometimes held.

"2. Huelo in Hamakua. This is now a distinct station, with an independent church, having the ordinances administered regularly. They have their Sabbath and day-schools, and have just laid the corner-stone of a substantial stone meeting-house. They are able to do much for the support of a pastor and teacher to be exclusively devoted to their service.

3. Makawao is the place of our residence, and gives name to the Mission. It is, however, the least densely populated of the three stations. It was chosen because of its central position, and because of its elevation, cool climate, and business prospects. We have quite a number of small districts in the vicinity of Makawao, where meetings are often held. Kalani-Kahua was the centre of our former station. Here was our meeting-house, now sold, and here were the greater portion of the members of the church. Hamakuapoko is the name of another station. Pulehu, in Kula, is the name of another, where the people meet for worship on the Sabbath, much of the time. Pumahi, near by, is a small school district, where occasional meetings are held. Thus we have three stations, three churches, and some five or six out-stations.

LABORERS.

"On the death of Mr. Malo, and the return of Daniel II to Lahaina, the pastorship of the three churches and the superintendence of the affairs of the three stations devolved upon me. This arrangement seemed to be the best that could be made. I believe it gives general satisfaction. We have no regularly licensed preacher here since the departure of Mr. II; but we have several brethren, whose labors are quite as valuable as his—men who greatly assist me, and who do much good. On the whole, I prefer to feed as I am able these little flocks, to asking other pastors, since the need of laborers elsewhere is so pressing."

SCHOOLS .- PROGRESS OF EDUCATION.

"For several years past, Rev. Mr. Armstrong, as Minister of Public Instruction, and lately as President of the Board of Education, has had the chief responsibility of schools throughout the entire group. Still, he wishes the sympathy and co-operation of the pastors, and I am happy to aid him as I am able. We have children's schools in all the districts of our field taught most of the time. I am sorry, however, that I must report a gradual but constant decrease of the pupils of our schools, but I may not conceal the truth on this subject. I find, on turning to my notes, that, in 1846, there were some 700 children in the schools of this station. In 1852 there were 500. At our last examination there were 437 connected with our schools, and 20 in the Roman Catholic school. Thus painful are the facts which have a bearing on the question of the decreasing population of the Islands. Another cause of the decrease of our schools is the short time many boys continue in school. They have offers of decent wages from the sugar-planters and wheat-growers, which they accept, and in consequence leave the school. The practice of hiring out their children, or of allowing them to be hired, which obtains among so many Hawaiian parents, greatly retards the cause of education among us. The studies pursued in our schools are, as in 1852, reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, &c., &c. As much progress in these studies has been made as could reasonably be expected, taking into account the character of the teachers and the scarcity of books.

"Were these schools the only means of imparting an education among us, I should be much discouraged. But they are not. Wednesday of each week is devoted to the business of teaching all who choose to attend. Many highly appreciate the exercises of this day. We review geography and examine maps; attend to church history and moral philosophy, and are now examining the Apocalypse of John. These exercises, with the Bible class of Sabbath evening, can scarcely fall to do good to all who have a heart for these things.

"We still observe the monthly concert, to pray for the conversion of the world, also the monthly concert to pray for the enslaved. We observe these concerts at Makawao in the morning, and I sometimes go out to an out-station towards evening. On hearing, two or three months ago, that our missionary brethren at Fatou-hiva were suffering, and that aid was soon to be sent them, I prepared and preached, both in English and Hawaiian, three sermons, on the South Sea Islands. Of these I may say something, all in good time. The natives contributed $32 my little Fourish conversition $25.

South Sea Islands. Of these I may say something, all in good time. The natives contributed $32—my little English congregation $25.

"Labors and expense in the line of building and repairing meeting-houses have been considerable during the year. At Kalepolepo the people have finished the house of which David Malo laid the foundation. It is a good stone house, of some thirty-six feet by eighteen, covered with native thatch, which they intend to lay aside for boards and shingles. The house is well lighted; has a board floor, filled with rows of seats, and has a substantial pulpit. The young ladies of that place have purchased a melodeon, and the worshippers are called together by a small but good bell.

"At Keokea the meeting-house is covered and plastered, and the people hope to have it boarded and seated shortly; also to procure a melodeon. They have already a large and excellent bell,

"I have the pleasure of reporting success in my experiment in wheat-growing. I hoped to induce my people to go into the wheat-growing business, and prosecute it with success. Many of them have done so, and they no longer need the influence of my example. I am rewarded—satisfied on this head. I see a striking increase of industry in my own neighborhood; an improvement in building, and in the method of living also. My fear now is that they will become worldly. I shall have to guard them on this quarter. So strait is the way and narrow the road that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

"You will see by the table of statistics enclosed, that the church at Keokea has received accessions since my last report. Nearly every communion season, some individuals, say from ten to twenty, have been admitted, till it contains more members than either Huelo or Makawao, with all their out-stations. About forty, also, have been admitted to the church at Huelo the last few months. At Kalani-Kahua you will see a decrease of members of the church. None have been admitted; several of the old members have died, and quite a number have gone to other stations, chiefly to Honolulu."

SUMMARY OF REPORT.

| Stations, | | 1 | | | | | | | | 3 |
|--------------------------|------|----|--|---|---|----|---|--|-----|-------|
| Pastor, | | 10 | | | | | | | | 1 |
| Out-stations, | | | | | | | | | 100 | 6 |
| Assistants, | | | | * | | | - | | | 6 |
| Schools—pupils examined, | | | | | | | | | | 437 |
| Church members, to wit: | | | | | | | | | | |
| Huelo, in Hamakua, . | | | | | | | | | | 171 |
| Halehaku, | | | | | 1 | | | | | 100 |
| Keokea, | | | | | | | | | | 471 |
| Makawao and Apueo, | | | | | | | | | | 72 |
| Kalani-Kahua, . | | | | | | | | | | 178 |
| Hamakuapoko and Halir | nail | e, | | | | 3. | | | | 30 |
| | | | | | | | | | | - |
| | | | | | | | | | | 1 022 |

CANADA MISSION

NEAR WINDSOR, CANADA WEST.

Missionaries .- REV. DAVID HOTCHKISS and MRS. HOTCHKISS.

The re-appointment of Mr. Hotchkiss to a mission among the colored people, fugitives in Canada, was mentioned in our last Report. His field is a hard one. The subjects of his ministry are generally those who have vindicated their claim to manhood, and right to personal liberty, by escaping from the bondage of American slavery. Many of them have carried with them all that implacable hatred and jealousy of the white man which long-continued oppression is so likely to foster in the unregenerated heart. All the different denominations are represented among those of them who profess religion, and their common wrongs seem to have had no tendency to diminish sectarian feeling. It exists in great power among them. These causes tended greatly to circumscribe our missionary's field of labor, and embarrass his efforts, so that his first letters were burdened with accounts of his discouragements, and the seed was sown with weeping. At later dates, he writes:

"The Lord has opened many doors for me. I have more calls than I can possibly fill. Prejudice has melted away, sectarian bigotry has given place to Christian charity and union, our congregations are good, and the people are becoming anxious about their immortal interests, and quite a number have expressed themselves as fully determined to serve God, and they appear to have set out in good earnest in the work. . . . The colored people are so well pleased with the love and union that now exists, that it has become the common topic of conversation by all. I pray God that it may increase and abound more and more.

In May he wrote that he preached to small congregations at four different places, the farthest of which was six or seven miles from his residence. During the winter, at one of these places, there were, he says, some very encouraging indications of good, and many seemed to be under deep conviction. Some of these persons afterwards appeared to be truly converted, and Mr. Hotchkiss, in May, organized a Wesleyan Methodist church, consisting of eleven members; one of whom had been a Catholic, one a preacher, and one had declared that he "never would belong to a church with a white man." The second Sabbath of June two more were received into the little church, and at a quarterly meeting in July more than forty persons communed with them.

Mr. Hopkins writes, that there has been a good deal of a warspirit among the people. Many are anxious for a war between the United States Government and Great Britain. They think that a war would put an end to slavery in the United States. He says he fears that one man has been "kidnapped" from Canada recently, under the pretence that he was a fugitive from justice.
This mode of regaining their fugitive slaves was practised by slaveholders some years ago, it is said, but was stopped by the action of the British Government.

Mrs. Hotchkiss has taught school, and, we believe, is still teaching; for which she receives compensation from the Refugees' Home Society.

SIAM MISSION.

BANGKOK, SIAM.

Missionaries .- Rev. D. B. BRADLEY and Mrs. BRADLEY.

The three Protestant missions in Siam have increasing hope that the amicable relations with England, into which the late treaty has brought the Siamese Government, will prove advantageous to the missionary labors undertaken in Siam, as similar treaties have heretofore been to those carried on in Bengal, Ceylon, Burmah, and other parts of India. Dr. Bradley wrote in Dec. last:

"All the feelings of opposition which the Government lately manifested towards the American missionaries have departed, and appear to be quite forgotten. We now travel with as much freedom, for aught I can see, as we did three years ago, and the people come to our houses, in goodly numbers, from all parts of the country."

H. P. Parker, Esq., on behalf of the British Government, was engaged for two months, in the Spring, at Bangkok, making arrangements for carrying into full effect all the provisions of that treaty, and preparing, for the signatures of the officers of both Governments, written explanations of its several articles. Three copies of these explanations had been prepared, and Mr. King, an American gentleman from Shanghai, Mr. Mattoon of the Presbyterian mission in Bangkok, and Dr. Bradley, had been called by the King to examine them. They found them even more favorable than they had before hoved.

The Hon. Townsend Harris (U. S. Minister) and suite arrived in Bangkok April 21st, to negotiate a new treaty on the part of this Government with that of Siam. He was received with great distinction, and a treaty was concluded, and signed at Bangkok May 29th, 1856. The following is the substance of those articles having most bearing upon the residence of Missionaries in Siam:—

Art. 1 provides that "all American subjects coming to Siam shall receive from the Siamese Government full protection and assistance, to enable them to reside in Siam in all security; free from oppression or injury on the part of the Siamese."

Art. 2 places the interests of all American subjects in Siam under the control of a Consul. Disputes arising between Americans and Siamese to be heard and decided by the Consul, in conjunction with the proper officers. Offenders to be punished by the authorities of their own government, according to its laws.

Art. 4. American subjects may rent land and buy or build houses, but cannot purchase land, within four miles of the city walls, until they have resided there ten years, except by special authority from the Siamese Government. Beyond this distance, and within twenty-four hours' journey from the city, they may "buy lands, plantations." &c.

Art. 6. "All American subjects, visiting or residing in Siam, shall be allowed the free exercise of the Christian religion, and liberty to build churches in such localities as shall be consented to by the Siamese authorities. The Siamese Government will place no restrictions upon the employment by Americans of Siamese subjects, as servants, or in any other capacity," except where the Siamese owes service to some particular master. He must then obtain the consent of his master.

Art. 10. The American Government and its subjects will be allowed free and equal participation in any privileges that may have been or may be pranted by the Siamese Government to the Government or subjects of any other nation.

Rev. S. Mattoon, of the Presbyterian Mission in Bangkok, has been appointed American Consul. Mr. D. O. King, a Christian gentleman, last from Shanghai, China, will establish an American commercial house there.

Dr. Bradley says, that at the suggestion of the King of Siam, an English man-of-war has made a careful survey of the Gulf of Siam, and of the Meinam from its mouth up to Bangkok, and has marked out the four-mile boundary beyond which English and American subjects may hold real estate.

During the past year, Dr. Bradley has been engaged out for the Siamese a series of small volumes on Old History. Ten numbers of the series, he says, have been long since adopted by the American Tract Society's publications in Siamese, and have been recently printed by one of the other missions in Bangkok. Concerning his more direct missionary labors, he says:

"I still pursue substantially the same system of preaching that I have done for years, excepting that I am making greater efforts than ever before to collect regular audiences at my house twice every Sabbath day. By going out myself to my neighbors before the preaching commences, and inviting them to come in, and then sending a man to ring a large dinner bell near their doors, I succeed in getting lifteen or twenty, and sometimes thirty at a time, besides those in our employ and others living on the mission premises."

Mrs. Bradley has engaged also in colporteur labors, going about and conversing with the people.

The desired results of missionary labor in Siam are not yet seen. The converting influences of the Spirit are not yet poured out on the Siamese, and there is very little that is visible to encourage the missionary in his labors. The command of God, the assurance that His word shall not return to Him void, and the promises of the Gospel, are the sole grounds for encouragement in continuing to labor in Siam.

On the first Sabbath of February, the two oldest children of Dr. Bradley entered into church relations with their parents, in the presence of the Presbyterian church of Bangkok, and Mr. D. O. King, of Shanghai, China. Mr. and Mrs. Mattoon, of the Presbyterian mission, at the request of Dr. B., had conducted the previous examination.

The Executive Committee do not recommend any enlargement of the Siam mission at the present time, but that Dr. and Mrs. Bradley be retained there. He has been advised to dispose of the printing presses and material, rent the mission buildings not needed for his family use, and turn his attention wholly to preaching the Gospel to the Siamese. The expenses of the Mission will thus be small, being confined to the support of one mission family, and an opportunity given to the Executive Committee and Association to study the developments of Providence in connection with this new treaty, and the action of a consul having the deepest interest in the success of missionary labors there; and to seek for clearer indications of duty relative to future operations in resolvent totale grow and gentlement philipped at an industria ough asset I leaf subspect in material scene and after present sesses this it was of the conseption and their metals growing about the tell policy and the tell

HOME MISSIONS.

NEVER, in the history of our country, was there so much seen as there now is, to impress the mind with the importance of the principles of pure Christianity, and of civil and religious freedom; the supremacy of which in this land, and throughout the world. it is the commanding object of this association to secure.

Never were there in the home-field so many urgent reasons for the vigorous proescution of the work committed to our hands as at this moment. The past year has added to the testimony of the Divine favor towards us, and should inspire us with the deepest sense of obligation, and the highest gratitude to God, while with humility, faith, and courage, looking for his guidance and aid, we should pursue the mission entrusted to us in our great and rapidly increasing country.

The afflictions and trials of some of our missionaries have been severe, although health has generally been enjoyed by them. In some few instances death has invaded their families and taken from the missionary his wife and companion in toil, or the children of their tender care.

One of our beloved and devoted missionaries, Rev. John P. Hills, of Oakland, Scoles county, Ill., departed this life, March 2, 1856, in blessed hope of heaven, lamented by the churches with which he labored, and by his brethren in the ministry. The free mission cause is thus deprived of a self-sacrificing and useful laborer, and his afflicted family bereft of a most endeared and faithful husband and father, are left to struggle with difficulties only known by the widows and children of missionaries having slender pecuniary resources. They claim our sympathy and prayers under this afflictive dispensation of Divine Providence. May its quickening influence move us all to greater devotedness in our Master's service.

GENERAL TABLE,

Showing in parallel columns.

- 1. An alphabetical list of missionaries.
- 2. The names of churches and missionary districts aided.
- 3. Dates of commissions, or time of commencing labor.
- Months of labor performed since the last report.
- 5. Hopeful conversions.
- 6. Additions to the churches, on examination.
- 7. Additions to the churches by letter.
- 8. Number of church members.
- 9. Amount of aid pledged for a year's service.
- Number of church members pledged to total abstinence.
 Amount of contributions to benevolent objects.
- 12. Number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholar.
- 13. Other particulars.

EXPLANATIONS.

The reports of statistics by the missionaries are to the 1st of August. In some instances the number of members in two or more churches is given together.

HOME MISSIONS. - SCHEDULE.

| MISSIONARIES. | CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | DATE OF
COMMIS-SION, or of last renewal. | Months of Labor | Hopeful Conver- | Additions on Ex- | Admissions by Let- | No. of Members. | Dollars of Aid
Pledged. | Pledged to Total
Abstinence. | Contributions to
Benevolent Objects. | No. of 8. School and School and Olars Sc |
|---|--|---|-----------------|-------------------|------------------|--------------------|-----------------------------|--------------------------------|---------------------------------|---|--|
| S. L. Adair
M. N. Adams | Cong. Ch., Osawatomie, Kansas Ter | Oct. 1, 1855
June 1, 1856 | 12
12 | 2 | 2 | 15 | 7
85 | 500
400 | all | 40 00 | 20 Labors also at Pottowatomic Creek and elsewhere. |
| C. F. Bailey
B. T. Baxter
William Beardsley | ist Cong. Ch. Union, Do. of Huntley, Ill | Mar. 1, 1855
Mar. 1, 1856
Jan. 1, 1855 | 5 5 | 20 | 8
2
6
1 | 6 2 2 1 | 18
84
80
26
100 | 150
100
100
200
50 | | 25 00
19 87 | |
| L. Bridgeman
L. W. Brintnall | Deer Creek, Pa. ist Cong. Ch., Algonquin, Ill Pliggah Cong. Ch., and Agency in Ind. & O. Cong. Cha., Westheld & Crooked Lake, Wis. Cong. Ch., Lafayztte, Ohio. Ch. of Salineville, Ohio. | Nov. 1, 1855 | 12 | 1 16
8
8 | 1 | 4 | 13
20
26
42 | 250
800
150
50
50 | all
all
40 | 19 00
28 00
50 00 | Since Jan. 1, 1855, Agent in Southern Ohio. Revival. |
| W. H. Burnard
J. H. Byrd | lst Cong. Ch., Eoscoe, Ill. Loavenworth City, Kansas Ter. Free Presb. Chs., Felicity and Cedron, Ohio | May 1, 1856
June 1, 1856 | 19
12 | 5 | 6 | 6 | 47
80 | 150
500
100 | all | 40 50
58 00 | 50 Revival.
40 Preaches at Easton and at other points. |
| George Candee
U. T. Chamberlain | South Cong. Ch., Chicago, Ill. Union and Clover Bottom, Ky Cong. Ch., Conneaut. Pa | Sept. 1, 1855
Oct. 22, 1855
Oct. 1, 1855 | 11
5
12 | 8
54 | 4 | 2 | 80
28
87
82 | 900
800
100
200 | all | 40 00 | 20 Revival.
255 Labored in Cambridge, Randolph, and other places. Re- |
| Warren Cochran | Cong. Chs. of Big Woods and Junction, Winfield, and Cottage Hill of York, Ill.
1st Cong. Ch., Baraboo, Wis. | Nov. 1, 1855 | 12 | | | 8 | 68
14 | 175
100 | * | 67 00 | |
| J. S. Davis
John Davis | Ch. Ch., Diamond Lake, Half-Day, Ill
Chs. of Christ, Glenville, and Bethesda, Ky.
Welsh Cong. Church, Zoar, Rosendale, Wis.
Free Presb. Chs. of Bedford, and Centre | Oct. 1, 1855
June 1, 1856
Apr. 1, 1856 | 12 | 8 | 8 | 8 | 74
82
45 | 100
800
125
150 | # | 10 00
28 50
2 00 | 80 Revival. Preaches at Willow Creek and various places |
| W. B. Dodge | Cong. Ch., Albany, Ohio
Cong. Chs., Virgil and Avon, Ill.
Cong. Ch., Milburn, Ill.
Cong. Chs. at West Jersey and Wysox, Ill. | Nov. 1, 1855
Jan. 1, 1855 | - 6 | 8 | 1 8 | 15 | 84
69
56 | 200
200
150 | 58
all | 18 00
8 00 | 145 Congregational Church organized at Avon. 179 No further aid required. 121 Has four preaching stations. |

| A. J. Drake | Cong. Ch., Westfield, Ohio | Jan. 1, 1855 | 5 | | 1 | | 15 | 00 | all | | 44 | 60 Left at the close of his commission. |
|--|---|---------------|-----|---------|-----|-----|-----|------|-----|-------|------|--|
| S A Dwinnell | Cong. Ch., Reedsburg and Dellons, Wis | Jan. 1, 1856 | 12 | 9 | 5 | 5 | 80 | 200 |  | | | 105 Revival. Completed House of Worship; cost, $1,600. |
| D. L. Eaton | Cong. Ch., Howell, Mich | Mar 1, 1856 | 5 | | 2 | 5 | 80 | 150 | all | 25 | 00 | |
| Oliman Employer To | Cong. Ch., De Witt, th of the time | May 1 1856 | 19 | 2 | 1 | 3 | 15 | 450 | | 1 | | 80 Traverses the country, preaching to weak churches, form |
| Onver Emerson, or. | Mississes of learn and Agent Toma | 1, 1000 | | - | 1 | - | | 1 2 | | 1 | - 1 | ing churches, and collecting funds. |
| March Williams | Missionary at large and Agent, Iowa | O-4 4 40KK | 10 | | 3 | 15 | 45 | 1 | 40 | 40 | 00 | |
| Rees Evans | 1st Welsh Ch., Chicago, Ill | Oct. 1, 1800 | 10 | | | 10 | 92 | 100 | 40 | 20 | 00 | 50 No further aid needed. |
| Lucien Farnham. | Cong. Ch., Newark, Ill | Feb 1, 1800 | 12 | | | | 02 | 450 | | 1 | | 15 Labors in several counties. Aids other missionaries in |
| J. G. Fee | Glade Ch., Berea, Ky | July 15, 1856 | 12 | 40 | 10 | | 52 | 400 | | 1 | | protracted meetings. Anti-slavery efforts abundant. |
| THE RESERVE OF THE PARTY OF THE | Also of Union, Greens S.H., & Clover Bottom | 1 | | 18 | 18 | | | DEO | | 1 | | |
| Amos Finch | Wes. M. Chs., Osawatomie and on Neosha | Oct. 9, 1855 | 12 | | | 24 | 80 | 850 | | | | Preaches on the Neosha and other places. |
| $470.00 TTD.H | Kansas Ter | 100 | 9.6 | | | | -2- | 100 | | 200 | | |
| A. B. Frazier | Free Presb. Chs., Quasqueton, Marion, and | July 1, 1855 | 12 | | | - 5 | 86 | 100 | all | 10 | 00 | 25 |
| 111 201 2 11111111111111111111111111111 | Scotch Grove, Iowa | 445 -1 | 1 | | | | | | | | | |
| William Gay | Cong. Chs., Bristol and Kankakee, Ill | Nov 1 1955 | 19 | | . 5 | | 88 | 100 | | 80 | 00 | 210 Now at Bristol, Ill. |
| George Gemmel | Cong. Ch., Byron Centre, Ill | Ten 1 1988 | 75 | 4 | 2 | 2 | 43 | 200 | all | 40 (| 00 | 60 |
| J. R. Gibson | Base David Che Basel of the Name Park O | Tan. 1, 1000 | 7 | | 6 | 4 | 69 | | 46 | 198 | 00 | 112 Promising field. |
| | Free Presb. Chs., Frankfort & North Fork, O. | Jan. 1, 1800 | | 1 | | * | 10 | 75 | 16 | 100 | 00 | 98 |
| N. J. Goodhue | Cong. Ch., Westfield, Wis | Jan. 1, 1800 | 0 | | 4 | | 78 | 100 | 16 | | | 60 No further aid required. |
| Almer Harper | Cong. Chs., Sabula and Sterling, Iowa | May 1, 1800 | 9 | | 1 | 8 | 26 | 200 | | | 00 | 68 Congregational Church organized. Has four stations. |
| 8. D. Helms | Cong. Chs., West Union & Westfield, Iowa. | Oct. 1, 1855 | 10 | 2 | 1 | 4 | 41 | 200 | 44. | 25 5 | 20 | Died at Oakland, March 2d, 1856. |
| J. P. Hills | Free Presb. Chs., Charleston, Paris, and | Aug. 1, 1855 | 7 | | | | 41 | 200 | | | - 1 | Died at Oakland, March 2d, 1800. |
| 2) April (6) (2) (8) (1/9-11/1) | Pleasant Prairie, Oakland, Ill | | | | | | | 12. | | 11.00 | 0 | at the state of the state of the state of the state of |
| William Holmes | Cong. Chs., Lionsville & Babcock's Grove, Ill. | Oct. 1, 1855 | 10 | | 2 | 2 | 45 | 200 | - | 45 | | 85 Building a House of Worship at Lionsville. |
| Joseph Hurlburt | 1st Cong. Ch., Litchfield, Ohio | Mar 1, 1856 | 7 | 2 | 8 | 2 | 56 | 100 | all | 75 | 00 | 75 Further aid not required. |
| Ezra Howland | Cong Ch., Oregon near Toledo, Ohio | Ane 1 1956 | | | | 1 | 11 | 125 | | . / | - | Salah da analah da a |
| E. P. Ingersoll | Cong. Church, Bloomington, Ill | Mag. 1, 1050 | 10 | 1 | i i | 1 | 48 | 200 | all | 88 5 | 25 | 60 |
| Horatio Isley | det Come Ch. Polation III | May 1, 1000 | -0 | 1 | | â | 26 | 200 | 44 | 5 (| 00 | 20 Left; support insufficient. |
| Horatio Isley | 1st Cong. Ch., Belvidere, Ill | Nov.11, 1850 | 10 | 12 | 18 | 0 | 82 | 150 | | 24 | | 96 Now with Welsh Congregational Church, Eureka, Min. |
| Jenkin Jenkins | 1st & West Cong. Chs., Big Rock, Ill | June 1, 1800 | 10 | 12 | 10 | | | 100 | | 24 1 | 00 | Ter. |
| And the second | THE RESERVE OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF | | 40 | 1 | | | 12 | 200 | -11 | 10 | 00 | 60 Presches also at Woosong. |
| W. G. Johnstone | Cong. Ch., Gap Grove and Sterling, Ill | May 1, 1856 | 12 | | | | 10 | | 41 | 12 (| 00 | to Dreaches also at Wobsens, Church formed at Woods |
| Harvey Jones | Cong. Ch., Zeandale, Wabonsa, Kansas Ter. | Apr. 18, 1856 | 12 | | | | | 400 | | | | 50 Preaches also at Wabonsa. Church formed at Zeandale. |
| Jas. P. Jones | Welsh Cong. Ch., Zoar, Rosendale, Wis | Feb. 1, 1856 | 9 | | 1 4 | | 28 | 180 | 144 | 100 | 7.10 | 55 At Stockbridge, Wis. Labors with the Indians. |
| John Jones | Cong. Ch., Earl, Ill | May 11, 1856 | 8 | 100 | 1 | | 21 | | all | | 00 | 75 Interesting field, but much to be reformed. |
| J. H. Jones | Cong. Chs., New Corydon & Limberlost, De- | Wab 1 1858 | 12 | 2 | 1 | | 15 | 200 | 16 | 5 (| 00 | 210 Preaches extensively in Adams and Jay Counties. |
| | catur, Ind | 1 du. 1, 2000 | - | 100 | | | | 17.7 | | 100 | | |
| T. W. Jones | 1st Cong Ch., Inland, Iowa. | O-4 00 YORK | 4 | 7 | 8 | 0 | 20 | 100 | all | 70 1 | 50 | Revival. Promising field. |
| W. G. Kephart | Presb. Chs., Huntington and Raccoon, Ohio | Tede: 1 1000 | 12 | 5 | 4 | 8 | 66 | 150 | 14 | 50 (| | 20 Preaches at three other places. Important field. |
| | Ches. Che., Huntington and Raccoon, Onio | July 1, 1800 | 12 | 20 | 4 | | 40 | 50 | | 10 (| | 50 Revival. |
| L. B. Lane | Cong. Ch., East Pharsalia, N. Y | Apr. 1, 1800 | | 20 | | | 20 | 50 | 44 | 100 | | 30 The $100 a Legacy. Spiritualism and infidelity common. |
| L. B. Lane | 1st Cong. Ch., Middlebury, Ohio | Sept. 1, 1800 | 0 | | | | 80 | 120 | | 100 (| UU | by the grown Degacy. Opinionalism and matterny common. |
| Francis Leonard | Cong. Ch., Knoxville, Ill | Aug. 1, 1860 | 0 | | | | 18 | | | | 1 | Promising field. |
| Lyman Lovewell | Cong. Ch., Lyon, Kensington, Mich | Jan. 1, 1866 | | | | | 10 | 150 | | ĺ | - 1 | |
| John Lowrey | Council City, Kansas Ter | May 8, 1855 | 8 | | - 4 | | - | 400 | | 3.77 | | 20 Left November, 1856. Suffered from sickness. |
| Thos. Merrill | Free Presb. Chs., Newton and Monroe, Iown | Oct. 20, 1855 | 12 | LOUIN N | 1 | 9 | 86 | | all | | 00 | 122 No. of members of church incorrectly printed last year: |
| M. N. Miles | Cong. Ch., Lawn Ridge, Ill | Apr. 1, 1855 | 12 | 25 | 28 | 21 | 90 | 100 | | 160 (| 00 | 80 Revival. Aid no longer needed. |
| Norman Miller | Cong. Ch., Waupun and Springdale and | Mar. 1, 1856 | 12 | | 1 | | 19 | 200 |  | 85 (| 00 | Now at Princeton. |
| | Cong. Ch., Princeton, Wis | | - | 1 | 8 | 2 | 80 | | 44 | 100 | | 40 |
| Alfred Morse | 1st Cong. Ch., Henry, Ill | June 1 1888 | 19 | | 8 | 6 | 84 | 200 |  | 40 0 | 00 | 50 |
| | have conft. card trem's true | Heno T' 1000 | ~= | | - / | | | | | | | |

We have had uniter come beginning assessed Williams to the had waid will

| Pologod Produced Produced Produced to Total Produced to Total Countributions to Benevolent Objects. No. of E. School and Manager P. | 200 all 75 00 150 Preaches at another point near. [500 | Has two preaching stations. Congregational Church 260 all 86 00 80 Preached at Jefferrson also. Left. 100 81 81 00 88 Building a Rouse of Worship. | Vorsib | 1464 Above se six to ther points. No churches yet formed. 150 " 45 00 follo further aid required. 150 " 52 00 followner revival of religion. Commission expired. | 3 8 | 800 800 Church organized. Preaches also at Mason City. | 84
88 |
|--|--|--|---|--|---|---|--|
| Admissions by Letter.
Ler.
Yo. of Members. | 8 10 88 94 88 88 88 88 88 88 88 88 88 88 88 88 88 | | | | 288 | 8.4
8.88.88
8.99.11 | 15.5 |
| Months of Labor
Reported.
Hopeful Conver-
sions. | 1856 4
1856 12
1855 9 | 1856 8
1856 8
1856 9 | 200 | 1855 19 | 1805 7 | 1856 9
1856 9
1856 6 | 200 8 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 |
| do 8 | Apr. 1 | Jone 10
Nov.
July 1
Mer. 11
Apr. 11 | Jan. 1
Jan. 1
Oct. 1 | | barle Oot. I | Kar
Kar
Kar
Kar
Kar | N Nep 1 |
| OHURCHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | Council Oity, Kansas Ter. Edwards Cong Ch., Chicago, III. 1st Cong. Cha., Lodi and De Kalb, III. | Bloomington, Kansas Ter
Cong. Ch. of Christ, Plum Grove, III.
Cong. Ch. Leyden and Malne, III.
Welsh Calv. M. Ch. Caledonia, Wis.
C. Ch., Albany, & Pres. C., Garden Plate | Ist Fresh, Ch., Burlington, Wik.
Free Fresh, Ch., Miami, Ohio.
Hanoverton, Ohio.
Ottowa Free Ch., Ottowa, III. | Cong. Oh. Vayne, Ill. Wis. | Free Cong. Ch., Bristol, Paris, &c., W. | Cong. Oh., Shell Rock. Iows
Cong. Oh., Udina and McHeury
Cong. Oh., Fremont, Ill.
1st Cong. Oh., Carlange, N.Y.
1st Cong. Oh., Carlange, N.Y. | Cong. Ch., Amboy, III. Gerean's School. H. and other places, K. Cong. Ch., Olmsted, OhloWeish Cal. Meth. Ch., Columbus, Ohlo. Cong. Cha., Benton and Charlotte, Mic. North Gerolling |
| MISSIONARIES. | Henry Morell.
W. A. Nichols
H. N. Norton | Jos. H. Parter
Jos. H. Payne
Thomas Phillips
Nathaniel Pine | A. L. Rankin. Jar. Bobertson George Schlosser. | E. D. Seward L. E. Silves | R. R. Snow | Thomas Tenney 8. H. Thompson. Samuel Thrail H. H. Watte. Water Warren. | David Wert J. W. White O. W. White David Williams W. B. Williams |

e konomi i dia jepana albana dipana di na konomi kilanta and have also be regal to be statistically become as well be received at a real softwards, all her may ble to whicher or may not mericin than yel metalish in open demands oscial booking of the larger lay THIS Association and its Auxiliaries have employed, during the year, 93 ministers of the Gospel and 2 colporteurs in the Home field. Most of them in the North-western States and Territories, and Kentucky, and North Carolina. Of this number there were in the "States east of Ohio," 5. In Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan, 22. Illinois, 35. Wisconsin and Minnesota, 13. Iowa, 7. Kansas Territory, 7. Kentucky and North Carolina, 5, and 2 colporteurs.

They are generally pastors; some of them have several churches; others have extensive districts, and are itinerating, preaching, and promoting revivals of Religion, Temperance, Anti-Slavery, and every good cause. They have organized, and assisted in organizing, many churches and Sabbath-schools in sparse and destitute places.

The results, ascertained from the reports of our missionaries, are as follows :

The additions during the year to the churches, by profession of faith, are 188, and by letter from other churches, 239.

The number of members of the churches under the care of our missionaries is 3585.

The number of hopeful conversions is 242.

Fourteen revivals of religion are reported by our missionaries. Some churches have erected houses of public worship during the year, and others purpose building speedily.

The members of the churches are, with very few exceptions, pledged to total abstinence from intoxicating drinks, and are earnest friends of the anti-slavery cause.

The number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars connected with the missionary churches and stations is 5683.

The contributions to benevolent objects (not local) reported by the missionaries, amount to $2199.00.

STATES EAST OF OHIO.

We have had under commission, in States east of Ohio, but five missionaries.

In not a few districts in these States, from the influence of continual emigration, the necessity of aid to feeble churches has so greatly increased as to awaken painful anxiety, and, in some sections, to lead to new and earnest efforts to supply the increasing demand.

The enterprise recently commenced in the State of Vermont, to sustain a system of itinerancy among feeble churches, and which is supported by the liberal contributions of individuals and more wealthy churches, is one of those emanations of Christian love which cannot overlook the feeble in the neighborhood of the strong, but cares for the suffering, and so honors the weak that all may rejoice in confidence together.

There should be in the church, everywhere, such endeavors to secure equal Christian privileges for all, as will exhibit the disinterestedness of Christianity. If it does not appear toward the saints, in their struggles to maintain the institutions of the Gospel, where shall we look for its ascendancy over selfishness? Nor will the protection of the weak, and the strengthening of the whole spiritual body in the older districts of our country, lessen its ability or disposition to give the Gospel to the western and southern portions of it, but, by the healthful flow of Christian affections, will give enlargement in all directions. While, therefore, we are in the main called to the great field, west and south, it is cause of joy to witness new evidences of benevolence in individual Christians, and to see that some strong churches are meeting the wants of those of feeble pecuniary means.

One church only, in New England, receives aid from us. Its struggles with the difficulties arising from continual emigration are severe. The labors of one of our missionaries in the State of New York have been connected with a rich blessing, in the hopeful conversion of some twenty souls. An extensive revival has been enjoyed under the labors of one of our missionaries in Western Pennsylvania, and much has been accomplished by his efforts in the cause of Christ, of temperance, and of freedom.

FROM OUR MISSIONARY IN VERMONT,

The following extracts indicate the necessity of a deeper feeling, even in liberty-loving Vermont, and among Christian ministers, in relation to the sinfulness of slaveholding. When will slavery be abolished in our land, if men, boasting of being slaveholders, continue to be received to the fellowship of ecclesiastical bodies, composed of ministers who profess to regard slavery as an offence against God and man!

"There were some facts connected with the annual meeting of the general convention of Congregational ministers of Vermont, at Waterbury, in June last, which are worthy of note. A memorial from the North-Western Consociation. to withdraw fellowship from the New School General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, was laid upon the table.

"The delegate from the Old School General Assembly, near the close of his remarks, addressed the convention as follows: 'If I had come here a delegate from Utah, being the representative of polygamy, rather than slavery, and being the husband of six wives instead of the owner of six slaves, I doubt whether I should have been received as a delegate by your body. . . . I congratulate my-self from my cordial reception by you, that you view slavery as we do, as being a less evil than polygamy.'

"He was asked if he was the owner of six slaves, and he answered, 'yes.'"

One member entered his protest against receiving a slaveholding delegate, and fellowshiping one who publicly declares himself the owner of six slaves.

"Just before the communion exercises commenced, the brother, who entered his protest, inquired of the moderator, whether 'that slaveholding delegate would be admitted to the communion table?" "

We learn that no action was taken on the subject; the slaveholder was received to the communion, and the protesting brother silently retired from the house. \1

A MISSIONARY IN OSWEGO CO., N. Y., WROTE, JULY 2:

"We have enjoyed a season of refreshing, from the presence of the Lord, during the last two months. Early in the spring there appeared to be an increase in our prayer-meetings, and I invited the young people to meet at the parsonage on Saturday evenings, for religious conference. These meetings were well attended, the interest increased, and three of our daughters embraced the Saviour, in the arms of faith. Rev. D. W. Thurston, of Norwich, labored with us about two weeks, and the Lord owned his labors, in the hopeful conversion of some twenty souls. The work continues to go on. Our meetings are well attended, and God is with us. The young people meet every Saturday evening, and appear to enjoy a meek and humble spirit, and love to declare what God has done for their souls. The Bible-class and Sabbath-school continue to increase in numbers and interest."

At a later date he wrote:

"This place formerly was noted for loose habits, but now we seldom see men laboring, riding, or gathering at the tavern on the Sabbath, or a boy, with his fishpole, following the streams, or hear the report of a gun in the forest. One young man was an infidel a few months ago, but now 'behold he prayeth,' and believes that God, for Christ's sake, hath pardoned his sins."

FROM A MISSIONARY IN BRADFORD CO., PA., JUNE, 1856.

"There is some special interest in my parish. There have been three hopeful conversions—the first instance of awakening under funeral discourses under my ministry of eighteen years. The three are all young parents.

"There are on this field about a dozen churches, feeble, yet determined, and not sectarian, as they are willing to employ N. S. Presbyterian, Wesleyan or Free-Will Baptist, or other anti-slavery ministers. They are in a position to be charged with unsoundness, and to be oppressed, but God is on the side of the weak. . . . Can you not send us from three to six more ministers for this open, destitute field? These churches can raise about $200 each, and two, when near together, could give a man a support. They are all anti-slavery, orthodox, evangelical and conscientiously congregational.'

A brief account of a revival at Randolph, Pa., connected with the labors of this brother, was published in the American Missionary some time since. There were then thirty-nine added to the church, all but two on profession. These were of all ages, from eleven-to eighty years. An unusual number of them were heads of families, men and women, in middle life. The following is an extract from that account:

"About twenty family altars were set up. Of the fifty sermons that brother C. preached, two or three were entirely occupied with slavery, and seemed to deepen the work of revival. Finally, when the Confesion of Faith was read, some of the new converts inquired if there was no article on anti-slavery. As there was none, an article was proposed and adopted by the church, making slavery a test before the new converts could unite. Nineteen adults were baptized, and three infants, preparatory to the communion on the 'last great day of the feast';—a day to be remembered in eternity."

In his annual report he says:

"In Conneaut, connected with my parish, we have five Sabbath-schools, with an aggregate number of 255, of whom fifty are in Bible-classes. Mrs. C. has a Bible-class of young ladies at the church at noon, and another at 'Penn Line,' three miles distant, every Sabbath afternoon. I visit these several schools as often as I can, and lecture to them and the people who come. My sister and daughter superintend and conduct one of these schools, with an average attendance of about seventy-five, in a community where, with two or three exceptions, no families attend any evangelical church. My daughter, eventeen years of age, teaches the district day-school. It was through her influence that this Sabbath-school was organized.

A great change for good has taken place. One year since, and during years before, nearly every family performed ordinary work on the Sabbath, openly. Now such things are very rare.

"I am to preach a preparatory lecture to-morrow at Randolph, 30 miles distant, at 2 P.M., and another at Steuben, seven miles further, at 5 o clook P.M., and to preach and administer the sacrament to the flatter church on Sabbath A.M., and to the former in the P.M. I have work enough for four ministers to perform, and sometimes fear that I shall break down under accumulating labors. May the Lord of the harvest send forth more laborers into this field already white for the harvest."

OHIO, INDIANA AND MICHIGAN.

In these States we have had in our service during the year, twenty-two missionaries, sixteen of whom were in Ohio.

OHIO

Great as Ohio is in resources, and numerous as are her schools and seminaries of learning, she has her waste places, and feeble churches, and a considerable portion of her population require the active labors of devoted missionaries to direct souls to Christ, to build up and strengthen churches, and to lead in all questions of morality and human welfare.

Progress has been made in the churches under the care of our missionaries. Some of them have assumed the entire support of their pastors—improvements been made in houses of worship and parsonages—and new church-edifices have been erected. But few instances of revivals of religion, we regret to say, have occurred. In some cases there has been marked opposition to the faithful exposure of immorality and the work of reform, but these are exceptions to the general rule.

The great political change in the State, is the result of the strong feeling of humanity among the people, and the awakening of the masses to the vital principles of civil and religious liberty.

The spirit of freedom has seized the seats of learning, the pulpit, the bar, and is moving all classes. The press, secular and religious, is becoming more reformatory and liberty-loving, and is opposing the extension of slavery. It is encouraging to witness the progress of the American Tract and Book Society at Cincinnati, promoting, as it does, pure Christianity, sound morals and freedom. Notwithstanding the change for the better in this great and influential State, there are sections of it in much darkness and ignorance. These cannot be brought to love the cause of Christ or freedom, without great labor on the part of the church, and the friends of education and reform; and the labors of devoted missionaries and colporteurs must be secured for them. The country bordering on the river, and near to the slave States, demand especial attention.

In addition to our experienced and devoted agent, the Rev. John P. Bardwell, whose labors in Ohio are mainly confined to the northern half of the State, the Association has, for the last nine months, had as their agent in the southern section of the State, the Rev. John G. Brice, formerly missionary and agent in Indiana. These brethren are engaging new friends to our cause, and laying the foundation for a permanent interest in behalf of our missions, both in the home and foreign field.

A missionary in Medina County wrote:

"The last part of January, I assisted a neighboring minister, some two and a half weeks, in preaching and laboring from house to house. The people of God became greatly revived—not less those of the Methodist church than of the Congregational. They united their hearts with ours in the work, and God smiled upon the efforts; while these sixteen came forward and gave in their names, as desiring to come under the watch-care of the church.

"When I returned home, I had but two Sabbaths more to complete my engagement with this people. Although urged to remain here from the commencement of my labors, I had told them I could not do so longer than one year. I accordingly preached what I supposed would be my last sermon to them. It was a deeply affecting time, both to speaker and hearers. I commenced the next week to visit them for the last time at their houses. The first day I called on six families, and in all of them there was evident solemnity. 'The Lord was in the place and I knew it not.' I felt that I could not leave them till some special effort had been made for the salvation of souls.

"At the prayer-meeting on the next Wednesday evening, it was decided that such an effort should be made. Accordingly, we commenced a series of meetings the next Sabbath, and continued them about two weeks and a half, in which I was assisted by the Rev. A. D. Barber and Rev. M. W. Fairfield. As the result, some eighteen or twenty souls are rejoicing in Christ's pardoning love. Among these are at least six that were embraced in my first day's visit.

"Our meetings closed last Wednesday with my ordination; but the work of grace is still going forward. Our Methodist brethren are now holding a series of meetings, and we hope for a greater blessing than has been already received."

From Rev. J. G. Brice, Agent:

"The circumstances connected with the work of grace, noticed in your paper for April, are briefly these: At the carnest request of the deacons, I visited the church at Pleasant Hill, and preached daily for three or four days, remaining over the Sabbath. My first sermons were to the members of the church. Under these, Christians were much affected and humbled. They were brought to confess and deplore their past backslidings, and carnestly to plead for the reviving influences of the Holy Spirit. I then preached to the impenitent. My first sermon to them was from I Cor. xv. 34. The Spirit of God accompanied the word, and several were deeply convicted. One man remarked, in the conference-meeting, that he had lived forty years a carcless sinner, until he heard the sermon above referred to. His convictions were deep and pungent. He soon obtained a hope in Christ, and united with the church. From this time, until my departure, the congregations increased in number and solemnity. Many wept under the truth; and, by their deep distress for sin, gave undeniable tokens that the divine Spirit was present speaking to them. The last night that I was with them, I shall remember to my dying hour. I have been in a great many seasons of revival; yet never, in any of them, had such assurances and tokens of Christ's presence as then.

"I cannot state definitely how many were hopefully converted to God, growing out of that work. Not less than twenty-five or thirty."

From a missionary in Summit county :

"The non-professors of this place yield an external respect for the Sabbath, by suspending business on this day, though but few of them attend meeting. Many of the most prominent and wealthy are infidels by profession, and make a public mock of Christianity and the Bible. And it may be said of the masses, that the God of this world has blinded their minds, so that the preaching of the Gospel is to them foolishness, and our blessed Saviour a stumbling block. Modern Spiritualism has vented its poison here, and many are professing to trust in its delusions. In other respects, perhaps, the village would be very like other villages, possessing the amount of religious influence we do. We stand greatly in need of a general outpouring of the Holy Spirit, to drive from the unbeliever and the sinner their refuges of lies and to reveal to them the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and the value of atoning blood."

From another missionary:

"We have reduced our debt of $500 on our house of worship, this year, $200.
"Our monthly concert of prayer is well attended. The last Monday of the month is devoted especially to the slave. Our Sabbath school at _____ is in a flourishing condition. We have a large attendance of colored children. The anti-slavery brethren in _____ are maintaining a day school for the colored children."

INDIANA.

We have now but one missionary in this State. During a part of the year the labors of the Rev. J. P. Brice have been enjoyed in nine places, but since January first he has been in Ohio. Our missionary labors in Adams and Jay counties. His efforts have tended to enlighten the people, not only on the subject of true Christianity, but on the evils of intemperance and the crime of slaveholding. He has been preaching and lecturing on these subjects, as well as on other matters connected with the Gospel ministry. There are two or more young seminaries in the State, we are happy to mention, where colored youth share equal advantages with the white pupils.

In the spring of 1855, the Rev. Thomas B. McCormick, for twenty years an ordained minister of the "Cumberland Presbyterians," was cut off from his Presbytery in Indiana, on the alleged ground of "unchristian conduct" in aiding the escape of fugitive slaves. While this action was pending, Mr. McCormick and two others withdrew from the Presbytery, and formed a new ecclesiastical body, which has since organized several churches in the northern part of the State, on anti-slavery principles. The ministers connected with this body are most laboriously engaged in preaching the Gospel, and spreading the doctrines of righteousness in true Christian reforms. It would cheer their hearts, and the friends of truth and freedom, could we send many missionaries into these districts. A great change may be brought about by the efforts of missionaries, and the education of the people. We hope to see our aims yet appreciated in all parts of the State.

FROM A MISSIONARY IN ADAMS AND JAY COUNTIES, INDIANA.

"The last year will be long remembered here, on account of the failure of the crops, caused by too much rain, and for the severe and universally prevailing sickness. This year is unfavorable to the farmers from a great scarcity of rain and scater. Some hundreds of people moved last fall and winter to Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota, in search of a drier and healthier climate. Many are now preparing to go in search of a more regular one. The excitement attendant on such a state of things is unfavorable to the reception of the Gospel. Many of my hearers come together at the school-houses on the Sabbath, before the time of worship, to inquire for news, and show their neighbors letters received from their friends in the far west. The mind, thus pre-occupied with the highly-colored accounts of the paradise that has been found beyond the Mississippi, is not prepared to appreciate 'the beauty of holiness,' or 'the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord.'

"Sabbath descration is almost universally prevalent through this part of Indiana. Professors of religion are seen on the road every Sabbath, with their teams and wagons, and all the members of their household, going to visit their friends. Their excuse is, that the horses and wagon could not be spared on week days, or that the whole family cannot go together on any other day.

Speaking of a small village where he preaches, he says:

"All the religious people, and many others, attend the preaching of the Gospel. Other denominations attend my ministry as regularly as their own."

In another place he states:

"The congregation is made up of the people of the neighborhood promiscuously. Some are Campbellites, Universalists, backslidden Baptists and Methodists. Several of the Universalists have confessed to their neighbors and to me that they are convinced that the doctrine of universal salvation is false and dangerous. My field of labor is about 27 miles long by 8 wide, and my appointments are distributed among the most hopeful and accessible points, where the people can come together. There are but few ministers in this part of the State that make any active efforts for the promotion of liberty and the suppression of slavery. The Congregational Churches of the Upper Wabash Association stand openly protesting against receiving slaveholders into the fellowship of the Christian Church."

MICHIGAN.

In this State we have four missionaries. The field of their labors is promising. Gospel institutions are being more valued, and progress is being made in a preparatory work for organizing new churches. In some instances the missionaries have several stations, and with the advantage of Sabbath-schools in most of them, they are encouraged. Having been opposed in past years because of their anti-slavery principles and preaching, they experience some relief now, in seeing that the spirit of freedom is becoming dominant among the people; and they preach more fully on the subject of slavery, as a sin and crime of great enormity, both in the church and in the state.

The cause of temperance has not gained, as was hoped, during the year, owing, it is said, to difficulty in executing the prohibitory law; but it is hoped that, if there are defects in it, they may be removed, and that soon the cause will renew its triumphs, and advance more rapidly than ever before.

A friendly feeling exists towards our Association, and if we could increase the number of our missionaries, and secure right agencies in its behalf, much might be gained for it in the way of contributions and influence.

From a missionary in Eaton county :

"Our house of worship is a very plain, though neat building, thirty-five by forty feet, and will sent comfortably 270 persons—without steeple. It cost $1,070. The whole cost of the building and lot is $1,345. We received $275 from the Congregational Building Fund. Had it not been for that noble scheme we should have been to-day without a house, and should probably have continued so for several years. No one, not on the ground, can tell how much it has cheered and encouraged our feeble churches in the West, by enabling them to build, and what is still better, requiring them to keep out of debt.

"Our church was dedicated on the 23d of July last, and on the morning of "Our church was dedicated on the 23d of July last, and on the morning of that day there remained three hundred dollars unprovided for. The dedication sermon was delivered by Rav. Edward Taylor, of Kalamazoo, who stated that he had conscientious scruples against proceeding farther with the exercises, unless we first made a strenuous effort to provide, as far as possible, for the payment of all our indebtedness. The result was, that in less than one hour the whole $300 was pledged, and with joyous hearts we proceeded with the services.

"We cannot help feeling that it was far better to raise this last $800 by strennous effort, on the part of the people here, than to have had it given to us from abroad. It does men good to give, and to give liberally. It enlarges their hearts, and makes it easier to give the next time. We do not understand the object of the building fund to be to enable western churches to move on without effort of their own, but to afford them such encouragement as shall stimulate them to 'devise liberal things.'

"When I commenced laboring here, the church numbered only sixteen members, most of whom were females; and it seemed almost preposterous to think of building a meeting-house, and still farther, there were a few good, cautious brethren who thought it very 'inexpedient' for the minister to preach upon the subject of slavery, and also for the church to pass resolutions condemnatory of that system. 'The church was small and feeble, and such a course would drive away many who would otherwise aid us.' But on the other hand, it was argued that we had a duty to perform to the slave, and that if we were faithful in our testimony against sin, and in our efforts to build up the Redeemer's cause, he would take care of the church. In due time the resolutions were passed, and the slave has been almost constantly remembered in our public prayers. The church edifice has been built, and we have succeeded in raising funds to pay for it beyond our most sanguine expectations. And we are now more fully confirmed in the belief that if we faithfully labor for our Master he will build up the church.'

From another:

"I love this field, for the people seem to love to hear the Gospel. But the most of them are beginners in the woods, and can do but little to support it. I now have six places of stated preaching, and we have organized Sabbath-schools in all these places, and obtained libraries for each. These schools are all in a prosperous condition.

"The new fields that I have taken up, are Hawkenbury settlement, five miles from this; Scot's neighborhood, the same distance; and Hawkin's settlement, four miles from this. These are all important places, and they give me good congregations. At the 'Junction,' a place five miles towards Marshall, a congregation of sixty or more meet to carry on a Sabbath-school, and they have been here repeatedly to see if I could not come and preach to them, as they have no preaching at all. But I could not promise them a single sermon.

"In the most of the places where I go, yes, in all of them, the way of the Lord seems to be preparing, and at no distant day, I fully believe, a harvest will be gathered if they can have the necessary labor. The Gospel is evidently producing a deep sensation throughout the whole field, which affords me all the encouragement to labor on, that I could possibly expect to have."

WISCONSIN.

In this State twelve missionaries have been in the service of the Association during the year; a less number than in the previous year. This has arisen in part from the churches assuming the entire support of the ministry. It is hoped that, by the aid anticipated from our auxiliaries recently organized in Wisconsin, we shall be enabled to increase our force in the State during the year upon which we are entering.

Wisconsin, though the border State on the north-west, has already assumed such a standing for population, wealth and improvement, as to make her influence felt by her sister States, and by Minnesota, Nebraska, and Kansas Territories. Still, the vast proportion of the soil of the State is unbroken. Although its lands are ranging at comparatively high prices, it is fast filling up with emigrants, most of whom are of the more moral, intelligent and enterprising class.

The efforts made to establish Christian and educational institutions have already produced effects which gladden the heart of the philanthropist and the Christian. Much, indeed, there is to regret, many adverse influences—some of which seem formidable—to morals and true religion, but the testimony of our missionaries, and of others, is clear that society is rising in morals and religion while the improvements in civilization and social advancement are self-evident.

Our missionaries, however, report but few instances of marked power attending preaching, and other means of grace, and but one decided revival of religion. A sad tendency, on the part of the most prosperous in worldly affairs to neglect the "closer walk with God," is quite common.

It is an encouraging feature in this, as well as in other States, that our missionaries, who have formerly been subjected to opposition and reproach for their thorough exposure of slavery, and their advocacy of human rights, are now being highly esteemed by the people, whose hearts are beating for liberty, and whose indignation is aroused by the enormities inflicted upon their own citizens in Kansas. It is pleasant to reflect that our missionaries have been among the foremost of the pioneers for freedom, and matter of joy that so early a harvest is being reaped by them. It must be felt that, however much society may give prominence to matters of reform, and of general public welfare, the feeling will expend itself, if there is not radical Christian instruction and principles instilled into the entire population : and unless the Spirit of God shall be poured out, to give energy to truth, and convert the people to Christ and holy living. It is the province of the minister of the Gospel, and of all good men, to seize all favorable occasions to guide the mind and heart to Him who maketh a willing and an obedient people blessed. We have in former Reports referred to varieties of religionists, and classes of citizens both friendly and adverse to true religion, and the well-being of society; these are, substantially, existing as heretofore, each doing its work, and contesting in its sphere the claims of its opposite, and this must continue until truth prevails.

One of our missionaries in Wisconsin wrote, early in the spring, that the providences of God had for some time past been preparing the way for the revival of His work in one of the towns where he preached. There had been great spiritual barrenness, but prayer-meetings had been held twice a week, and the Lord had appeared in mercy for the people.

"In the month of January," he says, "I spent some months in family visiting, and attended the Wednesday evening prayer-meeting. On that evening there were some twelve or fifteen in attendance—among them several of the impenitent. From that time the prayer-meetings increased in interest until their house of worship was filled, and there was a demand for increased labor on the part of the ministry. The work has been a very silent one, and gradually growing more deep and thorough. We hold a day of fasting and prayer weekly. There have been several interesting cases of conversion among the young, and general seriousness and anxiety pervades the community. Several heads of families are among the inquirers.

This missionary had met much opposition, for his faithful application of Divine truth to the great sins of our nation. More recently he writes in reference to his field :

"While I see a great work yet to be done, there are now developing events which give me confidence in the ultimate if not speedy triumph of a free democracy and a pure Christianity. Your missionary has stood here almost alone in the ministry in pleading for the oppressed and dumb, and most of the time, until recently, has had few to support him outside the membership of his own church, while the wrath of the pro-slavery has been poured upon him without mixture. But the scene has changed, and I pray for grace to bear me through this new form of trial-for the praise of men is more dangerous to piety than their cen-

"Many who had opposed my anti-slavery preaching have become my friends, and I trust the way will now be prepared for them to receive other truths from my lips, to the salvation of their souls. This is the great occasion of my rejoicing. Your missionaries in the great north-west, many of whom have been despised and abused for their faithfulness, are becoming the most honored of the ministry, and are, I trust, honored of God by being placed in positions of most extensive usefulness.

"I think God is working, in his providence, in bringing out and establishing principles which lie at the foundation of a revival of his work, the spread of his kingdom and the honor of his name."

Another missionary in Sauk county writes:

"For the last six weeks I have been preaching on the subject of slavery, its aggressions and its present character; and have had three hundred or more hearers every Sabbath. The house was full, and from fifty to seventy-five were in carriages and on benches at the doors and windows. Prejudices are being removed from the minds of people here, as in many other places. The tone of public sentiment, in relation to morals and religion, is becoming more and more elevated. No license can be obtained for the sale of intoxicating drinks. Our town is rapidly gaining in population, and will be one of the largest inland towns in the State.

"The immigrants among us are mostly from New England, and of New England descent; very few foreigners, only about one-twentieth. There are very few places in the west where the society is as good as it is here."

Another missionary, in making his report, after three months labor only, says:

"I am glad to see that our labors in the cause of Christ are not in vain. We have had the pleasure of seeing many penitent sinners come to him for salvation. Six were received in the church on their profession at the last communion, and six others are under conviction. Our meetings are well attended, and people feel the weight of the truth. Rev. Mr. Pary, from Welch prairie, visited us about a fortnight since, and preached here every evening for one week, and much good has been done. We are not yet satisfied, and by trusting in the Lord we are in hopes of doing much more."

MINNESOTA TERRITORY.

Many of the settlers in this new Territory are from New England and the northern States. It is rapidly increasing in population; and the healthiness of its climate, its excellent soil, and abundant streams of water, will secure a continuance of that

Our missionary at Traverse de Sioux has an interesting field of labor and usefulness. On the spot where, but a few years since, the heathen Dacotas offered sacrifices to their idol gods and demons, there is now an altar erected to the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, and a small but increasing church gathered, from whom, we hope, incense and a pure offering ascend to God. At the first communion season of the year five members were added to the church; three of them by letter, and two on profession of faith. Fifteen were added during the year, and the congregations on the Sabbath are much larger than the season before.

After alluding to the vast increase of population in the Territory, our missionary says:

"Various causes have combined to prevent any considerable number of these new comers from being gathered as yet into fellowship with our church, as members of the body of Christ. Many of them seem to come, not so much to let their light shine as Christians, as to secure a piece of land and homes for their families, proposing, when these are secured, that they will attend to their religious interests. To this, there are some bright exceptions. There are a few, who come bearing the name of Christ—who, while they would better their condition temporarily, most of all would secure those things which have respect to their moral and spiritual interests. Such come out at once on the Lord's side, and are living epistles known and read of all men."

63

A Prohibitory Liquor Law is in force in some parts of Minnesota. By treaty stipulation with the Dacota Indians, all spirituous liquors introduced into that Territory, west of the Mississippi, are liable to be seized and destroyed. The prohibition is unqualified except in case of supplies for the United States army. This policy, relative to the Indian Territories, was adopted, we believe, under Jackson's administration, and works well wherever it is enforced, as it sometimes is. At Traverse de Sioux, our missionary says:

"We may still report progress in the cause of Temperance. Two saloons of the worst sort have been entirely broken up in a summary manner by the Sheriff of our county, assisted by some two or three men. Only last Sabbath afternoon, three men, having been bitten by the serpent Alcohol, turned upon him while the bar-keeper was asleep upon the counter, crushed in the heads of the monster labelled wine, brandy, gin, whiskey, &c., until, it is stated, that they destroyed of the poison to the amount of some seven hundred dollars' worth.

"Our temperance meetings, held every fortnight, are well attended, and names to the pledge are added at every meeting. Our society, organized some three years since, is adapted to the new phase of the reformation—with a brief, comprehensive, and solemn pledge—open doors, free discussion, with heartfelt sympathy and corresponding efforts in behalf of all subjected directly, or indirectly, to the curse of intemperance."

The population of that part of the Territory is supposed to have doubled its numbers the past year; and the house of worship occupied by this little church, too small at the beginning, is now wholly inadequate to meet their present necessities. A suitable building it is computed will cost at least $2,000, and of this, after strenuous exertions, they have been able to raise but $1,100. In his annual report, our missionary asks:

"Where shall the $900 be obtained? Where is any part of it to come from? Shall the good work stop just here? Nay, shall it be suffered to recede from this point? If some one, five, ten or twenty friends of the Bedeemer, upon whose temporal interests Heaven has smiled, and upon whose hearts God has shed his richer grace, will only aid us, to the amount of half the sum, I will pledge myself that the remaining $450 will yet be given by our church and congregation, already apparently strained to the utmost, but who would, through help, be inspired with fresh courage to help themselves.

"I need scarcely refer to the importance of this field. Its geographical position and natural advantages, the character of the immigrants with which this new land is settling, together with the institutions, customs and habits here obtaining, all combine to make this one of the most desirable, interesting and important fields for the united, faithful and persevering efforts of the friends of Christ, in the propagation of the Gospel, and the establishment of its hallowed institutions."

After speaking of the distressing prevalence of most of the evils commonly found in a new country, where the pressure of civil authority is but slightly felt, the report says:

"As the country however becomes settled, schools established, and school-houses erected, Sabbath-schools, Bible-classes, Bible and Temperance Societies, and churches organized, and houses of worship erected, and the stated means of grace enjoyed, the scene changes for the better. It is thus, that the wilderness and the solitary place is made glad, and the desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose. To this end we labor together in the bonds of the Gospel. For this blessed consummation we most earnestly pray; always remembering that it is 'not by might nor by power,' but by the Spirit of the Lord."

ILLINOIS.

The Association has 36 missionaries under commission in this State. Notwithstanding the magnitude of its resources, and the number of its population, there are yet in Illinois very many feeble churches and destitute places, requiring missionary aid for the religious instruction and moral training of the people. The Illinois Home Missionary Association, at Chicago, has labored efficiently in the work of supplying these destitute places, and in creating a sound public sentiment in favor of the principles of this Association. The Rev. S. G. Wright finished his agency in January last, and since May, Rev. F. Bascom, of Galesburg, has prosecuted the agency with much success. The late annual meeting of this auxiliary was an interesting and important one.

The missionary enterprise is only one of many that are now interesting the people of this State. Labors for the erection of church edifices, the support of the religious press, and the establishing of colleges and theological seminaries, are taxing the energies, and, we are glad to see, receiving the benefactions of Christians and philanthropists. A new impulse is needed for the temperance cause.

But few of our missionary churches have been favored with the outpourings of the Holy Spirit, and only one has had an extensive revival.

Intense feeling has been aroused among the people of Illinois by the outrages in Kansas, and large amounts have been collected for the "Free State" sufferers, many of whom were from this State. The interest in the Presidential election is, at present, all-absorbing; but Christians need to feel more deeply for the slave and his wrongs, and pray for his deliverance, while they look to God to save our country from the curses which slavery inflicts.

In this comparatively new State, everything connected with the formation of society moves forward with great energy. The development of material wealth is rapid, and cities and villages are springing up almost as if by magic. The tendency of these things is to worldliness even among Christians, and calls for great vigilance. In many places the Sabbath is desecrated, and the seeds of false religion are scattered, and have rapid growth. A mighty work must be done by the Lord's people in this central State of the north-west, to secure it for Christ and fill it with righteousness.

FROM THE REPORT OF OUR MISSIONARY AT LAWN BRIDGE.

"The past year was, to this church, one of prosperity and advancement, notwithstanding much sickness and an inclement winter. The church has more than doubled its numbers, and nothing has occurred to break the peace of our Zion. We have enjoyed a precious revival of religion, and have erected and completed a very neat and commodious house of worship, which is paid for, and no debt left upon the church. Our spiritual prospects are hopeful, and we are looking for still richer displays of the grace of God. We ceased to be connected with your society, as a recipient of missionary favor, on the first of April last; and from henceforth we hope to sustain the more agreeable relation of monthly combinator to your funds. We really contributed $155 to your Society last year. We have a moral community, where almost the whole people vote for the Maine Law, and quite all will vote for Freedom in November. We have, however, a mixture, like other western communities, and some who have no taste for religious, meetings."

OAKLAND, COLES CO. DEATH OF REV. JOHN P. HILLS.

This beloved brother, late our missionary in Coles county, fell asleep in Jesus, Sunday, March 2d. He was a faithful minister of the Free Presbyterian denomination. His memory is precious. His field of labor in Illinois was extensive and arduous; and it now appears that his salary, even with the aid granted by the Association, was insufficient for his support—though we had appropriated all that was asked of us. How painful it is that such willing servants of Jesus, and their families, should suffer from want of the necessaries of life! The following facts we derive from a statement made by Mrs. Hill:

He was a native of Hancock, N. H. He joined the Congregational Church of that town when about twenty-one years of age; graduated from Marietta College, Ohio, and studied Theology under Dr. Lyman Beecher. He entered the ministry in 1841; first preached at Winchester, two years, then accepted a call to Manchester, where he labored six years. Hearing of the feeble church in Coles county, he accepted a call to settle there, where he labored five years and seven months, his home a log house, and his salary, when all paid, but three hundred dollars!

An extract from Mrs. Hill's letter announcing her husband's decease, will reveal something of the trials of the families of home missionaries:

"I pray that you and yours may never be called to endure what we have endured the past few years, and particularly the past winter. My dear husband's salary has not supported us. We have occupied a cabin a mile from the village, and a mile and a quarter from the school which I have been teaching. You know the severity of the weather, and that my oldest daughter, aged 15, was an invalid at home till February. None of us were very well equipped for so severe a season. You can judge the rest.

"I had thought that I had all I could well bear of burden; but to be suddenly called to yield for ever my counsellor and guide, in the most dreary part of our bitter season; to hear the death-rattle, and, in less than five minutes, stand in death's desolating track alone with our dead, with no human being short of half a mile, and to feel that I must go and arouse the neighbors—this was bitter, bitter. I had read of such a thing, but never before could conceive the soul-orushing weight of such a position.

"True, my husband had been sick nearly six days; but none apprehended danger but himself. He told me that afternoon, shortly before his death, that he had that morning given up all hope of living. He expressed his confidence in God and his promises; said he felt no fear of death, and only regretted leaving his family. He afterwards said that his mind was clearer. A few more words, and he lay calmly—not in the agonies of death, for there was no agony, but a quick and pleasing falling asleep. It was not like any death I had ever witnessed."

FROM A MISSIONARY AT WAYNE CENTRE.

"Last winter, there was quite a revival spirit in our weekly prayer-meetings. A number of hopeful conversions occurred; and, from the state of feeling, we were led to make greater efforts for the salvation of souls, and a series of meetings was held for about ten days, with hopeful results. Brother D. Miller, an Evangelist, took the labor of preaching the Word; but his health failed, and the effort was closed, with few conversions. There has, however, been an increase of spiritual strength to the church; younger members have been brought to higher ground than they occupied before. This field is one of slow progress—one that for several years does not show much advance. Many of the first settlers have sold out, and removed. Some have died. There are many men in the town who have been here for years, and have become wealthy; but they are impenitent, and indifferent to the cause of Christ. The hope of the church here lies mostly in the conversion of the young men and women who are coming on the stage of life."

The following extract from a missionary in another part of the State should lead churches in the older States to look after some of their former members whom they have dismissed to go west. An occasional inquiry sent after them, until it is known that they have entered into church relations in their new homes, might save some of them.

"I am encouraged to hope the Lord will revive his work here. Still there are many discouraging things. One of the most discouraging is the number of old backsilders—persons who were professors of religion before they came out to this western country. I have met a large number of such; but few, however, I am glad to say, were ever members of Congregational churches. These persons are the most abandoned, reckless, and hopeless members of the community, and do more to injure the cause of Christ than can be told, representing religion as a mere pretence, and professors as all hypocrites. 'Oh! I have been through the mill,' say such,' and know all about it.' Similar expressions constantly come from them. They thus delude and destroy the youth in the midst of us. I find, especially in the village, a large number of sceptical young persons, who have become such from the influences I have mentioned. The deleterious influence of false professors should be a warning and a caution to churches of all denominations, to be very careful in admitting members, lest they prove only stony-ground hearers."

IOWA.

Seven missionaries have been employed during the year in this State, including Rev. O. Emerson, Jr., who acts in the double capacity of missionary at large and agent.

The emigration to Iowa, so great heretofore, has rather increased than abated. One would suppose from the rush into the State, that it was a land of promise, and so, indeed, it is in its fertility, fine climate, and its varied natural advantages. But the destroyer, sin, is here as elsewhere; and the necessity of "the ministry of reconciliation," and the toil of the missionary, is manifest. Our missionaries, laboring at different points, and in various destitute places, are doing an important work. The general agent and missionary at large, Rev. Oliver Emerson. Jr., travels extensively, preaching the Gospel, collecting Christians and organizing them into churches. The success attending these labors during the year-their immediate results in the conversion of souls to Christ-has not been great, though some revivals of religion have existed, and encouraged the churches and missionaries. Some of the churches have assumed the entire support of their pastors. The principles of our Association are being understood by the people, and the constant tendency of things is favorable to our sentiments.

From the contiguity of the State to Missouri and Kansas, the cries of outraged and murdered men, women, and children can almost be heard; and it is not surprising that an important change has taken place in favor of the right, and that opposition (in the churches as well as in the State) to slavery and its extension, should predominate.

Although in many instances, the desire for wealth overrides all moral and religious considerations; and in others it is necessary to struggle at first for the mere means of living, thus making it impracticable to collect large sums for the support of the Gospel, and for missionary purposes, yet it is cheering to see cases of singular liberality, evinced in a purpose to establish churches, and build up society to the glory of God; and a cheerfulness in making sacrifices necessary for so high and holy an object.

Not only the love of souls, and the claims of all for our sympathy and efforts, should command our interest, but wherever good men and women are found on the soil, engaged in "God's husbandry," we should send forth laborers to aid them to make it the garden of the Lord.

Our missionaries have communicated many interesting facts, showing the success of their labors. From these reports we shall select a few, as many as our limits permit. Rev. Thomas Merrill writes from Newton as follows:

"Although the state of religion is at present very low, yet the prospect is, on the whole, encouraging. There is a disposition manifested to attend upon the preaching of the Gospel, and to contribute to its support. The country around us is fast filling up with an industrious, enterprising population. A large porthey are opposed to the extension of slavery, they do not seem to see the inconsistency of keeping it in the church.

"On the subject of temperance, there has been a great advance within a few years. Now there is very little intoxicating drink, except in the river towns. On all the great moral questions of the age, public sentiment is just about what the popular religion of the country is adapted to make it. The Kansas troubles absorb every mind.

"As I hope to get along, hereafter, without further aid from the Association, I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude to your Committee for the generosity and promptness with which they have responded to our requests for assistance. Our contributions will always be for the A. M. A."

Rev. John Todd, a former missionary of the Association, writes from Tabor, Fremont Co., the following interesting letter:

"Three years ago, I received aid from your Society. The little church then numbered about eight members; now we number fifty; and the church has for the past two years supported its own minister. Last year, $60 were contributed, besides, to benevolent objects. This year, they purpose, if possible, $200 for your Society. But, what is still more cheering, we have recently been favored with a gracious refreshing from on high. Guided by the 'sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees,' we felt called upon to bestir ourselves, and accordingly held meetings daily for a fortnight, besides prayer-meetings, and, as a result, fifteen or twenty persons—indeed, every adult person, except two or three, in the place—are indulging hope. Time will determine whether all have received the seed into good ground. Never have I realized more fully that it is all of God's mercy and grace. He has also shown Himself a hearer of prayer, and worthy of everlasting confidence. To God be all the glory "Assured of the essential rectitude of the A. M. A., and the fidelity of its officers to the weighty trust reposed in them, and praying that your work of faith and labor of love may be crowned with abundant success, I am, &c."

Our missionary, Rev. Thomas W. Jones, writes from Inland. Cedar county, as follows:

"This church was organized about two years ago, with eleven members. Since then, four more have joined by letter. All these persons came here in straitened circumstances; but they subscribed liberally, considering their means, to sustain preaching. Since I have been here, a great change has taken place. The winter ungodly night-amusements of the young people have been broken up. Prayer is now heard, in some families, from lips that never prayed before—yea, from lips before most blasphemous. The number of conversions, of such as have consecrated themselves to God in the presence of the people, is seven."

Rev. S. D. Helms, writing from Douglas, Fayette county, gives many interesting statements, from which we select the following:

"In the general aspect of my field, I do not think that there is anything more to discourage than what we almost everywhere encounter in the West. There is Infidelity, Universalism, Campbellism, Spiritualism, Popery or Catholicism, spreading and strengthening themselves as they can. These all urge the friends of truth to greater diligence. May the Lord save this goodly land from the blasting influence of error! And yet the wealth of our soil, no doubt, constitutes one of our greatest dangers. There is a danger that it may prove hereafter the cause of much wretchedness. Our hope is in Christianity. If it becomes dominant all is secure. That it may we will labor and pray.

"I have aimed, in my preaching, directly at the instruction of Christians in the principles of the divine government, and their duties in relation to the great question of our times, i. c. slavery. Our own age, as well as that of Isaiah, furnishes instances, not a few, of men asking of God 'the ordinances of justice,' who are of choice as well as principle, slaveholders. The day has come for the moral elements and forces to separate and re-combine, and even now the work goes on. Great occasions develop and ripen character very fast, Such a time is the present. The sable son of Africa is set for the rise and fall of many in our land. How he brings out men's principles! And how he draws them into a great struggle or conflict in which they will be confirmed in those principles, whether they be right or wrong. If slavery don't sink in America, she will, under this conflict, gather a strength for freedom and the world which she never would have had without it. Will not God make the struggle a hard one, that many hearts may be made strong? During the last quarter, our Sabbath-schools appear to be prospering. We are expecting to organize one or two more small Congregational churches in this county soon.

"The past year has not been marked by any extensive revival of God's work among us. Our population and immigration is mostly American. The tone of morals in this county is generally very good, for a new county. Some neighborhoods we must except. Since we have had a prohibitory law in this State, the merits of the temperance cause have been less discussed than they were before. But some are dissatisfied, and are at work for its repeal."

Rev. O. Emerson, Jr., writes at length, and communicates much valuable information. We regret that we are obliged to limit ourselves to so few extracts. From De Witt, Clinton county, he writes as follows:

"I spent the first Sabbath in February with the little church at Elk River. I preached four times in different neighborhoods. The weather was intensely old. The second Sabbath was passed at Lawrence. With the church here I spent a few days, visiting, preaching, and administering ordinances. Here, for the last time, last autum, my dear wife mingled in the society of the saints on earth. On Monday I rode to Cottonville. The journey, on horseback thirty miles, was a hard one. I preached four evenings, and on the Sabbath. The machine warm was well attended, and good way does. Two or those individuals meetings were well attended, and good was done. Two or three individuals, we hope, received saving impressions. The little church at Rock Creek has had but three or four sermons for ten months. Within its nook is no evangelical preacher of any denomination. A few brethren of different persuasions have, however, sustained the Sabbath-school and prayer-meeting."

Mr. Emerson gives an account of the sickness, suffering and death of his beloved wife. His deep affliction will excite the sympathy, and secure for him the prayers of the people of God in his behalf. He writes from Macon, Levin county, as follows :

"On the 15th June I preached at two places in the new settlement, in Tama county. Almost the entire population have come to the place within two years. They have seldom had preaching of any kind. They have, however, a Sabbathschool, and sustain a prayer-meeting on the Sabbath. The following week I devoted chiefly to an exploration of the county of Hardin, and returned to Tama, and assisted in organizing a church. Seldom have I met a warmer welcome, or witnessed more genuine Christian refinement, contentment and cheer-

KENTUCKY.

We have had in this State, during the past year, four missionaries and two colporteurs.

The Divine blessing has accompanied their labors. Revivals of religion have taken place both in the churches and at other preaching stations. The missionaries have been assisted by other preachers for a short period, among whom was the well-known evangelist, Rev. George Clark, whose labors for promoting revivals and the salvation of souls were very encouraging.

The labors of Rev. John G. Fee and Rev. J. S. Davis have been unremitted. They have, in addition to regularly preaching in their own churches, travelled considerably, to preach the Gospel, deliver lectures, and engage in debates, both on the slavery question, and on other questions of moral reform.

The mob-spirit, which was occasionally manifested last year, where these brethren preached and lectured, has not exhibited itself since then toward either of the missionaries. Gratifying progress has evidently been made in the efforts to enlighten the public mind, especially on the great sinfulness and criminality of slaveholding. During the political excitement prior to the choice of Presidential electors, however, the missionaries find that, except on the Lord's day, the minds of the people are too much engrossed to listen to the claims of the Gospel, or the moral and religious bearings of the slavery question.

Many of the inhabitants of Kentucky, both pro-slavery and antislavery, have emigrated to Kansas, and, consequently, much interest is felt, and is increasing, as to the issue of the great contest in that Territory between freedom and slavery. Mr. Davis accepted an invitation to visit Virginia, his native State, and preach. He gives an account of his reception and his labors in the following letters:

"I preached nine sermons in Virginia, two directly on the subject of slavery, both in the same place, a school-house, half a mile from Woodstock, Shenandoah Co. I spent a little more than two weeks in the village and vicinity; found many anti-slavery men, who do not know how to make their influence felt. They are not, I think, ripe for forming a free-church; but if a suitable man could be found to preach in the churches of other denominations where they could be had, and if not, in school-houses, I think he might reach a great many people. At least a dozen preaching places could be found within a circuit of ten miles diameter. Very few slaves are owned in the country. Most of the inhabitants of German origin move directly from Pennsylvania. They do their own work ; feel the constraint which slavery lays upon them; are becoming disgusted with the Democratic party; never heard a sermon against slavery, yet can't believe the system is right. I preached three times for the minister of the German Reformed Church. He is absorbed in the church question, and knows nothing about slavery-attempted to defend it from the Bible, in conversation, but soon gave up the attempt. I attended a quarterly meeting of the United Brethren. Saw several ministers; they think slavery sinful, but told me explicitly, that it would be unwise to preach against it. I preached once by invitation. I preached twice at a school-house, three miles from Woodstock. A slaveholder walked two miles to hear the sermon on Sabbath. He had horses, but said he was afraid Mr. Rye and myself would not go home with him if he rode; we were walking. At night I preached to a large congregation in Edinburgh, a small village, five miles from Woodstock. The congregation was large. Mr. Rye is a noble man. He devotes his time to the work. May God bless him. I hope to write again

He writes at a later date:

" I think that I was brief in reporting the results of my tour to Virginia. Mr. George Ryc is a reliable out-and-out abolitionist. For eighteen years he has been endeavoring to place himself in circumstances such as will enable him to give his time and interest to the anti-slavery movement. His wife is a kind woman, and would sympathize and co-operate with him. They have no children. There are other substantial men here who are interested in the anti-slavery question. Mr. Rye proposed that I should go to Virginia again, and call upon every minister in the vicinity, stating frankly that my object is to procure the abolition of slavery, while at the same time I shall strive to develop in the church asymmetrical Christian character. That, with this understanding, I preach to their congregations; but if not agreeable to them, then preach in school-houses, dwellings, &c. I felt the imperative necessity of sustaining the churches to which I now minister, and therefore told Mr. Rye that these churches must be supplied before I

Mr. Davis, on his return to his field of labor in Kentucky, reported as follows:

"Yesterday closed my quarter, and I hereby report that I have preached sixtytwo times. In addition, I have visited from house to house, praying in the families, and conversing on personal religion. Both Glenville and Bethesda churches are in an interesting state. The progress made is not yet to be measured by the number of persons joining the church, as prejudice is wearing away; new friends are making; the sword of the Spirit has a wider sweep. Occasionally an invitation is given to preach in some private house, where, but a little while since, a visit was hardly endured. Last Friday, in approaching the house of one of our people, I discovered that a number of men were assembled to assist in "raising." Among these were two men who had previously asked me to explain several passages of Scripture, which to them appeared to justify slave-holding. This day, at the leisure intervals, we had much conversation on other topics as well; and I learned afterwards that a favorable impression was made. On the following Sabbath I preached at the same place to a large and very attentive congregation. The region is very wild, and threats of violence had been made; but all went off quietly. The fourth Saturday in this month I am to preach there again, from I Tim. vi. I. Pray that God will bless the word, and give His children wisdom and grace. We have formed a Missionary Society in Bracken Co., which, though small, will grow to good size in due time."

The attempt made during this year to drive from Virginia Mr. Rye and Mr. Underwood, on account of their decided opposition to slavery, although they demonstrate the brutal spirit of the system, will tend, it is thought, to the extension of anti-slavery principles, and consequently open new fields for missionaries, who preach the sublime doctrines of the Fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man.

Mr. Davis, at the request of the Executive Committee, attended the anniversary meeting of the Association at Boston, last May, and presented, in the Tremont Temple, interesting facts in relation to the anti-slavery and missionary enterprise in Kentucky, and the claims of the slave States upon the Christians of the free States for missionary and colporteur labor, connected with efforts to enlighten the people on the turpitude of slaveholding.

The following is an extract of a letter from Rev. George Candee, dated Berea, Madison Co., Ky.:

"We have just concluded a protracted meeting at Union, in Rock Castle Co. Brothers Fee and White aided me in the work. We commenced the effort Dec. 15th, and continued it until Jan 1st. Twenty-one came forward as inquirers. We hope that seven are now truly converted to Christ. We feel fully assured that he has glorified his name, and will glorify itstill more; for heretofore, with a large class, the sentiment has been that God does not influence sinners by his Spirit, and that it is nonsense and even mockery to pray him to convict and convert them. We aimed to preach the truth in plainness, and then gave invitations to anxious persons to express their desire for the prayers of God's people. We endeavored to impress upon professors the idea that if sinners were converted to Christ, God must convert them through the truth by his Spirit, in answer to their prayers. We instructed sinners that they must act right towards God, repent and open the door to Christ; he would then come in and sup with them. The people have so little knowledge of God that this is a hard doctrine. But we rejoice that the Lord has given the victory."

Mr. Fee writes as follows :

"I know that you look with much interest to this part of the missionary field, especially since the late efforts of the Slave Power to crush the liberty of speech. "The mobocratic party found a demonstration from the people against them, which I suppose they did not anticipate. What the ultimate moral effect of this will be upon the community, I am not now able to tell. The present apparent effect is, that it has allayed the mobocratic spirit. We have now entire peace. Fields are still opening, and the demand for laborers is increasing. There are now here—in all, four preachers and two colporteurs. The friends are being somewhat encouraged. They begin to think they will have preachers to break to them the bread of life. One brother, who has ridden as a colporteur, says there are now forty places near here where anti-slavery ministers could preach, and ought now to be preaching.

"Our churches suffer much by removals to free States. As fast as light spreads concerning the advantages of freedom over slavery, men become dissatisfied with slave States and Institutions, and move off. Since the organization of free churches here, six young men connected either with the churches, or congregations, have gone to Oberlin, and one to Galesburg to get an education. We ought to have a good school here in central Kentucky, which should be to Kentucky what Oberlin is to Ohio, anti-slavery, anti-caste, anti-rum, anti-secret societies, anti-sin. We have here a very healthful country. Why can we not have such a school here?

"Could we have even a good academy, and offer facilities for an education to the young men and women, in the mountainous and non-slaveholding districts, we could do much, and that too most effectively, for the overthrow of slavery. And as Kansas will soon be a free State, may we not expect the eastern and northern friends to turn their attention and means to Kentucky, and by a constant influx of teachers, preachers, and emigrants, in a legal, peaceful, and yet most effective manner, make this fertile and healthful State the 'home of the free and the land of the brave.' With persevering effort, and faith in God, the work may be speedily accomplished. Right at this spot we now need means with which to build a good church edifice and a good academy. I pray that this may arrest the attention of some of God's stewards. Pray for us.'

A member of the Society of Inquiry in the Andover Theological Seminary, Mass., having addressed Mr. Fee, he replied in three interesting letters of considerable length, from which we make the following extracts:

"Dear Brother in Christ—In behalf of your Society of Inquiry, you ask:
"1. What is the religious condition, and what are the advantages of the white population of our state?

'In the 'mountain counties,' which are in the eastern part of the State, there is but little preaching, very few if any Sabbath-schools, many thousands, as in other counties, being unable to read the Bible if they had one. Yet this is an important part of the field of Kentucky, for the hearts of the people are not so corrupted with slavery, nor are the minds of the people so engrossed with wealth and worldly cares, as in the more level and fertile portions of the State, where slavery reigns. With these, and the counties bordering on the Ohio River, reformation in Kentucky must begin. The Gospel of impartial love, caste-breaking and liberty-defending, never begins with the rich, proud, and op-pressive. Christ said, 'The poor have the Gospel preached to them;' and the poor would hear it, while the rich would not. For this reason, for years to come, much of the work of reform in Kentucky must be sustained from abroad. Many have been accustomed to hear men who drive slaves all the week, on the Sabbath preach a 'raal heartfelt sarmont,' and afterwards make their boast that 'they never have anything for preaching the Gospel.' Too often their sermons show neither preparation from God nor man, and that they ought to be without compensation. In the more fertile and slaveholding districts, the people have, in many places, much preaching on the Sabbath. This is of a character which 'makes void the law of God.' 1. There is a Presbyterian orthodoxy, which discourses much about native depravity, inability, election, final perseverance; then in reference to practical duty toward the slave, many will say, 'Yes, slavery is wrong in the abstract, but God requires us to bear with wrong things, as he did with polygamy and divorce in the times of the Prophets; he will destroy slavery when the proper time comes.

"Next come the Methodists. These are more numerous than Presbyterians.

"Next come the Methodists. These are more numerous than Presbyterians. Most of them will treat with contempt the poor slave, others trade in the bodies and souls of their fellow-men. This I know is true in both branches of that church, 'north as well as south.' I refer to the division on this side of the Ohio Rive

"There are many exceptions to the above, and perhaps more spirituality in this denomination than in any other in Kentucky.

"Next come the 'Regular Baptists.' These are quite numerous in the State.

Among them you may find whiskey-drinkers, whiskey makers and venders, tobacco-chewers and slaveholders after the old Virginian stamp. Yet here you may also find exceptions, even to slaveholding, in practice or spirit. Nor are most of them whiskey-drinkers; such are exceptions, but ought not to be found in a church. Some excellent spirits are found in this body, and the absence of centralized power in church polity renders them hopeful in reform.

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

"Next come the Disciples (by nickname, called Campbellites.) The leading doctrine of this body is, 'baptism for the remission of sins.' With many, perhaps most, is found a rejection of the influence of the Holy Spirit before conversion, and practically, after it. Here, too, is slaveholding, Sabbath-breaking, and worldly expladed as with but little knowledges as 1 believed fasher and and worldly-mindedness, with but little knowledge, as I believe, of what consti-tates true piety. Christ is practically supplanted by the doctrine, 'baptism for the remission of sins.' Where the standard of piety is low among professing Christians, you may expect, as a consequence, that the standard of morals will be low among the people. This picture, though gloomy, is nevertheless true, as "Here, in the slave States, there are ten millions of human beings, most of whom are without a true Gospel, only as they read it from God's word, and believe for themselves in opposition to the popular teaching around them. Do you ask, 'How can men be deceived in so plain a sentiment as that of the golden rule?' I answer, by such teachers as Dr. N. L. Rice and Alexander Campbell, who tell the people 'that rule means that we must treat men as we might reasonably expect them to treat us if we were in their situation.'

"Is not this missionary ground, and do we not need faithful ministers to 'stand in the gap,' and hold up God's truth, that the people may do it, turn and live? There are, however, some encouraging facts in reference to this field.

"The people are social, hospitable, accessible. They depend much upon public speakers; and where a minister has established a character for honesty, piety, and faithfulness, he may wield a powerful influence over the people. May not the spiritual laborer sow here, expecting eventually to reap an abundant harvest? Shall not this rich heritage be taken from Satan and given to God? If the work is done, it must be done quickly, or the judgments of God will whelm this sunny south with terrible judgments, as he has done nations of antiquity. Then millions of souls must go wailing to perdition. On the other hand, if these teeming millions shall be converted to a true Gospel, with their facilities for doing and getting good, will they not do much for the conversion of the world and the glory of God ?"

In Mr. Fee's second letter he says:

"You inquire-

"2. What is the religious condition of the slave population, and what missionary work is done among them?

"In Kentucky, where slavery is in its mildest form, I do not suppose that one slave out of a hundred is able to read one word of that blessed revelation which brings life and immortality to light. As a consequence, many are superstitious : others have very vague notions of what constitutes the religion of Christ, and are easily imposed upon by heretical teachers. An ignorant people, accustomed to see the mass of professors, as well as others, live for the things of sense, with no character at stake to stimulate them to virtuous conduct, and in the hands of comparatively irresponsible masters and overseers, are, of course, the subject of degrading vices.

"What must we think of that system which has to be sustained by putting out the very eyes of the soul? and what must we think of those Missionary Boards which give countenance to those who do the deed?

"You next ask—" What is the missionary work done among these slaves? Alas! for these poor souls, though provision is made for the salvation of all by the blood of the impartial Jesus, yet their souls are little cared for by most professed followers of this compassionate Jesus. In cities they generally have a few churches, and sometimes a stated preacher of their own color. Most generally these preachers are very liliterate. In the country the churches provided for colored people are very rare, and their preachers are still more ignorant. Some colored persons hear, by attending in the galleries of the churches, 'whar de white folks worship.' As ministers become more notoriously pro-slavery, the colored people lose confidence in, and regard for them, and, as a consequence, absent themselves from their preaching. Others still attend, to get what good they can and throw the bad away. Most of the church-edifices now constructed are without galleries, and most generally, I believe, without provision for the colored people.

"Of the two hundred thousand free colored persons in the south, of course few will attend with 'white folks' where invidious distinctions are made, not on account of character, but the circumstance of complexion. I have heard of masters in the far south providing 'oval' instruction for their slaves, to be given by those preachers known to be sound on the 'goose question'—the phrase used by 'border ruffians' for the slavery question. Such instruction I regard as a calamity, because whatever of good such men may have or do, serves only to render respectable and perpetuate that system of slavery and selfishness which vitiates religion.

"All this is to be deplored the more from the fact, that the slaves, if freed and placed in a condition where piety could be cultivated, would probably receive the Gospel more readily than any other people on the face of the globe. They are humble, long-suffering, grateful lovers of song and worship. This is favorable to the virtues of the Gospel, and I should expect to see in them, if converted, not merely outbursts of feeling; but, under the severest trials, as in the case of 'Uncle Tom,' submission of will, entire consecration of being to God.

"You will ask-Do the slaves attend the few free churches in the south aided by the American Missionary Association? I answer-One class of colored persons, composed of both free and slave, attend the Sabbath-school and church in Bethesda, Bracken Co., of which Mr. J. S. Davis is the pastor. But, most generally, they do not attend even these churches, because one part are not allowed to do so; another are afraid that their masters, suspicious of a growing spirit of liberty, will sell them; and another part still, wishing the peace and protection of these churches, stay away, lest their presence should awaken more jealousy and opposition to them. I write what I know. Yet, the very presence of these churches, with their well known principles, speaks volumes to the mind of the poor slave, and they are stars of hope to his crushed spirit."

In conclusion, Mr. Fee remarks:

"You ask: 'What is the particular work in which I am engaged, and any other individuals or societies with me.

"I am engaged in the effort to build up churches having no fellowship with slaveholding, caste, secret societies, dram-drinking, or any known sins. These churches are independent, evangelical, and, as we suppose, upon anti-sectarian principles; receiving those having a Christian experience with a righteous practice, however differing in theological belief, or modes of ordinance not destructive of Christian character. We find this practical and most efficient. We are also sure this was according to Apostolic order, and therefore right. Three other brethren are here preaching and laboring as I am. With us now are two colporteurs, whose business it is to visit the people at their own homes; talk with them on the subject of personal piety, and their duty to the slave and his master; distribute Bibles to such slaves as can read, and anti-slavery documents to slaveholders and non-slaveholders. This is a most interesting work, and attended with great good. Hundreds of persons will read anti-slavery documents at home, when carried to them, who would at first not be found in the public congregation listening to an abolition preacher. By reading, however, his mind becomes enlightened, his prejudices removed, his conscience awakened, his feelings enlisted; and soon he says, 'Popular or not, I go for Freedom and Right,' These laborers are in connection with the American Missionary Association, the principles of which you know.

"For a number of years I was connected with the Presbyterian Church. During the years 1845-6, and part of '7, I labored in that connection as an ordained minister. After continued, but unavailing remonstrances, I withdrew from them-because of their persistent fellowship of slaveholding. The little church of which I was pastor withdrew also. At this time I was receiving aid from the American Home Missionary Society. This society was then aiding 51 pro-slavery churches in the slave States, and this one anti-slavery church. I soon saw that duty required me not to receive aid from that society, and remonstrated against it for the inconsistency of building up, at the same time, righteousness, and unrighteousness, or gross wickedness. The secretaries replied, it was their business to sustain such ministers as were 'rectus ecclesia' of good standing in their church, presbytery or association.

"This did not satisfy me; for I saw that the principle would have sustained the sale of indulgences by John Tetzel in the Roman Catholic Church, polygamy among the Mormons, and caste and polygamy in India. Reformation would not likely ever take place under such a policy. The majority and controlling influence was on the side of the wrong, and would over-ride the few contending for the right, unless sustained from some other source.

"Again, by rule of the society, as a church we were required to raise annual collections and send to the society, which, in turn, would employ these means to help build up around us fifty-one pro-slavery churches—thus feeding what we were attempting to destroy, and kindling fires around-us, to consume our dwellings for the very missionaries sustained by the society. Pastors over slaveholding churches were against us, as were also the churches thus sustained. True, the society was willing to sustain us in our opposition to slavery. But we felt that it should sustain only those who would oppose and refuse fellowship with all unrighteousness. It was formed for the propagation of righteousness, and this alone. Again, whatever of reputation for piety or consistency we might acquire north or south, this reputation would be given to aid in the collection of money from anti-slavery men to be used to build up slavery in slave States fifty times as fast as anti-slavery. We would thus be 'bidding God speed' to the building up of confessed vickedness. Christian men can now, by their donations, sustain missions at home and abroad, through a society already organized, the American Missionary Association, and thus do the good without the evil. We may not 'do evil that good may come.'

may not 'do evil that good may come.'

"Slavery lives by the very respectability which it receives from apparently good men and apparently good societies. They give it character and position by their support and fellowship. Albert Barnes was correct when he said, 'Slavery could not live a single day outside of the church, were it not for the fact that it lives in the church.' Let cfurrches and mission boards refuse to give support or fellowship to the iniquitous system, and it will be, like drunk-enness and fornication, cast out of good society; marked like the first of murderers, it will hide itself from society, exclaiming—'My punishment is greater than I can bear.' "

NORTH CAROLINA.

We have had but one missionary in this State during the past year. The political condition of the country, by creating more jealousy on the part of the slaveholders, has hindered missionary efforts. This state of feeling, it is hoped, will give way when the present political contest is decided, and then we expect that we may revive, and on a larger scale, our operations in this State.

From our missionary's annual report, we extract the following:

"Our congregations are good, for a thinly-settled region of country; and the people, by their attention, show that they are much interested in the work in which we are engaged. We have had some revivals of religion this summer; had an encouraging season at our last Quarterly Meeting; and some souls were converted.

"Things look favorable to us, but our anti-slavery principles are unpopular, and the frequent emigration of our brethren works against us. A number of our members left, last fall and spring, for Iowa and Kansas. I am unable to travel half as much as is necessary for the success of the cause.

requires a travel of some three hundred miles. We have but one Sabbath-school, and one Bible-class. We can do but little here in the way of Sabbath-schools, from the fact that we are not allowed to teach slaves, nor even free persons of color, to read."

KANSAS TERRITORY.

We had seven missionaries in Kansas, viz., S. L. Adair and Amos Finch at Osawatomie; John H. Byrd at Leavenworth City : Harvey Jones at Wabonsa and Zeandale ; Henry Morell at Council City; H. N. Norton at Bloomington, and J. Lowrey, who left Kansas in November, 1855, on account of sickness. We are thus particular because the peculiar position of these excellent missionaries has created an intense interest among the friends of the Association. In last year's Report it was said: "They may be called to persecution, perhaps to imprisonment and death." We have now to record that, although their lives have been mercifully spared, it has been through the special providence of God, in the midst of persecutions and perils, and not as the result of tender mercy on the part of their blood-thirsty persecutors. Their sufferings have been extreme; but they have been patient, forbearing and trustful, while in their missionary work they have endeavored to be faithful to God, to freedom, and to the souls of men. It would require too much space to give a history of the scenes and events to which the missionaries have been eye-witnesses in Kansas, and of the persecutions they have endured and witnessed from "Border Ruffians." Unscrupulous partisens affect to discredit the heart-rending statements that have been published; but our missionaries, though they acknowledge that men in Kansas, on both sides of the great question that is agitating the country, have been guilty of infamous deeds, still aver that, as a whole, the accounts that have been circulated through the newspapers of the cruelties of the pro-slavery party are not exaggerated. Leaving then these statements to make their own impression upon our readers, we shall only glance at some of the leading facts connected with the labors and trials of our missionaries.

The Gospel has been preached, Sabbath-school instruction has been attended to, and three churches have been formed. More churches would have been organized had not the state of the Teritory been as it was. The missionaries have experienced great difficulty, owing to the want of suitable houses of public worship, and school-houses. They have also, in common with other settlers, suffered severely from the extreme cold, as the thermometer ranged, for a time, from eight to twenty-two degrees below zero. This unusual state of the weather, in that region, operated, of course, to lessen attendance on the means of grace. But the elements, severe as they were, did not tend to obstruct the efforts of the missionaries half so much as the violence and crimes of the enemies of freedom and religion. At various periods forays were made upon the Territory by infuriated men, under unprincipled leaders, from Missouri; U. S. troops, under the lead of marshals, were arresting citizens for no crime but that of protecting the lives of themselves and their families, and their property; and hordes of ruffians were prowling over the country, abusing, robbing, seizing and dragging away peaceful inhabitants. It was truly a reign of terror. This country has never before witnessed such tragedies, and foreign nations exult that they have never been subjected to such outrages.

It is true that some of the missionaries, who were located at distances from the principal scenes of violence and bloodshed, escaped much of the interruption to their labors to which others were exposed. They, however, in common with their brethren, suffered from sickness, either in their own persons, or in that of their families; but a merciful providence saved them all from death, except that one missionary family was called to mourn the departure of a child.

(The following is an extract of a letter from a missionary at Osawatomie, dated June 11, 1856:

"On the 6th instant, a mob from Westport and Independence, Mo., entered Osawatomie, at about five o'clock, P. M., took all the horses they could find in the place or vicinity, numbering in all about thirty. They also broke into all the houses and stores in the place, taking goods from the stores, and breaking open at the trunks they could find in the houses, plundering all that was valuable, the principal part belonging to emigrants who had just arrived in the Territory. In some cases they took all the money that the owners were in possession of. The mob also took away all the valuable guns and riffes they could find, and made diligent search for the press on which the Osawatomie Times was printed, but they were unsuccessful. They made three attempts to burn Mr. Geer's store, but did not succeed. Such is the excitement here that it is very difficult to keep up our meetings, yet I feel that God is pleased to smille upon our worshipping assemblies, so that our efforts are not wholly in vain."

Another missionary writes, August 26th, from Bloomington :

"I have two congregations, five miles apart, but no church yet organized. There is no name to the place where I preach; nor any post-office. The average attendance of each congregation is from thirty to fifty. Three of my appointments have not been filled by reason of my sickness. At my appointment last Sabbath afternoon, having preached elsewhere in the morning, no person attended on account of a violent rain which lasted all the forenoon; and also by reason of the war—a battle having been fought on Friday night, and on Saturday morning in the neighborhood, and another attack being hourly expected.

"In Bloomington a Sabbath-school was organized in the spring, with twenty scholars. This school has recently been interrupted by the sickness of teachers and scholars, but we hope to resume it soon. In the congregation north of this is a Sabbath-school of twelve scholars; and an adult Bible-class of twelve to fifteen—both very interesting.

"But for the unsettled state of affairs, it is probable I should have organized two churches, each of from eight to fourteen members. Judging from the acquaintance I have been able to form with them, they would be worthy members.

Not a week has passed, and sometimes not a day passes, but we hear of some free-State man having been robbed or murdered while travelling peaceably on the road, pursuing their ordinary business, or passing into or out of the Territory for necessary provisions or other supplies for their families.

"During the last two weeks, after this state of things had been endured as long as possible, the free-State men have been assembling. They have broken up these pro-slavery bands at Osawatomie, Franklin, Washington Creek, six miles north of this, with a loss of a few men on both sides. The courage of the free-State-men has remained unshaken, while the opposite party has fied in some cases without making any resistance. In other cases the pro-slavery party has fought desperately.

"We learn that the main road from Lawrence to Leavenworth, on which supplies of provisions for all this region must be conveyed, is blockaded by proslavery men. Yesterday a free-State man was murdered and scalped on the road. Companies are being organized and mustering. Of late the U.S. troops refuse to assist the pro-slavery men, many of them being strong free-State men.

They also represent that they are not strong enough to cope with our mea.

"What will be the end of all this we cannot determine, but we believe that the result will be that Kansas will be free. If this be the case, glorious prospects await the church in this Territory. We have here a large proportion of anti-slavery and temperance settlers. The Sabbath is not respected as it should be, though most professors of religion are Sabbath-keeping people, and do all they can to hold religious services. There are Methodist classes formed, but I regret to say that I have not found a Methodist that was aware of the fact that there is slavery in the M. E. Church North! I have had to prove the fact to them, and show the unavailing effort in the last General Conference to rid that church of the sin.

"In some places schools are kept up, but in the back settlements no schools have, as yet, been started, or if started they have been of short continuance. The circumstances of the people here, at this early stage of their settlement, will not admit of their doing anything for the support of the missionary; and yet they are universally anxious for him to remain. We hope that two churches will be organized this year, and be in successful operation next spring. I hope to have my family here in March. I must conclude by expressing my hope in the overruling providence of God for freedom in Kansas. Yours in Christ."

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A MISSIONARY, DATED COUNCIL CITY 22ND AUGUST:

"From about the middle of the summer in 1853, till the 1st of April, 1856, there was no regular preaching of the word of God. The political excitement is probably the reason there have been no conversions. There is a Methodist church organized here; no Congregational church as yet. The congregations vary from twenty to fifty. There are fifty-five in the Sabbath-school and Bible-classes. The people here are of good moral character. They keep the Sabbath generally well. They are also a temperance people. Swearing is seldom heard. The exceptions to this are found among the pro-slavery men, but their number here is small. We have not yet done anything about forming a temperance society, or anything for the education of youth. We have no day-school, nor any regular place to worship in. We are obliged to hold our meetings sometimes in one place, and sometimes in another. The political state off the Territory keeps all kinds of provisions dear; and the sickness among the settlers, the scarcity of money, and the events that are occurring, cause much embarrassment, and hinder the progress of religion. The people of God are praying and working; and I have faith to believe that soon the Lord will have mercy upon us; will help us, cause the brightness of His countenance to shine upon us, and that we shall see better days, for the Lord is faithful—He will not forsake His people.

"P. S. The war has commenced again, and we are in the midst of great events. You will learn all from the newspapers; so I conclude this letter by requesting your earnest prayers, and those of all the people of God, for our deliverance. Your prayers and ours shall ascend to the throne of grace, and cause a dew of blessings to fall upon us, to refresh our souls, increase our faith, and enable us to stand faithful to the end."

Our missionary at Osawatomie, under date 1st Oct., writes:

"I am now where I have fled from the tyrant Pierce and his 'Border Ruffians.'
They seek to shed my blood. They have shot down a nephew of mine, who happened to be in the road near my house. . . . This was soon followed by the murder of a cousin of mine, an invalid Christian man, who was near and tried to escape; he fied to the wood, two horsemen pursued him, and shot him. Another man, near by, was badly wounded. . . . I shall not attempt to describe my feelings while I lay concealed, much less the feelings I had when, late at night, I got help, and with lantern in hand went to the woods, found the dead body of my cousin, and brought it home on the Sabbath. May God have mercy on the murderers, they know not what they do. [Mr. Adair then describes the battle, and proceeds to say.] God only knows when these things will end. Many men cannot get away, and must die unless God Almighty save them. . . My children are in constant fear, but my wife is not in a situation to leave, nor could I leave her alone. Do pray for us. . We feel shut up to the mercy of God. Oh, that the country could realize our situation. We will look up and put our trust in God."

REV. JOHN H. BYRD A PRISONER.

We learn that our esteemed friend and worthy missionary to Kansas has fallen into the hands of the "Border Ruffians." On his way out, the notorious Stringfellow assailed him with threatening language, and said, "You will not long be permitted to express such sentiments in Kansas as you have on board this steamer;" though he afterwards was heard to say, in relation to Mr. Byrd, "He is too good a man to go to Kansas." Very recently we saw an extract from a Missouri newspaper to this effect: "We learn that a notorious abolitionist named Byrd has been taken into custody. Preparations are making to take care of other birds of the same plumage." Shortly after we received a letter from Mrs. Byrd, dated Leavenworth, Kansas, 28th August, of which the following is an extract:

"In the absence of my husband, and at his request, I write to inform you of our circumstances, &c. The cause of Mr. Byrd's absence is simply this, he is a prisoner in the camp of the enemy. This is a time of intense excitement, and no free-State man is safe in this part of the Torritory. Bands of Border Ruffians are collected in different places, and the most violent threats are made against the free-State people. Husband went up to Lawrence last week, and after his return it was reported that he had gone as express messenger, which of course was entirely false. Last night, about ten o'clock, we heard horsemen riding at full speed up to the house. They were soon at the door, knocking, and calling for Mr. Byrd. They ordered him to get up and go with them, but would not for a long time tell us where or for what reason. They assured him he should not be harmed at all, and finally said they had orders to take him to their camp. Husband rose and let them in, for they were also directed to see whether he had any firearms, and to search for papers. The company consisted of five armed men. They repeatedly assured me that he should not be injured in any way, but I could place no confidence in them. My trust is in the Lord alone; I do hope he will be preserved, but whatever the result may be, I rejoice in the fact that 'the Lord reigns.' One of our pro-slavery neighbors, a Mr. Seratt, brought me anote this morning from Mr. Byrd, in which he says that he is courteously treated, but did not know when he should return. Seratt told me he was sent for to the same camp last night, and when I inquired what they wanted of him, he said they wished him to give them the names of his free-State neighbors. I understand to-day that a pro-slavery man was heard to say in Leavenworth City, with some terrible threats, that he intended to live on the 'claim' of one of our neighbors before next Christmas. It may be they intend to drive us off, and buy the land with our improvements; but if they succeed in doing so, it "Well, here I am alone, with four little ones, the youngest a babe, not two months old, and worse than all, my husband is in the hands of merciless men. Do pray for us.

"Yours respectfully,

" ELIZABETH L. BYRD."

Rev. J. H. Byrd writes as follows:

"I regretted to see a letter in the 'Independent,' representing this as a sickly country. The writer's experience and observation differ widely from mine. My own family has never elsewhene enjoyed such uninterrupted health, and this is also true of others with whom I am acquainted. Of this part of the Territory, at least, it is the almost unanimous opinion of the settlers that it is a healthy country. Nothing is wanting here but the power of the Gospel in the hearts of men to render this a delightful land to dwell in. It has seemed almost impossible to reach the hearts of men with Gospel truth, while such exciting times prevailed. I long to hear men inquiring the way of the Lord, and behold them turning their hearts wholly to Him.

"Notwithstanding our deplorable circumstances, schools and Sabbath-schools

"Notwithstanding our deplorable circumstances, schools and Sabbath-schools are quite prosperous. At two places where I preach, Sabbath-schools exist, of about fifty scholars."

Another missionary writes as follows:

"It is doubtless necessary for the interests of freedom and righteousness in our country, that the slaveholding spirit should develop its cruelty and madness here. I wonder not that some stumble at the providence of God. An intelligent American Catholic lately said to me, 'It seems as if our Heavenly Father leaves us to suffer here more than He ought.' He said his wife lived in terror, as she saw him before retiring to rest put a rifle under his bed and revolvers under his pillow, and she was intent on leaving the Territory. But 'the Lord reigneth, let the world rejoice.' I think I see His hand in all these afflictive providences through which we are called to pass. I trust slaveholders are inflicting deadly wounds on the accursed system, while they are seeking to spread it over this land. It is hard to see our neighbors killed in cold blood for their love of liberty; but their blood is a swift witness against oppression, and, O, may its day of destruction hasten on!"

From another missionary we have the following:

"If Missouri was a free State, she would have had a railroad through to Kansas before this time. But so it is. Slavery cripples enterprise at home, and tries to hinder it abroad. The Lord grant that it may soon receive a death-blow, die, and never have a resurrection.

"Considerable excitement exists about claims. Many claims are cut up badly. Some lose their timber, some their prairie, some lose both; not unfrequently two houses come upon the same quarter section, and the oldest settler takes it. I often think of the Psalmist's expressions, 'The Lord is my portion;' 'Thou maintainest my lot.' Truly blessed must that soul be that finds itself in possession of such a claim. The loss of all earthly claims will not harm it much nor harm it long.

"You speak of the Psalms as being very comforting in these times, and doubt not that I have felt them so. I can truly say, many of them have been of late very precious. I have made them not only subjects for private meditation, but also of late, more than usual, subjects for lectures and themes for discourses. Never before have I felt the force of Ps. cxii. 7, where, speaking of the righteous man, the Psalmist says, 'He shall not be afraid of evil tidings,' and, as a reason or ground for this state of mind, adds, 'his heart is fixed, trusting in God.' The state of anxiety, the fear of evil, is often much more difficult to be borne than the evil itself, when it comes. This we see constantly illustrated amid our present dangers; and few indeed seem to have that fixedness of heart—that trust in God that fears no evil."

GENERAL VIEW.

Compared with the previous year, there has been a reduction of one-tenth in the number of our Home Missionaries. This has resulted not from the want of pressing applications, nor of inviting fields open to labor, but partly from the debt of the Association, at the commencement of the year, and more especially from a continued deficiency in the treasury which has borne heavily upon every department of our operations, from which we have been but recently, and in part, relieved. This reduction would not, however, have been so great as it has been, but from the fact that increased expenditures have been required for missionaries who have received their entire support, or nearly all of it, from the Association, particularly in Kansas.

If there is not an increase of means furnished to the Association to meet the calls of Providence by extending our work in the Territories and in the slave States, where our appropriations to individuals are necessarily larger than elsewhere, the number of missionaries in other districts must be diminished. Our missionaries should go with the tide of population to the far west, and lay, at the beginning, the foundations of a Christian civilization. We should, at this moment, send several men to Minnesota and Nebraska, and increase our number at the south. A few thousands of dollars more, expended in sustaining missionaries in these fields, would give an impetus to our entire Home enterprise.

The cause of missions does not admit of contraction. Every interest connected with it requires not only a supply of means for the present, but increasing contributions sufficient to meet the demand for a greater number of missionaries. We are acting, be it remembered, for the Redeemer. The work is safe and useful—necessarily enlarging with the increase of our population, and the advancing settlements of our new States and vast Territories.

The vigorous prosecution of our Home Missionary work is important as a means of support to the Foreign cause. Each of the churches and districts aided by us in the support of the ministry among them, becomes interested in our entire work. Besides, the influence of our Home Missionaries is not unimportant in enlisting the affections and the co-operation of their brethren in the ministry, and of Christians generally in our enterprise. If a liberal and devoted Christian people are raised up in the west, under the influence of Home Missionary efforts, the time will come when the west will do more for foreign missions than is done by the east, as its population will soon greatly outnumber that of the entire Atlantic States, while its wealth at no distant day will be equally great.

Revivals of Religiou.

The number of revivals of religion reported, is not equal to that of the previous year, and the number of conversions has been less; but they have given strength to the people of God, and cheered them in their pilgrimage—souls have been saved from sin and ruin—the power of the world has been broken, the community has been made to feel the influence of religion, and acknowledge its claims

The extraordinary severity of the last winter-with its numerous storms, and vast accumulations of snow, preventing travel-operated very generally to prevent a full attendance on the ordinary means of grace on the Sabbath, and to a great extent, the holding of protracted and other special meetings, often blessed of God in the promotion of revivals of pure religion. Opposed as we are to a mere periodical religion, dependent upon any peculiar style of measures, it cannot be doubted that prolonged attention by a community, given at any time to the truths of the Gospel, with corresponding efforts on the part of ministers and Christians for the salvation of men, are of great advantage, being often attended by much prayer and the power of the Holy Spirit. Many of the followers of the "prince of this world" are at such seasons drawn from his open service; many youth taken from the exciting and vain amusements of the times, most dangerous to the soul; and numbers are led to Christ and find salvation in his name.

Church Extension.

The gathering of Christians into clusters, and their organization as churches in new and sparse districts, in villages springing up at railroad depots and elsewhere, is a service requiring urgency. Some of the reasons given by our missionary at large in Iowa, Rev. O. Emerson, Jr., who is devoting much of his time to this department of labor, are as follows:

"I regard it as a matter of prime importance to organize a church in every new settlement as early as practicable. The reasons are in brief these—I. It furnishes to those who are united a sphere of Christian activity, and imposes responsibility which it is highly important they should feel, both on their own account and that of others. The want of this is one of the greatest perils attending the removal of Christians to the West., 2. Ministers coming to the State are not likely to seek a location except where a church is organized. 3. Christians removing to the State are greatly encouraged by the taking of this step, and will seek such locations in preference to others, and thus religious institutions will be much sooner established and become self-sustaining. 4. The community is more interested, and becomes more easily identified with those churches that are first established. Hence, a church established in the infancy of a settlement, is almost sure to live and flourish, however weak it may be at the outset."

Whatever objections may be raised to this measure, in view of the difficulty of securing, at once, pastors, or the means to sustain them, it is obvious that the spiritual safety of the Christian, his growth in grace, the education of his family, the preservation of the Sabbath, and the edification of the body of Christ, requires the early organization of Christians into churches.

Evangelists-Itinerating Luberers.

It may be that the Home Missionary work, as an instrumentality for the salvation of souls, has become too much stereotyped in its operations, and confined too generally to the aiding of existing churches to sustain pastors, and that the "John Baptist" work of crying in the wilderness, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord," is not sufficiently prominent.

It is evident that while we should wisely pursue the object of aiding feeble churches in sustaining pastors, for a limited period, and should much exceed what we have done in collecting into churches the scattered sheep of Christ's flock, more men should be employed as Evangelists, or Itinerating Preachers-men well adapted to that work, who can blow the Gospel trumpet clear and loud along our rivers, on the prairies, on the mountains, and in the valleys, if not in some cities and villages, so as, under God, to arouse the multitudes to the highest interest of their being. Next to the outpouring of the Spirit throughout our land, and in connection with it, some simultaneous movement for the stirring preaching of the Gospel, is necessary to awaken the attention of the people to the great concerns of the soul. Such a measure as this might result in the conversion of multitudes to God, in every part of the field, and thus not only furnish the materials with which to build up churches, but give new life and power to those already established.

Churches and missionary societies are called, in the providence of God, to a movement which, for zeal and interest, shall not be shamed by the present speaking, hearing and throbbing interest of the great masses of the friends of justice and humanity, in resistance to the usurpation and extension of the slave-power, and for the protection of the outraged in Kansas; a movement in which they shall put forth their utmost efforts for the rescue of souls and the conquest of the nation to Christ. It will be impossible to supply the churches already established, and the perishing multitudes "without hope and without God," with the regular ministrations of the Gospel, unless some extensive work of grace shall prevail in the land, and young men are converted in great numbers, so that very many of them shall be prepared for the Gospel ministry.

Christian Emigration.

Christian emigration is most desirable. Not of Christian professors, in common with other persons, simply to better their temporal condition, but the emigration of Christians fully consecrated to God, who will go from Christian motives, if not in companies, after the manner of the Moravians in their missions, yet with the controlling design of doing good, of planting churches and schools, sowing the good seed, and laying foundations for all time and for eternity. Some such examples have been set, and their fruits abundantly testify to the excellence of the plan. The establishment of literary institutions is also important, in order to carry out the full idea of promoting a Christian civilization. A home missionary connected with such a people, could with them effect wonders; their influence would be extensively felt, and their example be contagious:

Evils of the Love of Wealth, or Making Haste to be Rich,

The opportunities, both real and imaginary, for accumulating wealth, are such, in some of the new States and Territories, as to unhinge the minds of not a few professing Christians, who it may be, have, in other circumstances, been more circumscribed and moderate in their reaching after riches. It is not surprising that such persons, while sacrificing ease and many things truly valuable, in order to amass wealth, should be indifferent to the support of their spiritual teachers. This, however, is a short-sighted, miserable policy; and it is hoped that even selfishness will yet open its eyes to see that justice and liberality are but handmaids to thrift and prosperity.

The following extract from a missionary in Illinois confirms these remarks:

"The great difficulty we have had to combat with here, is the love of the world; and no arguments, nor moral suasion, can break these chains by which men are bound; but the Word of God, accompanied with the power of the Spirit, so as to make it a fire and hammer, can break the rock in pieces. The same spirit of the world has lulled to sleep many of the professors of religion who were active in the east, and their faithfulness, energy, and zeal seem to have left them, so that one may well inquire, 'What do ye more than others' But though by our own power and might, we might despair of success, yet here is our hope and encouragement:—'Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord:' for 'Paul may plant, and Apollos water, but God giveth the increase.' May God pour down His Holy Spirit to revive and raise us from dead works to serve Him.'

The Abolition of Slavery Necessary to Missions at the South.

Nothing is more evident than that God has connected the destiny of this nation with its treatment of the colored man. All partial views of the human brotherhood must be discarded by Christians, and no code of evil statutes, no system of oppression, nor custom of class proscription can be honored or allowed by those who hope for the favor of God. We may expect the Divine blessing in our efforts to maintain free institutions only as we require them for all; and solely on this principle, in perfect harmony with the law of God and the Gospel, can we venture forward in the missionary work. No people on the face of the earth have higher claims upon us for our efforts and sacrifices in their behalf, than the slaves of this country. By their stripes, their outrages and blood, we are called to seek their deliverance from slavery; and by the value of their immortal souls, we are bound to give them the Gospel, and all the means of salvation. This great boon we cannot secure to them, but in the most limited degree, while slavery is sustained. It is a law of slavery necessary to its existence, that the family institution, the Bible, the knowledge of letters, the preaching of the pure Gospel, and the unfettered liberties of Christianity, shall not appertain to the slave. How thoroughly this law of slavery is being observed in the slave States, no intelligent man need be informed. Hence the efforts of all are required for its abolition, not only on temporal grounds, and for the present interests of humanity, but also for the higher and eternal interests of the soul. The whole power of every Christian in the land must necessarily be taxed for its extinction. The abolition of slavery, therefore, has been one of the cardinal objects of this Association. It is a necessity, and perfectly consonant to the missionary enterprise. So also is the endeavor to correct the error of churches, ecclesiastical bodies, missionary societies, and other religious and benevolent organizations or individuals, who have countenanced slavery, that most formidable obstacle to Christian missions, and the work which is enjoined upon us for the salvation of the slaves.

It is true, also, that the non-slaveholders of the south, comprising the mass of the white population, who are depressed beyond measure and crushed by slavery in all their interests, demand our sympathy and Christian missionary efforts; and so also do the slaveholders and their—for the most part—ruined families. Each and all of these are fearfully deprived of the Gospel, through the terrible system of slavery with its impious and brutalizing influences. The south, both the white and colored portion of its population, need Christian missionary efforts, far exceeding any other portion of our country.

The interest already felt by the Christian public in our missions in the slave States, is an indication of its purpose to free the slave, and of the pressure of Christianity upon us to do it without delay. Every plea of delay, and every apology for slavery, should be rebuked as anti-Christian, as connected with the foulest conspiracy against humanity, and the true practical religion of love.

Free People of Color.

This Association, as will be seen from its principles and history, is favorably situated to do much of the great work which should be done for the free people of color in this country. When we consider the manifold disabilities of this deeply interesting class of people, amounting now in our country to a half-million of souls, and the necessity of more appropriate means for their instruction, we should seek to carry out some adequate and comprehensive system of measures for their improvement and salvation.

It is desirable that not only in country places where there are many colored people, but in the cities also, such steps should be taken as shall awaken among them more interest in their intellectual, moral, and religious advancement. Should it be said that they have numerous religious organizations, churches and ecclesiastical bodies of their own, and that great credit is due to them, in view of the sacrifices they have made and are making to sustain the institutions of the Gospel, and to construct so many houses for public worship in our cities and elsewhere—we cheerfully assent to all this—it is yet true that not a few of the most devoted and intelligent among them, in their churches and in the ministry, agree with their white friends who know their struggles and their highest wants, in the sentiment and feeling that something more than has yet been attempted should be done by themselves, and by others, for their culture and salvation.

Our Country.

This country is supposed to be the highway of the nations. The discovery of gold in California has decided the early settlement of the Pacific side of the continent. Oregon and California are advancing with great rapidity. Riches in all the central, as well as the marginal, parts of this vast country are to be developed, and if we are not overthrown of God for our sins, a population exceeding that of China will, in a century, probably exist here. Midway between the ancient nations of Asia, Europe, and Africa, this vast territory is to be the central ground for the world's commercial operations. Across its entire breadth railroads will soon run bearing our products and the treasures of the nation. The tide of population from Europe, and of late from China, flowing in upon us, is but an earnest of the future.

But why this high confidence, when we have become vain in robbery-crushing the Indians, and holding four millions of men and women in the most horrible chattel servitude-while at this moment the National Government is attempting to extinguish liberty in Kansas. Surely there is a God in heaven; and may He not now-in the midst of our boastings-have us in derision, and cause our sun to go down at noonday? Surely he is a God that judgeth in the earth, and he must hold us to an awful retribution if we do not break the bonds of wickedness and let the oppressed go free. If we are not overthrown for our mighty sins, and if our anticipations of the population and wealth of this country are to be witnessed-if intelligence. learning, art, and everything that elevates and makes a people great and mighty are to exist here, and we are to become truly free and righteous-the Christian people of this land must come to the help of the Lord against the mighty. This nation cannot be saved by grace, if not repentant. The work of reformation and salvation is laid upon the servants of Christ, and the mightiest motives cluster around us as a missionary association, to perform our part with a quenchless love, a burning zeal, and an unwavering faith, "looking to Jesus" for power and success.

wine was the common deed their streature

MISSION TO THE COPTS.

EGYPT.

Missionaries-Rev. C. F. Martin, Lazarus S. Murad, Mrs. Martin.

In our last Report, it was stated that the location of these missionaries at Cairo was regarded as only temporary, and that they were about to ascend the Nile, with a view to obtain personal acquaintance with the places on that river, where the population was more exclusively Coptic. They accordingly left Cairo, Nov. 17, and arrived at Assouan, the turning-point of their journey, the latter part of December. Assouan is a place of considerable commercial importance, being the frontier town of Upper Egypt, but, as a point for missionary operations, they found it of less consequence than they had been led to suppose. The Coptic population was small, and not all of it permanent. Returning to Cairo, which they reached Jan. 7, 1856, they visited all the points of interest, inhabited by Copts, between the two places. They were well received, and, in general, whenever they offered for sale the Bible and Testaments they took with them, they found ready purchasers for all they could part with and not interfere with their supply of other places; sometimes the people carnestly entreated for more, and complained on being denied.

At Esneh, Negadeh, Keneh, Girgeh, and Siout, the mission received assurances that they would be cordially welcomed. Each of these places has some peculiar advantages, but the mission recommend a location at Siout, in preference to any other place out of Cairo. This is the capital of Upper Egypt, and contains not far from 25,000 inhabitants, of whom 4,000 or 5,000 are Copts. In favor of this location they name its central position, giving them comparatively easy access to all places on the Nile having a large Coptic population; a diminished expense for the Mission, as compared with Cairo; fewer counteracting influences, than at the last named place; and the probability that the people would be more accessible.

If the mission makes its permanent location there, it will need to be strengthened by the addition of a physician to the present company, as it would be hardly safe to settle away from Alexandria or Cairo, without one. Mr. Thompson, in his "Eeyff, Past and Present," says: "The practice of medicine, out of Alexandria and Cairo, is almost entirely in the hands of barbers and dervishes—a set of religious enthusiasts." He thinks "a judicious physician would pave the way for a missionary teacher."

The Executive Committee have determined to endeavor to supply this want of the mission, and they will be glad to hear from any Christian physician, who would like to engage in the work of missions in this interesting field. It is desirable that the physician should be a married man.

A detailed account of their journey was prepared by Mr. Martin and published in the American Missionary. It concludes as follows:

"We sold 99 copies of the Scriptures, entire and in parts, and gave away only four. Of our religious books we sold 60 bound volumes, and 298 of the smaller books, amounting in all to 25,000 or 30,000 pages, and gave away perhaps one-fourth as many. We might undoubtedly have sold double or triple the number of Scriptures, had they been with us, and you may wonder that we did not take a larger supply; but knowing that Bibles have hitherto been donated in almost all eases in Egypt, we did not look for such a demand for them. In conformity with the wishes of the agent of the B. and F. Bible Society at Malta, Rev. Mr. Lowades, who last year visited Cairo, and with our own convictions of duty, we determined in all ordinary cases to sell. It is thought by some a great affair, if people will receive the Scriptures as a gift. We could have given away a ship load of Bibles between Caire and Assouan, and the people would have thanked us and said 'God preserve you' for every one; and yet we should have been sure that one-half of them would sell those very Scriptures for their worth as wrapping paper, if they could, and then come and ask for more. We do not think lightly of the fact that the Scriptures are not refused by the Copts, and especially that the priests do not as yet hinder their circulation; especially are we grateful that we found such a readiness to purchase. But all these things do not alter the fact that the church is sadly corrupt, and that very few, we have reason to fear, know much of the life and the power of the truth.

"We are fully prepared to say that we found a prospect more favorable than we had expected: we endeavored to sow the seed as we had opportunity, although, from our circumstances and short stay, formal preaching for the most part could not be attempted. But we feel that much was done in preparing not only ourselves, but the people for other visits, and we are confident that some good was accomplished. We ask the prayers of God's people that our efforts may be Divinely blessed; that the truth disseminated, whether written or spoken, may yield its harvest to the glory of Him for whom it is our highest honor to labor. Blessed forever be His name!"

Mr. Martin relates a number of interviews had with Coptic ecclesiastics. Relating one of them, he says:

"The people again came in as on the previous day: and soon, as before, questions were asked respecting us, and our church. Of the English Church, they know something, and when they understood that in our church there were no bishops, or rather that all the clergy are bishops, they seemed much surprised. The idea that the church, and not the clergy, is the head, seemed entirely new. But why do you not have bishops?' Because the word of God does not require it. Then we asked, 'Why do your priests hear the confessions of the people, and pronounce their sins forgiven? How do you know that the bread and wine are changed into the real body and blood of Christ?' In course of the conversation, a Kummus had come in, who immediately entered into the discussion. with much zeal, if not discretion, the Bishop rather taking the attitude of an inquirer, and saying but little. In reply to our inquiries, the Kummus said: 'The priest knows the hearts of the people who confess, by the Holy Spirit given to him.' The Bishop took much more moderate ground, saying, 'When they confess to me, I do not say I forgive you, but may God forgive you.' This and other conversations have shown us more clearly the position of the Coptic Church." Whether or not there are many among them who understand the truth, the idea of a hierarchy, the actual successors of the Apostles in every power but that of working miracles, and lacking that only because of their feeble faith, is as in the other eastern churches and in the Romish Church, the life of their system in its present position. Every conversation we had with them came sooner or later to the question of Apostolic succession and authority. Let us not be misunderstood. They acknowledge the Scriptures as authority; they do not, to our knowledge, pretend that the church is infallible; and they have much more acquaintance with the Scriptures than most of the corrupt churches: but though the Bible is received and read, the idea of a priesthood with such powers, and the control which auricular confession always gives, must in a great measure render the teachings of Scripture of no avail."

Mr. Murad performs much incidental labor among the Armenian and Mohammedan population, and meets some things that encourage him. In January he wrote:

"Recently a friend, an Armenian Protestant from Constantinople, read 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' in Armenian. I had a long conversation with him in respect to slavery in America, and explained to him the anti-slavery principles and efforts of the American Missionary Association. He is so much pleased with the principles of our Association, that he sends £2 to be expended for the Slaves' Bible Fund. He wishes a hearty God speed to you. It is encouraging to know that the missionary enterprise, as conducted by the the A. M. A., is regarded with increasing favor by all who understand the principles upon which it is conducted, and the noble object at which it sims."

And again in May, he wrote:

"I have just now received a very interesting letter from a Mohammedan Turk at Jaffa. An extract from his letter will show what the Lord is doing among the Mohammedans. He says, 'Many thanks for the Turkish Bible which you gave to me some time ago. I value it very much now, and read it every day. I have been examining well the Bible with the Koran; and I found that the Bible is true, and Protestant Christians are right, but the Koran and Mohammedanism are wrong and false.' He is very much interested. He sent me one hundred pisstres, (nearly five dollars,) to be expended in Bibles, and wishes mis to distribute them among the poor Mohammedans. He is a respectable merchant. I met him last year at Jaffa, at my brother's house, and had a very interesting conversation with him, and gave him a Turkish Bible, which he thankfully received. May we not hope that the time is not far distant when the Spirit of the Lord shall be poured out without measure, when the Mohammedans shall be converted, and the fullness of the Gentiles be brought in; when these dead churches shall be revived, and the light again shine in their golden candlesticks."

The editor of The Independent some time since copied into that paper an article from an English periodical, relative to the Copts, and spoke thus of our mission to them:

"The numerous friends of this mission will rejoice to have collateral evidence that it is not only needed but highly opportune. The mission was undertaken at the instance of a pastor of one of the churches of this city, from his personal inspection of the field. That it was called for in the providence of God, just at this time, is fully apparent from the following testimony of an English traveller, an Evangelical Churchman, to the religious awakening of the Copts, especially in Cairo."

[The extracts state that the writer had found about twenty Coptic Protestants, a priest among them, who meet to read the Bible, with some germ of spiritual life: that the Coptic patriarch wished to put all pictures out of the Coptic churches, and opposed the invocations to saints and angels; that he wished to put an end, both in Egypt and Abyssinia, to the performance of religious services in an unknown tongue; that he had built a school house where about 300 Coptic boys are educated. The writer had visited the school and found that all the boys who could read had either the New Testament or whole Bible before them. The first teacher was formerly a teacher in Mr. Leider's school, and a protestant.]

The editor of The Independent says:

"The difficulty hitherto has been that Mr. Leider has not felt authorized by the terms of his commission, to do anything that would tend to dissever these awakened and enlightened Copts from their own ecclesiastical organization. Mr. Martin may find the way open for a movement like that among the Armeniaus. As yet he cannot command the language, and therefore he has little direct access to the people. But surely the harvest is white in that field; the mission is well begun, and should be prosecuted with prayer, and diligence, and abundant support."

The latest intelligence received from the Mission states that Mrs. Martin's health and that of their child had been very poor; and that, by the advice of friendly physicians at Cairo, Mr. and Mrs. Martin had accepted the invitation of Rev. Dr. Smith, and was spending some time with his family on Mount Lebanon. Mr. Murad remains at Cairo, engaged in Colporteur labors.

MARQUESAS MISSION.

Missionaries - Rev. B. N. SEYMOUR, THOS. C. COXHEAD, M.D., MIS. SEYMOUR, MIS. COXHEAD.

The action of the Executive Committee in reference to the establishment of a mission on one of the Marquesas Islands, and the seemingly concurring providence that induced them to commence the undertaking were reported at the last annual meeting, and received the unanimous approval of the Association. Before the return of the Secretaries to New York, a letter was received there, bringing intelligence of the severely afflictive providence that had befallen the mission in the death of Mrs. Mills, at San Francisco, September 3. The letter was from Mr. Seymour, and was dated September 4. The following is the principal portion of it:

"Dear Sin:—We are here at last, but we are here to weep. One of our number has left us. Mrs. Mills is no more. She died yesterday, Sept. 3, at 4 o'clock. You know how much she travelled and visited and was excited before she left New York. We can see that all through the voyage she has been running down, though we little thought of it till we nearly reached this place. She had occasional ill turns on the Atlantic side. It rained very hard when we crossed the Isthmus, and she got wet. Then we had a dreadful time in getting on board the boat at Panama. No opportunity to get a mouthful to eat from the time we left Aspinwall, in the morning, till we got on board after 9 o'clock at night. She took cold and got very much fatigued, but still kept about. We had very hot weather for a week or more on this side, but when we passed Cape St. Lucas we experienced a very great and sudden change of weather. It was as cold as November all the rest of the day.

November all the rest of the day.

"It was Sabbath day, August 26, that we passed the Cape; and in the evening there were religious services on deck which Mrs. Mills attended. She took more cold, but kept about till Tuesday evening. Wednesday she did not get up at all. Towards evening Mr. Mills and I took her out of her berth, and while we were doing this she was seized with an epileptic fit. Thursday she was a little better, but Friday she was worse, and was threatened with fits all day. Saturday we got into port. She was very low, and we procured a litter and had her express the heat for we dered not write to look up, any investe heats.

carried into a hotel, for we dared not wait to look up a private house.

"A physician was called, as Dr. Coxhead (one of the missionaries) was very unwell and felt unable to treat the case; but all seemed to avail nothing. She had a violent inflammation on her brain and lungs, and nothing could allay it. She did not have her reason all the time, and toward the last she was almost senseless, and seemed to breath with great difficulty. But at last she breathed more quietly and died very easily. She maintained her kind, obliging disposition to the last.

"So our human prop is taken away, and we are lonely, afflicted strangers in a strange land. 'Cast down but not destroyed.' We have had her body put into alcohol, in a lead coffin, and are going to take it with us to the Islands. It will cost but little more to do it than to bury her here, and it will be a great gratification to her friends. It may also promote the interests of the Mission. The funeral services were attended to day in the first Congregational church.'

During her short stay in this country many Christians became deeply interested in Mrs. Mills, and in behalf of her people, and sincerely mourned her death.

The next intelligence from the missionary company was of a still more afflictive nature. They had been detained in San Francisco by the illness of Mrs. Seymour, until such development of character was made by Mr. Mills, that the missionaries lost all confidence in him, and with the sanction of the Executive Committee, declined to proceed any further in his company. The following, is an abstract from a communication published soon after, by the Executive Committee, in the American Missionary:

"Our first knowledge of him was derived from an article in the New Tork Evangelist of Feb. 8, 1855, intitled "Royal Visitors," which was understood to have been written by a distinguished clergyman in the city, and pastor of a Presbyterian church. Verbal and written testimony was received from two secretaries of missionary societies in this city, and from clergymen, pastors of Congregational and Presbyterian churches in New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. Some of these testimonials were published in the Independent for April 19, 1855, in the May number of the American Missionary, and is many other papers. One of them, from the excellent pastor of a Congregational church of Massachusetts, was as follows: 'From shipmaters, owners, and others interested in our whaling fleet, I learn that his influence among the natives, which is very great, has been always on the side of order and good morals. Missionaries laboring there would have in him a prudent, experienced, reliable, and influential co-operator.' Another from one of the secretaries above referred to, said: 'The documents which Mr. Mills has with him leave no doubt of the sincerity with which he is prosecuting this matter.' Another from a pastor in this state said: 'His statements can all be fully depended upon, as I have a man in my church, who, until a short time, was a yearly visitor of these, and indeed most of the South Sea Islands, who indorses every statement made by Mr. Mills.'

"We afterwards received voluntary testimonials of captains of vessels and other persons who had known him at the Islands, speaking highly of the character and extent of influence exerted by him there. In view of these facts, three insurance companies before whom they were laid, contributed liberally for his personal benefit, that he might look after their interests in that part of the "Under such influences the Executive Committee appointed two missionaries, and their wives, to accompany him to the Marquesas and commence a Christian mission there. They sailed from this city Aug. 5, for California.

"Mrs. Mills died, as has been said, soon after their arrival at San Francisco, and his whole course since his arrival in that city has been such that our missionaries assure us they have lost all confidence in him. As has been previously Intimated, for a few days there was hope that a favorable change had taken place, but this was soon destroyed. A judicious friend, residing at San Francisco, writing to one of the secretaries, says: 'Certain it is, that his conduct has disappointed those who knew him at the Islands, and I doubt if he returns there.'"

Letters of inquiry relative to the present condition of the Marquesas and other islands of the South Pacific were addressed to persons residing there, and the missionary company were advised to seek fields of useful labor in California until answers to these letters could be received. Mr. Seymour has since been preaching most of the time at Oroville, and Dr. Coxhead has remained at San Francisco, with but little, if any, expense to the Association.

Some of the answers to these communications have just been received. We learn that since Mr. Mills left Ohivaoa, two Catholic priests have established themselves there, after an unsuccessful attempt to supplant the Hawaiian missionaries on Fatou-hiva; and that the population of all the Marquesas Islands, is rapidly diminishing in number. Information derived from the Secretary of the Hawaiian missionary society (Sandwich Islands) leads to the belief that whatever society attempts to sustain a mission on either the Micronesian or the Marquesas Islands, should have a vessel under their own control, and that they could in no other way make a regular provision for the wants of their missions. The expense of such an arrangement would be too great to warrant incurring it, for a single small mission on any of the groups.

The Executive Committee, have therefore made provisions for the return of Mr. Seymour and Dr. Coxhead, and their wives, to New York, unless they find desirable and promising fields of usefulness where they are.

"THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY."

The monthly issue of this paper is now about 23,000. It is sent without additional charge to every donor to the funds of the Association who expresses a wish to receive it; and will be sent also for a limited period to any person, either at his own request or that of a donor, who is interested in the work of missions, and wishes to become acquainted with the principles and the missions of the Association. In some places the regular contributors to our treasury prefer paying for the paper by sending contributions for that purpose. Hitherto the Missionary has proved a valuable agency in creating an interest in behalf of our missions, and in increasing our receipts. As the Association has had but few salaried agents engaged in collecting funds, the Committee have found it necessary to make more frequent appeals for money in the paper, than it would otherwise have done.

Polygamy

During the year first closed, the question of the morality of polygamy, and the propriety of receiving polygamists into mission churches, had been briefly discussed in our paper. The extent to which the practice prevails in Utah, the governor of which, holding his office from the Executive of the United States, is largely a polygamist, and the certainty that the question of the reception of polygamists to Christian churches will become a practical one, so soon as a state government shall be formed for the territory, or an attempt be made to propagate a pure christianity there, was of itself a sufficient justification of the attention given to it. But the immediate discussion of the subject was occasioned by the publication in this country of a work on India, containing arguments in favor of polygamy, and advocating the propriety of receiving polygamists into the mission churches.

The writer of the book, who had been a missionary in India for a quarter of a century asks,

"Now what shall be done in respect to those persons (polygamists) when they give credible evidence of personal piety, and seek admission into the Christian Church? No case of this kind occurred in my own missionary experience. But some cases have occurred in India, and this difficulty will occur in numerous instances in the progress of the Gospel. The subject will also have the consideration and decision of the highest authority, ecclesiastical and judiciary, in India and England. My opinon is, that the general practice in missions in respect to such cases will be as follows:—When any man who has more than one wife to whom he has been legally married, wishes to be admitted into the Christian Church, he will be required to make a free and full statement of his domestic relations. He will be permitted to retain his marital connection with all his wives, and his parental relation to all his children, subject to the discipline of the Church for the proper government of his household. Whether he may or may not cohabit with his different wives will be left, I believe, entirely to him and to them, to act according to the Christian dispensation and the neage of the Church, and the reason why such cases are for a while tolerated, will be fully explained. No man theys admitted while a polygamist can be ordained a Christian teacher. In this way polygamy will have the testimony of the Church against it; and as no Christian man can ever become a polygamist, all such cases will cease with the lives of those thus admitted."

"This view is for substance that which was adopted by a general conference of missionaries at Colcutta, the result of which is given in an appendix to the book and has been published through various other channels. The conference decided:

"If a convert, before becoming a Christian has married more wives than one, in accordance with the practice of the Jewish and primitive Christian Churches, he shall be permitted to keep them all, but such a person is not eligible to any office in the Church."

The writer evidently approved of allowing the candidate to retain all his wives, when admitted to the church.

The error here introduced was regarded as too fata to the purity of mission churches, to be permitted to pass without examination, and as it related to the conduct of missions and mission churches, it seemed proper to notice it in our paper. The following are extracts from the editorials relating to it:

"The bold assumption contained in a quotation from the Calcutta Conference, in accordance with the practice of the Jewish, and the primitive Christian churches he shall be permitted to keep them all, is very much akin to the assumptions made by the apologists for slavery for the reception of slaveholders into the church. There is not in the New Testament even a shadow of foundation for such an inference. There is not a particle of instruction given by Christ or his Aposiles relative to the marriage state, or the duties which arise from it, which recognizes polygamy as allowable for the convert from either Judaism or heathenism. All that our Saviour taught relative to the marriage selation, or to divorce, can be consistently explained, only on the supposition that no one man was to have more than one wife. If 'he that putteth away his wife and marrieth another, committeth adultery,' 'it clearly follows that he who, having not put her away, marries another, must be guilty of the same crime. 20

"Any argument drawn from the instruction of Paul to Timothy, in which he says a 'Bishop must be the husband of one wife,' to favor the idea that none but Bishops were forbidden more wives than one, would be equally valid to prove that none but Bishops were prohibited from drunkenness, extortion, &c.

"The argument drawn from the silence of the New Testament on the subject of polygamy, is thus effectually met by Paley, as quoted approvingly by Buck (Theo. Dic.) and others:

'The State of manners in Judea had probably undergone a reformation in this respect before the time of Christ; for in the New Testament we meet with no trace or mention of any such practice being tolerated. For which reason, and because it was likewise forbidden amongst the Greeks and Romans, we cannot expect to find any express law upon the subject in the Christian code,'"

The first instance of polygamy recorded in the Bible, that of Lamech, a descendant of Cain, was shown to have nothing in it to recommend it to a Christian. The next case in order, after a lapse of 2,000 years, that of Abraham and Hagar, was evidently an exception to the general tenor of Abraham's character, to be classed with the few faults recorded of him, was rebuked by the withdrawal of the Divine favor, and followed by dissension and discord in his family, the inevitable consequence of such transgression. Only when he had repented of these things was the long-delayed promised blessing granted to him.

The concluding article is here given almost entire. It said:

"It would be interesting to trace the history of Jacob, whose example is so often quoted, and show how large a portion of his trials, as recorded in the Bible, were the direct—almost necessary—result of his polygamous connections; but this is not essential, for Leviticus xviii, 18 contains a direct prohibition of polygamy as practised by him. If we read, as in the text, 'Neither shalt thou take a wife to her sisters,' the marriage of two sisters, as was Jacob's, is expressly forbidden; and the marginal reading, 'Neither shalt thou take one wife to another,' a reading approved by many able writers, is a direct and absolute prohibition of all polygamy. Moreover, in the absence of any expressed approval of Jacob's act, his example cannot be quoted to prove the lawfulness of it, except on the assumption either that every act of his not specifically rebuked in words, was in accordance with God's will, or that the favor shown to him, was God's approval of all that is recorded of his life, an assumption too violent to receive any favor. The well-informed Christian need not be told that no amount, or kind, of temporal prosperity can be received as proof that God approves of even the general course of those who enjoy it, much less of each individual deed, nor, that no degree of temporal affliction can be adduced as a proof of Divine condemnation. Here was the error of Job's three friends, and God rebuked them for it, and ordered them to seek the prayers of him whom they thought to be a great sinner because greatly afflicted.

"The other arguments most relied on to prove the moral lawfulness of polygamy, and the rightfulness of receiving polygamists into mission churches are.

"1. That God regulated it by the law of Moses. 2. That he commanded it by

1. That God regulated it by the law of Moses. 2. That he commanded it by requiring a man to take to wife the widow of the deceased brother, if he died childless, and 3. That he gave David the wives of Saul, and blessed his connection with Bathsheba. after the death of Uriah.

"Laws enacted to regulate or control any practice, cannot be fairly urged in proof of its instrinsic moral lawfulness. And most especially is this true if their tendency is to discourage and diminish the extent of such practice. The laws of Moses do indeed recognize the existence of polygamy, and endeavor to regulate it, but rightly interpreted they place barriers in the way of its extension rather than favor its existence. Thus, Ex. xxi. 7, 11, was designed to protect the interests of a maid who had been hired out by her father, as a servant, and who was subsequently betrothed to her master or his son. If the person to whom she was betrothed took another wife, he might not diminish the food, the raiment, or the duty of marriage of her who was already his wife. Her interests must be protected, and her rights secured, however injurious that might be to the one who should come after her. So also Deut. xxi. 15, 16, if it recognizes the existence of polygamy, it does not sanction it. It designed to secure the birthright to the first-born of two wives, the one beloved and the other hated, and is conservative of the rights of the hated wife and her son. It is a barrier to the man's taking a second wife in place of, or in addition to the hated wife, who may have borne him a son. But it is by no means certain that the passage recognizes even the possibility of the existence of polygamy, for it may be, and is by some rendered, 'If there should have been to a man two wives,' and may without violence be supposed to mean two wives in succession.

"But the supposition that the laws of Moses did not prohibit polygamy, but reooguized its existence, and sought to control it, by no means proves its moral lawfulness, or sanctions it. Christ has taught us that on account of the hardness of their hearts, Moses suffered the Jews to put away their wives for other causes beside fornication, and for many others, and he plainly pronounced those who do this to be guilty-for adultery. Here then, was an act once suffered and made a subject of legislation that Christ pronounced to be wrong for all men.
This argument is quite as strong against polygamy as against divorce, and in its terms refers as much to marrying another wife, as to divorcing a former one.

"Neither the declaration of God, 2 Sam, xii, 8, nor the example of David, recorded elsewhere, can be fairly placed in support of this practice. As God said to David, that he had given him his master's (Saul's) wives, or 'women,' of so he also said to him, (verse 11,) that he would take 'his wife and give her to his neighbor, (Absalom.) These providences give no sanction, either to David's polygamy, or Absalom's incest. They no more sanctioned either the one or the other, than his having given the Jews into the hand of the King of Babylon sanctioned the use that Nebuchadneszar made of his power. But there is no proof that Saul had more than one wife: nor if he had, that David married any of them. Saul was David's father-in-law. We read of his having one wife and one concubine, Rizpah, but it is not certain that he had both of these at one time, nor is it probable, considering the relation of David to Saul, that he would have taken either of them to wife.

"In the case of Bathsheba, it appears that God chastised David, until he deeply and truly repented of his sin, and then removed his rod from him, although his house was ever after troubled by the wicked contentions of his sons, the fruits of his polygamous connections. The fact that God raised up Solomon, his son by Bathsheba, to the throne, no more proves that He approved of David's polygamy, or even of his masriage with Hathsheba, than the result of Judah's incestuous intercourse with his daughter-in-law Tamar, by which they became progenitors of Mary the mother of Christ, and also of the principal part of the Jewish nation, proves that their incestuous act was approved of God. All that can be said with any degree of certainty in relation to it is, that God slid not see fit to set aside natural law, and that Solomon was, by special endowment of wisdom, best fitted of all Invid's sons for that high honor.

"It can hardly fail to be seen that the passages used to give a divine sanction to polygamy fail to accomplish that purpose; that the enactment of laws to restrain and control it, does not give it such sanction; that the record of its practice by patriarch or king, can not be quoted in its favor, so long as we know that the failings, and even the vices of the people of God are often recorded in the sacred Scriptures without comment: and that the recorded examples of it, among men who fear God are very few, and often carried with them their own terrible punishment. It must be seen, too, that our Lord authoritatively lays down the laws of marriage as being between two parties only, and for life; and that he declares that this doctrine was the one taught from the beginning, and that a violation of this law is adultery. Paul too, declares that 'every wan should have his own wife, and every woman her own husband:' and that 'the wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband. And likewise, also, the husband hath not power of his own body but the wife,' statements ufterly inconsistent with the existence of polygamy. If we turn from the Scriptures to the writings of the earliest fathers of the Christian Church, we do not find the slightest trace of anything resembling a testimony to the lawfulness of polygamy, while on the other hand we do find passages in which it is condemned, and declared not to be allowed among Christians. There is no foundation for the argument in favor of the instrinsic moral lawfulness of polygamy; and we can find no evidence in the Bible or in History for the assertion that polygamists were received into primitive Christian Churches, and allowed to retain all their wives. The practice of receiving such into Mission Churches attengthens the system of polygamy, and is, we believe, corrupting to the Churches and injurious, both to the professed convert, and the Missionary who advocates his admission to the Church, and opposes his being called upon to separate from all but one of his wives."

The Executive Committee, therefore, notwithstanding the action of the Calcutta Conference, and all that has been published in favor of the course therein recommended, are still fully convinced that the ground taken by it is wrong, and that the position assumed by the American Missionary Association at its organization is correct, viz.: that the professedly converted polygamist should become the lawfully wedded husband of one wife, before he is received into a mission church.

The anticipations felt when the foregoing articles were written are beginning to be realized. The question of polygamy, as connected with the future State government of Utah, has begun to be agitated in our National Halls, and one of our political parties has spoken on the subject. Having thus become a political matter, we fear the discussion of it will be forbidden to the pulpit and the religious press, for fear of dishonoring the Christian religion. May God in his infinite mercy save the Church and religious institutions from another attempt to compromise between sin and holiness, purity and pollution.

Slavery.

We have as an Association, in accordance with our constitution and objects, endeavored to correct the public mind in relation to the sin of slavery and its evils, in the Church, in the State, and in the benevolent societies of the day. We have not confined ourselves to the instruction of our missionaries on these topies. Our missionaries are to be drawn from the churches, hence the churches must be right, if they are to rear up men for us with right principles, who will be prepared to carry them out, and teach others to do the same. The public Christian heart is to be corrected and enlarged, to give us its prayers and the pecuniary means for extending our operations. Pursuing this course, we have been favored with a good measure of success in prosecuting our work at home and abroad.

AUXILIARIES.

The "Penobscot County (Maine) Missionary Association" held its annual meeting in February. The receipts reported were $210 42.

The word translated wives, sometimes means only women, and may here refer to the unmarried women of Saul's household, that would, according to custom, come into David's possession.

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

The President of the Society is George A. Thatcher; and the Treasurer, James Allen, both of Bangor, Maine.

The "Illinois Home Missionary Association" held its annual meeting at Aurora, September 9th. The sermon was preached by Rev. E. Beecher, D.D. The subject was "The course of God's providence towards us as a nation; our mission, and our duties." The sermon is to be published.

Among the resolutions passed is the following:

"Resolved, That the present critical and alarming state of things in our country, caused by the aggressions of Slavery, calls for humble confessions of our national sins, and earnest and persevering prayer to God for his interposition in our behalf, to enlighten the minds of the people, and to give purity, fullness and permanence to their convictions and actions in the cause of Christian liberty."

Upon developing the resources of the church, the following suggestions were adopted :

"1st. The work of educating the churches in the principles and habits of Christian benevolence devolves mainly upon the Pastors, and demands their most earnest attention and effort. We therefore respectfully recommend to our brethren in the ministry that they frequently take occasion to develop and enforce, in their preaching, the Gospel rule and method of giving to charitable and religious objects. We suggest also, that they secure the circulation among their people of books and tracts on this subject, such as 'Mammon,' by Harris, and the Tracts and Premium Essays, by Parsons, Cook, and others, published by the American Tract Society.

"2d. We recommend to the Pastors and churches, at or near the beginning of each year, to preach on the subject of missions, and obtain from all the members of the church pledges of such amounts as they are willing to give, for the year, to the cause of missions, and other charitable objects; these pledges to be re-deemed in quarterly or semi-annual instalments."

The following officers were chosen:

President-REV. EDWARD BEECHER, D.D. Vice-President-REV. E. GOODMAN. Corresponding Secretary and General Agent-REV. F. BASCOM. Recording Secretary-REV. G. W. PERKINS. Treasurer-WALTER LULL.

Wisconsin Home Missionary Association.

This Society was formed at a meeting of the friends of Free Missions, held at Beloit, Wis., October 6, 1855. The following are the leading articles of its Constitution :

"Article 1. This Society shall be called the Wisconsin Home Missionary Association, auxiliary to the American Missionary Association.

"Art. 2. The object of this Association, whose field of labor shall be confined to the State of Wisconsin, shall be as follows:

"1. To explore and ascertain the wants of this field of missionary labor. "2. To examine the claims of churches applying for missionary aid, and the qualifications of ministers for whom assistance is asked, and report the same to the Executive Committee of the Parent Association. "3. To raise funds to sustain missionaries, and in the accomplishment of this object to employ one or more agents to traverse the field and present the claims of the Association to the churches.

"Art. 3. The appointment and commissioning of missionaries will be done by the Executive Committee of the Parent Association.

"Art. 4. The funds of the Association, after defraying its expenses, shall be subject to the order of the Parent Association, to be expended in sustaining missionaries in this State as far as, in the judgment of the Executive Committee, missionaries in this coate as lat as, in the judgment of the wants of our field require such expenditures.

"Art. 5. Any person of evangelical sentiments, who professes faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is not a slaveholder, or in the practice of other immoralities, may become a member of this Association by subscribing to this Constitution and contributing to the funds."

The remaining articles relate to the appointment and duties of the officers. The President of the Society is E. D. Holton, Esq., of Milwaukie, who is also Chairman of the Executive Committee.

Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionary Society of Wisconsin and Illinois.

A society bearing the above name has been formed during the year. Its Constitution embraces the general features of the American Missionary Association, to which it is made auxiliary. The funds collected by the society are to be transmitted to the Association at New York, to whose Executive Committee all applications for aid in sustaining ministerial labors are to be made, endorsed by the President and Secretary of the auxiliary. The President of the Society is Rev. Robert Williams, Milwaukie, Wis.; the Secretary, Rev. Rees Evans, Chicago, Ill. Treasurer, Hugh Elias, Esq., Genesee, Wisconsin.

The annual reports of the two societies last named have not been received.

CONCLUSION.

It cannot have escaped the notice of the friends of the Association that its attention has, providentially, been chiefly directed to the elevation and Christianization of peoples that are trodden down by the iron hoof of oppression. Special efforts have been made on behalf of the native Africans, the emancipated in Jamaica, and the Indians of this country. The success of our missions in the slave States, of our labors among the free people of color, and in awakening public feeling on behalf of the oppressed, evidently show that while God has blessed our efforts, He indicates the glorious work committed to us, and the heavy responsibility of our position.

In view of these facts, of the leadings of Providence, and the great work to which we are beckoned, we may well regard ourselves honored of God. With gratitude, joy, and faith, we would increase our zeal and efforts, as the friends of Freedom and Christianity place the means at our disposal. If we are faithful, we may hope also that a salutary influence will be exerted upon other missionary bodies who are not yet free from complicity with slavery; for the Christian people of this land, as they are aroused to the importance of the subject, will urge upon them the necessity of being entirely free from all sanction of the stupendous iniquity. They will be made to feel that neither the support of the Churches nor the favor of God will be afforded to those who, in this day especially, do not abstain from all connection with the foul system that impiously opposes itself to the conversion of the world. Let us labor and pray that the time may soon come when the Christians of this country of every name and denomination—when every ecclesiastical body—every missionary society—every association professedly aiming to enlighten and save men, will wash their hands in innocency of this great transgression, and all unite—having through Divine aid triumphed over oppression in this land—in carrying the banners of the cross and the news of salvation to the destitute and unevangelized throughout the whole world.

Every well-considered survey of the missionary field is more suggestive to the intelligent Christian, of the magnitude of the work yet to be done, than of that already accomplished, and should lead to renewed consecration of all we have and are to the work, rather than to congratulation on the past. The command of our Lord, to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, and his promise to be with them in this work, has been before the church for more than eighteen centuries, and He has sealed to them the assurance of his power to bless, by his ascension into Heaven, the outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, the success given to the early apostles, and the blessing that has followed every well-directed missionary effort. And yet how much remains to be done, how large a portion of earth's inhabitants are now in heathen darkness, how small the number that have any saving faith in Christ. "The whole world lieth in wickedness."

If all christendom were truly Christian, the work would be but one fourth done. The whole continent of Africa spreads itself before us enveloped in the darkness of the grossest ignorance and superstition, yet all open to the work of Christ's servants, and many parts of it calling for light. The vast hordes of Asia, with their myriads of gods, wherein every lust and every vice of man has its representative deity and its worshippers, are to be reached, and with here and there an exception the multitudes of the islands of the sea are yet to have the Gospel preached to them or perish in their sins.

While we rejoice, and give praise to God that through the agency of the missionaries of the cross, sent out by American Christians, there are annually some thousands of heathen converted to Christ, let us not fail to remember, with deep humiliation and confusion of face, that there are born among us, every year, to an inheritance of slavery, a darkness near akin to that of heathenism, more than seventy thousand of those for whom Christ died; and to the earth's population, there are added at least fifteen millions annually, who open their eyes in the dark places of the earth, amid the habitations of cruelty, and follow the myriads who have gone before them, knowing little of God, and nothing of the plan of salvation through Christ. If the conversions from heathenism number by thousands, and the additions thereto by thousands of thousands; while in the churches of America there are men enough, and wealth enough, if all were wholly consecrated to Christ, to send a missionary within the next ten years to every thousand of earth's population; we may well inquire whether what we are now doing may not be regarded by our Heavenly Father rather as a confession of our obligation to do the work He has given us to do, than as an honest, earnest, filial attempt to render the obedience He requires! When Christian men and women come to the full determination to increase the missionary work a hundred fold, and every church and every Christian having the ability sustains a missionary in the field; then, and only then, shall we see an energy and enterprise in the work of missions at all adequate to its demands, or that gives promise of speedy success.

Christians the Light of the World.

TESTE AND ALL RESTRE

Standard and recommend of the standard provided to a standard and a standard provided to a a grow concentration of the start of a non-article thank of amore and press material growth and the growth data Bit's berthion that a seed and a seed and a first and a seed and a first and a seed an we see an energy siel chirry so in the work of missions at the and the state of the design of the state of

A SERMON,

PREACHED BEFORE THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION,

TENTH ANNIVERSARY;

FULTON, N. Y.

SEPT. 24, 1856,

BY REV. WILLIAM W. PATTON, HARTFORD, CONN.

CHRISTIANS THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

MATTHEW v. 14:

"Ye are the light of the world."

LIGHT is in many respects the life of the physical world. Not a few of the processes of nature depend upon its agency. There could be neither vegetable growth nor animal health without it. It is as necessary to organized vital being, as the atmosphere, the water, or the earth. All there is, moreover, of beauty in the world is revealed, if not created, by light. To it are due the pleasing hues of the flowers, the gay tints of the birds, the bright colors of the rainbow, and all the gradations and shade in blade and leaf, in stem and trunk, in rock and soil, in river and ocean; while through it alone does the eye take in the infinitely varied beauty of form in objects, animate and inanimate; and thus it not only produces material results, but also occasions mental effects, by the pleasure and joy derived from its visions.

From these natural qualities of light comes its figurative use and meaning. The analogy between nature and the realm of spiritual truth is so clear, that among all nations light has been made a symbolic term; so that, even an unpoetical mind cannot fail to perceive and delight in its significance. Hence we find it employed by the sacred writers as representative of truth, purity and happiness; and as these three are the elements of the highest mode of being, the word gains sometimes the comprehensive sense of spiritual life. In a similar manner darkness comes to mean, error, sin and misery.

In this sense, the moral world is dark, for it is the abode of ignorance and delusion, of transgression and rebellion, of sorrow and wretchedness. Its condition is indeed that of almost midnight blackness, so far as mere human causes and effects are concerned. Individual men are deluded, deprayed, and unhappy. Their tendencies are downward. Their natural law of progress, in their present relations, is towards a lower deep of sin and woe. Moreover, their organic action is as perverse and unfortunate as their individual. Nations are corrupt, and do evil continually; society is but a seething mass of selfishness; governments become instruments of oppression, to the equal injury of ruler and subject; while native, earth-born religions, are false in theory and foul in practice, teaching blasphemous doctrines concerning God, and enjoining degrading precepts upon man.

Such being the condition of the world-a darkness so thick and palpable that it may be felt—the compassionate inquiry at once arises, "How shall it be enlightened? What sun shall arise upon its midnight? What star, even, shall send a bright ray athwart its gloom?" A race of immortal beings are groping in black night, feeling after God, and truth, and happiness, but stumbling over error and sin, into a condition of permanent misery. How shall the light reach them, with its saving influences? What means of illumination has God placed in this world of moral darkness? May we not take the text as virtually an answer? Jesus, addressing his disciples, as representative of the Church of true believers, and endeavoring to impress them with a sense of their high privilege and responsibility, exclaims, "Ye are the light of the world !" This can mean nothing less than that, in some true and important sense, his followers were to be the source of knowledge, holiness and happiness to the world. Let it be our present object to ascertain, in what view, and by what means, Christians are the light of the world.

I. As to the sense in which the text holds true of the Church, two things are to be remarked, by way of explication.

1. The light of Christians is not original and independent. They are not the fountain of light, its prime source, and perpetual supply. It is by no inherent illuminating power that they can relieve the darkness of earth. In this sense, Christ is himself the light of the world, as is apparent from the nature of the case and the declarations of Scripture. The Church is not a collection of unfallen men, who have escaped the general corruption of the race, and are seeking to recover their guilty brethren, but is a company of individuals rescued by divine grace from a state of sin and wretchedness, in which they were involved in common with all mankind. They differed naturally in no wise from others, nor is their recovery a self-executed work. The first impulse, the constant strength, and the whole ground of hope, are from God, who, by the sacrifice of his Son, has prepared a complete and the only redemption. It were as little to be expected that sinners, by a self-originated and self-sustained impulse, would change into saints, as that, without a risen sun, midnight would of a sudden burst into noonday. Hence, when we transfer ourselves to the ages preceding the advent of our Saviour, and listen to the voice of prophecy, as it announces the mission of the coming Son of God, we hear Isaiah singing, "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." "I, the Lord, hath called thee in righteousness, and will hold thy hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison-house." When we draw night to the actual appearance of Jesus, the voice of Zacharias is heard at the birth of John, the forerunner, speaking of "the tender mercy of our God, whereby the day-spring from on high hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace." And then, in the sublime opening of the Gospel of John, we read of Christ, "In him was life, and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not. There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for a witness to bear witness of the light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that light, but was sent to bear witness of that light. That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." These words make it clear that Jesus Christ is the actual sun of our moral system, the sole fountain of spiritual light, and that the Church shines with only a borrowed splendor, as a planet or a satellite, reflecting the beams of the central orb; or, to change the illustration somewhat, Christ may be termed the burning resplendent sun, while Christians represent the various rays of light which emanate from this exhaustless source. Every saint is darkness in himself, but is light in Christ: which truth Paul declares, when he says, "For ye were some time (formerly) darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord." "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Indeed, the Master was careful to anticipate error on this point, and to claim his proper honor in this respect, saying, "I am come, a light into the world, that whomsoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness;" and again, using the very phraseology of the text, "I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Thus are we taught the fundamental truth, that we are light only as we are receptive and expressive of Christ; only as we receive him into the soul, and become a transparent medium through which he may shine upon the world around. Christ fulfilled this illuminating office directly and in his own person, while resident on earth, on which account he said, "As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world;" but having removed His bodily presence to heaven, He has left in its place the Church, as a continued incarnation; being "His body, the fulness of Him that filleth-all in all."

2. The text refers to the Church in its potentiality rather than in its immediate effect. Christ tells us what it ought to be, what it may be, what it was intended to be, what it yet will be. He discoursed of its nature and destiny, of the Church as in divine idea, rather than of its historic facts. When he uttered the words, "Ye are the light of the world," he seemed to address the twelve men who stood in the fore front of the multitude; and perhaps his words sounded strangely to his auditors, even to the twelve themselves, for there was little in their appearance or qualifications at the time to entitle them to so lofty an appellation. And yet those rude men, chiefly fishermen gathered from the shores of Genesareth, became, under him the founders of a new religion, which has already triumphed over the most powerful adversaries. has already proved the salvation of millions, has already poured light into the world's mind beyond all previous instrumentalities, and will eventually illuminate this dark earth to the remotest corner. Still, the Saviour saw not them alone, as he used the words in question. In spiritual vision there appeared in widening ranks behind them the vast Church of the future, the company of the elect, who should in successive generations represent his cause, and do his work. He even glanced through the centuries of darkness in the nominal Church itself, and beheld the regenerate Church of the latter ages, radiant with divine glory, and sending beams of light far abroad through the entire world-the Church to which Isaiah spake, in prophetic command, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord has risen upon thee. For, behold, darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and His glory shall be seen upon thee; and the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising." Thus the text expresses the legitimate influence of the followers of Christ, and the actual final result of their presence and labors in the world. We pass now to consider:

II. In what manner Christians become the Light of the World.

Their illuminating power is exerted in a twofold way.

1. By their individual conduct. Each disciple of the Lord Jesus is to reflect or transmit the light of his Master to the surrounding world. This is his special function, the object for which he is continued on earth. Every true saint is as a lamp lighted in a dark place. The flame may be small, and the darkness may, on the whole, be but slightly dissipated, but the light is real, and those near to it receive the benefit, and rejoice in its rays. The words of the text were intended to indicate, first of all, individual duty and privilege, causing even the humblest follower of Jesus to feel that he has an influence to exert, a light to exhibit. This light is found,

(1.) In his holy character and example. Holiness is preeminently a visible quality, speaking now practically and not metaphysically. Where it exists it will reveal itself. The sun might as well endeavor to remain concealed in the sky. There is a radiance in a holy life, which attracts every eye and impresses every mind. It delights by its intrinsic beauty, and it makes important revelations by the light which it sheds upon surrounding objects. Thus the Saviour commands, in the second verse subsequent to the text, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven." A holy example is eminently instructive. It is a practical presentation of the truth. It tells what the law of God is; it illustrates its various applications; it reveals its beneficence. So also it attracts to its observance, manifesting the symmetry and proportion of the character formed under its influence, and making sin appear by contrast deformed and repulsive. Hence the apostle commands, "Do all things without murmurings or disputings, that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world." This does not imply a desire of or an attempt at display, but simply points out the natural and known effect of a pure character as revealed in a pure life. In contrast with the darkness of sin in the world it shines with a heavenly radiance, and this no less when the saint is not reflecting upon the fact, than when his attention may be turned to it. Indeed the larger part of the influence of right character is exerted unconsciously, being a perpetual emanation in word, tone, appearance, gesture, expression and deed; so that usually the Christian shines with as little consciousness as the sun.

(2.) Again, the individual saint illuminates the world by his words of testimony for the truth. Every Christian bears witness for the Gospel, and becomes its advocate among men. Though not always an official minister, he is yet in every case a commissioned preacher, under obligation to communicate the glad tidings to all his fellow men; for does not the Bible close with a passage containing these words, "The Spirit and the bride say, come: and let him that heareth say, come?" Men are in the darkness of error and sin, and God's word is as light. "The entrance of thy words giveth light," sang the Psalmist. How can the Christian do less than to proclaim, in every appropriate way, the Gospel of the Son of God? By so doing he rebukes falsehood and delusion, exposes the guilt and shame of sin, and points out the way of life. He makes himself a reprover of all forms of wrong, an advocate of every truth, and an encourager of universal virtue. This function is clearly described and earnestly enjoined by the apostle. "Walk as children of light . . . and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. But all things that are reproved are made manifest by the light : for whatsoever doth make manifest is light." Thus the faithful Christian is compelled to bear a testimony, by words as well as deeds, against the wickedness of the world, while he also invites the guilty to believe in Jesus Christ for pardon and purity. It is not for him to be silent in the presence of evil or before the enemies of truth, as though he were ashamed of his faith or esteemed it of small importance. No; love for the Master and for his perishing fellow men, induces him to speak publicly and privately, as his gifts enable and his opportunities allow, in warning against the wicked, in consolation to the penitent, in encouragement to the righteous.

(3.) Once more, his light shines in his deeds of positive beneficence. To the lustre of a holy character and the illuminative power of uttered truth, he adds the radiance of active endeavor to make this a better and happier world. He not only watches over his own soul to preserve it in purity, he not only lifts his voice in stern reproof or friendly exhortation of others, but he engages actively in the work of reforming the world. He applies himself to pious and philanthropic labor, bestowing his money, his time, his influence, his personal toil, to the extent of habitual self-denial, in efforts to save men from sin, ignorance, poverty, disease, oppression, and other sources of sorrow and death. Thus he diffuses joy wherever his influence is felt, and the darkness of a sinful and wretched world seems in his presence to be relieved by at least a gleam of light.

II. The illuminative power of Christians is manifested through the church. Christ did not leave his followers to mere individual and isolated action, because he knew that such action was liable to die out, unless sustained by a cooperative influence, and because he was aware, that at best it could not secure the results of united effort. Hence he instituted the church as an organism to be maintained in every community, as a centre of moral power, or a focus of illuminating influence. Its modes of action are analogous to those of the individual, having, however, an increased publicity, and operating upon a larger scale and by certain peculiar instrumentalities. Thus, briefly,

(1.) It has also an example to exhibit. This example must of course be in the persons of its members, yet is it also truly a property and influence of the church collectively, so far as it is maintained by the means peculiar to the church. Thus, if the church is seen to devise and use means for the express purpose of promoting the piety of its individual members, it may claim that piety as its own example before the world. This is the case in every Christian church, which first binds its members to a holy life by a solemn covenant, and then provides for their growth in grace, by regular and special meetings for worship, by the administration of the sacraments, by mutual watchfulness, by pastoral instruction and visitation, and by faithful discipline. These means of grace are the divinely-appointed methods of keeping piety alive in the individual breast, and manifesting its light in the blended radiance of a united profession.

(2.) The church has its instruction, also, to impart to the world. It not only encourages individual testimony and exhortation in all freedom, but it provides for uttering a united voice and for making an official declaration of the truth, and that too in circumstances more favorable to extensive results than could be secured by isolated efforts. Thus it erects a commodious house of worship in which not only may the members assemble for their personal edification, but where the impenitent may also be gathered to hear the Gospel. Next it provides a competent religious teacher to instruct the congregation, and to be as a watchman to give the alarm against every form of sin or error, and the pastor consequently stands up to deliver his message to the world, not in his own person merely, but in the name of God and the church. Then it embodies its views of the leading doctrines of the Gospel as taught in the word of God, in a creed or confession of faith, which it publishes to the world as its testimony to the truth. Furthermore, it looks after the welfare of the young, encouraging household consecration, that the church may grow with the family increase, and gathering the children into the Sabbath school, and providing for their instruction. And then it originates various special efforts by the pastor, officers and members for exploring the destitutions and supplying the religious wants of neighborhoods and communities, by bringing the Gospel into contact with the minds and hearts of the people. In these and similar ways, the church is a teacher of the world.

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

(3.) And so also the church has its forms of benevolent action. In addition to the private and unofficial acts of its members, the church is ever putting forth united effort to ameliorate the condition of mankind. For this purpose consultation is had, prayer is offered, the Bible is studied, that wisdom may be secured to direct and the Divine blessing to accompany appropriate effort. Gifts are brought to the altar, and by their aggregation large sums of money are raised for benevolent purposes. And when the good to be accomplished exceeds the ability of a single congregation of believers, the efforts of many congregations are united. Thus the church becomes the grand wheel in the machinery of beneficence, communicating motive-power to all the minor parts.

By these various individual and collective methods, the light of knowledge, of virtue and of happiness, is diffused through the world by the followers of Christ. They influence first of all single minds for spiritual purposes, aiming to purify the heart of every brother man, but at the same time operate also on a wider scale, and accomplish a collateral work of no small importance. Thus Christian influence is, in truth, the life of all the permanent and necessary institutions of the world. It enters the family and makes it the home of happiness, the nursery of virtue, the preparatory school for all the deeds of manhood. It diffuses itself throughout the civil State and becomes a spirit of liberty and yet of order, of obedience and yet of manliness, of loyalty and yet of independence; not indeed undertaking to use the State to provide directly for the religious training of the population, any more than it would use the church for civil purposes, but penetrating those who compose the State with a regard for justice, with reverence for God and with love to man, so that the State shall answer its end as a divine institution. It pervades social life also, and diffuses a spirit of sympathy and kindness, cultivates courtesy and all the minor morals, and imparts a higher tone to all human intercourse. And so, also, it originates specific movements and new institutions, such as may be temporarily needed to accomplish a particular work of progress or reform, or such as may afford a permanent supply to a perpetual human want; calling into existence committees and benevolent societies, hospitals and asylums, for pious and philanthropic purposes. The whole of modern civilization is, in truth, based on Christianity. So that Christ well said to his disciples, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Thus the influence of the followers of Christ extends far beyond the boundaries which we may be disposed at first to designate. Its rays penetrate the darkness in every direction, and are transmitted through numberless media, dimmed and refracted though they may occasionally be. That which in outward respects was once peculiar to the disciples of Christ, has now been adopted into the life of the world, so that by many its origin is quite forgotten, even as the bright sunbeam darting through the atmosphere and its obscuring vapors, reflected from house walls and fences, and making its way through a crusted window pane, or a chance crevice, shines at last in the dark underground cellar, seemingly unconnected with that glorious orb from which it emanated. But it is nevertheless true, that as the light of the natural world is derived from the sun, so the light of truth, holiness and joy on earth, shines from the disciples of Christ, of whom the Master himself said, "Ye are the light of the world."

In bringing this discourse to a conclusion, several thoughts connected with our subject claim our consideration.

(1.) We are presented with a valuable test of individual character. "Ye are the light of the world," was said of all the disciples of Christ. My hearer, do you profess to be one of his disciples? If so, how much of His light do you reflect? To what extent is the darkness of this world relieved by your presence? Has its ignorance, its sin, its misery been diminished by your action? You claim to have personal religion: what kind of a religion is it? Is it luminous with purity and love? Does Christ shine through you as a transparent medium upon this benighted earth? What part of this world, what town or city, for instance, what congregation, what neighborhood, what family, what single soul, even, has been made "light" by your conversion? Or does the darkness shut in around deep and dense as before? Remember, your chief duty is, and your conscious and abiding purpose must be, to shed as much of Christ's light as possible; and he has declared, that men do not "light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." If you are a child of God, he has bestowed his grace upon you, in order that you might in your measure resemble John the Baptist, of whom Jesus testified, that "he was a burning and a shining light." He was eminent in piety, faithful in reproving sin, earnest in warning the wicked, unwearied in preaching the truth, and willing even to die rather than withhold any portion of God's message to guilty men. Would you also illuminate the path which leads from time into eternity, along which such multitudes are thronging? then fear not to speak the truth and dare also to live it. Let your daily conduct, your earnest words and your persevering actions, bear a testimony for Christ and be a guide to wandering sinners. Let your light shine in every place, in every employment-not only on the Sabbath and in exercises of religious worship, but equally during the week, in your offices, stores and shops, in your business, politics and recreation. In everything show the difference between Christians and the world, and let your example instruct and attract the wicked by its contrast and not by its similarity to their own, never compromising with them nor consenting to withhold your testimony; for as Paul well inquires, "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness?"

(2.) We are reminded of the true mission of the church as a divine organization in each community. It is to be a spiritual sun, to enlighten the surrounding region, and to send its beams as far as possible into the world's darkness. It was for this end that the apostles, wherever they went, not only sought the conversion of individuals, but also founded churches. Churches have a strong illuminative power, and they answer the end of their creation only as they exert this power. A light-house is not erected to be a mere architectural exhibition, nor to relieve the sameness of the coast to the eye of the voyager that scans the horizon, nor to furnish a comfortable home for the keeper, but to shed light upon the perilous pathway of the mariner. And so a local church is organized not merely to erect a tasteful edifice, to sustain eloquent preaching and artistic singing, to furnish a pleasant Sabbath resort, or to provide a snug spiritual home for those already converted, but to be a moral light-house to guide tempest-tossed souls, who are in danger of making shipwreck, into the port of eternal safety. The church is to instruct, to reform, to sanctify, to bless the world about it-to take the lead in all onward movement; to march at the head of true reform; to conserve likewise all that is valuable in the past and transmit it to the future; to be a leaven in the midst of society; to exemplify Christian principle, and represent Christ himself in all the work of life, its business, its amusements, its politics, its learning, its social intercourse; in a word, to scatter rays of light in every direction and from every point. Have you never beheld the sun when it poured its beams like a flood of glory upon the ocean, and every separate drop seemed to reflect its rays and to be transformed into a drop of light? Or have you not seen it rise upon the land, when the ground was sheeted in snow, and the trees and shrubs were encased in ice, and when every snow crystal was a point of light and all nature was ablaze with radiance? So should a church of Christ, receiving the rays of the "Sun of Righteousness," reflect them to the eye of men and angels, from every several member, from each act of worship, from every deed of life. Let each church, then, judge itself by this standard, and inquire honestly, whether it is aiming to be a light in every possible way to the surrounding world, by creed, covenant and practice, by piety and philanthropy, by religious worship and secular life, by conservation of all good and reform of all evil, allowing no dark subjects upon which light is forbidden to shine, no dark places where sin and error may securely hide.

(3.) We learn what is the true source of hope for the world's reformation. It lies in the collective church of Christ as embracing all who are true saints. They are "the light of the world." It is not I who so term them, but the Master. This phrase reveals alike their earthly duty and destiny. Dark now is this world of sin, and for nearly sixty centuries has it been shrouded in densest gloom, relieved by only occasional rays of light, or illuminated faintly only in certain favored spots. Men have lived for themselves and forsaken God, and they have also hated one another. Hence idolatry, infidelity, war, slavery, superstition, intemperance, civil oppression, poverty, ignorance, tears, groans and blood. Hence that universal selfishness—restless, greedy, disappointed, ambitious, proud and earthly—which characterizes the race and makes it mad in its sin. But the light shall yet shine upon it, and the darkness will flee away. That light will come from the church of Christ. It is in vain to look to any other quarter ; for Christ, the fountain of light, will shine only through his people. The promises are made to the church alone. Nothing can take its place; no power of the State, no law of society, no fancied principle of progress, no organization of worldly reformers, no tendency of civilization, no march of armies, no university of philosophers, no school of poets, no corps of writers, no cabinet of statesmen. Christ is "the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," and the mind that would transmit his rays must be transparent with a divine purity. Hence a pure church is the hope of the world; for from the midst of such a church God will act with almighty power. "And many people shall go and say, Come ye and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob, and He will teach us of His ways and we will walk in His paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." The church is not to receive law from the world, but to give law to the world; not indeed by ecclesiastical enactment, as in the days of Papal supremacy, but by the truth which it shall proclaim and exemplify, and by the healthful action of its members as individual citizens in the State. We to the world, when the church is corrupt or backslidden; for then the salt loses its savor and the sun suffers an eclipse! How significant is the term which we apply to that sad period of nearly a thousand years during which the outward church was in a condition of gross corruption in doctrine and practice! We call those years of sin; "The Dark Ages," for a gloom overspread the entire world, and arts, science, philosophy, literature, liberty, all that we denominate civilization, came as near to extinction as did piety itself. Oh, if "the light that is in us be darkness, how great is that darkness !" If the church hide or quench its light, midnight overspreads the world. Let us labor, then, to secure a pure church, pure in doctrine, pure in morals, pure in the experience of the heart. It is not outward and worldly prosperity which makes a successful church. There is no spiritual light in wealth, numbers. architecture and music. These things never abounded more than in the "Dark Ages." But what glory streams from a church intelligent in understanding the truth, consistent in its exemplification. firm in its defence, zealous and self-denying in its propagation! a church that taking counsel of God only, plants itself on every moral subject in advance of the world, and in the end compels the world to respect the truth and its advocates, and to elevate civilization to the level of the Gospel. Of such an organization of believers it may be truly affirmed, that it "looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

(4.) Lastly, we obtain in the declaration of the text a full warrant for the operations of modern missions. If the question were asked. What is the object of missionary organizations? could a more simple or truthful answer be returned than this: Their object is, to make Christians the light of the world? There is no form of holy effort which harmonizes so perfectly with the doctrine of our Saviour as this. All others are in some degree restricted. They aim to emit but a portion of the light of the church, or to illuminate but a small part of earth. But nothing less than the illumination of the entire world is the object proposed by the friends of missions. They will not relax their efforts till every nation has been fully evangelized, till all false religions have been overthrown, till the tidings of salvation have been heard by every human ear, till "the dark places of the earth," which are now "full of the habitations of cruelty," shall be flooded with light, and become the abode of love and peace.

And the practical efficiency of the missionary cause is equal to the nobility of its design, for its facilities of action are unsurpassed. It operates in a threefold way. 1. It seeks, and by God's blessing accomplishes, the conversion of individuals from sin. Every such convert becomes a blazing torch in a region of darkness, bringing to bear upon the surrounding gloom the light of a holy character, of an earnest proclamation of the truth, and of benevolent deeds. 2. It organizes churches which become centres of holy influence. As soon as a few converts are made, they are formed into a Christian church, and thus enabled to diffuse a brighter and more permanent radiance by the methods peculiar to such an organism. And then, 3. Through the influence of Christian institutions, thus introduced, a leaven of improvement is deposited in the bosom of society, which works day and night, until the community is pervaded with new ideas, and old habits of evil are exchanged for customs in harmony with the Bible and with the highest civilization. Hence, while mere philosophy, commerce, and secular industry have never yet civilized a nation of barbarians. Christian missions, while seeking first of all the spiritual salvation of individual souls, have at the same time so humanized and refined a savage population as to transform it in one generation into a Christian and civilized people. How, then, can any friend of God or man withhold his cooperation from so beneficent a cause? It seeks the divine glory; it promotes human welfare; it is the pioneer of art, science, education, industry, morality and religion.

And here it is but just to add, that the text supplies the Society whose annual meeting is now in session with a special recommendation. The American Missionary Association aims to make Christians the light of the world more fully than previously exist. ing organizations. It not only declares with them, that "the field is the world," but it maintains that the full light of Christianity should be poured upon every part of the world, and should be reflected by every Christian and by every church. It distinctly wars upon all forms of impiety and inhumanity, making no compromises with sin on any subject, stripping all moral evils of any seeming Scriptural sanction, depriving them of ecclesiastical support and countenance, and dragging them forth into the light of Christian truth to become the world's abhorrence and to die amid universal execration. The practice of other organizations and the special sins and responsibilities of the American churches have induced it to bear a peculiarly emphatic testimony at home and abroad against the crime of slaveholding. It stands almost or quite solitary in its utter disfellowship of that sin, though such have been the convincing arguments of its advocates and such the contagion of its example, that other societies have been compelled to approximate to its principles and to follow, though but "afar off" in its path. And surely there was never a time when the Providence of God called more loudly upon Christians to rally around this Association and to give efficacy to its principles, than at the present. The church, which has so long declared its inability to see the necessity of taking such strong ground against slavery, may now read its duty by the flash of firearms and the conflagration of cities, as well as by the holy precepts of God's Word. If our national Missionary Boards, domestic and foreign, had assumed, thirty years since, the position which this Society has occupied during the ten years of its existence, slavery would to-day have been a weak and expiring institution, and bleeding, imperilled Kansas, would have been the peaceful abode of freedom. Late as is the hour, let the church now retrace its steps and pour in the light upon the South, and, after a brief, though perhaps a severe struggle, the victory will declare itself for pure and undefiled religion. Let every new church planted on home missionary ground be inflexibly opposed to slaveholding;

let faithful ministers proclaim the Gospel of freedom, not only at the North, but wherever a door of entrance is opened at the South; let our religious literature assume the true anti-slavery tone, and the work of emancipation will not linger unaccomplished. We must conduct missionary operations upon this principle to make them efficient, and to save them from the world's contempt. Christianity itself has educated men to demand practical proofs of goodness. Christ said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Missions will be judged not by an invisible experience supposed to have been wrought in the minds of converts under the influence of theological doctrines, but by their outward conduct. Missionaries will command respect and confidence for themselves and their labors, not by their success in revolutionizing the opinions, but the practice of those to whom they go. If the light of practical holiness does not shine from the missionchurches, the light of theology will but dimly illuminate the world. Love to God and love to man must be equally exhibited; and the same Gospel that dethrones idolatry must ring the deathknell of oppression also. Whatever crimes society may allow and even the law may sanction, the church at least must be pure, in its teaching, in its example, in its discipline. The unfaithfulness of the church and its benevolent agencies in years past, has filled our land with corruption, in consequence of which the nation is in danger of destruction by the judgment of the Almighty, while Christianity has been disgraced before the world. For ten years has the American Missionary Association struggled, through much opposition and contempt, to elevate missions to the level of the Gospel, and to make them accomplish their whole work. God has been with us to bless at home and abroad, to give increasing favor with the churches, to multiply funds and laborers, to disseminate our peculiar principles, to save the souls of the perishing, and to accomplish something for the downfall of slavery in our own land and throughout the world. May success continue to attend our efforts, until, attracted by our glorious example, all the churches of the Lord Jesus, imbued with the spirit of the text, shall adopt similar views and present a more perfect practice, and until, with reference to the inhabitants of the whole world, it shall be said, "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great ight: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." Amen.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

American Missionary Association,

AND THE

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING,

HELD AT

MANSFIELD, OHIO, OCTOBER 14th and 15th, 1857.

TOGETHER WITH A

List of Life Members.

WYAND A WOOL

NEW-YORK:

PUBLISHED BY THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Office, 48 Beekman Street. 1857.

JOHN A. GRAY'S FIRE-PROOF PRINTING OFFICE, 16 and 18 Jacob Street, N. Y.

LIFE MEMBERS

ERMINIST THE

OF THE

American Missionary Association.

*Abbott, Moses, Woodville, N. H.
Abbott, Dea. Zebadiah, Winchester, Mass.
Adair, Mrs. F. B. Osawatome, Kansas.
Adair, Rev. S. L. Osawatome, Kansas.
Adams, Alanson, Amber, N. Y.
Adams, Mrs. Chauncey, Galesburgh, III.
Adams, Oryros, West Medway, Mass.
Adams, Tr. Daniel, Keene, N. H.
Adams, Mrv. Esra, Gilsum, N. H.
Adams, Horv. Peoria, III.
Adams, Horv. Peoria, III. Adams, Jrus, West mcdway, mass.
Adams, Dr. Daniel, Keene, N. H.
Adams, Rev. Ezra, Gilsum, N. H.
Adams, Henry, Peoria, III.
Adams, Dea. Henry, New Ipswich, N. H.
Adams, Dea. Hiton, Weilington, O.
Adams, Simeon P., Franklin, Mass.
Adams, Simeon P., Franklin, Mass.
Adams, Mrs. Susan, Grafton, Mass.
Adams, Mrs. Garoline B. Windham, Vi.
Adams, Mrs. Garoline B. Windham, Vi.
Adams, William, Medway, Mass.
Alien, Ams. Lucy G., Cambridgeport, Mass.
Alien, Ams. Lucy G., Cambridgeport, Mass.
Alien, Ams. Lucy G., Cambridgeport, Mass.
Alien, Ams. Edge, H. Selworth, O.
Alien, George N., South Amherst, Mass.
Alien, Mrs. Esther H., South Amherst, Mass.
Alien, Mrs. Elizabeth B., Bangor, Me.
Alien, Mrs. Bilzabeth B., Bangor, Me.
Alien, Mrs. Bilzabeth B., Bangor, Me.
Alien, Mrs. Weithinster, Mass.
Alivord, Rev. Alanson, Le Claire, Iowa.
Alvord, Mrs. Frances L., Le Claire, Iowa.
Alword, Rev. Alanson, Le Claire, Iowa.
Alword, Mrs. Frances L., Le Claire, Iowa.
Amos, Rev. Marcu, Westminster, Mass.
Amderson, Rev. Charless, Sconett, N. Y.
Amsden, Mrs. Sarah, South Deerfield, Mass.
Anderson, Rev. Charless, Sconett, N. Y.
Anderson, Rev. Charl

Armes, Rev. H. P. Norwich Town, Conn. Armes, Rev. Josiah L. Mason, Center, N. H. Arnold, Charles W., Arcade, N. Y. Arnold, Rev. F. L., Rome, O. Arnold, Gideon, Arade, N. Y. Ashley, Rev. Samuel S., Northborough, Mass. Attins, Rev. L. S., Madison, O. Atwater, Rev. Edward E., Salmon Falls, N. H. Austin, Alvin, Wheston, Ill. Austin, Rev. F. D., Tolland, Mass. Austin, Rev. D. K., South Norwalk, Conn. Avery, Rev. Charles, Pittsburgh, Pa. Avery, Rev. Charles, Pittsburgh, Pa. Avery, Rev. John T., Cleveland, O. Avery, Nathan P., Greenville, Conn. Ayer, Rev. Charles, L., Central Village, Conn. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Westfield, Gom. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Westfield, Gom. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Westfield, Gom. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Wastledd, Gom. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Wastledd, Gom. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Westfield, Gom. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Wastledd, Gom. Ayer, Rev. Joseph, Westfield, Gom. Bacon, Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn. Bacon, Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn. Bacon, Mars. Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn. Bagiey, John, Georgetown, Mass. Balley, Dana, Townsend, Vt. Ballo, Mrs. Mary, Marion, O. Bacher, Galvin, West Nassau, N. Y. Balch, Honry B., Meadville, Pa. Baldon, Dea. Jonathas, Hawinton, Gom. Baldwin, Rev. Curtis C., North Ridgewille, O. Baldwin, Rev. Curtis C., North Ridgewille, O. Ballerd, Mary, Guincey, Ill. Bancroft, Mrs. Anna M., Granville, O. Ballerd, Mary, Guincey, Ill. Bancroft, Mrs. Anna M., Granville, O. Barber, Mrs. Nancy L., Bellevue, O. Barber, Chester H., Torringford, Conn. Barber, Miss Mary E., West Meriden, Conn. Barber, Miss Mary E., West Meriden, Conn. Barber, Miss Mary E., West Meriden, Conn. Barber, Oliver, She Bardwell, Rev. Horatio, Oxford, Mass. Barker, Rev. Davis R., Mercer, Pa. Barnard, Rev. Alonzo, Belle Prairie, Min. Ter. Barnsrd, Rev. Alonso, Belle Prairie, Min. Barns, Mrs. Elmira, Troy, N. J. Barnes, Blakeslee, New-York City. Barness, Marcus, Keeseville, N. Y. Barness, Marcus, Keeseville, N. Y. Barness, Da. Sewall, Westminster, Mass. Barrett, Elizabeth, Springfield, Vt. Barnows, Henry M, Norton, Mass. Bartle, Rev. William T. Wethersfield, Ill. Bartlett, Rev. E. N. Olivet, Mich. Bartlett, Rev. E. N. Olivet, Mich. Bartlett, Rev. John, Avon, Conn. Bartlett, Rev. John, Avon, Conn. Bartlett, Summer, Brookfield, Mass. Bassett, Rev. Archibald, Walton, N. Y. Bassett, Rev. Archibald, Walton, N. Y. Bateham, Mrs. Josephine C., Columbus, O. Batchelder, C. B., Oberlin, O. Batchelder, C. B., Oberlin, O. Bates, Abner, Syracuse, N. Y.

Bates, Rev. Henry, Almont, Mich.
Bates, Rev. Henry, Almont, Mich.
Bates, Rev. Merrit, Gloversville, N. Y.
Bates, Miss Naomi, Waitsfield, Vt.
Bates, Dea. Samuel, Brookfield, Vt.
Bates, Dea. Samuel, Brookfield, Vt.
Baten, Rev. Henry, Southampton, Mass.
Beach, Rev. Aaron O., Wolcott, Conn.
Beach, Rev. Aaron O., Wolcott, Conn.
Beach, Mrs. Sarah G., Kingsborough, N. Y.
Beadel, Joseph B., West Merdden, Onn.
Beaman, Mrs. Eliza M., Princeton, Mass.
Beachdley, Rev. William, Lowell, Ill.
Beatty, Miss Betsey, New Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatty, Oaroline, New Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatty, Romes, New York City.
Beatty, Romes, New York City.
Beatty, Romes, New York City.
Beatty, Romes, New York City. Beatty, Robert, New Hamburgh, Pa.
Beckwith, Barzillai, Great Barrington, Mass.
Beecher, Alfred, Oberlin, O
Beecher, Mrs. Sarah, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mrs. Ward, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Beecher, Mrs. Matilda, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mrs. Matilda, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mrs. William H., Reading, Mass.
Beers, Lewis, Jr., Stratford, Conn.
Beers, Rev. Henry N., Westborough, Mass.
Belcher, Dea. A. P., Berkshire, N. Y.
Beldon, Per. Henry Encoling, N. Y. Beeris, Rev. Henry N., westborough, mass.
Belcher, Dea. A. P., Berkshire, N. Y.
Belden, Rev. Henry, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Belden, Henry A., Lennox, Mass.
Belden, Mary E., Lennox, Mass.
Bellows, Lyman, Worcester, Mass.
Bemis, Aaron, Windham, Vt.
Bemis, Raben, Winchendon, Mass.
Bemis, Aaron, Windham, Vt.
Benson, Rev. Lewis, Aurora, Ill.
Benson, Rev. Henry, Fullon, N. Y.
Benson, Mrs. Ruth, Fulton, N. Y.
Benson, Mrs. Ruth, Fulton, N. Y.
Benton, Rev. Andrew, Richland City, Wis.
Benton, Ell, Lodi, Mich.
Benton, Mrs. Melissa, Richland City, Wis.
Benton, Mrs. Melissa, Richland City, Wis.
Benton, Mrs. Mary P., San Francisco, CalBenton, Mrs. Mary P., San Francisco, CalBiglow, Edward B., Grafton, Mass.
Bingham, Dea. Asahel, West Ocrowall, Vt.
Blingham, Errs, Hanover, Conn.
Blingham, Rev. Joel S., Westfield, Mass.
Birge, Allen, Harwinton, Conn. Birge, Allen, Harwinton, Conn. Birge, David, Harwinton, Conn. Birge, Allen, Harwinton, Conn.
Birge, David, Harwinton, Conn.
Birge, George H., Torringford, Conn.
Birge, Luther, Farmington, Ill.
Birge, Nathaniel, Torringford, Conn.
Biscoe, Rev. Thomas O., Graffon, Mass.
Bishop, Harrison, Warren, Mass.
Bishop, Harrison, Warren, Mass.
Bishop, Harrison, Warren, Mass.
Bishop, Harrison, Warren, Mass.
Biako, Luther, Shawangunk, N. Y.
Biackmer, Luther, Shawangunk, N. Y.
Biackmer, Mrs. Julia, Shawangunk, N. Y.
Biako, Harry, Winchester Centre, Conn.
Biake, Harry, Winchester Centre, Conn.
Biake, Harry, Winchester Centre, Conn.
Biake, Harry, Winchester Centre, Conn.
Biakeley, Dan, Pawlet, Vt.
Biakeley, Mio, Terrysville, Conn.
Biakocky, Mio, Terrysville, Conn.
Biakneard, Mio, Terrysville, Conn.
Bianchard, Rev. Jona, D.D., Galesburgh, Ill.

Blanchard, Des. Joshus, Andover, Mass. Biss, Miss Belles, Fort Covington, N. Y. Bliss, Levi A., East Woodstook, Conn. Bilss, Samuel, East Woodstook, Conn. Bilss, Samuel, East Woodstook, Conn. Boardman, Stephen C., Norwich, Yt. Bodwell, Rev. Levis, Topeka, Kansas, Boles, Ell, Wellington, O. Boles, Milton, Broad Brook, Conn. Bond, Rev. Alvan, D. D., Norwich, Conn. Bond, Sames A., Lafayette, Pa. Bond, Joseph, Arcade, N. Y. Bonner, Eldes John, Yellow Springs, O. Booth, Berin, Springfield, Mass. Booth, Mrs. Edwin, Springfield, Mass. Booth, Hervey M., Roxbury, Conn. Bostwick, Harrison, Olisco, N. Y. Booth, Hervey M., Roxbury, Conn.
Bostwick, Harrison, Oilseo, N. Y.
*Bostwick, James G., Otlseo, N. Y.
*Bostwick, James G., Otlseo, N. Y.
*Bostwick, James Henry, Otlseo, N. Y.
Bostwick, Mrs. Mory Ann, Oilseo, N. Y.
Bostwick, Mrs. Mary Ann, Oilseo, N. Y.
Bostwick, Mrs. Maney, Oilseo, N. Y.
Bostwick, Mrs. Maney, Oilseo, N. Y.
Boworth, William, Champiain, N. Y.
Boworth, William, Champiain, N. Y.
Boughton, Renben R., West Nassau, N. Y.
Boughton, Renben R., West Nassau, N. Y.
Bouckil, Des. John, Towasend, Mass.
Bowen, A. C., Mallet Creek, O. Boughton, John F., Nassau, N. Y.
Boutell, Des. John, Townsend, Mass.
Bown, A. Q., Mallet Creek, O.
Bowen, Gleb A., York, O.
Bowen, Gleb A., York, O.
Bowen, Oaleb A., York, O.
Bowen, Oaleb A., York, O.
Bowen, Gleb A., York, O.
Bowen, Berr, Mailet Ureek, O.
Boyd, Miss Louiss J., Greigwrille, N. Y.
Boye, Robert, Georgetown, Mass.
Boynton, Thomas, J., Greigwrille, N. Y.
Boyes, Robert, Georgetown, Mass.
Boynton, Thomas, Jr., Dracut, Mass.
Boynton, Thomas, Jr., Dracut, Mass.
Bradler, Zaimon T., Yandeusenville, Mass.
Bradler, Zaimon T., Yandeusenville, Mass.
Bradler, Zaimon T., Yandeusenville, Mass.
Branch, Rev. Edwin, Oakwood, Milch.
Bralnard, Adeliss, St. Albans, Vt.
Brainerd, Adeliss, St. Albans, Vt.
Brainerd, Mrs. Fidelis B., St. Albans, Vt.
Brainerd, Mrs. Fidelis B., St. Albans, Vt.
Brainerd, Lawrence, Jr., St. Albans, Vt.
Brewer, Rev. Josiah, Stockbridge, Mass.
Brewer, Rev. Josiah, Stockbridge, Mass.
Brewer, Rawrand, Esq., Buffalo, N. Y.
Brewer, Rev. Josiah, Stockbridge, Mass.
Brewer, Rawland, B., Washington, D. C.
Brewer, Rev. Josiah, Stockbridge, Mass.
Brewster, Albert, Le Roy, N. Y.
Brewster, Hon, Henry, Le Roy, N. Y.
Brewster, Hon, Mass, Massan, N. Y.
Brewster, Hon, Henry, Le Roy, N. Y.
Brewster, Hon, Henry,

*Brown, James, Wayne, Wis. Brown, John K., Stoneham, Mass. Brown, Modena Lovinia, Sag Harbor, N. Y. Brown, John A., Stohenam, Mass.
Brown, Modena Levinia, Sag Harbor, N. Y.
Brown, O. M., Utab, O.
Brown, Rev. Silas C., Bristol Center, N. Y.
Brown, Mrev. Silas C., Bristol Center, N. Y.
Brown, Mrs. Mary M., Newark, N. J.
Brown, Mrs. Mary M., Newark, N. J.
Brown, Uriah, Agusta, N. Y.
Browning, Eliza A., North Stohington, Conn.
Brownson, Harry, Milford, Conn.
Brownson, Harry, Milford, Conn.
Bryant, Abijah, Stoneham, Mass.
Bucklin, Rev. S. F., Mariborough, Mass.
Bullard, Nathan, Medway, Mass.
Bullard, Nathan, Medway, Mass.
Bullard, Nathan, Medway, Mass.
Burnap, Hervey, Windham, V.
Burnap, Hervey, Windham, V.
Burnan, Dexter S., Milford, N. H.
Burnel, Strong, Davenport, Iowa. Burnam, Dexter S., Milford, N. H. Burnell, Strong, Davenport, Iowa. Burns, Daniel, Milford, N. H. Burns, George W., Milford, N. H. Burrttt, Elibu, New Britain, Conn. Burr, Milo, Torringford, Conn. Burr, Rufus, Burryille, Conn. Burr, Milo, Torringford, Conn.
Burr, Burs, Burrville, Conn.
Burton, Albert, Mendon, Ill.
Burton, Daniel P., Plymouth, Ill.
Burton, Daniel P., Plymouth, Ill.
Burton, Daniel W., Mendi Mission.
Burton, Mrs. Elizabeth D., Mendi Mission.
Burton, Mrs. Elizabeth D., Mendi Mission.
Burton, Mrs. Elizabeth D., Mendi Mission.
Bush, Rev. Charles P., Beloit, Wis.
Bush, Dea. Lyman, North Brookfield, Mnss.
Bushnell, Rev. George, Worcester, Mass.
Bushnell, Rev. George, Worcester, Mass.
Bushnell, Rev. Horace, Cincinnati, O.
Bushnell, Susan, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Bushnell, William F., Independence, O.
Butler, Mrs. Elizabeth S., Newburyport, Mass.
Butler, Mrs. Elizabeth S., Newburyport, Mass.
Butler, Mrs. Elizabeth S., Newburyport, Mass.
Butler, Rev. Jeremiah, Riga, N. Y.
Butterfield, William, Francistown, N. H.

*Buttolph, J. P., Essex, Vt.
Cable, Rev. Jonathan, Lee, O.
Calbuon, Rev. Henry, O., Coshocton, O.
Camp, Mrs. Anna, Durham, Conn.
Camp, Mrs. Singheth, Galesburgh, Ill.
Campbell, Rev. Samuel B., Felicity, O. Camp. Mrs. Sophia, Newington, Conn. Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Galecburgh, Ill. Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Galecburgh, Ill. Campbell, Rev. James B., Felicity, O. Campbell, Rev. James B., Felicity, O. Campbell, Rev. Samuel, Mrs. Carpetter, Foxborough, Mass. Carpetter, Foxborough, Mass. Carpetter, Felio, Ohicago, Ill. Carpetter, Fiblio, Ohicago, Ill. Carpetter, Mrs. Elizabeth M., Warren, Mass. Carpetter, Mrs. Elizabeth M., Warren, Mrs. Carpetter, Mrs. Elizabeth M., Warren, Mrs. Carpetter, Mrs. Linion Valley, N. Y. Caver, Mrs. Amanda, Union Valley, N. Y. Caver, Mrs. Amanda, Union Valley, N. Y. Case, O. B., Andover, O. Caswell, Mrs. Anna T. Cattin, Frederick S., Harwinton, Conn. Chawlin, Frederick S., Harwinton, Conn. Chamberlain, Ephraim H., Southborough, Mass. Chamberlain, Rev. Dinain H., Southborough, Mass. Chapin, Phenea, Vandeuzenville, Mass. Chapin, Phineas, Vandeuzenville, Mass. Chapin, Phineas, Vandeuzenville, Mass. Chapman, Theodore W., Belchertown, Mass. Chase, Rev. Benjamin O., South Attleboro, Mass. Chase, Rev. Benjamin O., South Attleboro, Mass. Chase, Lange, Tappan, Haverhill, Mass. Chaffield, Mrs. Sarah D., Painted Post, N. Y. Chatfield, Mrs. Sarah D., Painted Post, N. Y.

Chatfield, Charles J., Jr., Painted Post, N. Y.
Chatfield, Francis A., Painted Post, N. Y.
Chatfield, Ida E., Painted Post, N. Y.
Chatfield, Ida E., Painted Post, N. Y.
Cheney, John, Raading, Mass.
Cheney, Nathanial, Esq., Townsend, Yt.
Cheney, Wallace, Westminster, Mass.
Chidester, Betsey, Canfield, O.
Chidester, Sybil, Canfield, O.
Chidester, Sybil, Canfield, O.
Chidid, Miss Julia A., Greigsville, N. Y.
Childs, Mrs. A. W., Canastota, N. Y.
Childs, Des. William, East Woodstock, Conn.
Chipman, Samuel, Waitsfeld, Yt.
Churchill, Dea. Chas, East Bridgewater, Mass.
Clasin, Mrs. Mary B., Newtonville, Mass.
Clasin, Mrs. Mary B., Newtonville, Mass.
Clasin, Mrs. Mary B., Newtonville, Mass.
Clark, Rev. Luther, Wauwatosa, Wis.
Clark, Rev. Luther, Wauwatosa, Wis.
Clark, John, Westfield, Penn.
Clark, John, Westfield, Penn.
Clark, Rev. Josiabi, East Hampton, Mass.
Clark, Rev. Josiabi, East Hampton, Mass.
Clark, Nathanolel, Medway, Mass.
Clark, Nathanolel, Medway, Mass.
Clark, Thomas, A. doth Derfield, Mass.
Clark, Thomas, A. doth Derfield, Mass.
Clark, Rev. James A., Southrick, Mass.
Clark, Rev. James A., Southrick, Mass.
Clark, Miss Janet, Fulton, N. Y.
Clary, Mrs. A lima A., Deerfield, Mass.
Cleveland, Prof. Charles D., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Prof. Obaries D., Philadelphia, Pa. Cleaveland, Rev. James B., South Egremont, Mass.
Cleveland, Prof. Charles D., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Mrs. Alison Nisbit, Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Miss Alison Nisbit, Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Miss Alison N., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Miss Alison N., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleves, Joshua, Elmira, N. Y.
Clifford, Miss Elizabeth, Exreter, N. H.
Coan, Mrs. Jane L., Chelsea, Mass.
Coan, W. L., Chelsea, Mass.
Coates, Benjamin P., Davenport, Iowa.
Cobb, Rev. Nehemiah, Strykersyille, N. Y.
Cobb, Rev. Nehemiah, Strykersyille, N. Y.
Cochran, Bev. Samuel D., Princeton, Ill. Coates, Benjamin F., Davenport, Iowa. Cobb, Rev. Nehemiah, Strykersville, N. Y. Cobb, Rev. Nehemiah, Strykersville, N. Y. Cobb, Rev. Nehemiah, Strykersville, N. Y. Cochran, Rev. Samuel D., Princeton, Ill. Cochran, Rev. Samuel D., Princeton, Ill. Cochran, Rev. W., Baraboo, Wis. Coe, John, Beacon Hill, Conn. Coe, Orrin, Oberlin, O. Coffin, George S., Boston, Mass. Coffin, George S., Boston, Mass. Coffin, George S., Boston, Mass. Coffin, Levi H., Ludlow, Vt. Coffin, Mrs. Matjida H., Ludlow, Vt. Coffin, Sliss, Rindge, N. H. Cooker, John P., Georgetown, Mass. Colby, Charles A., Lawrence, Mass. Collins, Frederic, Quincy, Ill. Colton, Smily H., Galesburgh, Ill. Colton, Smily H., Galesburgh, Ill. Colton, Smily H., Galesburgh, Ill. Collings, Rev. Elam J., Globe Village, R. I. Comings, Andrew, East Berkshire, V. Comings, Beujamia, Greensborough, Vt. Comings, Beujamia, Greensborough, Vt. Comstock, Miss Fanny A., Le Roy, N. Y. Constock, Miss Fanny A., Le Roy, N. Y. Constock, Miss Fanny A., Le Roy, N. Y. Constock, Miss Fanny A., Le Roy, N. Y. Conkin, Mrs. Almira, Freeport, Mc. Conklin, Mrs. Almira, Freeport, Mc. Conklin, Mrs. Conkerntine, Lewiston Falls, Mc. Cook, Mrs. Elizabeth A., Half-Day, Ill. Cook, Mrs. Elizabeth A., Half-Day, Ill. Cook, Mrs. Emily H., Burlington, Vt. Cook, Dea, Lasac, Hanover, Mass. Cook, Mrs. Elizabeth A., Half-Day, Ill. Cook, Marietts, Plymouth, Ill. Cook, Rev. Philos G., Ludlowville, N. Y. Coor, Dea, Lasac, Hanover, Mass. Cooky, Mrs. Royanna B., Gloversville, N. Y. Corvin, Mrs. Royanna B., Gloversville, N. Y. Cottine, Rev. N. P., Plymouth, Ill. Cooker, Rev. N. P., Plymouth, Ill. Cowdrey, Moses, Harland, Conn.

Cowdery, Mrs. Zeruab, Hartland, Conn. Cowl, Rev. John, Pittsburg, Pa. Cowles, Ebenezer, Ottaco, N. Y. Cowles, Rev. Henry, Oberlin, O. Cowles, Samuel Hooker, Farmington, Conn. Cowles, Mrs. Timothy, Farmington, Com. Cowles, Watter C., Buffalo, N. Y. Coy, Benjamin, Livonia, N. Y. Cowies, Walter C., Baffalo, N. Y.
Coy, Benjamin, Livonia, N. Y.
Craig, Rev. David, New Athens, O.
Craig, Rev. James, Hamburg, Germany.
Crane, Hiram, Elmira, N. Y.
Crittenden, Richard, Andover, Mass.
Crosby, Abel, Milford, N. H.
Crosby, Frederick, Milford, N. H.
Crosby, Frederick, Milford, N. H.
Crosby, Frederick, Milford, N. H.
Crosby, Pea. Judah, Lowell, Mass.
Cross, Rev. German, Chickville, N. Y.
Crossman, Rev. Edward N., West Haven, Conn.
Crothers, Rev. Samuel, Gheville, N. Y.
Crossman, Rev. Edward N., West Haven, Conn.
Crothers, Rev. Samuel, Greenfield, O.
Culver, Howard Z., Chicago, Ill.
Cummins, Rev. Cyrus, Jamestown, O.
Cunningham, Rev. John, Gainesville, N. Y.
Curtis, Jonathan, South Woodsteck, Conn.
Curtis, Mrs. William, West Brookfield, Mass.
Cutter, Rev. Ebenezer, Worcester, Mass.
Cutter, Rev. Euchen, Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Asa, Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Nashan H., Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Nashan H., Westminster, Mass.
Dale, Mrs. Joanna, Albany, N. Y.
Daizell, David, South Egremont, Mass.
Damer, Mary, Emmettaburg, Md.
Damon, Thomas, Westminster, Mass. Damon, Thomas, Westminster, Mass. Damond, Rev. Elijah, Grafton, Mass. Damond, Rev. Elijah, Gratton, Mass. Dana, Rev. Gideon, Strongsville, O. Dana, Mrs. Hannah C., Strongsville, O. Danforth, Timothy, Millord, N. H. Danlels, Ebert H., Oxford, Mass. Danlels, George F., Oxford, Mass. Danlels, Mrs. Lorissa, Oberlin, O. Darling, Joshua H., Warsaw, N. Y. Darrow, Bela, Otisco, N. Y.
Darrow, Leavitt, Plymouth Hollow, Conn. Darrow, Leavitt, Plymouth Hollow, Conn.
Davis, Charles, Worcester, Mass.
Davis, John, Methuen, Mass.
Davis, Homas C., West Winsted, Conn.
Davis, Thomas C., West Winsted, Conn.
Davis, William W., Boxboro', Mass.
Davis, Woodbury, Esq., Beifast, Me.
Dayton, Mrs. Henrietts M., Hargersfield, N. Y. Dayton, Mrs. Henrietta M., Hargersfield, N. Dean, George E., Mount Vernog, N. H. Dean, Silas, Stoneham, Mass. De Berard, Mrs. Hepsabeth, Racine, Wis. De Groff, Jacob, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Demling, Mrs. Catharine, Farmington, Conn. Demling, Catharine, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Mrs. Catharine, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Chauncey, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Chauncey, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Frederick, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Frederick, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Sussan A., Farmington, Conn. Deming, Sasmuel, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Sasmuel, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Canles S., Lyndon, Ill. De Sellen, Jacob N., New Richmond, O. De Sellen, Rev. John L., Port Homer, O. De Sellem, Rev. John L., Port Homer, O. De Sellem, Mrs. Nancy W., Port Homer, O. De Sellem, Howard Chase, Port Homer, O. De Sellem A. G., Port Homer, O. De Wey, Robert, Olisco, N. Y. De Witt, Rev. Luke, Lee, O. Dewey, Robert, Olisco, N. Y. De Witt, Rev. Luke, Lee, O. Dickey, Mrs. Rachel, Mansfield, O. Dickey, Mrs. Rachel, Mansfield, O. Dickey, Mrs. Eleanor, Bloomingburg, O. Dickey, Mrs. Lies, South Amherst, Mass. Dickinson, Mrs. Abigsil, Hudeon, O. Dickinson, Mrs. Abigsil, Hudeon, O. Dickinson, Mrs. Abigsil, Hudeon, O. Dickinson, Rev. N. S., Chatham, Mass. Dickinson, Rev. N. S., Chatham, Mass. Dickinson, Rev. N. S., Chatham, Mass. Dickinson, Richard, Wethersfield, Ill. Dickinson, Mrs. Abigsil, Hudeon, O. Dickon, Mrs. Otherson, Mrs. Abigsil, Hudeon, O. Dickinson, Mrs.

Dodge, Mrs. Ann S., Harvard, Mass. Dodge, Rev. Benjamin, Benton, Me. Dodge, Rev. John, Harvard, Mass. Dodge, Lewis W., Grafton, Mass. Donnell, Samuel, Sand Creek, Ind. Douncil, Samuel, Sand Creek, Ind.
Doolittie, Sphraim H., North East, Pa.
Douglass, Renry, Aurora, Ill.
Dov. Ball, Samuel, Sand Creek, Ind.
Dov. Dov. Dov. Ball, N. Y.
Dov. John, Andever, Mass.
Dov. Doulel, Ashford, N. Y.
Downs, Charles M., Salmon Falls, N. H.
Downs, Rev. Henry, Norridgewock, Me.
Downs, Dea. Timothy F., Fitchburgh, Mass.
Dowse, Benjamin, Sherburne, Mass.
Dowse, Benjamin, Sherburne, Mass.
Dowse, Nathaniel, Sherburne, Mass.
Drake, Rev. A. J., Oswego, Ill.
Drennan, Rebecca R., Mansfeld, O.
Drennan, Rebecca R., Mansfeld, O.
Dresser, Rev. Amos, Orwel, O. Drennan, Rebecca R., Mansfield, O. Dresser, Rev. Amos, Orrell, O. Drew, Marina, Howell, Mich. Drew, Zebulon M., Howell, Mich. Drury, Joseph B., Gardner, Mass. Drury, Samuel F., Olivet, Mich. Dadley, Charles Augustus, Champlain, N. Y. Dudley, Gharles Augustus, Champlain, N. Y. Dudley, Hiram, Champlain, N. Y. Dudley, J. Hervey, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dudley, J. Hervey, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Duncan, Charles, North Brookfield, Mass. Duncan, Timothy M., North Brookfield, Mass. Duncan, Timothy M., North Brookfield, Mass. Duncan, Wm., Jr., North Brookfield, Mass. Dunham, Rev. Isaac, Duxbury, Mass. Dunning, Rev. Homer N., Gloversville, N. Y. Dunning, Rev. Homer N., Gloversville, N. Durand, William, Torringford, Conn. Dutcher, Dea. L. L., St. Albans, Vt. Dyer, Benjamin, Providence, R. I. Dyer, Dea. Randall, Chatham, O. Eager, Mrs. Mary, Woburn, Mass. Eager, Mrs. Sally, South Lancaster, Mass. Eager, Mrs. Sally, South Lancaster, Mass. Eastman, Charles, South Hadley, Mass. Eaton, Miss Elizabeth, Cambridge, Mass. Eaton, Dr. J. S., Bristol, N. H. Eastman, Unaries, south Hastiley, Sames.
Easton, Miss Elizabeth, Cambridge, Mass.
Easton, Dr. J. S., Beistol, N. H.
*Easton, Rebecca.
Easton, Miss Susan, Framingham, Mass.
Ebaugh, Rev. John S., New York City.
Eddy, Rev. Zacharlah, Birningham, Unass.
Ebaugh, Rev. John S., New York City.
Eddy, Rev. Zacharlah, Birningham, O.
Edwards, Rev. Joseph, Greenwich Station, O.
Edwards, Rev. Joseph, Greenwich Station, O.
Edwards, Rev. Joseph, Greenwich Station, O.
Egglestoh, Rev. Nathaniel H., Madison, Wis.
Ediott, Isase, Saine, Mich.
Ediott

Pessenden, Rev. J. P., South Bridgeton, Mc. Field, Rev. Geo. W. Brewer, Mc. Field, Rev. Levi A., Marborough, Mass. Field, Rev. Levi A., Marborough, Mass. Field, Mrs. Nancy M., Marborough, Mass. Finch, Rev. H. W., Whitehall, N. Y. Finney, Mrs. Elizabeth A., Oberlin, O. Fish, Henry Hudson, Fall River Mass. Fisher, Rov. Caleb E., Andover, Mass. Fisher, Ray H., Andover, Mass. Fisher, Danlel, Francistown, N. H. Fisher, Rev. George E. North Amberst, Mass. Fisher, Mass. George E. North Amberst, Mass. Fisher, Fancie, Franciscown, N., Fisher, Rev. George E., North Amherst, Mass. Fisher, Milton M., Medway, Mass. Fisher, Moses, Francistown, N. H. Fisher, Walter H., Franklin, Mass. Fisher, Walter H., Franklin, Mass. Fisk, William, Cleveland, O. Fiske, Rev. F. A., Ashburnham, Mass. Fitch, James M., Oberlin, O. Fitch, Mrs. Jame E., Oberlin, O. Fitch, Mrs. Joseph D., Willmamtic. Conn. Flags, Newton, Quinoy, III. Fletcher, Francis H., New York City. Fletcher, Francis H., New York City.
Fletcher, Rev. James, Danvers, Mass.
Fobes, Jabes, Lindenville, O.
Folsom, Rev. Geo. De Forest, Springfield, Mass.
Follett, Mrs. Jane O., Croton, O.
Folts, Mrs. Louisa L., Burlington, Wis.
Foot, Des. Abram, West Cornwall, Vt.
Forbes, E. T. Westborough, Mass.
Fore, Samuel, Medway, Mass.
Ford, Kibridge G., North Abligton, Mass.
Ford, Oyrus, East Clevelland, O.
Ford, Des. James N., Abligton, Mass.
Ford, Mrs. Rhods, Hanover, Mass.
Ford, Mrs. Rhods, Hanover, Mass.
Foster, Aaron, Dryden, N. Y. Ford, Mrs. Rhods, Hanover, Mass.
Foster, Aaron, Dryden, N. Y.
Foster, Rev. Aaron, East Claremont, Mass.
Foster, Rev. Aaron, East Claremont, Mass.
Foster, Rev. Androw B., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Bradford P., Genesee, Mich.
Foster, Daniel, Templeton, Mass.
Foster, Daniel, Templeton, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, Thenry, Ciliton Springs, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Irene C., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Mrs. Irene C., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Mrs. Irene C., Petersham, Mass. Poster, George, andover, Mass.
Foster, Dr. Henry, Cilfron Springs, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Irene O., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Isaac P., Honesdale, Penn.
Foster, Rev. Lemnel, Atlanta, III.
Foster, Mrs. Lydia C., Atlanta, III.
Foster, Mrs. Georgiette, Andover, Mass.
Foster, Samuel, Worester, Mass.
Foster, Ramel, Worester, Mass.
Foster, Rev. S. H., Lisbon Center, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Suaan M., Woburn, Mass.
Foster, Tammason, Lehman, Penn.
*Fowler, Kev. Bancroft, Stockbridge, Mass.
Foster, Tammason, Lehman, Penn.
*Fowler, Rev. Bancroft, Stockbridge, Mass.
Fowler, Mrs. Livonis, N. Y.
Fowler, Mrs. Philasa, Lenox, Mass.
Forenan, George, Lymen, N.
Freeman, Mrs. Sucan B., Parma, O.
Freeman, Mrs. Sucan B., Parma, O.
Freeman, Dea, Silas, Champion, N. Y.
French, O. B., Granville, III.
French, Rev. Daniel L., Nashua, N. H.
French, Mrs. Sarah, Granville, III.
French, Rev. Benjamin, Erownhelm, O.
Frisbie, Almira, Brownhelm, O.
Frisbie, Mrs. Lois, Brownhelm, O.
Gallup, Mrs. Vietta, Strongaville, O.
Ganble, David, Emmettsburg, Md.
Gant, Joseph R., Philadelphis, Pa.
Garand, Mrs. Clarissa L., Acton, Mass.
Garer, Thomas J., White Lake, Mich.
Garer, Thomas J., White Lake, Mich.
Garer, Thomas J., White Lake, Mich.
Gastes, Lucy, Townsend, Mass.
Gates, Lucy, Compand, Mass.

Gates, Dea. Warren, Augusta, N. Y.
Gates, Warren S., Booharie, N. Y.
Gay, William, Farmington, Conn.
Gaylord, Mirs. Artemesia, Sodus, N. T.
Gaylord, Gifes, L., Torringford, Conn.
Gazzan, James B., St. Louis, Mo.
Gazzan, Joseph P., M.D., Pittsburh, Pa.
Gazzan, Joseph P., M.D., Pittsburh, Pa.
Gennald, R. Bernan, N. L., Pittsburh, Pa.
Gennald, R. Garlen, M. W. Bedford, Mass.
Gennald, R. Garlen, M. W. Bedford, Mass.
Gildert, Thomas, North Brookfield, Mass.
Gilbert, Thomas, North Brookfield, Mass.
Gilbert, Thomas, North Brookfield, Mass.
Goldard, Benjamin, 2d, Worcester, Mass.
Goddard, Benjamin, 2d, Worcester, Mass.
Goddard, Dea. Nuthaniel, Millbury, Mass.
Goddard, Dea. Nuthaniel, Millbury, Mass.
Goodell, Ches. William, Exeter, N. H.
Gooddae, Des. David, Maribro', Mass.
Goodell, Mrs. Harriet L., Woburn, Mass.
Goodell, Galvin E., Woburn, Mass.
Goodell, Galvin E., Woburn, Mass.
Goodell, Mrs. Harriet L., Woburn, Mass.
Goodman, Mrs. Amella P., Cincinnati, O.
Goodman, Mrs. Amella P., Cincinnati, O.
Goodman, Miss Barah, West Hartford, Conn.
Goodman, Rev. Eoph, Mercer, Pa.
Gordon, Nr., Sarah A. R., Mercer, Pa.
Gordon, Nr., Sarah A. R., Mercer, Pa.
Goos, Rev. S., Merlidian, N. Y. Gordon, Rev. Joseph, Mercer, Pa.
Gordon, Mrs. Sarah A. R., Mercer, Pa.
Gordon, Mrs. Sarah A. R., Mercer, Pa.
Gordon, Mrs. Sarah A. R., Mercer, Pa.
Gordon, Dodley, L. Davepport, Iowa.
Goas, Rev. S. B., Meridian, N. Y.
Gould, Mary, South Deerfield, Mass.
Gowans, Mrs. Mary, S., Buffalo, N. Y.
Grant, Charles, Burlington, Vt.
Grant, Rev. Joel, Lockport, Ill.
Graves, Wm. Morton, South Hadley, Mass.
Greenhold, Pas. Holland, Grafton, Mass.
Greenhood, Dea. Holland, Grafton, Mass.
Greenwood, Calvin S., Gardner, Mass.
Greenwood, Da. Holland, Grafton, Mass.
Greenwood, Calvin S., Gardner, Mass.
Greenwood, Da. Holland, Grafton, Mass.
Greenwood, Pas. Holland, Grafton, Mass.
Gridley, Addison, South Hadley, Mass.
Gridley, Rev. B., Emmetabarg, Md.
Gridler, Rev. B., Emmetabarg, Md.
Gridler, Rev. B., Emmetabarg, Md.
Griffin, Mars. Chilos F., Roseville, Ill.
Griffin, Mrs. Chilos F., Roseville, Ill.
Griffin, Mrs. Sarah, Leviston Falls, Mc.
Griffith, Edwin H. Nassau, N. Y.
Griggs, Marvey D., Brinnfeld, Mass.
Griggs, Rev. Leveret, Bristol, Conn.
Griggs, Samuel, Lavanna, N. Y.
Griggs, Samuel, Lavanna, N. Y.
Grimes, Andrew L., Mansfeld, O.
Grinnell, Rev. Joslah B., Grinnell, Iowa.
Grovenon, Rev. L., South Woodstock, O.
Guilliver, John P., North Brookfield, Mass.
Halle, Harry, Chelsea, Y. V. Hadlock, Nathan, Bangor, Me.
Hagar, Benjamin S, Boxboro, Mass.
Haie, Harry, Chelsea, V.
Haie, Rev. John G., Grass Valley, Cal.
Haie, Mrs. Lucinda, Chelsea, Vt.
Haie, Bev. John G., Grass Valley, Cal.
Haie, Miss. Lucinda, Chelsea, Vt.
Haie, Simoon, Weathersfield, Conn.
Hail, Rev. Heman B., Jamaica Mission.
Hail, J. B.
Hail, Pas. Moses, West Brootfield, Mass.
Hail, Myron S, West Brootfield, N. Y.
Hail, Roxana, Gaston, Lowa.
Hail, Stephen, Ashtabula, O.
Hamlin, Homer, Grinnell, Lowa.
Hamilton, Miss Cyntbia M., Champlain, N. Y.
Hamilton, Miss Matilda, Champlain, N. Y.

Hammond, Dea. S. I. M., Union City, Mich. Hammond, Mrs. Fanny, Union City, Mich. Hantord, Mrs. Eunice, Walton, N. Y. Hanks, Rev. S. W., Lowell, Mas. Hanna, Rris, Mary, Mercer, Pa. "Hanna, Robert, Mercer, Pa. "Hanna, Robert, Mercer, Pa. Hanson, Dea. George, Globe Village, Mass. Hardwick, Benjamin C., Quincy, Mass. Hardwick, Benjamin C., Quincy, Mass. Hardwick, Franklin, Quincy, Mass. Hardwick, Dea. Thomas, Quincy, Mass. Hardwick, Dea. Thomas, Quincy, Mass. Hardy, Nathan, Brewer, Me. Hardy, Newman B., Georgetown, Mass. Hardy, William G., Bangor, Me. Harlow, Nathaniel, Bangor, Me. Harnon, Mrs. Ada I., Rupert, Vt. Harnon, George S., Rupert, Vt. Harper, Rev. Almer, Sabula, Iowa. Harriman, Hiram, Georgetown, Mass. Harriman, Hiram, Georgetown, Mass. Harris, Samuel, Danvers, Mass. Hart, Abner N., Lysander, N. Y. Hart, Miss Catharine, Guilford, Conn. Hart, Miss Harriet L., Guilford, Conn. Hart, Norman, New Britain, Conn. Haskell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Harvard, Mass. Haskell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Harvard, Mass. Haskins, Romulus, Banger, Me. Hatch, Mrs. Almira K., Union City, Mich. Hatch, Rev. Rouben, Mallett Creek, O. Hathaway, Rev. G. W., Bloomfield, Mc. Hawés, Almira K., Brow's Corners, Me. Hawes, Otis, Brown's Corners, Me. Hawes, Otis, Brown's Corners, Me. Hawkins, Horatio G., Springfield, Vt. Hawley, Amon, Farmington, Conn. Hawley, Mrs. Adeline, Baltimore, Md. Hawley, Mrs. Adeline, Baltimore, Md. Hawley, Elias, Baltimore, Md. Hawley, Henry D., Farmington, Coan. Hawley, John, Summers, Pa. Hawley, Miss Mary H., Baltimore, Md. Hawley, Etch, Moreau, N. Y. Hayden, Josiah, Hollis, N. II. Hayes, Rev. Stephen H., Frankfort, Me. Haynes, Walter, Townsend, Mass. Haynerd, Mrs. Ann, Rouse's Point, N. Y. Hayward, Dea. Stevens, Acton Centre, Mass. Haypard, Mrs. Ann, Rouse's Point, N. Y.
Hayward, Dea. Stevens, Acton Centre, Mass.
Hasen, Rev. J. A., Lisbon, Conn.
Hazen, Rev. Reuben S., Westimister, Conn.
Head, Beriah, Paris, N. Y.
Heald, Dea. Clement, Temple, N. H.
Healy, Edwin P., M.D., Medina, N. Y.
Healy, Edwin P., M.D., Medina, N. Y.
Healy, Edwin P., M.D., Medina, N. Y.
Hendee, Mrs. Lydin, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Hendee, Stephen, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Hendee, Stephen, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Hender, Miss Harriet Z., Dover, O.
Herrick, Mrs. Cynthia, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Hendryx, Miss Harriet Z., Dover, O.
Herrick, Mrs. Cynthia, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Hidden, Rev. S. L. Grinnell, Jowa.
Hickock, Marilla, Greenville, N. Y.
Hidden, Rev. E. N., Derry, N. H.
Hill, David W., Westmipater, Mass.
Hill, Edward M., North Cannan, O.
Hill, Mrs. Eunico P., Kanona, N. Y.
Hill, Hamilton, Oberlin, O.
Hills, Ames B., Jamalca, W. L.
Hills, Mrs. Solive, Pekin, N. Y.
Hills, Mrs. Solive, Pekin, N. Y.
Hills, Mrs. Solive, Pekin, N. V.
Hills, Mrs. Solive, Pekin, N. V.
Hills, Mrs. Solive, Pekin, Doerlin, O.
Hills, Mishaniel, Danvers, Mass. Hills, Mrs. Laurs G. B., Oberlin, O.
Hills, Nathaniel, Danvers, Mass.
Hine, Herman, Washington, Conn.
Hinsdale, Des. Jacob, Wellington, O.
Hitchnock, David, Worcester, Mass.
Hitchnock, Mrs. E. W., Oberlin, O.
Hitchnock, L. B., Oberlin, O.
Hitchnock, Henry Chapman, Oberlin, O.
Hitchnock, James Bostwick, Otisco, N. Y. Hitchcock, James Bostwick, Otisco, N. 1. ditchcock, John C., Ottoso, N. Y.
Hitchcock, Dea. Leonard, Rochester, N. Y.
Hitchcock, Reuben, Painesville, O.
Hitchcock, Mrs. Sarah M., Painesville, O.
Hodge, Mrs. Mary E., Janesville, Wishelm Colorok, Lewis, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Mrs. Alfred, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Amos B., Westminster, Mass.

Holden, Francis P., North Abington, Mass.
Holden, John, Quiney, Mass.
Holden, Mrs. Sarah H., Wobura, Mass.
Hollister, Dea Sherman P., Washington, Conu.
Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn.
Hollines, Baniel, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Daniel, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Daniel, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Daniel, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Holmes, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Hannah, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Mancy, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Mancy, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Mancy, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Mer. William, Bell Brook, O.
Holmes, Heav, William, Babocok's Grove, Ill.
Holton, Dea, Francis, Bellevae, N. Y.
Holtslander, Mrs. Efects F., Oberlin, O.
Holyoke, Rev. William, E. Egip, Ill.
Hopkins, George B., Granville, Ill.
Hopkins, George M., Sand Creek, Ind.
Hopkins, George W., Sand Creek, Ind.
Hopkins, George W., Sand Creek, Ind.
Hopkins, Mrs. Mary, Oberlin, O.
Hostord, Mrs. Abdy, Olivet, Mich.
Hostord, Mrs. Abdy, Olivet, Mich. Hopkins, George W., Sand Creek, Ind.
Hopkins, Mrs. Mary, Oberlin, O.
Hosford, Mrs. Abby, Olivet, Mich.
Hosford, Mrs. Abby, Olivet, Mich.
Hosford, Mrs. Abby, Olivet, Mich.
Hoskinson, Thomas J., Pittsburg, Pa.
Hosmer, Amos H., Mason, N. H.
Houghton, Kra. Sarah, Harvard, Mass.
Houghton, Mrs. Sarah, Harvard, Mass.
Hower, Garles M., Marborough, Mass.
Hower, Carles M., Marborough, Mass.
Howe, Carles M., Marborough, Mass.
Howe, Des. Frederic, Danvers, Mass.
Howe, Des. Frederic, Danvers, Mass.
Howe, Despit, Melburgh, Mass.
Howe, Nebenlah, Greenwis, Mass.
Howe, Russ, Greenwis, Mass.
Howe, Mrs. Sarah, Harvard, Mass.
Howe, Russ, Markey, Mass.
Howe, Mrs. Sarah, Mrs. Marth, Mass.
Howe, Mrs. Sarah, Mrs. Marth, Mass.
Howe, Mrs. Sarah, Mrs. Marth, Mass.
Howe, Mrs. Sarah, Mrs. Mrs. Mrs.
Howe, Huss, Sarah, Mrs.
Howe, Huss, Sarah, Mrs.
Howe, Huss, Markey, Mrs.
Howe, Huss, Mallad S., Strongsville, O.
Hoyt, Mrs. Mallad S., Strongsville, O.
Hoyt, Nebemiah, Meridian, N. Y.
Hoyt, Mrs. Rebecch A., Strongsville, O.
Hoyt, Mrs. Rebecch A., Strongsville, O.
Hubbard, Prankin B., Mercer, Pa.
Hudson, Mrs. Hannah,
Hudson, Dr., William N., Lee, O.
Hudson, Caylon, Marietta, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Aon, Jonnette, Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Annah, Honder, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harnish, Lee, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harnish, Lee, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harrish, Lee, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harrish, Lee, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Laup Maria, Middleport, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Laupher, Millian, Mass.
Hunt, Samuel, Ava, N. Y.
Hullurd, Hiram, Stockholm, N. Y.
Hullurd, Hiram, Stoc Hurst, Thomas, Dover, O. Hurst, Thomas H., Dover, O. Hutchins, Isaac, West Killingly, Conn. Hutchinson, John B., Milford, N. H.

Hutchinson, Royal, Milford, N. H.
Hyde, Florence E., Corning, N. Y.
Hyde, Lewis A., Norwich Town, Conn.
Ide, Daniel M., Glaremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. Sarah, Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Rev. Jacob, D.D., West Medway, Mass.
Ingersoll, Rev. Alvan, Rochester, N. Y.
Ingersoll, Joseph, Stamvich, Conn.
Jacks, Aaron, Methuen, Mass.
Jackson, Mrs. Charlotte R., Prateburgh, N. Y.
Jackson, Hon. William, Newton, Mass.
Jacobs, Clark, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Janes, Mrs. Hairlet H., Troy, Wis.
Jay, Hon. William Bedford, N. Y.
Jenkins, Charles W., Bangor, Me.
Jenkins, George R., Mount Pleasant, O.
Jenkins, George R., Mount Pleasant, O.
Jenkins, Rev. John, Philadelphia, Pa.
Jenkins, Rev. John, Philadelphia, Pa.
Jenkins, Rev. John, Philadelphia, Pa.
Jenkins, Rev. John Phirothelot, Mass. Jenks, John Henry, North Brookfield, Mass. Jennings, Charles, Warren, Mass. Jerome, Robert T., Lafargeville, N. Y. Jerome, Robert T., Lafargeville, N, Y.
Jewett, Mrs. Harriette E., Boston, Mass.
Jewett, Harriette S., Boston, Mass.
Jewett, John P., Boston, Mass.
Jewett, Nathan, Milford, N. H.
Jewett, Mrs. S. A., Dayton, O.
Johnson, Homer, M. D., Oberlin, O. Johnson, Mrs. Ann A., Oberlin, O. Johnson, Rev. Edwin, Jacksonville, Ill. Johnson, Mrs. Hannah, Gloversville, N. Y. Johnson, Mrs. Hannah, Gloversville, N. Johnson, John, Paterson, N. J.
Johnson, Reuben B., Jericho, III.
Johnson, T., Henry, La Harpe, III.
Johnson, William H., Kishwankee, III.
Johnston, Rev. I. B., Bell Center, O.
Jones, Rev. Charles, Battle Creek, Mich.
Jones, Mrs. Galsina, Battle Oreek, Mich. Jones, Rev. Charles, Battle Creek, Mich. Jones, Mrs. Claisina, Battle Creek, Mich. Jones, Mrs. Claisina, Battle Creek, Mich. Jones, Mrs. Clairence, Harwinton, Conn. Jones, Jones, Jones, Jones, Lev. Jones, Hev. Jones, Rev. J. H., Whitewater, O. Jones, Phebe, West Randolph, Vt. Jones, Rev. Wilard, Pawtneker, R. L. Jube, John P., Newark, N. J. Jude, Rev. Willard, Pawtneker, R. L. Jube, John P., Newark, N. J. Judd, Rev. Hendersee, Bloomingdale, Ill. Judson, Alanson, Gloversville, N. Y. Judson, Elisha, Kingsborough, N. Y. Judson, Elisha, Kingsborough, N. Y. Judson, Elisha, E., Riymond, Wis. Judson, Mrs. Hannah, Raymond, Wis. Judson, Mrs. Luthens P., Raymond, Wis. Judson, Mrs. Luthens P., Raymond, Wis. Judson, Locks, Raymond, Wis. Judson, All Mrs. Lathens P., Raymond, Wis. Judson, Sylvaster, Hagaman's Mills, N. Y. Karner, Stephen Newman, Egremont, Mass. Kedsile, Rev. A. S., Union City, Mich. Keep, Rev. John, Oberlin, O. Keep, Mrs. Mary Ann, Poland, O. Keep, Mrs. Mary Ann, Poland, O. Keep, Rev. T. J., Poland, O. Keep, Rev. T. J., Poland, O. Keep, Rev. T. J., Poland, O. Kellogg, Aaron, Laons, N. Y. Kellogg, James B. F., Champlain, N. Y. Kellogg, John Haverhill, Mass. Kendrick, John, Haverhill, Mass. Kendrick, Joh Jones, Mrs. Clarence, Harwinton, Conn.

Kingsbury, Samuel, North East, Pa Kingsley, Miss Elvira, Fietcher, Yt.) Kingsley, Lucy Sevigne, North Cambridge, Vt. Kinney, Rev. Exa D., Darten, Conn. Kitchell, Rev. Harvey D., Detroit, Mich. Knapp, Rev. Jared O., Hattield, Mass. Knight, Henry C., Detroit, Mich. Knight, Rev. Horace B., Syracuse, N. Y., Knight, Des. Robert, Milford, N. H., Knight, Horatto G., East Hampton, Mass. Knight, John, North Brookfield, Mass. Knight, John, North Brookfield, Mass. Amgnt, John, North Brookneth, Mass Knight, Rev. Richard, So. Hadley Falls, Mass Knight, Mrs. Sarah B., Medway, Mass. Knowles, William, Knowlesville, N. Y. Knowlton, Mrs. Amands, Utica, N. Y. Knowiton, Mrs. Amanda, Ulica, N. Y.
Knowiton, Pomeroy, Worcester, Mass.
Kuhn, Jonas S., Galesburgh, Ill.
Ladd, Silas, Painesville, Qo.
Lambrite, Mrs. Juletta, Davert, Iowa.
Lancaster, Miss Mercy, Winthrop, Me.
Languoriny, Rev J. P., Chelsea, Mass. Lamphear, Rev. O. T., Lowell, Mass. Lawrence, Rev. Amos E., South Britain, Conn. Lawrence, Mrs. Hannah B., South Britain, Conn. Lanphear, Rev. O. T., Lowell, Mass.
Lawrence, Rev. Amos E., South Britain, Conn.
Lawrence, Mrs. Hannah B., South Britain, Conn.
Lawrence, Henry, Gardner, Mass.
Leach, Mrs. Lydia, Ellington, N. Y.
Learoyd, John A., North Danvers, Mass.
Leavitt, Rev. Harvey F., Vergennes, Vt.
Leavitt, Rev. Joshna, D. D., New York City.
Leavitt, Rev. Harvey F., Vergennes, Vt.
Levitt, William, Washington, Gonn.
Lee, John R., M. D., New York.
Lee, Sarah M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee, Don R., M. D., New York.
Lee, Barah M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee, Done, Mrs. M. R., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, F. Julius, M. D., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. M. R., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. M. R., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Romaine, Washington, Pa.
Leonard, Rev. S. C., Mount Vernon, O.
Lewis, Lee, C.
Lewis, Lee, O.
Light, Joseph, Worcester, Mass.
Little, Rev. E. G., Ashburnham, Mass.
Little, Rev. E. G., Ashburnham, Mass.
Little, Rev. E. G., Ashburnham, Mass.
Little, Rev. Goorge B., Bangor, Me.
Little, Miss Josephine, New York City.
Lockhart, Rev. J. H., Russellville, O.
Locke, John, Brownhelm, O.
Long, Capt. Osins, — Conn.
Londer, Rev. Moss. M., Peru, Mass.
Lombard, Rev. J. H., Russellville, O.
Locke, John, Brownhelm, O.
Londer, Rev. Mass. Loomis, Oren H., Wethersfield, Ill.
Loomis, Wolcott R., Hartford, Conn.
Lord, Rev. Mass. Lowell, Mrs. Masy Jane, Fulton, N. Y.
Lord, Mrs. Palvido, N. Y.
Lord, Mrs. Mary Jane, Fulton, N. Y.
Lord, Mrs. William Delos, Milwaukie, Wis.
Lovel, Lavid, Oakham, Mass.
Lovell, Mrs. Julia O. H., Oakham, Mass. Love, Mr. Matilda, Miwaukie, Ws.
Lovell, David, Oakham, Mass.
Lovell, Mr. Juli O. H., Oakham, Mass.
*Lovell, Blass, Mully Landbridge, Mass.
Lovell, Mr. Mr. Markett, Mass.
Lovely, Mr. Mr. Blanbett, Cambridgeport, Mass.
Loveloy, John, Lovell, Mass.
Loveloy, John, Lovell, Mass.
Lun, Mr. Blanbett, Gambridgeport, Mass.
Lun, Mr. Barbett, Mass.
Lun, Mr. Samuel Y., Lavrence, Kanass.
Lunnard, Dea. Washburn, Worcester, Mass.
Lun, Rev. Samuel Y., Lavrence, Kanass.
Lunsden, Rev. William, Ripley, O.
Lyman, Mr. Achash O. B. Strongsville, O.
Lyman, Elijah, Strongsville, O.
Lyman, Elijah, Strongsville, O.
Lyman, Moh, Torringford, Ot.
Lyman, William, Middlefield, Conn.

Lyman, Mrs. Catherine E., Middlefield, Conn.
Lyman, Mrs. Alma, Middlefield, Conn.
Macdill, Rev. David, Schmanville, O.
Mahan, Dr. Thomas S., Iows City, Iowa.
Mathy, Ber. Lyman, Honeoye, N. Y.
Many, Ber. Lyman, Honeoye, N. Y.
Many, Ber. Lyman, Honeoye, N. Y.
Many, Mrs. Freema, Mandey, Mass.
Machan, Mrs. Freema, Mandey, Mass.
March, Rev. Daniel, Webert, Mass.
March, Rev. Daniel, Webert, Mass.
March, Rev. Daniel, Webert, Mass.
March, Rev. Edwards, Canton, Ill.
March, Mrs. Locy, Onlory, Mass.
March, Her. Locy, Chiney, Mass.
March, Her. Locy, Onlory, Mass.
March, Her. March, Mansfield, O.
Maxwell, Rev. George, Mansfield, O.
Maxwell, Rev. George, Mansfield, O.
Maxwell, Mrs. Martha, Mansfield, O.
Maxwell, Mrs. Martha, Mansfield, O.
Maynsrd, Moses, South Deerfield, Mass.
McUlaland, J. S., Mouth Jackson, Pa.
McUlelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McCollelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McCollelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McCollelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McGollen, John, Darlington, Pa.
McGridhan, Levens, Brookfield, Mass.
McFarland, Levens, Brookfield, Mass.
McFarland, Levens, Brookfield, Mass.
McFarland, James, Mount Vernon, O.
McMaster, Thomas A.
McFarland, Janes, Mount Vernon, O.
McMaster, Thomas A.
McPherson, Ed. James, Ripley, O.
Mescham, Dea. Simon, Pulsaki, N. Y.
Merd, John, Walton, N. Y.
Merd, Dea. Jonas, Greenwich, Conn.
Mevlille, Mrs. Beulah, Monson, Mass.
Merrick, Charles H., Monson, Mass.
Merrick, Charles H., Monson, Mass.
Merric Merrick, Charles, Monson, Mass. Merrick, Mrs. Lucy A., Strongsville, O. Merrick, Mrs. Dorcas N., Wilbraham, Mass. Merrick, Samuel O., Chicopee, Mass. Merrick, Samuel O., Chicopee, Mass.

*Merrill, Mrs. Anns.

*Merrill, Mrs. Arns.

*Merrill, Mrs. P. G., Williamsburg, Me.
Merrill, Rev. David N., Great Barrington, Mass.
Miles, Pev. James B., Charlestown, Mass.
Miles, Rev. James B., Charlestown, Mass.
Miles, Rev. Milo N., Lawn Ridge, Ill.
Miles, Thomas M., Mariborough, Mass.
Miller, Rev. Daniel R., Lisbon, Ill.
Miller, Mrs. Jane C., Lisbon, Ill.
Miller, Mrs. Jane C., Lisbon, Ill.
Miller, John, Bellevus, O.

Miller, Henry, Torringford, Conn.
Miller, Lewis B., Torringford, Conn.
Miller, Lewis B., Torringford, Conn.
Miller, Henry, Torringford, Conn.
Miller, Lewis B., Torringford, Conn.
Miller, John L., Neenah, Wis.
Miner, Rev. Ovid, Clinton City, Iowa.
Minet, Mrs. Lucy C., Danville, Iowa.
Minott, Mrs. J. N., Westminster, Mass.
Minott, Mrs. Sarah B., Madlson, O.
Moffatt, Addison, Madlson, O.
Montague, Dea. J. S., Broothield, Mass.
Montgomery, John P., Haverhill, Mass.
Montgomery, John P., Haverhill, Mass.
Moore, Mrs. Caroline M., Champlain, N. Y.
Moore, Mrs. Caroline M., Champlain, N. Y.
Moore, Mrs. Harriet Storer, Concord, N. H.
Moore, Noadiah, Champlain, N. Y. *Merrill, Mrs. Anna.

Moore, Rev. D. M., Greenfield, O.
Moore, Rev. Humphrey, D.D., Milford, N. H.
Moore, Rev. William St., M. M., Conn.
Morchouse, Honry, Darlen, Conn.
Morchouse, Honry, Darlen, Conn.
Morchouse, Honry, Darlen, Conn.
Morgan, Rev. H. H., Hanndhal, N. Y.
Morley, Mrs. Ann C., Williamstown, Mass.
Morell, Benjamin W., Bangor, Me.
Morse, Rev. Alfred, Maumee City, O.
More, Mrs. Caroline F. Union City, Mich.
Morse, Rev. Henry O., Union City, Mich.
Morse, Rev. Jason, Brimfeld, Mass.
Morse, Nathan E., East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, Parker, Sen., Metamora, Ill.
Morse, Parker, Sen., Metamora, Ill.
Morton, Martha, South Deerfield, Mass.
Morse, O.D., Great Palls, N. H.
Morse, Perker, Sen., Metamora, Ill.
Morton, Martha, South Deerfield, Mass.
Morsey, Col. Thomas, Union City, Mich.
Mosely, George T., Union City, Mich.
Mosely, George T., Union City, Mich.
Mowry, Mrs. Angelina G.
Mudge, Samuel W., Rome, N. Y.
Munson, Justus, Paris Hill, N. Y.
Murdock, John Franklin, St. Johnsbury, Vt.
Muttabal, Marquesan Islands.
Muzzy, Nathan, Worcester, Mass.
Mutzy, Nathan, Worcester, Mass.
Mord, Thomas, Oberlin, O.
Neal, Mrs. Sarsh, Oberlin, O.
Neal, Mrs. Sarsh, Oberlin, O.
Nedham, Dwight, Galesburgh, Ill.
Neilis, Barnard, Abhtabula, O.
Nelson, Thomas L., Elyria, O.
Nettleton, Mrs. Charlotte L., West Haven, Conn.
Nettleton, Lyman, Washington, Conn.
Nettleton, Lyman, Washington, Conn.
Nerin, Rev. Edward H., Walpole, Mass.
North, John Ha, Torringbord, Conn.
Northrop, N. B., Medina, O.
Nowell, Mrs. Blass, M., Hyannis, Mass.
North, John H., Torringbord, Conn.
Northrop, N. B., Medina, O.
Nowell, Mrs. Annelia, Hartford, Conn.
Northroy, N. B., Medina, O.
Olds, Mrs. Annelia, Hartford, Conn.
Olds, Mrs. Annelia, Hartford, Conn.
Olds, Mrs. Annelia, Hartford, Conn.
Olmstead, Lynde, Hartford, Conn.
Olds, Mrs. Annelia, Hartford, Conn.
Olds, Rev. Abner D., Jefferson, O.
Olds, Mrs. Annelia, Hartford, Conn.
Olds, Rev. Abner D., Jefferson, O.
Olds, Mrs. Annelia, Jeff Olls, Mrs. Ann H., Jefferson, O.
Olmsted, Mrs. Amelis, Hartford, Conn.
Olmsted, Lynde, Hartford, Conn.
Olmsted, Lynde, Hartford, Conn.
Oreutt, Oran, North Abington, Mass.
Orvis, Rev. W. B., Midleport, O.
Osgood, Rev. S., B.D., Springfield, Mass.
Olts, Ephraim B., Greenville, Conn.
Ols, Mrs. Hannab, Kanona, N. Y.
Oughton, Mrs. Maria A., Spanishtown, Jamaica.
Packard, Mrs. Elisabeth, Chatham Genier, O.
Page, Rev. Benjamin B. J., North Haven, Conn.
Paine, Mrs. Charlotte M., Clinton, N. Y.
Paine, John A., M.D., Clinton, N. Y.
Paine, John A., M.D., Clinton, N. Y.
Paine, John A., Jr., Clinton, N. Y.
Paine, Horace M., M.D., Olinton, N. Y.
Paine, Horace M., M.D., Olinton, N. Y.
Paine, Rev. Rodney, Honeoye, N. Y.
Paine, Rev. Rodney, Honeoye, N. Y.
Paine, Harse M. M.D., Olinton, N. Y.
Paine, Rev. Rodney, Honeoye, N. Y.
Paine, Harse M. M., Olinton, N. Y.
Paine, Harse M. M., Olinton, N. Y.
Paine, Horace M., M.D., Olinton, N. Y.
Paine, Mrs. Thalia M., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Henry W., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Henry W., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Julia M., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Thomas A., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Mrs. Thomas A., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, William B., Augusta, Mich.
Parker, Milliam B., Augusta, Mich.
Parker, Mrs. Elisa R.
Parker, Mrs. Elisa R.
Parker, Mrs. Elisa R.

Parker, John, Graaville, O.
Parker, L. F., Grinnell, Iowa.
Parker, Rev. Leonard S., Haverhill, Mass.
Parker, Julius, New Britsin, Conn.
Parker, Loca, Reading, Mass.
Parker, Rev. Lucius H., Galesburgh, Ill.
Parker, Mrs. Rhoda, Lockport, N. Y.
Parker, Rev. Wooster, Beifast, Me.
Parmele, Mrs. Anna, Clinton, N. Y.
Parmele, Curts Stiles Cliston N. Y. Parmele, Mrs. Anna, Clinton, N. Y. Parmele, Curtis Stiles, Clinton, N. Y. Parsons, Rev. B. F., Dover, N. H. Parsons, Helen, Gloversville, N. Y. Parsons, Helen, Gloversville, N. Y. Partridge, Captain Clark, Medway, Mass. Partridge, David, Worcester, Mass. Partridge, John, Parton, Mass. Partridge, Miss Lucy F., Holliston, Mass. Partridge, Seth, West Medway, Mass. Patch, Timothy B., Marlborough, Mass. Patchin, Mrs. Elizabeth P., Lodi, Mich. Patchin, Rev. John, Lodi, Mich. Pattendil, Rev. Horstin, Hernellaville, N. Patchia, Rev. John, Lodi, Mich.
Pattengill, Rev. Horatic, Hornellsville, N. Y.
Pattengill, Rev. Julius B., Walton, N. Y.
Patton, Rev. William W., Ohicago, Ill.
Patton, Mrs. Mary B., Chicago, Ill.
Peabody, Humphrey, Milford, N. H.
Pease, Rev. A. G., Norwich, Vt.
Pease, Rev. Giles, Boston, Mass.
Pease, Hiram, Oberlin, O. Pease, J. Byron, Paynesville, Min. Ter. Pease, Peter P., Oberlin, O. Peck, Abigail G., East Bloomfield, N. Y. Peck, Abigali G., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Dea. Charles, Jewett, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Esther M., Oberlin, O.
*Peck, Everard, Rochester, N. Y.
*Peck, Mrs. Martha Farley, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Alice B., Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Bev. Henry E., Oberlin, O.
Peck, P. P., Sandusky City, 6.
Peck, William Farley, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y. Peck, William Farley, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Jesse, Boston, Mass.
Peck, Mrs. Evelina H.. Boston, Mass.
Peck, Mrs. Evelina H.. Boston, Mass.
Peck, Watrous, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Jaaper O., West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Jaaper O., West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peckham, Rev. Sanuel H., Leominster, Mass.
Petrice, Rev. Charles H., Kewanee, Ill.
Perkins, Mrs. Brats O., Leominster, Mass.
Peirce, Rev. Charles H., Kewanee, Ill.
Perkins, Mrs. Clarissa Ann, Patofson, N. J.
Perkins, Mrs. Klarissa Ann, Patofson, N. J.
Perkins, Mrs. Mass Eliza D., Gloversville, N. Y.
Perkins, Mrs. Mary E., North Brookfield, Mass.
Pettengill, Mrs. Lucy, E., North Brookfield, Mass.
Pettengill, Mrs. Lucy, Peoria, Ill.
Phelps, E. S., Princeton, Ill.
Phelps, Mrs. Lucy T., Elleworth, Me.
Phillips, Mrs. Lucy T., Elleworth, Me.
Phillips, Mrs. Lucy T., Kehnen, Mass.
Phillips, Mrs. Harriet W., Methuen, Mass.
Phillips, Mrs. Harriet W., Methuen, Mass. Phillips, Mrs. Harriet W., Methuen, Mass. Phillips, Luther, Worcester, Mass. Phillips, Dea. Rufus B., Fitzwilliam, N. H. Pickett, Rev. Aaron, Sandisfield, Mass. Pierce, Mrs. Anne B., Amboy, Ill. Pierce, Mrs. Anne B., Amboy, III.
Pierce, Ezekiel, Cassville, N. Y.
Pierce, George, Norwich, Conn.
Pierce, George, Norwich, Conn.
Pierce, Rev. Willard, N. Abington, Mass.
Pitts, Oyrus, Moline, III.
Pitts, Mrs. Margaret B., Moline, III,
Pitts, Mrs. Margaret B., Moline, III,
Pixley, Albert, Detroit, Mich.
Pixley, Albert, Bast Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., Cast Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, Lebbeus, M., Great Barrington, Mass.
Pixlet, Daniel G., Washington, Conn.,
Plumb, Edward B., Clay, Iows.
Plumb, Mrs. Betsey, Clay, Iows.
Plumb, Mrs. Betsey, Clay, Iows.
Plumb, Mrs. Caroline, Jefferson, O.
Plumb, Samuel, Jefferson, O.
Plumer, Samuel, Georgetown, Mass. Plumer, Samuel, Georgetown, Mass,

Poage, Rev. James S., Pa.
Poage Mrs. Susan L., Pa.
Pomeroy, Alanson, Strongsville, O.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Keziah, Strongsville, O.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Martha, Warren, Mass.
Pond, Burton, Torringford, Conn.
Pond, Lucy, Newark, N. J.
Pool, John, Granville, Ill,
Poor, William O., Belfast, Mc.
Pope, Mrs. Orpha C., Strongsville, O.
Pope, Philander, Strongsville, O.
Potter, Rev. Charles G., Bangor, Me.
Portert, Elizur, Danville, Iowa.
Porter, Mrs. Maria M., Danville, Iowa.
Porter, Mrs. Maria M., Danville, Iowa.
Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Canden, N. Y.
Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Canden, N. Y.
Porter, John, Dover, O. Porter, John, Dover, O. Porter, Samuel, D., Rochester, N. Y. Porter, Samuel, D., Rochester, N. Y.
Potter, Ebenezer, Fitzwilliam, N. H.
Potter, Mrs. Susannah, Fitzwilliam, N. H.
Potter, Rev. John D., Central Village, Conn.
Powell, Rev. A. V. H., Middlefield, Conn.
Powell, Mrs. N. B., Middlefield, Conn. Powers, Mrs. Chloe, West Cornwall, Vt. Pratt, Rev. Edward H., East Woodstock, Conn. Pratt, Mrs. L. S., Grafton, Mass. Pratt, Mrs. L. S., Grafton, Mass.
Pratt, Rev. Parsons S., Dorset, Vt.
Pratt, Samuel A., Worcester, Mass.
Pratt, Mrs. Sarah, Quincy, Mass.
Pratt, Dea. William, Quincy, Mass.
Prentice, Samuel, Greenville, Conn.
Prentice, Mrs. Sopbia B. Greenville, Conn.
Prentice, Thomas, Walsfield, Vt.
Prescott, Dea. Thomas J., Rupert, Vt.
Prescott, Mrs. Catherine, Pittabure De.
Preston, Mrs. Catherine, Pittabure De. Prescott, Dea. Thomas J., Kupert, Vt.
Preston, Mrs. Catherine, Pittsburg, Pa.
Priest, Rev. Josiah A., Homer, N. Y.
Prindle, Rev. Cyrus, Leoni, Mich.
Prindle, Rev. Lyman, Wattsfield, Vt.
Putnam, Col. Jessie, Danyers, Mass.
Putnam, Rev. John M., Dunbarton, N. H. Putnam, Rev. John M., Dunbarton, N. H.
Putnam, Levi, Milford, N. H.
Putnam, Rev. Rufus A., Pembroke, N. H.
Ramssy, Charles, West Hartford, Conn.
Ramsdell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Warren, Mass.
Rand, Rev. Ass., Ashburnham, Mass.
Randall, William H., Albany, N. Y.
Rankin, Rev. A. L., Oakulla, Ill. *Rankin, Mrs. Amanda K. Rankin, Rev. John, Ripley, O. Rankin, Rev. S. G. W. I., Portland, Conn. Ranny, Rev. D. H., Wilmington Vt. Ranny, Rev. D. H., Wilmington Vt.
Rapp, James, Utica, O.
Rapp, Mrs. Mary Ann, Utica, O.
Ray, Mrs. Jane H., Lenox, O.
Redding, Samuel F., Grafton, Mass.
Reed, Carlo, Olivet, Mich.
Reed, Mrs. Sally M., Olivet, Mich.
Reveus, James H., Newark, N. Y.
Reveus, Mrs. Cordella Ann, Newark, N. Y.
Revers, Mrs. Cordella Ann, Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Mrs. Cordella Ann, Newark, N. Y. Reeves, James D., Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Miss Martha C., Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Mary E., Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Raymond M. P., Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Raymond M. P., Newark, N. Y. Rice, Rev. Eaos H., Jamesport, N. Y. Rice, Rev. Eaos H., Jamesport, N. Y. Rice, Mary A., Kingston, Pa. Rich, Rev. Ezekiel, Deep River, Conn. Richards, Miss Blizebeth M., Albany, N. Y. Richards, Charles, Reistol. Conn. Richards, Miss Eliscbeth M., Albany, N. Y. Richards, Charles, Bristol, Conn. Richards, Charles, Bristol, Conn. Richards, Dea. Perrin N., Sanderland, Mass. Richards, Ward, East Bridgewater, Mass. Richards, Ward, East Bridgewater, Mass. Richardson, Mrs. Elisa W., Lenox, O. Richardson, Mrs. Elisa W., Lenox, O. Richardson, Elisha, Franklin, Mass. Richardson, Elisha, Franklin, Mass. Richardson, Miss. May B., Mcdway, Mass. Richardson, Mrs. Mary B., D., Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Mrs. Mary B., D., Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Mrs. Mary E. D., Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Capt. Stephen W., Medway, Mass. Richardson, Capt. Stephen W., Medway, Mass. Richardson, Des. Stephen, Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Sally, Stoneham, Mass. Richardson, Sally, Stoneham, Mass. Rider, Martin E., Weybridge, Yt. Rider, Samuel, East Bridgewater, Mass. Ritchie, Rev. Andrew, Greenfield, O. Ritter, Thomas, M.D., New York City. Ritter, Delia M., New York City. Ritter, Delia M., New York City. Ritter, Julia E., New York City. Ritter, Isabella G., New York City. Ritter, Anna, New York City. Ritter, Anna, New York City. Ritter, Anna, New York City. Robertson, Mra. Lemira J., Horloon, Wis. Robbins, Rev. S. W., East Haddam, Conn. Robinson, Calvin, Williamanfie, Cond. Robinson, Elhu, Augusta, Me., Robinson, Rev. Reuben T., Winchester, Mass. Robinson, Mra. Clara C., Winchester, Mass. Robinson, William A., North Esst, Pa. Rockford, Charles, Natlek, Mass. Rockwell, John, West Cornwall, V. Rodgers, Dea. Clayton T., Strongaville, O. Rogers, F. Amelia, Angusta, N. Y. Rockwell, John, West Cornwall, Vr.
Rodgers, Dea. Clayton T., Strongsville, O.
Rogers, F. Amelia, Augusta, N. Y.
Rogers, Decius, St. Albans, Vt.
Rogers, Mrs. Hannah G., Strongsville, O.
Rogers, Mrs. Hannah G., Strongsville, O.
Rogers, Milliam S., Southampton, Mass.
Rood, Harvey L., Burrville, Conn.
Rot, Ellas, Homer, N. Y.
Ross, John, Hartford, Conn.
Rowe, Mrs. Phobe L., Stoneham, Mass.
Rowell, Henderson, Acton, Mass.
Rowell, Henderson, Acton, Mass.
Roy, Rev. J. E., Chicago, Ill.
Ruloofson, Mrs. L. M., West Gilbon, N. Y.
Russell, George W., Worcester, Mass.
Russell, Hs. Categ W., Springville, N. Y.
Russell, George W., Worcester, Mass.
Rust, Elijah S., Oberlin, C.,
Sabin, Dea. Win, C., Saxton's River, Vi.
Sabine, Mrs. William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y.
Sabine, Mrs. Charlotte, Cambridge, V.
Safford, Mrs. Catego, M. Medway, Mass.
Sampson, Mrs. Rachel A., N. Brookfield, Mass.
Sanderson, Mrs. Elza, Calesburgh, Ill.
Sadd, Rev. W. D. Wavely, Jill. Sampson, Mrs. Rachel A., N. Brookhold, Mass.
Sanderson, Rev. A., Mallet Creek, O.
Sanderson, Rev. A., Mallet Creek, O.
Sanderson, Rev. A., Mallet Creek, O.
Sanderson, Mrs. Eliza, Galesburgh, III.
Sanford, Rev. David, Medway, Mass.
Sargent, Benjamin H., Providence, III.
Sanford, Rev. W. H., Boylston, Mass.
Sargent, Benjamin H., Providence, III.
Sawin, Dea. J. D., Gardener, Mass.
Sawyer, Edward, H., East Hampton, Mass.
Sawyer, Edward, H., East Hampton, Mass.
Sawyer, Rev. John, Garland, Mc.
Schermerborn, Mc.
Scheld, Rev. Wm. C., Milford, Conn.
Scott, Martha Ann, South Salem, O.
Scott, Satterfield, South Sa

Sherman, Asahel, Wayland, Mass.
Sherman, Ira, Bridgeport, Conn.
Shipherd, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cleveland, O.
Shipherd, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cleveland, O.
Shipherd, Mrs. Catharins, Pulaski, N. Y.
Shipherd, Mrs. Catharins, Pulaski, N. Y.
Shipherd, Mass Catharine, Pulaski, N. Y.
Shipherd, Jacob R., Watertown, N. Y.
Shipherd, Julia M., Pulaski, N. Y.
Shipherd, Mary E., Pulaski, N. Y.
Short, N. H., Bergen, N. Y.
Short, N. H., Bergen, N. Y.
Shimway, Loriston, Oxford, Mass.
Slickis, George E., Waukesha, Wis.
Slik, Dea. Enoch, Moreau, N. Y.
Slimmons, Mrs. Rev. C. N., Wrentham, Mass.
Slik, Dea. Enoch, Moreau, N. Y.
Slimmons, Mrs. Eliza E., North Wrentham, Mass.
Skinnons, Miss Eliza E., North Wrentham, Mass.
Skinner, Jason, Harwinton, Conn.
Skinner, Jason, Harwinton, Conn.
Slade, Hon, William, Middlebury, Vt.
Smalley, Rev. Elam, D. D., Troy, N. Y.
Smalley, George R., Quincy, Mass.
Smark, Rev. James E., Xenia, O.
Smith, Miss Agne F., Andwer, Mass.
Smith, Ann Eliza B., Andwer, Mass.
Smith, Ann Eliza B., Andwer, Mass.
Smith, Ann Eliza B., Tellenberg, O.
Smith, Ann Eliza B., Tellenberg, O. Smith, Benjamin, Unionville, O. Smith, Rev. Carlos, Talimadge, O. Smith, Rev. C. B., Sweden, Me. Smith, Benjamin, Unionville, O. Smith, Rev. Carlos, Tallmadge, O. Smith, Rev. Carlos, Tallcott, Bangor, Me. Smith, Rev. Prof. D. Tallcott, Bangor, Me. Smith, Howard, Syracuse, N. Y. Smith, How. Maria E., Mason Village, N. H. Smith, How. Maria E., Mason Village, N. H. Smith, George, Andover, Mass. Smith, Rev. Hervey, West Hampton, Mass. Smith, Miss Helen C., Andover, Mass. Smith, Hiram, Worgsster, Mass. Smith, Jefferson, Prattaburgh, N. Y. Smith, John, Andover, Mass. Smith, How. N., Andever, Mass. Smith, How. N., Andever, Mass. Smith, How. Lana, Gloverville, N. Y. Smith, Ber. Lugdia, H., Unionville, O. Smith, Miss. Smith, Mary O., Stanwich, Conn. Smith, Mary O., Stanwich, Conn. Smith, Mary Ans. Gloverville, N. Y. Smith, Samuel, Mansfield, O. Smith, Miss. Sarah, Stanwich, Conn. Smith, Mrs. Wills, New Haven, Conn. Smith, Mrs. Porter H., Whately, Mass. Sladder, Chency, Brimfield, Mass. Solinder, Chency, Brimfield, Mass. Spanding, Rev. Samuel J., Newburyport, Speac, Francis.
Spencer, David B., Olibbe Mission.
Spencer, Rev. Levi, Peoria, Ill.
Specuer, Albert, Oakham, Mass.
Speoner, Dea. Andrew, Oakham, Mass.
Speoner, Dea. Andrew, Oakham, Mass.
Speoner, Benjamin T., North East, Fenn.
Sprague, Lee, Worcester, Mass.
Stachpole, Joseph, Dover, N. Estacy, Mrs. Eliza, Concord, Mass.
Staniey, Augustus, New Britain, Conn.
Staniey, Tas, Jr., New Britain, Conn.
Staniey, James, New Britain, Conn.
Staniey, Janes, New Britain, Conn.
Staniey, Nan W., New Britain, Conn.
Stanier, Mass.

Starks, Amanda, Chaleaugay, N. Y.
Stead, Rev. Benjamin F., Astoria, N. Y.
Stearns, O. H., Fitchburg, Mass.
Stearns, Hannah L., Chalealestown, Mass.
Steblins, Mrs. D. S., West Brookheld, Mass.
Steel, James C., South Salem, O.
Steel, Mrs. Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Mrs. Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Mrs. Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Rev. George M., Warren, Mass.
Steele, Rev. George M., Warren, Mass.
Sterling, Sylvanus, Bridgeport, Coun.

Sterling, Sylvanus, Bridgeport, Conn. Sterry, Rev. De Witt Olinton, Lake City, Min. Ter.
Stetson, Miss Elizabeth B., Mariborough, Mass.
Stetson, Des. Jacob, South Amherst, Mass.
Stetson, Des. Jotham, Medford, Mass.
Stetson, William, Marlborough, Mass.
Stetson, William, Jr., Mariborough, Mass.
Stetson, Rev. Asabel A., Newton, Iowa.
Stevens, Rev. Asabel A., Newton, Iowa.
Stevens, Miss Philenia, Stoneham, Miss.
Stewart, Mrs. Harriet, Penn Yan, N. Y.
Stawart Mrs. Jane. Bloomingburgh, O. Stevens, Ney Assass A., sewon, Moss. Stevens, Miss Philenia, Stoneham, Mass. Stevens, Miss Philenia, Stoneham, Mass. Stewart, Mrs. Jane, Bloomingburgh, O. Stewart, Mrs. Jane, Bloomingburgh, O. Stewart, Rev. Robert E., Bell Brook, O. Stewart, Rev. Robert E., Bell Brook, O. Stewart, Rev. Robert E., Bell Brook, O. Stillman, George, Wethersfield, Conn. Stinson, Rev. George W., Forestville, Iowa. Stone, How. Web. Brook, O. Stone, How. Web. Brookhold, Mass. Stone, Rev. W. B., West Brookfield, Mass. Storrs, Rev. R. S., D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y. Storel, Rev. A. By Brookfield, Mass. Storrs, Rev. R. S., D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y. Storel, Rev. Abjah, Thomaston, Mc. Stranaham, Mrs. Anna, Litchfield, O. Streeter, Rev. S. W., Henrietts, N. Y. Strieby, Rev. Michael E., Syracnes, N. Y. Strong, Daniel, Wethersfield, Conn. Strong, Daniel, Wethersfield, Conn. Strong, Daniel, Wethersfield, Conn. Strong, Daniel, Wethersfield, Conn. Tanner, Mrs. Mary, Oberlin, O. Taf, Ira, Kingsville, O. Taf, Ira, Kingsville, O. Taf, Ira, Kingsville, O. Taf, Lewis, Fitzwilliam, N. H. Taloot, Henry, West Hartford, Conn. Tapley, Col. Nathan, Danvers, Mass. Taylor, John, Chelsea, Mass. Taylor, Mrs. Hannah T., Francistown, N. H. Taylor, Man, Pittialeld, O. Taylor, Zophar, Harvard, Mass. Taylor, John, Chelsea, Mass. Taylor, Joh rerry, Mrs. Harriet, Terrysville, Conn.
Terry, Rev. James P., South Weymouth, Mass.
Terry, Rev. James P., South Weymouth, Mass.
Terry, Rev. Parehall, Unionville, O.
Thalhimer, Henry B., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Thomas, Rev. O. A., Middelown, Wis.
Thome, Rev. James A., Ohio City, O.
Thome, Mrs. Ann A., Ohio City, O.
Thompson, Arba U., Swaineville, N. Y.
Thompson, Charity, Joresy, O.
Thompson, Mrs. Elizabeth, Southboro', Mass.
Thompson, Mrs. Martha C., Oberlin, O.
Thompson, Rev. John Wilmot, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Rev. Leander, W. Amesbury, Mass.
Thompson, Rev. Leander, W. Amesbury, Mass.
Thompson, Lewis, Constantia, O. Thompson, Mrs. Anna A., West Amesbury, Mass Thompson, Lewis, Constantia, O. Thompson, Luther G., Farmington, Conn. Thompson, Rev. Loren, Jamalea Mission. Thompson, Mrs. Phebe T., Middlefield, O. Thompson, Mrs. Phebe T., Middlefield, O. Thompson, Theodore T., Knox Corners, N. Y. Thompson, William, Jersey, O. Thorp, Curtis, Binghamton, N. Y.

Thrall, Rev. Samuel R., Tremont, Ill.
Thrasher, Mary Ann, Stafford, Conn.
Thurston, Brown, Portland, Me.
Thurston, Rev. Bayld, Steekton, Me.
Thurston, Rev. Bayld, Steekton, Me.
Thurston, Rev. Bayld, Steekton, Me.
Thurston, Mrs. Prudence, Brown's Corner, Me.
Thurston, Rev. Stephen, Searsport, Me.
Titiomb, John, Parmington, Me.
Tobin, John, Newark, N. J.
Todd, Rev. David, Providence, B. I.
Todd, Rev. John, Gaston, Iowa.
Todd, Bea.
Todd, Bea.
Todd, Bea.
Todd, Bea.
Todd, Bea.
Todd, Bea.
Todd, Rev. William, Polo, Ill.
Tomblen, Luclus, West Brookfield, Mass.
Tompkins, John B., Parls Hill, N. Y.
Toops, Rebecca A., ——, O.
Torrey, Rev. David, Delhi, N. Y.
Torrey, Rev. Charles W., East Cleveland, O.
Torrey, Rev. Charles W., East Cleveland, O.
Tornse, Rev. Charles W., East Cleveland, O.
Trask, Rev. George, Fitchburgh, Mass.
Tucker, Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass.
Tucker, Hev. Josha M., Tholliston, Mass.
Tucker, Thomas H., North Brookfield, Mass.
Turner, Rev. Josha M., der. Barrington, Mass.
Tuttle, Edmund M., Meriden, Conn.
Tuttle, Levann, Camden, N. Y.
Tuttle, Thomas, Clinton Corners, Wis.
Tyler, Caleb G., Georgetown, Mass.
Tyler, Caleb G., Georgetown, Mass.
Tyler, Caleb G., Georgetown, Mass.
Tyler, Rev. C., Galesburgh, Ill.
Underwood, Henniston, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Henniston, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Miss Rhodn, Newark, N. J.
Unde

Mass.
Van Wagner, Rev. James M., Wakeman, O. Venning, Rev. Charles B., Jamaica Mission. Viali, Mrs. Elizabeth F., Jerseyille, Ill. Wakefield, Rev. William, Harmar, O. Wakeman, Rev. Jeel, Almond, N. Y. Wales, Samuel, Sen., Windham, O. Waldo, Rev. Le F., Kewance, Ill. Walker, Hon. Amass, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Mrs. Lucy E., Kewance, Ill. Walker, Hon. Amass, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Hors. Catherine, Mansfield, O. Walker, Freeman, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Horace D., East Abington, Wask. Walker, Nev. James B., Mansfield, O. Walker, Des. Lyman, Townsend, Vt. Walker, Des. Lyman, Townsend, Vt. Walker, Nahum, Bloomfield, Me. Ward, Rev. Horatio G., Lyndon, Ill. Ward, Jonathan, Birmingham, O. Ward, Langdon Stoere, Boston, Mass. Ward, Rev. Samuel R.
Warmer, Strader S., Chicago, Ill. Warner, Srander S., Chicago, Ill. Warner, Stehdon, Pitcher, N. Y. Warner, Mrs. Lucy O., Pitcher, N. Y. Warner, Rev. H., J., Jericho, Ill. Warner, Seth, East Hampton, Mass. Warren, Mrs. Almira, Grafton, Mass. Warren, Mrs. Horatio, Westborough, Mass. Warren, Rev. Israel P., Plymouth Hollow, Conn.

TREASURER'S REPORT FOR 1856-57.

BERRE

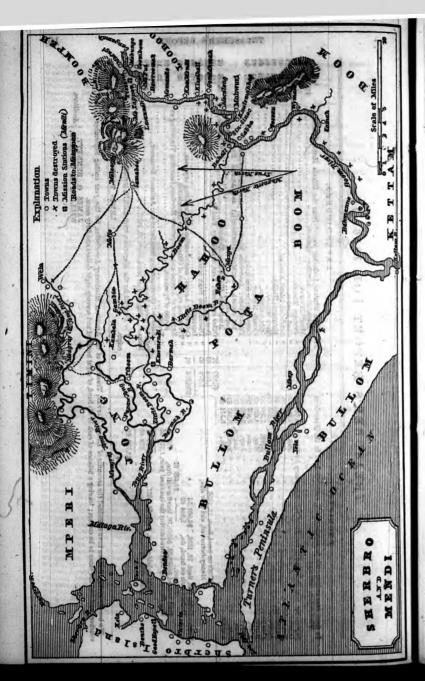

| | | RECEIP | TS. | | | 1 | 1 | EXPENDITURES. | | 1 3 |
|--|---|--|--------------------|--|--|-------|----------------------|---|--|--|
| Missionary, eptember, ack october,
lovember,
eccember,
anuary,
february,
farch,
loril,
day, | , namely: | n the America | CALL! | for Nov., "Dec., "Jan., "Feb., "March, "April, "May, "June, "July, | 4,238 73
4,601 84
8,683 06
8,284 44
8,962 53
8,280 16
4,628 49
8,407 68
8,695 81 | 26.55 | | For Home Missions, including receipts from the Illinois Home Missionary Association, Auxiliary, $2629.94, Mendi Mission, Gopt Mission, Sandwich Island Mission, Marqueses Mission, Sistem Mission, Gibiard Mission, Cipitue Mission | 6,979
4,845
1,545 | 00
68 |
| Deduct | Money 1
lue, Sept. 12
cash on han
Balance. | hand, Sept. 12, borrowed, and 1, 1856, $6,068
d, do., 1,604 | 86
69
84.468 | " Sept., " Oct., | , 8,786 61
8,047 62
5,574 46 | 3 | 97
69
85
01 | per month, circulated gratuitously,) and Annual Report, etc., 8,729 70 American Missionary Magazine, 8,729 70 American Missionary Magazine, 866 83 Office expenses: Rent, Stationery, Fuel, etc., 668 83 Postage, 10 Discount on Bank notes, 11 Discount on Bank notes, 11 Discount on Bank notes, 12 Discount on Bank notes, | 4,426
781
848
69
185
927
66 | 02
60
85
60
95
95
29
45 |
| Paid to
Due for | ward $6068.
money borr | 86, $5268.70, le owed during th
edness, Sept. 19
n hand, | e last fiscal ye | . 799 66 | | | 1 | penses of Speakers, Freight, Salaries: Corresponding Secretaries and Assistant Treasurer, Paid borrowed Money, Balance, being cash on hand, Sept. 12, 1857, The Receipts for the Magasine, were $510.78, included in the above Receipts. LEWIS TAPPAN, Treasurer. | 197
25
8,785
5,268
878
$50,674 | 17
86
70
40 |

hereby certify that we have examined the accounts of Lewis Tappan, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the year ending the same to be correct; leaving a balance of cash in his hand, of eight hundred and seventy-eight dollars and forty cents.

JAMES O. BENNETT, WILLIAM E. WHITING, 5

Explanation.

The Annual Sermon was promised We inside a coming by Rev. in A. A. Barvel, of Now York Levis, from Mark 10, 16-15. "Go yo halo all the world, and promise the groups for every measure. He that rediscouls under the bank of shall be skewed to the chief believed not shall be durated." The color treatment of the proving a proventiant of was bold of sand continuity one hour; Rev. D. Barrose, of Ohio, presidings. At 9 others, the bissings maximize were resumed, and opened with preven Revid. G. For, of Acondot, was referented to make a statement relative to the condition $\mathbf{S} = \mathbf{T} \cdot \mathbf{U} \cdot \mathbf{V} \cdot \mathbf{I} \cdot \mathbf{M}$ by the Association, is Kanningry, and the results of the Montage where the tension acondot which the survey were likewest to

OF THE Contracts of the Contract the Contract of the Contract

ELEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING.

THE Association met in the Congregational Church, Mansfield, Ohio, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 14, at 2 P.M. In the absence of the President, Hon. Lawrence Brainerd, of Vt., F. D. Parish, Esq., of Ohio, a Vice-President, was called to the chair. Rev. A. D. Barber, and Rev. Geo. Thompson, of Ohio, were elected Recording Secretaries pro tem.

The Business of a public also specificated the same of the control of Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Perkins, of Ripley, O.

The following Committees were then appointed:

Business Committee.—Rev. J. B. Walker, Prof. T. B. Hudson, M. B. Bateham, Esq., Rev. L. A. Sawyer, Rev. G. Whipple, and Rev. Wm. C. Bartlett.

Committee on Nominations.—Rev. Henry Cowles, Rev. J. G. Fee, Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, Rev. J. D. Lawrence, and J. D. Whiting.

Mr. Walker read a letter from Mr. L. Tappan, Treasurer of the Association, stating the causes of his absence from the meeting. Referring to the importance of the principles of the Association, he urged the necessity of a continued, uncompromising adherence to them, in view of the low state of piety in the ministry and the churches, and the diluted character of much of the existing anti-slavery sentiment. The report of the Treasurer was read by the Secretary for the Foreign Department, and referred to an Auditing Committee consisting of J. O. Bennett and W. E. Whiting of New-York; and ordered to be published.

An abstract of the Annual Report of the Executive Committee on the condition of the missions, and the general operations of the Association, was read by the Secretaries. Subsequently, this report was accepted and ordered to be printed under the direction of Executive Committee.

The Annual Sermon was preached Wednesday evening by Rev. L. A. Sawyer, of New York, from Mark 16: 15-16. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

Thursday morning a prayer-meeting was held, commencing at 8 o'clock and continuing one hour; Rev. D. Burgess, of Ohio, presiding. At 9 o'clock the business meetings were resumed, and opened with prayer.

Rev. J. G. Fee, of Kentucky, was requested to make a statement relative to the condition and policy of the churches aided by the Association, in Kentucky, and the progress of the work there. During his remarks, several inquiries were put to Mr. Fee, and his answers were listened to with great satisfaction.

The Business Committee, through their chairman, Rev. Mr. Walker, reported several resolutions, which were discussed, amended, and adopted. Additional resolutions were reported by this Committee at different times during the progress of the meeting. They are published together, as finally adopted.

The Business Committee also reported the order of exercises for the afternoon and evening.

Thursday afternoon, the death of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ was commemorated by the members of the Association, and other Christians present. Rev. J. Keep made the opening address, and officiated in the distribution of the bread. Rev. E. B. Chamberlain also made an address, and distributed the cup.

At the close of these exercises the Association was again called to order for the transaction of business. The Committee on Nominations reported, and their report was adopted.

A resolution relative to the Ojibue and Mendi Missions, presented by the Rev. J. Keep, was referred to the Executive Committee with power.

The thanks of the Association were voted to Mr. Sawyer, for his discourse delivered the evening before, and a copy was requested for publication.

Discussion on the resolutions of the Business Committee was renewed, and continued till the close of the meeting.

Thursday evening the exercises were commenced with prayer by the Rev. Mr. Barber. Addresses were made by the Rev. Mr. Fee in special reference to the anti-slavery feature of Christian Missions for the slave States, and by Rev. Mr. Thompson relative to Missions in Africa. Brief addresses were also made by the Secretaries.

The thanks of the Association were voted to the Christian people of Mansfield for their hospitality, to the trustees of the church for the use of the church edifice, and to the choir for their services. The congregation then united in singing the Missionary Hymn, "From Greenland's toy mountains," after which the Association adjourned to meet next year at the call of the Executive Committee. Prayer was offered and the assembly was dismissed with the apostolic benediction by Rev. J. B. Walker.

The following officers were elected, as reported by the Committee on Nominations:

President.

Hon. LAWRENCE BRAINERD, Vermont.

Vice-Presidents.

Rev. David Thurston, Maine,
Rev. S. E. Cornish, New-York,
F. D. Parish, Esq., Ohio,
Arthur Tappan, Conn.

Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Department.

Rev. George Whipple, New York.

Corresponding Secretary for the Home Department.

Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, New-York.

Recording Secretary.

Rev. Henry Belden, New-York.

Treasurer.

LEWIS TAPPAN, Esq., New-York.

Executive Committee.

WILLIAM E. WHITING, New-York,
THOMAS RITTER, New-York,
HENRY BELDEN, New-York,
J. O. BENNETT, New-York,
D. M. GRAHAM, New-York,
A. N. FREEMAN, New-York,
A. M. T. DAWLEY, New-York,
GEORGE H. WHITE, New-York,
HENRY H. GARNET, New-York,
JOSIAH BREWER, Connecticut,
WILLIAM B. BROWN, New-Jersey,
ALMON UNDERWOOD, New-Jersey.

Ex-Officio Members of the Executive Committee.

George Whipple, S. S. Jocelyn,

LEWIS TAPPAN.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved. That we recognize in missionary efforts the great agency for the fulfillment of the Saviour's command to preach the Gospel to every creature; that we regard the cultivation of a missionary spirit, as an indispensable and most important part of a Christian education; and that we commend the missionary enterprise, which makes "the world our field," to the earnest prayers and self-denying contributions and toils of all who sympathize with Him who "is a propitiation not for our sins only, but for those of the whole world."

Resolved. That the thanks of the Association are due to the early and devoted friends of a pure Gospel, who from the beginning of the enterprise until the present time, have sided the cause by their prayers, benefactions, and personal efforts; and that we hold in reverential regard the memory and example of associates and friends, who, after giving their substance, and offering their prayers for the extension of a pure Gospel, have been taken to their reward.

Resolved, That while we rejoice in all progress towards right anti-slavery action made by the Missionary Societies of this country, we lament that any of them are still in complicity with American slavery, and that they give their powerful influence to sustain and extend a system at war with human welfare and happiness, with the influence and hoppy of the Gospel.

Resolved, That until the tone of piety is greatly elevated in this country, and a stronger confidence is placed in the agency of the Holy Spirit, and in the redeeming power of a pure and uncompromising Gospel, we can not justly expect that our national institutions for the discemination of religious tracts, and Sunday-school books or even the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, will be fully successful in subduing the hearts of sinners, or bringing them to the acknowledgment and practice of the truth.

Resolved, That we carnestly and affectionately call upon all who name the name of Christ, to come out fearlessly, consistently, and perseveringly, on the side of truth and righteousness, as individuals, or as members of churches, Missionary, Tract, Sunday-school, or ecclesiastical associations—to have no complicity with sin, or with systems of evil—and to give their support to those institutions only that aim to uphold the Christian religion in its purity and strictness, and in principles and practices abstain even from the appearance of evil.

Resolved, That we should be devoutly thankful to the Lord of Missions for the favor he has shown the Association from its commencement to the present time; for the testimony borne to his truth and faithfulness by those devoted men and women, who have fallen on missionary ground, and risen to glory; for the patient continuance in well doing of the missionaries and teachers, at bome and abroad, who still labor in the vine-yard of the Lord; and that we commend the enterprise, the officers of the Association, our missionaries and patrons, to the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and the sustaining graphs of Grid.

Resolved, That we affectionately and earnestly exhort our fellow Christians, in this time of pecuniary embarrassment, not to forget the claims of Christ upon them for a portion of the Lord's money still in their hands, and to remember in their paryers, and by their benefactions, the missionaries in this country, and in foreign lands, who have gone to their fields of labor relying upon being sustained under God by the constant benefactions of his people, and who have no other means of support than what they receive from our treasury.

Resolved, That the missionary and colportour work in the slave States, and their borders, and in Kansas, is regarded by us with great interest, and the success which has been granted by the God of missions encourages us to increased and vigorous efforts in the prosecution of this enterprise, and we earnestly commend it to the prayers, and liberal contributions, of the friends of Christ and of humanity.

Resolved, That the temperance cause is dear to this Association, and vital to the wellbeing of this nation, and to the Christian Church; and in its present condition calls for renewed efforts in its presecution.

Resolved, That we rejoice in the establishment of the American Reform Book and Tract Society, and heartily sympathize with it in its aim, as an efficient co-worker in the spread of the truth, and as one not afraid to declare the whole Gospel of God.

Resolved. That in the disasters and convulsions now taking place in this country and in other parts of the world, we recognize the hand of the Almighty; and inasmuch as the judgments of God are intended to teach men righteouaness, and his chastisements to lead them to repentance, we trust that the present overturnings will result in an increase of prayer and holy living, with more consecration of time and money to the cause of human redemption, and the upbuilding of the Redeemer's Kingdom.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

In the direct work of probleming the Coses to the decidence of our own and other countries, to the needer tog in Carbinan lates and the brathen chewberr, biroh-Tave been presented to encuesion and eight dim dust brough autoimes, having tweers if I man starties of a reverse

900 term to have a velocity bids most successfully be over 200 different Home uniquing thin base, product, in the devices parts of EVERY succeeding annual gathering of the friends of the American Missionary Association adds another year to our separation from the time when we set up our banners as a distinct missionary organization. It carries as forward, too, one stage towards the other extreme of our individual connection with it, when our personal and official relations to it must terminate. Already three Vice-Presidents, one of whom was for the first eight years its President; four members of the Executive Committee, and forty-one Life Members have reached that point, and departed from us.

They have been accompanied by sixteen of our missionary laborers in the Foreign field, (two of whom have deceased the last year,) and a number not now known, who have been connected with us as Home missionaries. They have ceased from their labors and have entered into their rest.

In the objects sought to be obtained by the formation of the Association, a measure of success has been granted to it. Two large missionary organizations, and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, N. S., have taken advanced ground relative to the wrongfulness of slavery, and the propriety of refusing to sustain slaveholding missionaries; and have uttered improved sentiments relative to the separation of slaveholders, as slaveholding is practised in the States and Territories of this Union. from the communion of churches established and sustained by the aid of funds contributed for Christian Missions. It is, however, matter of regret that their utterances do not enable us to determine how far they have been guided in this by their own enlightened convictions of duty, or how far it has been from the pressure brought to bear upon them by their constituents. A public sentiment has been formed, and is rapidly obtaining increased power, which demands, in terms that can not be easily misunderstood, that all benevolent, religious-publishing, Bible, missionary, and ecclesiastical organizations shall show, by unequivocal deeds, whether, on the great question of equal, Gospel love, they are with Christ or against him.

In the direct work of proclaiming the Gospel to the destitute of our own and other countries, to the neglected in Christian lands and the heathen elsewhere, labors have been prosecuted in connection with eight distinct foreign missions, having twenty different stations, and an aggregate of 130 laborers who have gone out from this country; and of over 200 different Home missionaries who have preached in the destitute parts of our own country from Massachusetts to the Rocky Mountains, and in at least four of the slaveholding States.

In every department of our contemplated work much remains yet to be done. With the exception of the Free Will Baptists, the Free Mission Baptists, the Wesleyans, the Associate Reformed, and the United Brethren's Board of Missions, we are, it is believed, the only missionary organization, in which, by the provisions of its constitution, slaveholders are precluded from admission to membership, from a voice in the control of the Society's operations, and from communion with its mission churches, and from whose churches, in practice, all slaveholders are excluded: with the exceptions named, the only one which refuses to receive into its treasury the gains of the oppressor, or to solicit funds in quarters where such gains mingle largely with all the sources of wealth. In some organizations included in the category of religious or benevolent societies, the silence of death seems to reign, in relation to this crying abomination; some others are openly honoring slaveholders by electing them to the most honorable offices within their gift; and the Executive of one, notwithstanding the direct instructions of their constituents, refuse to touch even the acknowledged vices of the system, or the duties of masters which are supposed to grow out of it.

In the great work of evangelizing the destitute parts of the world, that which has been done scarcely deserves to be named, by reason of the incomparably greater work that is yet to be done. Were the number of missionary organizations increased tenfold, and every one carried forward with tenfold efficiency and success; and were the officers and missionaries of each endued with an angel's purity, and fired with a scraph's zeal, there would be ample employment to engage all hearts, and fill all hands.

During the year just closed, two assistant missionaries have been appointed and joined their missions. Three others are now under appointment. Two assistant missionaries, one in Jamaica and one in Africa, have deceased; and the death of thirteen life-members has been reported to us. Two hundred and sixty new names have been added to the list of life-members, which now numbers 1956.

SUMMARY OF MISSIONS.

| The whole number | rof | Missions is | vil. weda il | du soutien | id | 0100 | Jegi | trale. | Lion | -103 |
|--------------------|-----|--------------|---------------|--------------|----|--------|------|--------|------|------|
| Sunday of the said | of | stations and | out-stations, | And be sould | | Carlo. | | 11. | die | 25 |
| 100 11 | of | missionaries | sent out from | this country | y, | LANGE. | 933 | 150 | 100 | 5 |

The number of native assistants, 10 " churches in foreign missions, 16 " church members in them, 1550 In the home field, the number of missionaries is 95 Of colporteurs, 2

MENDI MISSION, WEST-AFRICA,

HAS 3 STATIONS, AND 7 OUT-STATIONS.

Missionaries.—Rev. J. S. Brooks, D. W. Burron, Mrs. Burron, Mrs. Mars, and Miss McIntosu, and five native Assistants.

Mr. Matthew Mair and wife were appointed by the Executive Committee, to this Mission Nov. 17, and sailed for Africa Dec. 1, 1856, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Burton, who were returning to the Mission after a short absence, occasioned by his illness. They were accompanied also by Rev. D. K. Flickinger, Rev. W. B. Witt, M.D., and Rev. Mr. Billhimer, under the care of the Board of Missions of the United Brethren in Christ. The two brethren last named have labored in connection with our Mission since their arrival in Africa.

This company reached Freetown Jan. 14, and soon after joined the Mission.

The Executive Committee regretted exceedingly their inability to send out a larger company at that time. It was greatly needed, and the Mission has suffered from the want of it. They then hoped soon to send an ordained missionary and his wife, but the failure of his health prevented.

After spending a short time at Good Hope station, Mr. and Mrs. Mair accompanied Mr. Brooks to the Boom Falls station, Feb. 24. On the 7th of March Mr. Mair was taken sick with fever of a dangerous character; but on the 21st had so far recovered as to be up and out of doors. On that day, from an act of great imprudence, probably caused by the action of the disease on his brain, he suffered a severe relapse, and died at Freetown, April 26, where he had been taken to secure the counsels and assistance of an English physician. His disease, it is said, was a complicated one of the ear, with water on the brain. A similar case has never before occurred at the Mission.

Mr. Mair was a native of the parish of Galston, Ayrshire, Scotland. He was an humble and devotedly pious man; his heart seemed full of the love of God, and he was always ready to speak of Christ and his great salvation. Had he lived, he would doubtless have been greatly useful in Africa.

Application had been made by Mrs. Tefft, widow of the late Rev. J. C. Tefft, to be released from her connection with the Mission. This was granted, and she arrived in New-York, in December, accompanied by Miss McIntosh, who is expected to re-join the Mission this autumn.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee returned to the United States in April last, at the instance of the Executive Committee, and, soon after, resigned their connection with the Mission. These successive changes left the Mission very feeble, and greatly increased the benefit derived from Dr. Witt's and Mr. Billhimer's connection with it. It is difficult to see how their services could have been dispensed with.

Good-Hope Station,

During the early part of Mr. Burton's absence, was under the care of Mr. Brooks; but in October last he returned to Boom Falls, leaving this station in charge of Dr. and Mrs. Lee, who remained there till Mr. Burton's return. The Mission has suffered from want of a more constant superintendence.

There has been no ordained missionary permanently attached to the Good-Hope station since its commencement, and no Mission Church has been formed thera. The professing Christians connected with the station are attached to the Church at Kaw Mendi.

In one of Mr. Burton's letters he gives the following account of his plans relative to the school at Good Hope:

"1st. Our children are bound to the Mission, and no person is to interfere with us in our management of them. 2d. They live with us, as children live with their parents in America, and eat at the table with us; each has a comfortable bed, and sleeps alone. 3d. They are kept entirely separate from the heathen people, or as much as is possible, and are required to work as much as they are able, while out of school, allowing them a reasonable time for recreation. 4th. Our children are in school four hours each day, in a room in the house, and are taught by one of our number. 5th. We try in every thing to manage our family as a well-regulated Christian family should be conducted in America. We feel encouraged in our work, and think that the children are improving. We have twenty-five children, twelve boys and thirteen girls, the most of them quite

The Sabbath-school numbers forty. Mr. Burton teaches a class of seven himself. Four of them have been taken into the Mission since November, 1854, and could not then speak a word of English. Now they read well, and are studying Grammar and Arithmetic in school. His class of seven in Sabbath-school, together learn voluntarily ninety or more verses in the Bible of a Sabbath. He thinks they learn as fast as any children.

There is also an out-school, connected with this station. It numbers over twenty scholars. It was formerly taught by Mrs. Tefft, but is now taught by a native teacher. The rules of the Mission require that no native should be employed as teacher in whose Christian character they have not confidence.

Kaw-Mendi Station.

In our last Report, it was stated that a change had been made at this station, and that henceforward it would be placed under the care of native teachers, and be regarded as an out-station. Owing to a misunderstand-the Sherbro our years ago. It is situated in about 7 de Sherbro Island, nearly opposite the moupleted during the year 1856, under the suly and a school of twenty-four children. t 7 deg. mouth of the Boor e superintendence of h. About five-eigh the

the mis

were completed ssion family and ing of the views and purposes of the Executive Committee, the change has been more rapid and more extensive than we proposed; and we fear that a good deal has been lost by it. One of the native teachers employed there, disappointed the hopes of the Mission, and in a short time proved himself utterly unworthy.

Soon after Mr. Burton's return to Africa, Mr. Brooks, Mr. Mair, and he, went to Kaw-Mendi together, to examine into the condition of the station. The following extracts are taken from their report:

"Mr. Burton had introduced the subject of removing the school to some healthier location, and requested them to express their views and feelings freely. When the matter had been fully set before them, the church and people of the town asked for a little time to confer together, which was granted, and the meeting was adjourned. The people, anxious to communicate their decision, sent a committee to us as we were about to retire to rest. Their response was short and decided, namely: 'We can not abandon Kaw-Mendi. The graves of our missioneries are here. We can not leave them to the heathen. We have been helped and blessed by missionaries; but though poor, we are not helpels. We can live—live as Christians should—here at Kaw-Mendi, though our missionaries are not here—which the heathen declare we can not do. We want to demonstrate to them that religion does not disqualify us for self-government and self-support. Besides, we have children who have an interest in our homes and farms. If we go elsowhere, this land falls back into the heads of the heathen, and we gain nothing, while we lose, so far as our homes and lands are concerned, all we have. We choose, therefore, to stay here.'

"We were surprised, and exceedingly gratified, to hear such a manly, free, and honest, yea, Christian response. We asked them to consider well their choice; what they could do for a splool, for their government, and for the church, and report the same to us in the morning. On the morning of the 13th, we met and inquired into the condition of

They found thirty members, in the piety of whom the missionaries have confidence. The names of six, who did not stand well in the church, were omitted. They were to be examined, and perhaps disciplined.

"One member of the church had lately died in sure and certain hope of the resurrection to life. Three of the church are poor, and need charity. Means will be devised for their support.

"The people of the town appointed officers for their government, and reported the same, which was very satisfactory. They then requested us to notify the chiefs of their determined neutrality in all war questions, and to allow them to refer all 'palayer' of great moment, to us, and enjoy our protection. As to the question of school, they felt that they could not do without one, but they could not support it alone; they would do what they could. They would send their children, and make laws compelling all to send their children to school; would keep the school-house in repair, and the teacher's house also, excepting the carpenter work, which would be a small amount. They would look after the school and teacher, feed and clothe their children, but begged us to supply them with a teacher, and their school with books. As to the church and the Sabbath, they were prepared to enact stringent Sabbath laws, and also to do what they could to support the church.

"We accepted their offers with a good degree of pleasure. It was more than we ex-

"We accepted their offers with a good degree of pleasure. It was more than we expected. They seemed so earnest and interested, that we could not help sympathizing in their confidence of success. We assured them of our hearty cooperation and 'readiness to help them do what they could not do. We cheered them, and begged them to act nobly for themselves. We then nominated three of their number, who were appointed a School Committee. This committee is to have the general oversight of the school, look after the buildings, and communicate with us, as servants of the people and as our adverter.

agents.

"We recommend that Kaw-Mendi school and church be thrown upon themselves, under the watch and care of the Mission, and be regarded as an out-station of Good Hope, with the understanding that we help the church in the support of its school, etc., so far as to make up what they can not do for themselves. They are willing, and desire to try for themselves. Let them do so. It is time they should: We want the people to feel that they have the responsibility of the care and support of the school, while we stand by them, to suggest and direct, cheer and help them."

Instructions were given by the Mission to John Johnson, (Daddy Johnson, as he is generally called,) Mr. Thompson's interpreter, and to George N. Jewett, relative to the management of the station, and it was left to their care. Copies of these instructions were sent to the Executive Committee, and approved of.

In the February number of the American Missionary, the death of one of the members of this church is mentioned. He died a Christian.

"A few days before his death, he requested the king, in whose house he was, to remove away all the gree-grees and superstitions, deposited in almost every part of the house; adding, that as he was going to die, he would not like any heathen-ish customs and ceremonies to be observed on his account after his death. He further added, that the Lord Jesus Christ had saved his soul. Astonished at such a remark, the king said: 'Is it possible that one born in this country, should abhor its customs and practices? The white man's religion is very great.'"

Boom Falls Station.

During a large part of the year, this station has been under the care of native assistants, Mr. Brooks having been compelled by the wants of the Mission, to labor elsewhere. In his last report, Mr. Brooks says:

"My labors at Boom Falls and Upper Boom, have been much broken, and were it not for the very faithful conduct of my native associates, I could say but little of progress. Owing to the fact of my long absence, I have called upon them to make a report of their labors, from which I shall copy,"

From those extracts, we learn that during Mr. Brooks' absence, there had been no increase or decrease of the church. Those who had professed religion, remained firm in the faith of Christ. Services had been held twice on the Sabbath, at the station, and at times some of the young persons connected with the mission family, had manifested feeling and interest in religious subjects. Schools had been regularly maintained at Mo-Tappan, and several neighboring villages. Connected with these schools, public religious meetings had been regularly held, both on the Sabbath and other days, at five out-stations, and occasionally at five other African villages. At three different places, persons had thrown away their idols and charms, and declared they would never more resort to them, but would serve the living and true God; and at another, an aged woman, just on the verge of eternity, gave what they regarded as satisfactory evidence of having given her heart to God.

Mr. Brooks writes that a new and delightful place for a mission station, had been secured in the region of country called Upper Boom. The site is called the Hermitage, and the hill on which it is situated, Salem Hill. He says it is central, high, and has no swamps near to make it unhealthy, and is well supplied with fine spring water. It has a most desirable north-easterly prospect. He is very desirous of having it speedily occu-and the beating of the Printing of the Printin pied; but this can not be done, until more laborers are supplied to the Mission. Their number ought to be doubled.

In this connection, we deem it proper to introduce the testimony of Rev. Mr. Witt, already referred to, a missionary of the United Brethren in Christ, both to the value of missions in Africa, in general, and the Mendi Mission in particular.

In writing to the Religious Telescope, the organ of his own Board, he

"I have been agreeably disappointed as to the influence that missions have exerted upon the people through all the country where I have been. In Freetown, the Sabbath is more strictly observed than it is by our civilized people in Cincinnati; and a far greater proportion attend church than in our cities. Down in the country, the populace feel the influence of the Mendi Mission, and now it is safe for a Christian to go through the whole country, where, a few years ago, he had to buy his way, and then, if he had any thing of value, run a fair chance of losing his life.

"The British Consul of Sherbro, Mr. Hanson, says that wherever he goes through the country he finds some who take him to their houses, and tender their hospitalities. On inquiring of them where they learned to do these things to a stranger, their answer is, at the Mendi Mission. It has created in the minds of the kings and people a desire for peace so that they may become civilized. If it were not for unprincipled men who engage in the slave-trade, and encourage war upon one another as the means of getting slaves, universal peace would soon reign throughout the whole country. It is true that the slave-factories have all been destroyed in this part of Africa, but they now take them off in the night, in canoes, for some 200 or 300 miles, to the Rio Pongos, where they are shipped as heretofore.

"The missionary labor in this part of the country has been gloriously acknowledged of God. We can never have the hardships to endure that some of our predecessors have had, for the way has been opened and many of the greatest difficulties removed."

In a letter to the Corresponding Secretary of this Association, dated May 28, 1857, at Mo-Tappan Station, Mr. Witt wrote:

"I came to this place last Saturday night, and have, as my object, the learning of the Mendi and Sherbro languages; to which I expect to devote myself, most of the time.

When necessary, I will assist brother Brooks in his labors. There is very much work to do in this country, and I look upon it as your most inviting field, in many respects. I can say that in every respect, I have found the Mendi Mission in a much better condition than I ever expected to, from the most glowing descriptions I ever heard. The longer I am here, the more I am convinced that God is in this work.

"My health is good, and has been for some time past, and I see nothing in the way of its continuing so, if I still pay due regard to the laws of nature.

"Brother Brooks should have rest, for a time, at least; and I think a sea voyage of some three or four months, would be the best thing he could have. The only objection that I see to this, is, now to spare him; his work is so great, and is deepening and widening every day. Such a field, I never saw before. So many hundred thousand souls, without a shepherd—all in the way to death! 'Say not it is yet three months until harvest.' Oh! for more laborers."

This plea for laborers is but a reiteration of what almost every letter, from Africa, brings us. In the early part of the year, it was stated that the Mission needed more laborers, and must have them, or a retrograde movement would have to be made, that would be disastrous. The needed help has not been granted us, and the apprehended evil results have, in some measure, followed. We fear that, unless it is soon supplied, the souls of some for whom high hopes have been indulged, will be forever

JAMAICA MISSION.

ISLAND OF JAMAICA, W. L.

BRAINERD Missionaries, Rev. H. B. Hall, Mrs. Hall. Teachers, Mr. A. B. Hills, Mrs. HILLS. ET.IOT Missionaries, Rev. L. Thompson, Mrs. Thompson. Teacher, Miss Lucy Missionaries, Rev. C. B. Venning, Mrs. Venning. Assistant Teacher, James MAILLET. Mallories, Rev. C. C. Staebuck, Mrs. Staebuck.* Under the pastoral care of Mr. Staebuck. Teachers, Mr. Thaddeus Hoppin, Mrs. Hoppin, OBERLIN..... BRANDON HILL. Under the pastoral care of Mr. Venning.

RICHMOND Missionaries, Rev. S. T. Wolcott, Mrs. Wolcott. Assistant, Miss S. A. SEA VIEW..... (Out-Station of Eliot.) Teachers, Miss Woodcook and Miss C. E. Ferriman. ROCK RIVER.... (Out-Station of Eliot.) Teacher, Robert Jackson. GOOD HOPE.... (Out-Station of Brainerd.) Teacher, W.J. DAVIR.

This Mission is established among the emancipated people of the Island of Jamaica. It has connected with it ten stations and out-stations, and nineteen missionary laborers. During the year one female missionary has died, and one has returned to the United States for the improvement of her health.

In September last, Mr. Charles B. Venning was ordained to the Gospel ministry, and installed as pastor over the Mission Church at Chesterfield, by a council called for that purpose. He had been on the Island twenty years, and been connected with our Mission nine years. For two years preceeding his installation he had acted as stated supply to the church at Chesterfield, and had charge of a large school there.

Letters from the Mission speak of the exercises at his ordination as refreshing and salutary. They were welcoming to the ministry a brother of whose qualifications they had most ample proof, and whose devotedness to the work has been shown to equal his fitness.

The church at Eliot, under the pastoral care of Mr. Thompson, has enjoyed some manifestations of the Spirit's presence. In May Mr. Thompson wrote that eight new members had been added to the church at its last communion. The Sabbath services were solemn, and the Spirit's influences were present, in making application of the truth. In addition to the duties of his station, Mr. Thompson has taught a part of the year at Richmond.

The church at Brandon Hill, now under the care of Mr. Venning, has never had a resident pastor. It was gathered by Mr. Hall, and during his residence at Providence, he preached to them regularly but once on the Sabbath. Much of the care of the church has, therefore, been left to the membership. The results have been gratifying, and lead to the hope that with judicious preparation the churches may soon be trained to manage their own affairs.

On the 27th of May, Miss Mary J. McGraine, who joined the Mission in December, 1855, was united to Rev. C. C. Starbuck in marriage, and removed soon afterwards from Eliot, where she was teaching, to Providence. She was taken ill the next day, of bilious fever, and died June 30th. She was a graduate of the Female Seminary, Rockford, Ill., and had succeeded well in her missionary work. She is the first actual laborer who has been removed by death from that Mission.

The enterprise, commenced a few years since at Richmond, is prospering. More than a thousand acres of land were purchased, for which a special fund was raised, a part of which, with the buildings on the estate, is reserved for an industrial school. The remaining part is being sold in small parcels to the people, who had atherwise found it impossible to purchase land, from the unwillingness of the planters, or holders of large properties, to sell their land in small quantities. The desire of the people to purchase land is increasing.

Early in the year we published a letter taken from the Jamaica Morning Journal. It was written by the Hon. Richard Hill, a native of the Island, and a member of the Governor's Council, who had visited the school at Richmond, and published a report of what he saw there, as the basis of an appeal to the friends of the people, and those interested in the welfare of the colony, for such aid to the enterprise, as would enable the managers of it to provide the needed buildings. He commends the school in the highest terms, and says:

"If nothing was sought to be accomplished, but what has been here shown to be effected, the American Mission has well and sufficiently done its work; but they tell us they seek to do more. The institution looks forward to a more extended training preparatory to the learned professions, whenever circumstances may demand it; but it more especially and earnestly hopes to be instrumental in qualifying pious youths for the Missionary work, for teachers and Christian ministers."

Some account of the success of this enterprise, taken from a private letter from Mr. Wolcott, was, published in the September number of the Missionary, giving an encouraging view of its results.

In reporting the condition of Richmond Station, August 1, Mr. Wolcott wrote:

"The school closes for the August holidays with 36 on the list, 21 males and 15 females. Two have left not expecting to return. Applications for places with us are numerous, quite beyond our ability to receive. Several will be received after holidays, and among them two African girls from a captured slaver. Thirty-two of the above are members of my family.

"The closing examinations show a commendable intellectual improvement; and when we consider their moral development, we have hope enough to stimulate our zeal, and increase our desire to make greater efforts in their behalf. * * Most of our older pupils seem inclined to prolong their stay much beyond our anticipations, and though our discipline is much more severe in many respects, than that of their early childhood, they are not sufficiently annoyed by it to make them willing to leave us. Our course is thoroughly, unflinchingly industrial, designed to meet the wants of the mass, to develop a self-dependent, and hence independent manhood."

Arrangements have been made to convey one hundred acres of this land, including the school building and the ancient "Great House" of the estate, to a board of trust, to be perpetually held for the purposes of the Industrial school, which will thus be placed upon a permanent basis.

Mr. Thompson wrote that the Spirit of the Lord appeared to be present at Richmond, and that some of the scholars had been hopefully converted. Condition of the churches and schools in statistical form:

| STATIONS. | Congregations. | Rec'd to the Church on profession. | Rec'd to the Church
by letter. | Cut off. | Deceased. | Church Members in good standing. | Contributions by the people, exclusive of that contributed for Schools. | Number in Sabbath-
School, |
|---------------|----------------|---------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|----------|-----------|-------------------------------------|---|-------------------------------|
| Brainerd, | 350 | 10 | 2 | 2 | 4 | 120 | $118 71 | 175 |
| Eliot, | 280 | 8 | 5 | 2 | 1 | 84 | £28 1 3 | 160 |
| Oberlin, | 75 | 4 | | 1 | 1 | 45 | $27 36 | 40 |
| Providence, | 75 | 1. | | 1 | 2 | 40 | $14 52 | 40 |
| Chesterfield, | 200 | 8 | 8 | 3 | 1 | 61 | £11 11 10‡ | 70 |
| Brandon Hill, | 100 | 7 | | 1 | 1.1. | 36 | £4 12 9 | 30 |

| Sohools. * | Male
Pupils. | Female
Pupils. | Whole
Number of
Scholars. | Contributed
for the support of the
Schools. |
|--------------------------------|-----------------|-------------------|---------------------------------|--|
| Richmond, (Industrial School,) | 21 / | 15 | 36 | |
| Eliot, | 38 | 23 | 61 | £11 6 0 |
| Oberlin, | 39 | 32 | 71 | $23 40 |
| Chesterfield, | 56 | 33 | 89 | £8 10 41 |
| Mt. Patience, | | 1. | 85 | $22 62 |
| Good Hope, | | | 62 | $12 52 |
| Sea View, | 39 | 29 | 68 | £7 14 6 |
| Rock River, | 30 | 5 | 35 | £12 00
Pledged. |

The Mission mention, as a cause of discouragement, that the contributions of the people, for the support of the Gospel, and to sustain their schools, are diminishing, while their facilities for making money are increasing. This is supposed to arise in part from the fact that their personal and family expenses incident to their improved condition, increase faster than their incomes. In some cases the falling off has doubtless been increased in consequence of an insufficiency of pastoral labor. There have not been missionaries enough in the field to enable them to give that constant supervision to the churches which their best interests demand. The feeling is, however, pretty general that the people can do, and ought to do, more for the support of the Gospel and education among them, than they have done.

There has been no special outpouring of the Spirit of God at any of the stations; yet to all the churches but one there have been additions on profession of faith. The aggregate number thus received into these five churches, has been thirty-seven.

There is pressing need of more laborers at this Mission, both of ordained missionaries and teachers, male and female. This want is greatest perhaps at Richmond. An ordained missionary, one who is qualified to be at the head of the school, and supervise all its internal arrangements, would there find a promising field of usefulness. The services of such an one seem almost essential to the prosperity of the enterprise.

The evil reports concerning the results of emancipation in Jamaica, that have been put in circulation by persons interested in sustaining slavery in this country, are being every where refuted. The Colonial Government, and English and American travellers and missionaries, unite in bearing testimony that emancipation has not been a failure, but a blessing to the whole population, white and colored. Speaking of the West-Indies, an English writer, qualified to judge, says: "They yield more produce than they ever did during the existence of slavery. Since its abolition not a drop of blood has been shed by popular disturbance; no destruction of property has been caused, nor a single crime committed by mobs." The rapidly increasing price of lands, and the abundant prosperity of those who are willing to treat their laborers as freemen, prove to be utterly false the assertion that the emancipated will not work for wages.

The missionaries in Jamaica, laboring as they are to elevate and christianize the emancipated people, are doing a good and great work, one that must ultimately act with power on the destinies of the slaves in this country.

OBIJUE MISSION-MINNESOTA TERRITORY.

Stations .- Cass LAKE, LAKE WINNIPHO, and RED LAKE.

Missiondries.—Rev. S. G. Wright; Rev. A. Barnard, David B. Spencer, Joseph S. Fisher, E. Walder, C. Garver, Robert Laybert, Mrs. Whight; Mrs. Barnard, Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Carver, Mrs. Laybert, and Miss Strong.

This Mission, in common with other missions among the Ojibues, has suffered greatly from the opposition of the Indians, and the disturbed condition of their country. The station at Red Lake has been suspended, temporarily at least, in consequence of the troubles, growing out of the unreasonable demands of the Indians upon the missionaries for secular labors and assistance. Mr. Wright, who had been left there alone, has now removed to the new station at Lake Winnipec.

Rev. Mr. Bardwell, the General Agent in behalf of that Mission, has spent some months in the Indian country, and has made a report to the Executive Committee, from which we make some extracts. He says: The Indians and half-bloods at Red Lake have manifested considerable anxiety to have that station continued; not, he fears, because they are interested in hearing the Gospel, but on account of the temporal benefits which they all derive from the Mission. The chief made a journey to Lake Winnipec, after the missionaries left Red Lake, for the purpose of having an interview with Mr. Bardwell, to persuade him to have the station reopened. He would relinquish all pretense of any claim upon the missionaries for aid in secular labors; would give them as much land and timber as they wanted, and was ready to promise almost any thing the Mission should ask. The Mission were not satisfied, however, that he could control the leading spirits of the band, and concluded that it was not best to return to Red Lake at present.

A number of the children who had attended the school at this station, have been removed to Cass Lake, and the little church that has been gathered there is left, at present, without a guide.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, and Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, and Miss Strong, have continued their labors at Cass Lake. Miss Strong has had charge of the school. There have been sixteen boarding scholars in constant attendance. The studies have been mostly elementary, and the pupils are reported as having made good progress. She has also taught an Indian school, for children who live in the lodges, which was commenced at the request of some of the young people. Their sessions were one hour per day, the attendance varying from six to twenty-five. The pupils appeared to be interested in the exercises, and profited by them.

The Winnepec station is yet in its infancy, and the buildings necessary for the comfort of the missionaries, and the work of the Mission, are not completed. The Indians there are represented as improving in temporal things. Mr. Bardwell says, they are probably raising three times as much provision as ever before.

There have been no conversions reported by the Mission during the year, which has been one of great trials and discouragements to the laborers connected with it. Mr. and Mrs. Barnard who have been absent from the Mission for more than a year, partly on account of the ill-health of Mrs. Barnard, are expected to return to it soon.

A suitable treaty made by our Government with these Indians, and enforced, would, it is thought, remove some of the difficulties under which the missionaries among them are laboring; but this is not done, neither are they protected, as heretofore, from the great influx of whiskey, which threatens to work their complete destruction, both of body and soul. The Red Lake station is at least 150 miles from any frontier settlement, and yet barrels of whiskey are carried there, much of the way on men's backs. Mr. Bardwell says: "The doom of the Indian will soon be sealed, unless more efficient means are adopted by our Government to stop this stream of death."

The labors and exposures of these missionaries have been arduous in the extreme. In going from one station to another, they have had to travel day and night, or encamp in the open air, wrapped only in their blankets, or buffalo robes, sometimes with the thermometer below the freezing-point of mercury. Their labors, though not blessed with large results, have not been in vain in the Lord. Some of the brightest examples of Christian character of which we have ever read, have been seen among these Indians. Such was the case of an Indian girl who died some years since, and that of an aged woman who died more recently, and such, we think, the cases of some who yet survive.

In reviewing the history of the Red Lake station, Mr. Wright says:

"Twenty persons have professed to turn to God since the Mission was established, including the young man who spent the past winter in Oberlin, Ohio, and the girl who died at Leech Lake; neither of these had joined our church; four of those who joined the church have died in the triumphs of faith; three were excommunicated. Of the eleven others I can say that I believe that they will be found among the sauctified at the last day. This is hallowed ground; it has been the scene of much hard toil and self-denial, and much prayer for the good of this people. I look with mingled feelings of sorrow and rejoicing upon the past."

The following account of the triumphant death of the girl at Leech Lake is given by one of the missionaries:

"She was a little sick, and while standing by the fire, fainted, and fell into it, and was burned all over. She lived fourteen days. She was at home. She learned about food and the Saviour when she was here, and when at home, though she had no one to teach her, the Holy Spirit helped her to remember the instruction she had received, and she gave her heart to God. She was very happy. Notwithstanding all her pain and suffering, she was able to speak until she breathed her last. Just as ahe was dying, her father said to her; 'My daughter, God will take you to heaven, for he saves such as you.' 'Yes,' said Jane, 'I am already there. I see Jesus—he takes me;' and as she said that, breathed her last. She was ten or twelve years of age."

The general labors of this Mission will hereafter be more concentrated. Some advantages will thus be secured to the missionaries, and a better opportunity given to those of them who speak the Ojibue, to itinerate and preach the Gospal from lodge to lodge among the people.

SANDWICH ISLANDS .- MAKAWAO, EAST-MAUI.

THREE STATIONS AND SIX OUT STATIONS.

Missionaries .- Rev. J. S. GREEN, Mrs. GREEN, Six Native Assistants.

Mr. and Mrs. Green are now in the thirteenth year of their missionary life. "Faint yet pursuing," he says may be said of them, "for to any but drones in the missionary hive the labors and cares of nearly thirty years must, unless a miracle were wrought in their behalf, induce a measure of faintness." They are, however, still able to labor efficiently. Mr. Green has not been detained from the house of God, by illness, for a single Sabbath during the year. Neither has there been any general sickness to keep the people away.

Among the afflictive dispensations of providence, he mentions the death of Kaauwai as the most important, some account of which has been published in the Missionary. Several members of the church have also been removed. One of his native assistants, one of the eldest, was laid aside for some months by a paralytic stroke, but had so far recovered as to be able to attend public worship and address the people.

Some additions have been made to the churches at Keokea and Huelo, the exact number of which Mr. Green did not report. The three churches under his care will, he thinks, become congregational in form of government.

The condition of our Mission on these islands is statistically reported as

| | | ¥. | | | | | | | |
|-------------------|-----|-------|----|----|-----|-------|----|----|-------|
| Stations, . | ٠. | | | | | 4 | | ٠. | 3 |
| Out-stations, . | | | | ٠. | | -3 | | | 6 |
| Pastor, | ٠, | | | | | | | | 1 |
| Assistants, | | 1. | | | |
4 | | | 6 |
| Church members, | | | | | 1 | ž | | 4 | Arres |
| Huelo, in Hamakua | | | , | |). | ., | | | 171 |
| Halehaku, . | | | | | | | | | 100 |
| Keokea, . | | | | | | | | | 471 |
| Makawao and Apue |), | ٠. | 14 | | | | 7. | | 72 |
| Kalani-Kahua, | | | | | . 4 | | | | 178 |
| Hamakuapoko and I | Ial | imail | е, | | | | 4 | d | 30 |
| Total, | | | | | | | | 9 | f.622 |

The following account of the labors of the year is abridged from Mr. Green's report:

"At Makawao we have a meeting-house of stone, well built, glazed, and covered with thatch. It is 78 feet by 38, and will accommodate all who desire to attend. Here my chief labors are performed. At sunrise I meet those who live near, with whom I read the five chapters for the day, solve difficulties, and explain as I am able. I think much of this exercise, and my people never tire of it, though I am commonly with them two hours. At 11 o'clock I preach in English at our own house to my family and to others who desire to attend. I have from 10 to 25 hearers. During this hour our people at the meeting-house have their Sabbath-school, composed of men, women, and children. I am with them at about 1 o'clock, when I question the children on their recitations and on the decalogue. I then call upon such as have a verse of Scripture committed to memory, to recite. This they do sometimes to the number of fifty or sixty. After this we sing, pray, speak, and hear the words of eternal life. At the close of the sermon, the members of the church remain, with such as desire to unite, and we rehearse the 'daily food,' or verses of the day, accompanied with such explanation and remarks as seem appropriate to the occasion. Thus, at about 3 o'clock P.M., the public exercises of the day are closed, in season for all to reach home ere night. I have been thus particular in my account of the labors of the Sabbath, as it is the day emphatically for sowing the seed of truth, which, with the blessing of God, will spring up to life everlasting. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven,' so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth.' Isainh 55: 10, 11.

"LABORS ON OTHER DAYS BESIDES THE SABBATH.

"Of the labors of Wednesdays, as they are becoming more and more important in the estimation of the people as well as my own, I will say something. Many attend this day, and do so at the expense of much ridicule from certain sons of Belial—men from Christian lands who reside in the neighborhood. They can well afford to spend the day thus, if they will labor the rest of the time, as the diligent improvement of three, or even two days of the week in this congenial climate will enable any Hawalian to provide for the days of the week in this congenial climate will enable any Hawaiian to provide for the simple wants of his family. Many of the people, therefore, attend; besides children and youth who are instructed by my son.

"Of late I commence the labors of this day at 10 o'clock A.M. First, a class of twelve, mostly young men; this is my theological class. They have all come prepared to read simple dissertations on the attributes of God—his power, wisdom, justice, and goodness. One, or two, takes a text and preaches a short sermon, partly written and partly extempore, uniting the two plans. We spend together two hours in this manner. By this time others have come in, and we turn to other things—geography, Church history, and moral science. We then read and hear an essay on the importance of agriculture, the history of Hawaiian agriculture, motives to labor, etc., etc. We sometimes have a disputation on some practical and important subject. This brings us to 2 o'clock P.M., and now I dismiss those who live at a great distance. We, who remain, inquire into difficulties which may have sprung up in the church, and do what we can to adjust them. I inquire also into the state of things among the people generally, and close by exhortation and prayer. The labors of this day are arduous, scarcely less so than the Sabbath; but I could not dispense with them without great loss.

"Saturday evening the members of the church near by meet me at the house of God, for reading and prayer, preparatory to the labors of the Sabbath. We continue to observe the monthly concert for the conversion of the world to Christ; the monthly concert for the enslaved; also the concerts for schools and for seamen. These, with occasional funeral addresses at the graves of our people, constitute the labor of other days besides the Sabbath.

"We have quarterly communions at each of our three stations. These are seasons of much interest, and I trust of spiritual profit. Some additions have been made to the church at Keokea, also at Huelo. I am not able to report the exact number till I have access to the records of those branches of the church.'

Mr. Green wrote that when it was necessary for him to be absent on the Sabbath, his place was supplied by his son, who was at that time teaching a native school, also a school in the English language, for which the people had been urgent in their petitions. In conclusion he says:

"On behalf of my people I thank you for your sympathy and cooperation with us as a mission. We greatly need your prayers, that the means of grace here may be accompanied by the influences of the Holy Spirit."

CANADA MISSION.

NEAR WINDSOR, CANADA WEST.

Missionaries .- Rev. DAVID HOTCHKISS and Mrs. HOTCHKISS.

These missionaries continue to labor among the colored population in Canada, most of whom are fugitives from the oppressions of slavery in the United States. Mrs. Hotchkiss has taught a small school with encouraging success, and Mr. Hotehkiss has devoted himself to the more direct duties of the ministry. His labors have been faithful and persevering, and have been apparently blessed with success in the conversion of souls to Christ.

It has, however, happened to him, as it frequently did to Paul and his fellow-laborers, that his faithfulness and his success have been the occasion of stiring up certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, so that at one time it was thought by some lookers-on that his life was in danger, and that he might be compelled to leave the scene of his present labors. He thinks, however, that there will be no need of this, and that the opposition is decreasing.

At the date of our last report, Mr. Hotchkiss had gathered a little church of 13 members. In November it had increased to 17, and in March to 22; subsequently 3 more were added. At these dates he wrote very encouragingly. Though there were some two or three members of whom he stood in doubt, yet the church seemed to be growing in every thing essential to good order and permanent growth. In it he said there was a "goodly number of as pious men and women as he ever knew any where." The friends of Christ, and of the oppressed, he thought, would be greatly rejoiced if they were present at some of their meetings on the Sabbath. He was confident that God was answering the prayers of his people for the success of the work there.

In June, three more were added to the church, making their number 28. One of them was an old man who had escaped from slavery last fall; he had been shot at three times, and been whipped almost to death for attempting to run away, but was regarded by the church as one of its brightest jewels. Mr. H. relates an incident showing the simple piety of the old man:

"Walking along the road one day," he says, "I saw a man standing by a small stream of running water, with his back to me and his hat on the ground by his side, stream of running water, with his back to me and his has on the ground by his said, apparently washing himself. As I approached him, I heard a peculiar groan that I knew was Uncle Harry's. I came up slowly, for I knew he was praying. He would dip'up both hands full of water, bring them up to his face and neck, and pray, 'O Lord! good Lord! do have mercy, and make my poor heart clean!' and would again dip his hands, lave his face and neck, and pray. Then the great tears would flow out from between his eye-lids, (they were closed and he did not see me, though I stood quite near.) I secretly prayed and wept with him, and it was to me a refreshing time; it seemed as if God was very near. At length the old man opened his eyes and saw me, and oh! how he cried. He was tired of life, and desired to depart and be with Christ."

On the 21st of June, the house in which the little church worshipped was burned to the ground. This was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, as there had been no fire in it for more than two weeks. Threats . now were freely used against Mr. Hotchkiss and the church, but he continued his labors, and procured another house, and had it fitted up for worship. On the 24th of August, this also was burned down. They have since had to meet in private houses, and much doubt has been felt relative to ultimate duty. At later dates, however, the opposition was more guiet, and hopes were revived.

This field is emphatically a hard one, and requires much faith and patience from those who labor there.

SIAM MISSION.

BANGKOK, SIAM.

Missionaries.—Rev. D. B. BRADLEY, M.D., and Mrs. BRADLEY.

The expenditure for this Mission from our treasury for the year, has been but $80.68. The rent of two houses, and the sale of some articles not needed by the Mission, has furnished the remainder of its support.

The results of missionary labor in Siam have been as little favorable this year as in former ones. No conversions of Siamese have been reported. It is a cause of deep distress, that with all the missionary effort there, under three missionary boards, so little fruit appears.

The conditions of the late treaty between the United States government and Siam seem to have been faithfully observed, and the liberty of missionaries to travel about the kingdom and preach the Gospel every where is increased. The commercial prosperity of the country is such as greatly to enhance the value of property, and the rent of mission buildings not now needed, it is supposed will support one family.

The kind of missionary labor performed by Dr. Bradley may be gathered from the following extract. He is reporting a mission tour into some of the western provinces:

"Each of the three Protestant missions in Siam was represented in the tour, and each sent her mission-boat, bearing a preacher of the Gospel, furnished with Christian tracts, and otherwise provided for a month's absence. It was our purpose, at the outset, to make it a thoroughly preaching tour, and that every thing else connected with it (the distributing of tracts not excepted) should be regarded as subordinate. We preached the Gospel not only at nearly all the places we stopped, but also in very many villages and hamlets on the banks of the river, to which we walked. We endeavored, as much as it was in our power, to carry out the great commission—to 'preach the Gospel to every creature.' We preached it going and coming, by the wayside, at the public landings, in the courts of temples, in private dwellings, both of rulers and ruled, in the country residence of the Prime Minister at Kapri, in the court-house within the walls of Kamburi, to Siamese, Chinese, Laos, Peguans, Lawas, and Karens. And having used up our strength at each particular time in the oral exhibition of the Gospel, we would then put into the hands of those who could read, some precious portions of the divine Word, which we had by us in the form of tracts, both in the Siamese and Chinese languages. We were happy to find that our hearen of the other tongues which I have named, could be very hopefully taught through the Siamese language, both spoken and printed. Whenever we found them not sufficiently acquainted with the Siamese, we could almost always find some one or more of their class who could interpret for us and read our Siamese tracts to them.

"We were absent from home 24 days, and distant about 300 miles. I think I never spent the same length of time with more hope of reaping an abundant harvest to the clove of God as the result glory of God as the result.

"Since my return, I have preached in Siamese at my house nearly every Sabbath, twice each day. I observe the same order in these services that is usually observed in Sabbath day preaching in the United States. With much effort I have been enabled to collect about 20 heaves on an average at both services. I have performed street-preaching twice a week, and occasionally have gone further from home, in my beat, and services through the canals in the vicinity of Bangkok, preaching from house to house. I have also taken my turn about every fifth Sabbath in preaching to the Europeans and Americans who are residents and transient victors in the city. I can not report any conversions among the natives as a result of these services. But the knowledge of the Lord is being made to increase in the minds of the people to whom I preach, and his way will be prepared and his name honored by it.

by it.

"The new treaties are working well. We have as much, and even more and better freedom in travelling about the kingdom, than at the beginning of the present reign, and there is no danger of its being interrupted. Missionaries and other foreigners are purchasing land without any serious difficulty."

At a later date, he states that the provision of the treaty making it necessary for foreigners to have passes in order to travel in Siam, is in fact a great advantage. The passes are obtained from the United States Consul (a missionary brother) and give them perfect freedom. He adds:

"The way seems to be fully opened for missionaries to go and preach the unsearchable riches of Christ to the Cambodians at the very capital of that kingdom. I feel much stirred up to make more vigorous, prayerful, and believing efforts to save the souls of this people. My preaching on the Sabbath, and labors during the week, continue yery much as when I last wrote you, with a little apparent increase of interest in coming to hear preaching. Oh I how we need the power of the Spirit of God!"

COPT MISSION-CAIRO, EGYPT.

Missionaries .- Rev. C. F. Martin, L. S. Murad, Mrs. Martin.

At the date of our last report Mr. and Mrs. Martin were absent from Cairo, on account of the ill-health of Mrs. Martin and their child. They returned to the Mission about the middle of November, after an absence of nearly five months, and resumed their labors. The necessary interruption of the Mission thus occasioned, is very deeply regretted by them both; a feeling which will be sympathized with by all the friends of the Mission. If the services of an ordained missionary and a physician could be secured for this Mission, a location higher up the Nile could be chosen and, we hope, the occasional absence of any be avoided.

In April, Mr. Martin wrote:

"Our duties, as yet, have but little variety. We have been constantly engaged, since our return from Syria, in the study of the language; meanwhile endeavoring to gain access to the people, and increase our acquaintance with them. At nine, A.M., on Sabbath, we have the Arabic preaching service, at which Brother M. Cague and myself have been able to take our turns regularly, since February 1st, and of which we have had the sole charge for a month past. In the afternoon, at one P.M., is a Bible class in Arabic in another quarter of the city. At three P.M., is our English service, at which more than forty persons have sometimes been present the past winter: a large proportion of them, however, travellers, or transient residents. Brother Murad also has a small Bible class of Armenian young men, who meet him on the Sabbath, the exercises being conducted in the Turkish language, with which all 'the Armenians are familiar, while many of them know only enough of Arabic for the most ordinary purposes."

The feeling of the missionary when he first begins to preach the Gospel, in the language of a strange people, is thus alluded to,

"I can not describe to you the pleasure which I felt when I first ventured to preach in this strange and difficult tongue. I suppose that every missionary has similar feelings, in view of the fact that he has long been laboring in the midst of confusion and doubt to get a clear view and a practical command of a new tongue; and when at last he has succeeded so that he may safely attempt to speak from the oracles of God, he must feel that he speaks as a little child; and that if any fruit comes from his imperfect uterances, the excellency of the power must be of God; for there is, under such circumstances, none in himself, and from a full heart he puts up the prayer, that even his words may not be wholly lost, but may be the means of quickening and salvation to some soul; and he consecrates to God these, his 'first fruits,' with the earnest hope that the full harvest may yet be his. Brethren, pray for us, that our faith fail not, nor our zeal grow cold, in the midst of this dark and sin-cursed land.

The missionaries in Cairo of the Associate Reformed Presbyterians, more than a year ago proposed a union of the operations of the two missions in Cairo. After learning that cooperation could be had on such terms as were acceptable to our Mission, and meet the approval of the Executive Committee, a partial cooperation was authorized, and $250 per annum was appropriated for the support of a union school.

A physician is greatly needed for this Mission, and could add much to its usefulness. It would be a grave mistake for any to suppose that the services of a physician would be confined to the few persons connected with the Mission. The probability is, that he would find full employment for all his energies and all his skill; and that by his services as a physician he would greatly prepare the way for the more immediate work of the Mission. The experience of all missions shows that a pious physician not only prepares his own way to carry the messages of salvation to those who would not be likely otherwise to listen to them, but that he is able also to break down prejudices and lead men to go and hear the word, and in various respects to prepare the way for other ministers, and for the progress of truth. Are there not Christian physicians who would like to engage in this work of the Lord?

MISSIONARIES FOR THE MARQUESAS ISLANDS.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Seymour, and Doctor and Mrs. Coxhead, who started for the Marquesas Islands, two years ago, but were prevented from going farther than San Francisco, still remain in California. About the commencement of the present year, a communication was sent from the Executive Committee, stating the reasons why, in the opinion of the Committee, it was not expedient for them to proceed to the Marquesas Islands, and offering to defray the expenses of their return to New-York, if they wished to come, or to release them from the services of the Association there.

In their reply they stated that they preferred to remain in California until their destination to some heathen land was determined, that they believed they had a field of usefulness in California as extensive as they could have in the older States, and that no further appropriation would be needed for their support. They requested that their connection with the Association might be continued until they could be sent to some foreign

Subsequently the inquiry was made whether they were ready to join any of our present foreign missions. Mr. Seymour replied that his connection with the church he had gathered at Oroville, was such that he could not consistently then leave it. He, however, thought the time might not be distant when they would be supplied with a pastor, and he could

In a letter more recently received, Mr. Seymour says they are under the direction of the Executive Committee, and will go to another field if requested. This communication has not been acted upon by the Committee.

HOME MISSIONS.

Our grateful acknowledgments are due to Him "who is head over all things to the Church" for his favor bestowed upon the Home Department of our Missionary enterprise during the past year; for the success which he has given to our Missionaries in their work, and the measure of his grace bestowed upon the churches; and for his providential care of some of his servants who have been subjected to peculiar trials in their labors; for the protection of the Missionaries when exposed to violence in Kansas and in Kentucky, and for the prospects of good, never more encouraging than at present. By the same all-wise Providence we have been called to affliction in the death of four of our faithful missionaries, Rev. Francis Leonard, at Knoxville, Illinois; Rev. James Robertson, at Hanover, Ohio; Rev. Horatio N. Norton, at Bloomington, Kansas Ter.; and Rev. Wm. G. Johnstone, at Gap Grove, Ill.

These beloved brethren lived to adorn and press the great principles of righteousness and salvation, and have died bearing testimony to their excellence and power.

The past year has been charged with many public events calculated to deepen the conviction of the importance of the principles of this Association, and of the most vigorous measures, with humble reliance upon God. to carry them out in practice, to the fullest extent. Their exposition in the life is the glory of the Christian and philanthropist, at the North and at the South; in the midst of freedom, and in the strongholds of American

In the action of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case, and of the Government in Kansas and elsewhere, we have the prospect of the trial of our principles both politically and religiously, and of strife at our doors. Sad as is this necessity, glorious will be the struggle on our Christian basis, when the conflict, moral, religious, ecclesiastical, and political, shall in unmitigated intensity come, the earlier to give victory to righteousness and freedom. It is cheering already to notice in the providence of God and in the people, evidences of progress which are not mistaken by the enemies of liberty and of pure Christianity. They are also more generally appreciated by the churches and the ministers of religion.

GENERAL TABLE,

Showing in parallel columns,

- 1. An alphabetical list of missionaries.
- 2. The names of churches and missionary districts aided.
- 3. Dates of commissions, or time of commencing labor.
- 4. Months of labor performed since the last report.
- 5. Hopeful conversions.
- 6. Additions to the churches, on examination.
- 7. Additions to the churches by letter.
- 8. Number of church members.
- Amount of aid pledged for a year's service.
 Number of church members pledged to total abstinence.
- 11. Amount of contributions to benevolent objects.
- Number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars.
- 13. Other particulars.

EXPLANATIONS.

The reports of statistics by the missionaries are to the 1st of August. In some instances the number of members in two or more churches is given together.

HOME MISSIONS. - SCHEDULE.

| MISSIONARIES. | CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | DATE OF
COMMIS-
SION. | Months of Labor
Reported. | Hopeful Conver-
sions. | Additions on Ex- | Admissions by Let- | No. of Members. | Dollars of Aid
Pledged. | Pledged to Total
Abstinence. | Contributions to
Benevolent Objects. | No. of S. School and
Bible Class Scholars. | OTHER PARTICULARS. |
|---|--|--|---|-----------------------------|------------------------------|---------------------------------|---|---|---------------------------------|---|---|--|
| M. N. Adams. B. M. Amsden. Elizur Andros. B. S. Bastrr. E. C. Birge. C. C. Breed. L. Bridgman. Bobert Burgess. W. H. Burnard. J. H. Byrd. J. S. Campbell. Henry Case. U. T. Chamberlain. N. C. Clark. | lat Free Presb. Ch., Traverse des Sioux, Min. Ter. Cong. Chs., Union and Corai, and of Huntley, Ill. lat Cong. Ch. of Augusta, Mich. N. Cong. Chs. of Campton and Virgil, St. Charles, Ill. lat Cong. Ch. of Algonquin, Ill. Cong. Ch., Westfield and Oxford, Wis. Literatus much, Hartford, Ohio. Ist Cong. Ch., Roecoe, Ill. Cong. Ch., Perkalb and Dement, Ill. Leavenworth City and Easton. Kao. Free Presb. Chs., Peticity and Cedron. do, Ohio. 2d Cong. Ch., Geneva, Ill. Cong. Ch., Cambridge and Beaverdam, Pa. Missionary at large, Eigin, Ill. | Jan. 1, 1857 Jan. 1, 1857 Jan. 1, 1857 Mar. 1, 1857 Dec. 1, 1856 Aug. 24, 1856 Aug. 24, 1856 Aug. 1, 1857 Apr. 15, 1857 May 1, 1856 June 1, 1857 July 1, 1856 Oct. 1, 1857 May 1, 1856 | 12
12
7 12 12 12 12 12
4
9
8
6 12
4
12
8 | 15
2
4
1
2
6 | 1
2
1
5
4
9 | 9 2 4 5 1 4 8 4 5 | 6
44
18
52
81 20
44
25
43
43
88
48
75 | 500
400
100
150
200
200
200
40
200
150
100
100
350 | | 70 00
40 00
127 00
19 00
10 00
86 58
50 00
15 00
47 00
68 18 | 50
70
80
110
70
80
50
50
25
200
185 | Preaches also on the Poitowatomie and Osage. Erecting house of worship. Labors also at Summit Hill. Preaches also at Garden Prairie. Temperance signally successful. Labored in a revival at Wayne Center. Left. Commission expired. Preached at Merece, Green, etc. Commission expired. Encouraging prospects. Preached at other places. Now at Atchison. Interesting religious state. Left. Statistics of the church on next page. Labors in other places also. Preaches to several feetle churches of the Eigin Association Its churches also pay him $850. |
|
John Copeland John Cross Lot Church John Davis J. S. Davis Luke De-Witt Samuel Dilley M. W Diggs C. B. Donaldson S. A. Dwinnell D. L. Eaton Oliver Emerson | lst Cong. Ch., Baraboo, Wis. Preached at places near Topeka, Kansas. Cong. Ch., Lodi, Ill. C. Chs., Big Woods and Junction, Winfield, Ill., Weish Cong. Ch., Zoar, Rosendaie, Wis. Free Chs., Glenville and Betheeds, Cabin Cr., Ky. Center Free Presb. Ch., Button, Lee, Ohlo. Cong. Ch., Pisgab, Ind. Wysox C. Ch., and P. Ch. Elthorn Grove, Ill. Cong. Ch., Howell and Pinckney, Mich. Cong. Ch., Howell and Pinckney, Mich. (Cong. Ch., Dewittons fourth time.) Miastonary at large, Wolf Creek, Iowa. Welsh Cal. Meth. Ch., Chicago, Ill. Welsh Cong. Ch., Chicago, Ill. Welsh Cong. Ch., Chicago, Ill. | Aug. 1, 1856 July 1, 1856 July 1, 1856 June 1, 1857 Oct. 1, 1856 May 1, 1856 Mov. 1, 1856 Jan. 1, 1857 Mar. 1, 1857 Mar. 1, 1857 May 1, 1857 | 8
8
12 12 12
8
7 12
13
12
12 | 1
13
1
5
8 | 12
18
1
4
1
8 | 4
9
3
1
4
9
4 | 25
82
89
80
15
84
18
51
84
56
15 | 150
400
150
200
125
800
150
200
100
150
200
450
150 | | 27 00
27 00
4 19
2 00
18 00
10 80
55 00
30 00 | 144
85
50
80
180
85
80
100
80 | Also distributes publications of the A. R. Tract Sec. Nova at Elionington. Also distributes publications of the A. R. Tract Sec. Nova at Elionington. C. Ch. formed at the Junction. Com. expired. No report Revivals. Promising school and field. Commission expired. Field unpromising. Preached also at Eliisville. No Report. Interesting field. Some outsiders opposing violently. Aided in collecting and forming seven Cong. Chs. Commission expired. Now in Wisconsin. |

| J. G. Fee | Chs., Berea, Union, Round-Stone, Cummins, etc., July 15, 1656
Berea, Ky. | 12 | 17 | 10 | 8 | 88 | 450 | all | 1 | | Labors in several counties; and assists other missionaries. |
|-------------------------------------|--|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|------|----------|-----|---|
| Amos Finch | Wes. Meth. Ch., Upper Osawatomie, Kansas Oct. 9, 1856 | 19 | 1 | 11 | | 28 | 350 | 44 | | 88 | Itinerates on the Neosbo and other places. |
| E. C. Fisk | Evangelist in Mason Co., Havana, IllJan. 1, 1857 | 7 | |  | | - | 300 | | | - | Difficult field, but hopeful. |
| John Fisher | Free Presb. Chs., Monroe and Cincinnati, Iowa. Oct. 22, 1856 | 9 | | 1 1 | 2 | 28 | 200 | 41 | | 68 | Has another preaching station. |
| | Edwards' (Cong.) Ch., Chicago, Ill July 1, 1857 | 1 | | | 117 | | 200 | 46 | 1 | 7 | Statistics of the church given below. |
| A. B. Frazier | 1st Liberty Ch., Quasqueton, and Free Pres. Chs., July 1, 1856 | 12 | 4 | 4 | 14 | 47 | 100 | 44 | 25 00 | 45 | Building house of worship at Quasqueton. |
| | Marion and Scotch Grove Prairie, Iowa | | - | 1 7 | | | 200 | | 1 | 70 | |
| H. H. Garnet | Shiloh Presb. Ch., New-York City, N. Y. Sept. 1, 1856 | 11 | 89 | 79 | 6 | 450 | 250 |  | 180 00 1 | 50 | Revival. Field of much usefulness. (Colored people.) |
| J. R. Gibson | Free Pres. Chs., North-Fork and Frankfort, Ohio Jan. 1, 1857 | 12 | 2 | 2 | 2 | 72 | 50 | | | | Encouraging prospects. |
| Darius Gore | Cong. Ch., Sycamore, Ill | 11 | - 9 | - | 2 | 110 | 200 |  | 70 00 | 70 | |
| C. F. Hawley | Evang, in N. E. Iows & S. bord, of Min. Ter., Iows Jan. 1, 1857 | 7 | 100 | 85 | 14 | 99 | 200 |  | 1 | 80 | Aided in collecting or forming 4 Wes. M. chs. (4 revivals.) |
| W. H. Halliwell | 1st Cong. Ch., West-Urbana, Ill. Apr. 1, 1856 | 12 | | | 23 | 48 | 200 |  | 40 00 | 60 | Left. No further aid needed. |
| D. D. Heims | Cong. Chs., Westfield and Lima, lows | 12 | 1 | 4 | 7 | 17 | 200 | 20 | 20 25 | | |
| 1. H. Holmes | Trinity Cong. Ch., Albion, Ill., Nov. 1, 1856 | - 7 | 9 | 7 | 1 | 88 | 200 |  | | | Revival. |
| Ezra Howiand | 11st Cong. Ch., Oregon, near Toledo, Obio, Aug. 1: 1856 | 12 | 2 | 8 | 2 | 16 | 125 | - 44 | 85 00 1 | | Preaches at several stations. |
| Henry Hutchins | 1st Cong. Ch. Lyndon, Wis Sept. 1, 1856 | 11 | | 1 | 7 | 12 | 200 | - | | | Now at Baraboo. |
| E. P. Ingersoll | Cong. Ch., Bloomington, Ill | 12 | 1 | | | 61 | 200 | 44 | | | Left. Now in Kansas. |
| Jenkin Jenkins | Welsh Cong. Ch., Eureka, Min. Ter | 10 | 2 | 4 | | 13 | 250 |  | | | Commission expired. |
| Harvey Jones | Cong. Chs. of Waubannsa and Zeandale, Kansas Apr. 16, 1857 | 12 | | 2 | 32 | 48 | 400 |  | | 87 | Cong. Ch. organized at Wabonsa. |
| John Jones | Cong. Ch. of Earl, Ill May 1, 1856 | 9 | | 1 | 2 | 20 | 150 |  | 40 00 | | Commission expired. |
| J. H. Jones | Cong. Ch. of Earl, Ill. May 1, 1856
Cong. Chs. New-Corydon, Limberlost, and Mon. Feb. 1, 1857 | 12 | 5 | 6 | | 20 | 200 |  | 16 00 1 | 20 | Preaches in extended districts in Adams and Jay counties. |
| and the second of the second of the | roe. Decator. Ind. | | 1 | | | 1 | 3.0 | | J. J. | 1 | |
| W. G. Johnstone | Cong. Ch., Gap Grove and Sterling, Ill., May 1, 1856 | 12 | | 100 | 36 | 52 | 200 | 44 | | | Sterling Ch. of 82 members organized. Died Sept. 28, 1857. |
| J. R. Kennedy | 1st Cong. Ch., Geneva, Ill | 4 | 2 | 2 | 8 | 37 | 200 | " | 88 00 1 | | Preaches at three stations. |
| W. G. Kephart | ist Cong. Ch., Geneva, Ill. Apr. 1, 1857
F. P. Ch., Huntington & Raccoon, Pine Grove, O. July 1, 1857 | 12 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 60 | 150 | 44 | 67 50 | | Has three preaching-places. |
| Oliver Ketchum | Cong. Ch., at East-Pharsalia, N. Y | 8 | | 5 | 100 | 44 | 50 |  | | | Left. Church needs no further aid. |
| Francis Lawson | Cong. Ch. of Paris and Bristol, Wis Apr. 1, 1956 | 12 | 100 | 5 | 5 | 40 | 100 |  | | 80 | Commission expired. Ch. now self-supporting. |
| T. S. La Due | list Cong. Ch. Waterloo Town | 10 | | | 8 | 18 | 200 |  | 67 00 | | Promising field. Building house of worship. |
| W. E. Lincoln | Had a school, and preached, Beres, Ky. May 1, 1856
Cong. Ch. of Lyon, Kensington, Mich. Jan. 1, 1856
Free Congregation, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. June 1, 1857 | 5 | 1 | 1 1 | | | 150 | 4.7 | | | Itinerated some. |
| Lyman Lovewell | Cong. Ch. of Lyon, Kensington, Mich Jan. 1, 1856 | 6 | | | | 20 | 150 |  | 1.3 | 25 | Commission expired. |
| John Lowry | Free Congregation, Saratoga Springs, N. Y June 1, 1857 | 2 | | 2.7 | | | 150 | | | | |
| Israel Mattison | 1st Cong. Ch., Kankakee City, Ill Jan. 1, 1806 | . 0 | 1 | 2 | 4 | 19 | 200 | " | - 1 | 10. | Left. Building house of worship. |
| Norman Miller | 1st Cong. Ch., Princeton, Wis | 12 | 8 | | | 29 | 200 | | | | Preaches at three places. |
| Henry Morell | Free Presb. Ch., Council City, and Cong. Ch., Apr. 1, 1857 | 12 | . 1 | 1 | 19 | 22 | 400 |  | 1.3 | 57 | Two churches organized. |
| | Burlingame, Kansas. | | | - 1 | | | 200 | | | | |
| Alfred Morse, | 1st Cong. Ch., Henry, Ill June 1, 1857 | 12 | 1 | 2 | 4 | 88 | 200 | 4 | 60 00 | | r a 37 at (11111- |
| W. A. Nichols | Edwards' Ch., (Cong.,) Chicago, Ill May 1, 1857 | .0 | | - 1 | 7 | 82 | 200 | u | 70 00 1 | 20 | Left. Now at Clearville. |
| H. N. Norton | Cong. Chs., Bloomington and Kanwaca, Kansas. June 10, 1856 | 12 | 1 | | 11 | 19 | 500 | 4 | | | Two churches organized. Died Aug. 27, 1857. |
| L. Parker | Cong. Ch., Plum Grove, Ill | 8 | 1.3 | 2 | 1.4 | 18 | 200 | 4 | 88 65 | | Left. |
| Samuel Penfield | Cong. Ch., Wataga, Ill Oct. 25, 1856 | 9 | 1 | 8 | 28 | 42 | 100 | 4 | 70 00 1 | | Commission expland |
| P. S. Pettibone | 1st Cong. Ch., Burlington, Wis Aug. 1, 1856 | 12 | 8 | 8 | 5 | 86 | 100 | 4 | 40 00 | | Commission expired. No report. Commission expired. |
| Nathaniel Pine | Pres. Ch., Garden Plains, Ill Apr. 1, 1856 | 6 | - | - | | 80 | 100 | | | | Died Dec. 18, 1856. |
| James Robertson | Hanoverton, Ohio May 1, 1856 | 4 | | | | 10 | 50 | | 1 19 | | No report. Commission expired. |
| A. Root | Walnut Grove Cong. Ch., Altona, Ill Jan. 1, 1857 | 8 | | | | 12 | 50 | | | 101 | no report. Commission expired. |
| Robert Rudd | Cong. Ch., Knoxville, Ill Jan. 1, 1857 | 7 | | | 6 | 48 | 200 | | | | Commission expired. No report. |
| George Schlosser. | Ottowa Free Ch., Ill | 5 | | | 7 | 104 | 100 | | | 00 | Commission expired. No report. |

| 1 | |
|--------------|--|
| | |
| | |
| (Complement) | |
| 1 1 | |
| | |
| 1 | |
| | |
| 2 | |
| - | |
| | |
| 1 6 | |
| B | |
| | |
| | |
| - | |
| - | |
| HEDUL | |
| 12 | |
| H | |
| - | |
| - | |
| 08 | |
| - 1 | |
| S | |
| m | |
| ~- | |
| Z | |
| | |
| 810 | |
| - 1 | |
| - | |
| OD | |
| | |
| 02 | |
| - | |
| | |
| × | |
| - 3 | |
| | |
| 6 | |
| H | |
| × | |
| - | |
| 0 | |
| - | |
| | |

| OTHER PARTICULARS. | Church at Forestrille organizad. Preaches at Pyrnouth and Mason City also. Bovival. Two churches organized. (Colored people.) Left. Further aid not needed. No report. Interacting fleid. Interacting fleid. Preached at Allen's and Delli. | |
|---|---|--------------|
| No. of S. School and
Bible Class Schoolars. | 355 388483 2888 8885 355 | 4 |
| Contributions to Benevolent Objects. | | |
| Pledged to Total | 1 | 3 |
| Dollars of Aid
Pledged. | 800
100
100
100
100
100
100
100
100
100 | 200 |
| No. of Members. | | 20 |
| Admissions by Let- | 17 t = 1 ara | 9 |
| Additions on Ex- | H 80 80 4 명 대한 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 | |
| Months of Labor
Reported,
Hopeful Conver-
sions, | 242 6 1 221 | |
| Months of Labor
Reported, | ರಾಜಯವನ್ ವರ್ಷ-ಕಾರಭರಣಪಡಿತ ಅಪಚಿತ | 9 |
| DATE OF
COMMIS-
SION. | Nov. 1, 1856
Oct. 15, 1866
Oct. 23, 1867
Oct. 2, 1867
May 1, 1866
Nov. 1, 1866
Nov. 1, 1866
Nov. 1, 1866
Nov. 1, 1866
Nov. 1, 1867
Nov. | oner 'nr omn |
| SSIONARIES. CHURCHER AND MISSIONARY DISTRICTS. | Smith Cong Ch. Windsor, Ohlo. State of Ch. Chaelenfold, Free Ch. Chaelestown, 31 Oct. Cong. Ch. Forestrills, form. Cong. Ch. Relating Cong. Cong. Ch. Relating Cong. San Math. Che. Feel State of Ch. San Math. Che. Belleforathe, and Sap. Ch. San Mill Cone. Oh. Statemwood, III. May Han. Cong. Ch. Pressor IIII Ohlo. Cong. Ch. Resch. Ch. Statemble, N. Y. Sar Presshed and Laggir Rosel, Ohlo. Cong. Ch. Ch. Melachier, Cheek Ch. Sar Ch. Cong. Ch. Ch. Statemble, Ch. Cong. Ch. Ch. Melachier, Pleasand Apr. Filliance, Cong. Ch. Ch. Trey, Ohlo. Cong. Ch. of Trey, Ohlo. Cong. Ch. of Trey, Ohlo. Cong. Ch. of Trey, Ohlo. Cong. Ch. Ch. Melachem, Pleasand Apr. Filliance, Cong. Ch. of Trey, Ohlo. Cong. Ch. of Ch. Schelaben, Pleasand Apr. Fillians. Welsh Cal. Meth. Ch. Pittsburg, Ft. Sar Cong. Ch. of Percentin Welsh. Sar | |
| Noise | W. Str. Though The The The The The The The The The Th | 1 |

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

to bearing to and the most bearing the state of the state the Body stage of City sowed missions on band do to each or ender enough-states a thing brettern have been and contrared to three States, to

This Association and its Auxiliaries have employed, during the year, 94 missionaries, and 2 colporteurs in the Home field. Most of them in the North-wester States and Territories, and Kentucky. Of this number there were in the "States east of Ohio," 7. In Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan, 22. Illinois, 37. Wisconsin and Minnesota, 11. Iowa, 7. Kansas Territory, 7. In Kentucky, 4. One colporteur has been employed in Kentucky, and one in Illinois.

The missionaries are generally pastors; some of them have several churches; others have extensive districts, and are itinerating, preaching, and promoting revivals of Religion, Temperance, Anti-Slavery, and every good cause. They have organized, and assisted in organizing, many churches and Sabbath-schools in sparse and destitute places.

The results, ascertained from the reports of our missionaries, etc., are as follows:

The additions during the year to the churches, by profession of faith, are 388, and by letter from other churches, 402.

The number of members of the churches under the care of our missionaries is 3921.

The number of hopeful conversions is 371.

16 revivals of religion are reported by our missionaries.

Some churches have erected houses of public worship during the year, and others are in process of building.

The members of the churches are, with very few exceptions, pledged to total abstinence from intoxicating drinks, and are earnest friends of the anti-slavery cause.

The number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars connected with the missionary churches and stations is 5864.

The contributions to benevolent objects (not local) reported by the missionaries, amount to $2334.83.†

^{*} In several instances where Sabbath-schools are on the Union plan, composed of those of different denominations, the number connected with our missionaries is not reported to us.

[†] In some instances, where there have been collections, they have not been so reported as to be given

STATES EAST OF OHIO.

In States east of Ohio seven missionaries have been under commis-

Isolated as these brethren have been, and scattered in three States, no considerable impression could be expected to be made by them on so large a field; yet connected as they are with Christian associations and cooperating in various ways with their fellow-Christians and citizens, they have exerted an important influence for good. Our missionary in North-Western Pennsylvania, whose itinerant labors at times extend into adjoining towns in Ohio, and who last year was greatly blessed in promoting the revival of God's work, has not been without witness of His favor in the salvation of souls under his ministrations. In the cause of freedom and temperance he has done much service by his preaching and addresses in various places.

Our Welsh missionary, at Pittsburgh, Pa., has an interesting field among his brethren there, numbering some 700 souls, mostly engaged in the various manufactories in that city. He is much encouraged in his work, especially among the young people, and some souls have recently been hopefully converted.

The wonderful work of grace in the Shiloh Presbyterian church (colored) in the city of New-York, under the care of our missionary, Rev. Henry H. Garnet, was most cheering. It continued for many months, resulting in the hopeful conversion of 89 souls, and in untold blessings upon the church and congregation in every direction.

From the annual report of the missionary we make the following extracts:

"During the present year, the church has enjoyed a very precious revival of religion, which has increased our number four-fold. The Sabbath-school has greatly improved, and a full supply of teachers has been obtained. It affords me much satisfaction to be able to state that there has been great improvement in the congregation and especially among the young people. Three young men have expressed their desire to prepare for the ministry, and one will graduate from Central College (D.V.) at the next commencement. This young man gives evidence of sincere piety, and by his diligence in his studies, and his general deportment, has won the high esteem and confidence of his instructors.

"We have a 'Society of Inquiry' connected with the church, having for its objects mutual moral and intellectual improvement; they also labor to promote the interests of the Sabbath-school, by inducing neglected and poor children to join it, and by furnishing as far as they can, clothes for the needy. They likewise pay particular attention to strangers, and invite and welcome them to the house of God, and give them such other advice as they may seek or require.

"We now hold regularly a monthly concert of prayer for the enslaved, and feel bound to be interested in the cause of human liberty.

"The most prominent error prevailing in the congregation is one which is too general, and that is, too low views of a duty which they owe to God, to make sacrifices to support the Gospel. But in this matter I perceive some improvement, although not as much as could be wished. Notwithstanding my path is strewn with many severs trials, and some of them peculiar, yet there is good reason for thankfulness to God, and much encouragement for the future.

"The last Sabbath of the year was appointed as a day of fasting and prayer for a revival of religion in the church. The morning services were commenced with a prayermeeting at half-past four o'clock, and a goodly number assembled, and the season was truly refreshing and encouraging. From that morning we began to witness the indications of the divine presence amongst us, and our meetings were continued every evening (excepting Saturday) for the space of three months and two weeks. Many whose hearts had become cold, have been revived, and many have been converted from their sins, and are now going on their way rejoicing. There has been a marked work of grace going on among the young, and many strangers are making our church their religious home. Six have been added to the church by letter, and seventy-three on confession of faith. The congregation has increased from 150 to 600 or 700, and the Sabbath-school from 50 to 150. All of this is the Lord's doings, and to his holy and reverend name be the honor and the glory."

Our missionary in Vermont describes his field as presenting a pleasing contrast with what it was when he first entered it. He says:

"The contrast between the state of things now, and what it was when I commenced labor here four years since, is very manifest. Then, rum-selling, rum-drinking, gambling, horse-racing, Sabbath-breaking, and profane swearing, were open and unblushing in defiance of all law and good order; but now, no rum is sold, no man is seen drunk, horse-racing and gambling have fled, (across the line to Queen Victoria's dominions,) and the atmosphere is not polluted with open profanity. I have not heard a profane oath, except from some of the French boys, for more than a year.

"The spirit of emigration, which has very much reduced this church, seems to have subsided during the present season."

OHIO, MICHIGAN, AND INDIANA.

We have had in our service in these States, the past year, twenty-two missionaries, thirteen of whom were in Ohio.

OHIO.

The reports of our missionaries in this State show a gain in many respects, and encourage earnest effort in the cause of righteousness and salvation. The attendance on divine worship, and on Sabbath-school and Bible-class instruction, is increasing, though large masses of the population neglect the means of grace. Errorists of every form abound, and their teachings on the Sabbath, and at other times, exert an active influence, counteracting the truth, and hindering the conversion of men to Christ. In the churches the cause of temperance is maintained, but can not be said to progress in the State generally. Education and general intelligence are advancing. It is matter of grief that so few cases of the "outpouring of the Spirit" have existed. Notwithstanding the reviving of some churches in their own members, with some few conversions, our missionaries report no revival of religion, in the general sense of the term, except among the colored population at Bellefontaine and vicinity, of which accounts of a cheering character have been given in our paper.

The anti-slavery cause advances somewhat in the ratio of the outrages which have been committed upon citizens by United States Marshals in fugitive slave cases; the action of the Federal Government in regard to Kansas; of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case, and the general aggressions of the slave power.

In the churches and ecclesiastical bodies the year has been marked with more inquiry, feeling, and action adverse to slavery than heretofore. In the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States. (N. S.,) which met at Cleveland in May last, the discussions which took place, the withdrawal of the Ross slavery party, and the resolutions of the Assembly, were all ominous, and, at least, indicated the providential, moral, and religious purgations at work, and the more perfect analysis to which the Church of God must soon come, separating the precious from the vile, refusing fellowship to all slaveholders, and to those who degrade our glorious Christianity by apologizing for a system of the highest robberv. In that discussion, Ohio members contributed largely to give strength to the movement against the slave power. It is a matter of regret that the Assembly did not adopt the report brought in by the Hon. Mr. Cutler, by which they would have given a great impetus to the Christian antislavery movement, and done much to clear their skirts of "the blood of the poor innocents."

The action of the General Association of Ohio at its session in May last, looking to the adoption next year of a system of home support of missionaries of the Congregational order in the State, is one of much importance, and the general statement of their resolution, that there is ability in the churches of the State to sustain the work without foreign aid, is authority for confidence that the system recommended will be adopted.

Reference has been made to the death of one of our missionaries, the Rev. James Robertson, at Hanoverton, in this State, Dec. 13, 1856. This venerable minister of Christ was a member of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church which met at Cincinnati, in 1845; and voted with a small minority against fellowshipping slaveholders. He afterwards connected with the Free Presbyterian Church, in which he remained until death, propagating the principles of Christ, and promoting the cause of humanity.

The Rev. John P. Bardwell, when not absent at the Indian Missions, and in other States, prosecuting the claims of those missions, has been successfully engaged as our agent in this State. Rev. J. G. Brice, our agent in the northern half of this State, has rendered essential service in presenting the principles and wants of the Association, and in collecting funds.

A Home and Foreign Missionary Society, auxiliary to this Association, was formed by the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists of Ohio and Pennsylvania in May last. Its operations are encouraging.

From a missionary in Ashtabula county:

"A Maine Law Temperance Society of nearly one hundred members has been formed, which I have assisted by lectures and in other ways. Less liquor is used than formerly one liquor-selling merchant has moved out of the place.

"There is a very decided anti-slavery feeling and sentiment in the church and in the community around us. I have taken occasion to preach against slavery, and make it the frequent subject of public prayer. Kansas and her wrongs are not forgotten among

"We have lost two valuable members by death, one of whom left $200 to the American Missionary Association."

From a missionary among the colored people in Logan county:

"This people formerly were mostly slaves. When I consider this in connection with the progress they have made, and are making, both morally and intellectually, I can but regard it as one of great interest. And it is to me also another manifestation of the power of the Gospel to elevate man from the lowest depths of degradation, and to make him not only fit for the society of men, but for that of angels and just spirits made per-fect. This people, notwithstanding the many disadvantages to which they have been subjected hitherto, have learned to distinguish between intelligent religious instruction and that under which the colored people have for a long time been suffering. And those who are being converted among them, are calmly and intelligently converted to Christ by the truths of the Gospel, as opposed to that mere animal excitement under the influence of which many unite with the church—whose religion is gone when the excitement is over."

A missionary in Hartford county describes his field as peculiarly a hard one. He says:

"I have labored in three different places, from sixteen to twenty miles apart, supplying Free Presbyterian churches, which are surrounded with most violent forms of error - Universalism, Spiritualism, Conservatism, Infidelity, and Campbellism, the latter perhaps the most deadly of all, as the most specious and insidious, denying the sanctity and moral obligation of the holy Sabbath; the necessity and duty of prayer in schools and families; the personality and agency of the Holy Spirit in regeneration, making this to consist in immersion, without any previous change of heart; in half their sermons declaiming against the reality of 'experimental religion,' and warning the people against 'getting religion.'

"All my churches were mere fragments, without organization, when I came, and, with one exception, are still in that condition, but the members are all devoutly and on principle anti-slavery, opposed to intemperance, secret societies, and war, persons of great worth and intelligence."

From a missionary in Brown county:

"The greatest difficulty with which we have to contend is the great carelessness of the people about their spiritual welfare, leading the great mass of them wholly to neg-lect the means of grace, which is also increased by the influence of quite a number of Universalists and Unitarians-members of the so-called New Light or Christian Church, though neither of these have an organization near this point.

"We have but few emigrants from foreign countries. The external observance of the Sabbath is generally good. A majority of the people are both anti-slavery and temperate. Still we have many violent pre-slavery, anti-temperance persons, with no sympathy for the slave, violent prejudice against people of color, and who scruple not to raise grain expressly for the distilleries.

We have no member in our church who will knowingly assist in promoting to any office of trust, by his vote, either the slaveholder, the drunkard, distiller, grog-seller, or any one sustaining by his influence any of these evils. May God hasten the day when all the professed Christians of our land shall occupy the same position.

"There is unity and good-feeling among all the members of the church. The prayer-meeting is tolerably well attended. The slave, people of color, missions, and the temperance reform are all remembered."

From a missionary in Clermont county:

"In February, we held a series of meetings with good results. The Spirit of God manifested himself amongst us chiefly in awakening Christians and reclamation of backaliders. Two indulged a hope in Christ, both of them young men.

"The congregations have been much larger the last six months than formerly. The attendance on the Sabbath-school at ____ has increased largely. One half the schoare colored. They receive there all the intellectual and spiritual training they receive any where. Some of our enemies call it the 'nigger school,' and thus attempt to injure us because we feed Christ's poor despised lambs.

"Our monthly concert is still observed. Once a month (the 4th Monday) we meet together to pray for the oppressed. Anti-slavery is becoming popular both in Church and State. The mass used to be afraid of being called 'Abolitionists,' now they are much more afraid of being called 'pro-slavery.''

Another (in Ross county) wrote:

"The prevailing sin is Sabbath descration. It is said that our church, now only five years old, has exerted a good influence in many respects, particularly on Sabbath observance. Some of the large Old School Presbyterian Churches around us are agitating the necessity of seceding from their pro-slavery General Assembly. There will be secession. It can not be avoided. In our little churches we have peace and united attachment to anti-slavery Gospel principles. These principles are growing daily in all

INDIANA.

In this State we have had four missionaries, and now have also a colporteur. Few in numbers, they have large districts, and, with one exception, are performing missionary labor in many places. At times they have been met with violent opposition, but ordinarily are heard with attention, and their labors have been blessed; souls have been converted, and two churches have been formed. Their presentations of pure, evangelical, practical religion, in contrast with that which is in league with slavery, caste, and political demoralization, produces that excitement and inquiry which precede reformation. The field is principally in the southern part of the State and on the border of Kentucky. A large proportion of the inhabitants are from slave States, and many are from foreign countries. There is great need of education, and of the influences of pure Christianity and a true civilization.

In addition to the labors of missionaries, this field presents many reasons for colporteur efforts, and the circulation not only of the Scriptures, peligious books, and tracts generally, but of a class published by the American Reform Tract and Book Society at Cincinnati-Christian, reformatory, and anti-slavery in character. As one of the States bordering on slavery, it requires the earnest attention of the friends of freedom, and their aid in the Christian efforts making there by this Association,

A missionary for Adams and Jay counties wrote:

"Since my last quarterly report, I have organized a Congregational Church in Monroe township, in this county, of five members. There are several others hopefully converted, who, I expect, will unite with it soon. When I consider how deeply ingrained in the minds and habits of the masses of the people some popular errors are, I feel it necessary to be cautious in advising young converts to unite with the church. Some have been taught to believe that to be immersed for the remission of sin, is all that is necessary to salvation. Others depend chiefly on excitement and occasional ebullition of feeling at 'big meetings.' There is a third class, having no sympathy with the above classes, who hold it to be necessary that the heart be changed, and the life reformed from gross sins; but to make religious principles govern their political conduct and commercial transactions, appears to them to be righteous over-nuch."

Giving an account of a favorable change in his district on the subject of slavery, and of his addressing a large meeting of citizens by request, on the 4th of July last, he adds:

"Party politicians like to float on the uppermost wave of public sentiment. When I see these gentlemen changing their position, I ascribe it to a change in others, which they can neither arrest nor control. Whether they oppose and denounce me, or whether they praise me, they do in one case as much as the other, what appears to them most conducive to their self-interest. The path of duty appears to me plain. To preach the Gospel as delivered to us in the Holy Scriptures, without stopping to inquire who will be pleased or who will be offended. When the Supervisor calls on me to go and work on the highway, I go, or employ some one to supply my place. When the sheriff calls me to act as a juror, I obey. When a temperance speech is required, I give it. When certain occurrences and events demand that the subject of slavery be discussed, I attack it at that point where it is most necessary to expose its wickedness, for the benefit of the congregation convened to hear me at that time. When I speak to those who defend slavery on religious or scriptural grounds, I take it up as such. If I address those who defend it on political grounds, I treat it accordingly. Some think such a course tending to lower the dignity of the ministry. To me it appears quite the reverse. To neglect willfully the duties of manhood or of citizenship, can never add dignity to the ministerial office. The tendency is rather to pull it down."

A missionary in Southern Indiana, after a labor of three months, says:

"My work, as you seem to be aware, was of such a nature as to make it almost impossible for me to give any definite report. My field was new. I visited all the churches that were favorable to the cause of free missions, making a circuit of about a hundred miles. The people received me kindly, and listened attentively to the truth. The membership of the churches is small, having lately separated from pro-slavery bodies. The churches in Ohio township and Boonville are made up of emigrants from the East, who carried with them the spirit of the Puritans, and, of course, are antislavery, and temperance, men and women. On account, however, of the anti-reform spirit manifested by the people among whom they settled, they are emigrating to other Western States, where they hope to find sympathy. This leaves the number of members in those churches small. The prospects for freedom are cheering, as the people are becoming willing to agitate the question of slavery, and light is breaking in slowly but surely. Men are now ashamed to be found hunting the slave as he escapes from bondage. In Evansville, the Baptist church takes a high position in regard to slavery. So do the Secession and Covenanter churches of Princeton. Pour in the light, and Southern Indiana will soon be a noble ally of liberty and truth."

From a missionary in South-western Indiana:

"My brother and I have eight small churches dependent upon us for ministerial labors. The number of communicants is about 145. These churches are all anti-slavery, opposed to intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, etc. The whole number of my appointments is twelve. I have labored some with the colored people in Evansville, and with some success. Their whole population came out to hear the Gospel. They are despised by the while people, and are sadly overlooked by ministers and churches. They have a Sabbath-school, which is doing some good.

"There is a Baptist Church in Evansville which is anti-slavery, and has a good min-

"The Episcopal Methodists are quite numerous in this section, and many of them profess to be anti-slavery, but refuse to agitate the question.

"There is a people calling themselves Regular Baptists, who are quite numerous, and exert an extensive influence. They are pro-slavery, some of their ministers defending slavery from the pulpit. They are opposed to temperance and all reforms, and are known through the country by the name of 'Whisky Baptists.' This season many of them harvested on the Sabbath. As to the moral condition of the people in general, I can write nothing flattering. The Sabbath is disregarded in many places, blasphemous language is indulged, drunkenness prevails to an alarming extent, and that without any

"A large share of the emigrant population are foreigners, (Irish and Dutch,) and are opposed to moral reforms. These, with others, present a great barrier to the truth. He who preaches the whole Gospel here will meet with great opposition. One man, who is a member of a church, endeavored to hire a drunken man to egg me as I passed on the highway.

"Yet, thank God, in the midst of all the darkness and opposition light is increasing, truth is doing its work. We cry to God to aid us and to send us more laborers."

MICHIGAN.

We have had five missionaries laboring in this State, generally with encouraging results, although contending in some places with errors and practices fatal to society, and ruinous to the souls of men. In one district, an interesting revival of religion took place.

Since the Supreme Court of the State decided that an important clause in the prohibitory liquor law of the State was unconstitutional, intemperance, it is said, has greatly increased; and there is much need of efforts to instill the principles of temperance into the minds of all, so as to enforce its own law upon the conscience, and secure a public sentiment that will execute laws for the suppression of the liquor traffic. The need of more missionaries in this State is made apparent by an extract given below. Few fields, if any, promise more favorable results.

In no State do the elements of freedom and Christianity give more evidence of a real fraternity. The people, the rulers, the churches, and the ministry very generally sympathize with the slave. In such a field, the objects and principles of our Association should be brought before the churches and people.

A missionary in Eaton county wrote Jan. 2, 1857 :

"I have been concentrating my labors upon South-Kalamo for over three weeks. I commenced alone, with none to help me, even to visit the people, there being but one man there who has 'a name to live.' Then they had a singing-school and a writing-school in progress all the time, (not every evening,) and I could have but three or four meetings in a week, except on the Sabbath. But God has shown us favor. A very deep solemnity pervades the whole region for a number of miles around. There has been deep heart-searching among many who had once hoped, but evidently without good grounds, and the cry has been heard on every hand: 'What must I do to be saved?' A few are hoping. Two family altars have been raised, and new cases of hope are reported to me every day. The most interesting that I have met, is the case of that man to whom I alluded in a former letter, who was brought up a Universalist.

of that man to whom I alluded in a former letter, who was brought up a Universalist. He is now rejoicing in hope.

"Last week, on Wednesday, I had a low chill and fever all day, but went to the house in the evening, and preached, in so much pain, especially in my head, that it seemed that I should fall to the floor. The next morning, burning with fever, I rode home, doctored a little, was something better, returned Sabbath morning, and preached again, and in the night following I was taken most violently with typhoid fever; the next day they wrapped me up and brought me home again, to stay—the Lord knows how long. Brother Bartlett then went up and took the labor into his hands. He has preached several evenings this week. He says to-day, that the house was crowded last night; a very deep solemnity prevailed, and some professed to submit to God."

From a missionary in Kalamazoo county:

"There is a great want of able, faithful men possessed of a pioneer and Christian spirit, to go forth into these new fields, enduring hardness as good soldiers, that they may publish the truth as it is in Jesus. It is a great mistake to suppose that Michigan has passed from being missionary ground. A large portion of the western, northwest and northern portions of this State are comparatively unexplored and destitute of the means of grace. These portions are unsurpassed by any other in natural resources for wealth, and are rapidly filling up with a population that need the moulding and restraining influences of the Gospel. The fields are white already to the harvest, but the laborer are few.' Oh! that the Church in general could feel it to be their duty and privilege to live to God and for his cause; then would the treasury of the Lord be filled and the laborers increased until the whole land and world would be filled with the knowledge of God. This village, although once notorious for vice and drunkenness, now ranks as one of the most quiet, temperate, and peaceful in our State."

WISCONSIN.

In this State we have had nine missionaries. Their principles, and those of their churches, and their united influence, are helping to mould society and its institutions, especially in reference to practical religion, education, temperance, and freedom. Violent opposition was encountered at some few points last fall, for preaching against the aggressions of slavery under the sanction of the Federal Government. The people of Wisconsin are, however, alive to the cause of liberty; hence our missionaries find favor with the masses of society, and have increased advantages for doing good in all departments. The foreign population in this State is large, and their very common desecration of the Sabbath for secular business or pleasure, their skepticism or bold infidelity, and their extensive use of intoxicating liquors. is destructive to themselves and to the morals and interests of the people. This is not, however, true of all classes of foreigners. The Welsh, especially, are establishing and maintaining the institutions of religion and morality, and our Welsh auxiliary in this State, by its collections, and in other ways, manifests a laudable interest both in Foreign and Home Missions.

The great interest of the citizens of Wisconsin in favor of Kansas, and the common tendency at the West to emigration, has led not a few of the people to emigrate to that territory this year. During the winter, much suffering was endured in some parts of the State from the extremity of the cold, and, early in the spring, from the high prices and scarcity of provisions.

The tendency to speculate in lands, and the love of gain, even among church-members, have impeded the progress of religion, though in some of our missionary fields souls have been converted. At Baraboo, a revival of religion existed for a considerable length of time, with its harvest of mercy, though the number of conversions was not very great. Although much has been done to give the Gospel to the destitute, there are in this State regions of great moral darkness, which should be supplied with the preaching of the word of life, with Sabbath-schools, and all the means of salvation and happiness.

From our missionary at Baraboo:

"The conversions have been, on an average, one in about two weeks, since the first Monday in the year, which we have always observed as a day of fasting and prayer, and generally with great profit. The last convert, a lad of sixteen, a member of my Bible-class, expressed a hope about three weeks ago. Sometimes the truth has immediately stain in the house of God. Several have mentioned the particular text or sermon that was blessed to their conversion. One of the most confirmed and intelligent infidels in the place, a physician, about forty years of age, was converted, and has since died in the full assurance of faith. When I came here, I was much in his company for more than a year, and argued various infidel points with him at much length. He was more than a year, and argued various infidel points with him at much length. He was candid. Before he died, he told me that my personal labors with him had been of great use to him. He moreover said on his dying-bed, what I believe infidelity must always say sooner or later, that he was not guite honest in it., one of our members, a young man, is in college at Oberlin, preparing for the ministry. Two of the recent converts are contemplating the same thing.

"It is questionable whether the temperance cause has made any real progress among us the past year. Liquor is still sold, though illegally. Nineteen twentieths of the people are in favor of a prohibitory law.

"Anti-slavery is steadily progressing. Pro-slavery ministers can not live among us at all now. Two pro-slavery papers have been starved out; they died some time ago. We have one good Republican (almost radical abolition) paper, well sustained."

From a missionary in Sauk county :

"Intemperance is evidently on the increase. Too much dependence has been hitherto placed by Christians on man and temporary expedients-too little on God and the sword of the Spirit.

"God is teaching his people a lesson. I trust they will be humbled to an entire reliance on him.

"The spiritual prospects of our church are hopeful; the members are in circumstances of trial, which is being sanctified to some at least. They are increasing in holiness. We are persecuted, for righteousness' sake, we think, for sustaining all moral truth. But the Gospel is producing its effect even upon those who refuse to hear it."

Reporting an extensive and very destitute region near him, the same missionary says:

"It embraces some twelve or fifteen organized towns, containing an average population of some five or six hundred souls. In all these towns, the means of grace is still quite limited, and in some of them it is said a gospel sermon has never yet been preached. Hundreds of families have never attended a religious meeting since their settlement there, from one to four years since. The Sabbath is almost unknown, and the restraining and purifying influences of the Gospel are very little felt. In spiritual things, they are growing worse and worse. The darkness of a moral midnight is setting in upon the people; they are famishing for the bread of life, and most of them know it not. In view of these fearful desolations, is not the Church called upon to pray the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth more laborers into his harvest?

From a Welsh missionary:

"We failed this year to erect the new church building which we contemplated. The members of this small church and congregation are rather new settlers, all of them, and commenced with very small means; but they are coming on wonderfully through hard labor. We are all desirous to have a better place in which to worship our God. I am sorry to state that there is considerable drinking amongst some in the neighborhood. We intend to commence early, and keep up a course of temperance meetings.

"The morals of the people are not as bad as in many other parts of the State. This,

It believe, is owing to the ministry of the Gospel and the means of grace in its varieties.

There are many places in this State without the preached Gospel, and there are those also so far from God that when they have the opportunity to hear the word, they care not to improve it."

A missionary in Richland county wrote:

"We are now having a strong temperance excitement in the county. It began at the county seat. No licenses were granted, but men sold liquor in deflance of the law. The Board of Health, under a statute law, declared liquor and the grog-shops nuisances, and directed the sheriff to destroy them. The liquor was all turned upon the ground and into the river. The rum-sellers were also fined for selling without license; but appealed to a higher court. They have also prosecuted the Board and the sheriff and posse for maliciously destroying the liquor. Public meetings of temperance and anti-temperance men are frequent. We can but hope that good will come out of this agitation.

A missionary in Racine county, after reporting an addition of some members to the church to which he ministers, gives an interesting account of a portion of the foreign population, and the kind of infidelity into which they have been led. The following is an extract:

"My acquaintance among the foreign population has been considerable, not only with the Germans, but with a few Norwegians and Bohemians, and here and there with the Irish population. I am more thoroughly convinced than before, that God has sent this vast foreign population into this 'great west' to be converted to Christ; but every day's observance here gives incontestable evidence, that the religion manifested by a part of the American population, is so impure and carnal, so divested of God's love and power, that by it many are dragged downward, deeper and still deeper into the slough of moral and physical debasement A class of them in their native country, had a mere nominal connection with the Roman Catholic Church, and were disgusted and sickened with its unmeaning forms. Having witnessed with their own eyes the impure and with its unmeaning forms. Having whateseed with the first content of this country, they have as a practical consequence denied the inspiration of the Bible, and imbibed almost every form of damnable heresy. While many admit the existence of Deity, they boldly deny his personality. They are pantheists. They believe that God and nature are identical, and that universal nature in all its forms of development, is a part of God. The doctrines of Christianity are repudiated. They acknowledge no moral accountability. The soul's immortality is denied, on the ground, as they assert, that the soul is a part of God, and at death will have no existence independent and separate from God. It seems to be a cardinal doctrine in their belief that all existences, whether animate or inanimate, are only so many forms of God, and therefore at death individual consciousness will be lost, by an absorption in the divine essence; therefore a personal immortality is ridiculed.

MINNESOTA.

In this Territory we have had two home missionaries. Some labor has also been performed in the southern border, by a missionary whose labors are mostly employed in Iowa.

The population of some parts of the territory has been rapidly increased during the year, although immigration was temporarily checked by the extreme cold of the last winter, and the alarm arising from Indian troubles.

The leading events of the year in Minnesota, are the formation, and adoption, of a Constitution for a State organization. There has been some increase of the spirit of freedom, and some increase of effort in parts of the territory to check intemperance and prevent the rum traffic. Those of its inhabitants who have in other States enjoyed the means of grace, are earnest in their pleas for aid in sustaining there the ministry of reconcilia-

Our Mission at Traverse de Sioux is regarded as of great interest. In that region peace and good-will prevail between the Indians and the whites. The Close Communion Baptists have recently established there a church of eight members; and the Methodists have reorganized a "Class." Concerning the church under his care, (Free Presbyterian,) our missionary ill and test made or beginning that the best love Hi writes:

"Our Sunday-school and Bible-class are interesting and profitable. We have had no special manifestation of grace to revive the work of the Lord in our midst; yet we have not been altogether without some tokens of the divine favor. Our church here has been called to pass through a sore trial, touching the erection of a house of worship. This great and good object has been before their minds and resting upon their hearts for some two or three years, in the midst of the most untoward circumstances, such as are incident to feeble churches in the far West. For a while under the influence of a heavy pressure in money matters, the increased cost of building materials, and the consequent failure to proceed with the work as contemplated, it seemed as if all hope had gone and we should be unable to take up the work in any shape whatever. But a week ago to-day, a meeting of the church and congregation convened, and there was but one voice; that was: 'Let us go forward with the huilding.' The proposed building is to be 52 by 40 feet, and 28 feet high, with gallery of 12 feet wide, at the front end. This we hope to get put up, inclosed, and so far finished as to get into the basement this fall, and then fluish off the upper part as we are able. Again, in behalf of this church and congregation, I ask the stewards of the Lord in your city and other highly favored portions of, 'the field,' to lend a helping hand.

"All things considered, we have reason to thank God and take fresh courage. The foundations of society seedal, moral, and religious, are being laid in this new land. We

"All things considered, we have reason to thank God and take fresh courage. The foundations of society, social, moral, and religious, are being laid in this new land. We look to God for his continued presence and blessing in rearing the superstructure. We need ever to bear in mind the fact that Paul may plant and Apollos water, but God giveth the increase. Pray for us, and for me, that I may be faithful and efficient in the great work given me to do."

At Eureka, ministering to the Welsh Congregationalists, we had a Welsh missionary until July last. He also labored to some extent in connection with the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church at the Cotton Wood settlement.

ILLINOIS.

In this State thirty-seven missionaries have been under our commission, and one colporteur; the majority of the expense being met by the collections of our auxiliary, the "Illinois Home Missionary Association," which is creating an extended interest in the home work.

The annual meeting of this Association, held at Galesburg, Aug. 11th and 12th, was one of much interest, rendered impressively so by reminiscences of its former Corresponding Secretary, the Rev. George W. Perkins, who died at Chicago on the 13th of November last. He had been most efficient in promoting the objects of this auxiliary, as he had long been of the parent Society, of which, until his removal from Connecticut, he was a Vice-President. Standing at the most important period of his life, with his strong intellectual and moral power arrayed against slavery and every iniquity, in Church or State; an undaunted and undevisting friend of the oppressed and of righteousness; placed in circumstances of varied and extended responsibility and influence; with a devoted people, in the midst of endearments of family, friends, and society, and with coadjutors in every department requiring his cooperation and counsel; his removal by death was an inscrutable providence. But the cause is God's, and the needful instrumentalities are his also. It is for us to imitate our brother as he imitated Christ, that like him, we may serve our generation and inherit the kingdom which He hath promised to them that love Him.

Rev. F. Bascom, whose valuable service as Agent of the Association had contributed largely to its advancement, succeeded Mr. Perkins as Corresponding Secretary. In May last he relinquished his labors as agent, settling again in the ministry, (at Dover.) Rev. L. H. Parker became the Agent, and, at the annual meeting, Rev. W. W. Patton was chosen Corresponding Secretary: he has since performed the duties of the office.

The work on the whole has advanced the past year. Some churches have been organized, and many that were feeble strengthened. A few houses of worship have been erected, and many destitute districts have been favored with the means of grace.

But few manifestations of the outpouring of the Spirit have been enjoyed, and only two revivals of religion reported by our missionaries. The rage for wealth, which has swept over the land, and other causes, have operated to hinder the work of the Lord, and to restrain the churches and the community from appropriate expenditures for the support of religion and the ministry. Our missionaries have, nevertheless, pursued their labors patiently, making sacrifices which should command for them hereafter just consideration and adequate support.

Two missionaries have been employed in laboring over extended districts; one among feeble churches in the limits of the Elgin Association, and in part maintained by that body; the other itinerating in Mason county. Such labors are greatly needed in many counties.

The necessity of the extension of our work in the southern part of Illinois is great, and, taken in connection with the fact that on two sides the State borders on slave States, the interests of freedom, as well as of the salvation of the people, and their general improvement require it.

The interest in the affairs of Kansas, and the general tendency of things in regard to freedom, is upward and onward. In some places efforts are making for the revival of the Temperance cause, but it is doubtful whether, on the whole, there has been any advance of that reform.

The action of the General Association of Illinois, at its meeting in May last, in the appointment of a committee (to report next year) in reference to the formation of a Congregational Home Missionary Society for the entire State, independent of the aid of any National Society, was discussed at the annual meeting of the Illinois Home Missionary Association, and a resolution passed in favor of the movement, provided the new Society shall be based upon the principles of this Association.

As this plan is popular, it is quite probable that it will be adopted, in which case we shall have more means for newer fields, and for the slave States and their borders generally. In this work we shall have the sympathy of our brethren who now cooperate directly with us in Illinois.

A missionary in Southern Illinois wrote in February that God appeared to be with his people, and their hearts were deeply wrought upon. In June he wrote that seven had recently united with the Church on profession of their faith, and that their prayer-meetings were attended not only by church members, but by the impenitent also. In his annual report he states that the monthly concert for prayer was well attended, and that the cause of temperance was prosperous for miles around him. "Therefore," he says, "we seldom hear profane language, or witness Sabbath desecration."

"Our church and community supply the county almost entirely with district scheolteachers. The church are emphatically Anti-Slavery, Anti-Liquor, and Anti-Tobacco. In three months seven have abandoned the use of tobacco. Two of these had used it for thirty years."

"As a church," he says, "we are impressed with the magnitude of the field before us. We need at least four missionaries to operate in as many counties, which are contiguous to our own. In these four counties there are three O. S. Presbyterian churches, and as many Cumberland Churches, a few Methodist, and, if I am correct, one Free Will Baptist church. These are all the evangelical denominations now attempting to advantages.

Will Baptist church. These are all the evangencia denominations now attempting to make inroads on the great host of the common enemy.

"Wabash county, with a population of more than 6000, is an inviting field, with scarce any religious influence. Mount Carmel, its county town, is delightfully located on the Wabash river. White county, with a population of 10,000, holds out great inducement to the zealous missionary. Wayne county, destitute, save a Baptist church, and a few Methodist, is fast filling up by immigration. Richland county on our north, with a population of 8000, is one of the most important fields of which I am speaking; made increasingly so by the railroad, which brings within its limits those who come west for the purpose of securing homes, many of whom left good society and religious advantages.

"This is, truly and emphatically, a missionary field. Its broad prairies, checked with cultivated farms, and interspersed with groves, belted by woodlands, enjoying a climate of balmy sweetness, are yet in the hand of the enemy, and under the apparent control of the foul destroyer.

"We therefore put up the Macedonian cry: Come over and help us."

Our colporteur, who is laboring in the southern part of the State, finds a very hard field, but he thinks it is changing for the better. He says of it:

"This portion of Illinois has never, until recently, attracted the intelligent portion of emigration. The immigrants were, for the most part, of the more common class, just from under the curse of slavery, many of whom started for regions further West, but finding their means to fail, were compelled to stop; and many of them pitched their tent on 'Uncle Sam's farp,' where some still remain. Hence the degree of ignorance, intemperance, and superstition that prevails here. One aged professor of Christianity told me that he locked up his profession in his chest, when he started from Tennessee, and had never taken it out since. Recently, a more intelligent and better class of citizens are making their appearance amongst us; and equally fast are those of the beforenamed class leaving our borders."

The influence of tract distribution and other labors has been encouraging. Unexpected assistance has been derived from the statements of returned emigrants to Kansas, relative to the outrages committed by the slave power there.

"Many," he says, "have been brought to see the evil of fellowshiping the sins of slavery and intemperance in the church; and some from a high sense of right, are advocating the principles of humanity in a very satisfactory manner. The spirit of caste is so deeply rooted in the minds of the less intelligent class of the Southern emigrants, that the only hope seems to be in a proper education of the rising generation, to work a thorough reformation."

A missionary who labored a short time in Du Page county, in speaking of the condition of the work when he first went there, says:

"I found the church low and quite discouraged. I commenced a meeting and tarried with them three weeks, preaching the Gospel. The Church, by the strength of grace, arose in the name of the Lord. Backsliders returned to Christ, and sinners soon began to inquire what they should do to be saved. At the close of the meeting it was found that fifteen or more had found hope in Christ. By request of the Church, I supplied them for a few Sabbaths, and administered the ordinances, when ten united with the Church by profession of their faith."

We give an extract from the Annual Report of Rev. W. H. Johnstone, our lamented brother who died at Gap Grove on the 23d of Sept., at the age of 56 years, leaving a widow and a family to whom in affliction effective sympathy should be tendered. He was a man of vigorous mind and benevolent heart, devoted to his work, and called with his family to endure peculiar trials. His disease was a cancer on his face, which, for a few months preceding his death, had prevented his labors. His annual report was written while experiencing great pain, a few weeks before his decease. About that time he wrote:

"I am now unable to do any thing, and my recovery is doubtful. I am looking to Him who holds the keys of death and the grave, and who is the great Physician—who kills and makes alive. Pray for me, dear brother, and let us look forward to the time when we shall be free from sin, sorrow, and death—when the Lamb shall feed us, and lead us to fountains of living waters, and God himself shall wipe away all tears from our eyes."

"The moral condition of the people here is improving. The church is better attended; the Sabbath more respected among the rising generation, owing, no doubt, in great measure, to the influence of ordinances, the circulation of the Bible, and the result of our Sabbath-schools and Bible-classes. The anti-slavery cause is progressing greatly among us. Young men have been furnished with means and sent to Kansas, and good collections are raised for the general fund. Only a few years back, the people in this vicinity broke up, with great violence, the first anti-slavery meeting held here by the Congregationalists; and many of these now manfully plead the cause of freedom.

The prejudice against people of color seems fast dying away.

"The cause of Missions is treated favorably, yet there is a great want of liberality to sustain it. The Monthly Concert of prayer is generally attended on the Sabbath, owing to the great distance the people have in some places to come, and the cause of the oppressed plead with great fervor—that the Lord would break every yoke, and let the oppressed go free. Illinois is an excellent missionary field, and I trust through the blessing of God, the preaching of the Gospel, the agency of missionary societies, and the effusion of the Holy Spirit, that the beautiful prairies will become vocal with the praises of God. Then shall be fulfilled the ancient prophecy, Isalah 51: For the Lord will comfort Zion, he will comfort all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness as Eden, and her desert as the garden of the Lord. Joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody."

The following extract from a letter written by the deacon of a church that was last year aided by the Association, but has now become self-sustaining, may furnish a valuable hint for other churches:

"The assistance of the Association has done much good the last year: it has enabled us to find out that we could pay $770 to a minister in one year, * * * and having now settled a worthy minister, God helping us, we will not ask aid from abroad for his support."

A missionary in Peoria county says, two young men in his church are preparing for the ministry. He adds:

"Our church is anti-slavery without a single exception, and there is no exception in its opposition to the Rum traffic. Only one member uses tobacco in any of its forms, "We can not report that progress in the divine life, or in true reforms, that we could hope; still we think we can say with all truthfulness, that the standard of practice piety has been elevated somewhat; to pray for the enaleved is not so belnous an offense as it formerly was, though we are by no means an anti-slavery town. The Methodist minister in charge of the church here is what might be called a thorough-going abolition ist. He is a Virginian by birth, and was trained to regard anti-slavery men as disunionists, and every thing that was bad and detestable; but when he became converted, the Spirit made thorough work of it, and taught him to regard all men as brethren, and to treat them as such, whatever might be their condition or the color of their skin. He has spoken out very freely whilst here, denouncing the 'sum of all villainies.' From June until September of last year we were alone in this cause, and now the Presbyterian church has a minister who is suspected of being an anti-slavery man."

IOWA.

In this State we have eight missionaries. At various points, the enterprising spirit that exists relative to education, and the securing of Gospel privileges, furnishes encouragement to effort, while the indifference of multitudes, who care only for worldly advantages, shows that our work is demanded. Now is the time to sow the seed, to lay foundations, to guard against all downward moral tendencies, and to infuse the leaven of righteousness into the masses of the large and increasing population of the State.

Notwithstanding the existence of many unpropitious circumstances, some of which were peculiar and providential, and some common to all the North-west, progress has been made, and churches have been gathered and organized, over some of which our missionaries have been settled with much prospect of usefulness.

Rev. O. Emerson, missionary at large, has extended his labors over a wide district, and taken an active and responsible part in the formation of seven congregational churches, and is laboriously and successfully engaged in the performance of missionary labors. Rev. C. F. Hawley, a Wesleyan, has labored as an Evangelist on the northern border of the State, and somewhat across the line, in Minnesota Territory. His labors have been blessed in leading large numbers to Christ. Four revivals of religion have been connected with his labors, and he has been active in the formation of four churches. The labors of other missionaries have been blessed in the conversion of souls, the quickening of Christians, the establishing of Sabbath-schools, and promoting temperance.

The advances making in education generally, and efforts to establish literary institutions, are indications of the character of the governing mind among the people. In no State is there found evidence of a greater victory over former pro-slavery political influence. Iowa has elements of power, and will not only stretch out her hand to Kansas and Missouri, but from her peculiar location, will exert an important influence for freedom in the entire South-west. Her responsibility is great, and she must execute the work which Providence has committed to her hands.

Amend and the contract of the former of the former

The newly organized churches, in the formation of which Mr. Emerson was active, are located, he says:

"At Adams, in Delaware Co.; at Cedar Rapids, in Linn Co.; at Waterloo, in Black Hawk Co.; at McGregor, in Clayton Co.; at Lima, in Fayette Co.; at Forestville, in Delaware Co.; and at Lancaster, in Keokuk Co. At only two of these places was there a resident minister. At all the others, your missionary took the preparatory steps without ministerial assistance. The organization, however, was not completed without the action of a regular ecclesiastical council. In regard to all of them, I believe it was thought by the brethren assembled, very important that the work should be done at the time, and that it could not have been done except by some one free from the encumbrance of a pastoral charge. Besides the organization of these churches, measures have been taken toward the formation of several others, which I trust will be effected at no distant day. Ministers throughout the sphere of my travel have heartily cooperated, and have appeared gratified that I was able to be thus employed.

"I have preached to quite a number of destitute churches, and administered the ordinances to them. These labors have been gratefully received, and in many cases evidently blessed. The value of an occasional visit to a church in such circumstances can scarcely be appreciated by those that have been accustomed to a full supply of the means of grace. I have found three or four congregations in circumstances of difficulty, and have aided them in calling councils, whose results have been greatly beneficial. During the past winter, I labored in four protracted meetings. The weather was exceedingly unpropitious, and the results not such as we hoped. Still, Christians were in many instances quickened, and some souls, we trust, converted. There have been abundant opportunities to preach in behalf of the oppressed, and these I have in several places improved, I trust with valuable effect."

Our missionary in Cerro Gordo county has extended his labors into Floyd county. He grieves over the amount of Sabbath-breaking in much of the western country. The habit of having preaching but a part of the time, he thinks leads to the Sabbath being but imperfectly regarded by even the more moral and respectable portion of the population. They fall into the habit of visiting on that day, and of paying extra attention to their stock and their improvements. The people in some of the towns where he labors, are just now expending large sums of money for the improvement of their schools.

For a time the prospects in a part of his field were very dark, and his congregations were greatly reduced. At a later date, he wrote:

"My last quarterly report in regard to that place, was rather discouraging. Some men of property and influence were determined that no reproach should be heaped upon rum-selling, gambling, rowdyism, and political dishonesty. A minister of another denomination was introduced, and a great effort made by this class to turn away the minds of the people from my preaching. For a time it had some influence. Some who had thought of organizing a church, got discouraged, and thought they should leave the place. But within the last few weeks, the interest has revived, congregations have increased, and there seems to be more encouragement."

Our missionary in Black Hawk county wrote !

"This church is building a house of worship. It is designed to accommodate a congregation of four hundred. Its estimated cost is $4000. It seems indispensable to our well-being as a church. Our principal appointment is now crowded between the morning and evening appointments of other denominations. Our members are generally men in active business. They manifest a truly Christian zeal in religion, are punctual in attending prayer-meetings, and taking an active part in them. Our spiritual prospects are comparatively bright. Education and missions are receiving favorable notice. The slave is ever remembered in our public meetings and prayer-meetings."

A missionary laboring in the southern part of the State, reports the formation of a church in Appanoose county, only two and a half miles from the Missouri border. All its members are thoroughly anti-slavery in sentiment, and it is thought will exert a salutary influence in this respect on their neighbors in Missouri. This church is ninety miles distant from the residence of our missionary. He says it took him three days to walk the distance, but he performed the journey with pleasure, believing that God directed his steps, and blessed his ministrations to the people.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

From Buchanan county, a missionary wrote:

"We feel that our church is progressing steadily, and exerting its influence for truth and righteousness, though, owing chiefly to the prevailing disposition to oppose all reformatory measures as innovation, the progress is slow. The temperance cause does not advance as it should, nor does it receive impetus and moral influence from the personal example of many professing Christians. As a church, we make total abstinence a term of membership and communion.

"Sabbath-breaking is another prevailing sin of this town and vicinity; nor is it confined to the world, but has the influence and example of a sham Christianity to sustain it. The Church must combine its entire moral influence against this flagrant sin, and in favor of temperance, before either the fourth commandment will be duly and generally obeyed, or intemperance be effectually checked."

About the first of June, a missionary in Delaware county, reported the organizing of a Congregational church, consisting of thirteen members, two of whom united on profession of faith. In his annual report, he says:

"I came to this place early in January, and found the people entirely destitute of Gospel privileges, there being neither church organization, minister, nor preaching within six or seven miles. It was deservedly termed a 'hard place,' intemperance and Sabbath desecration being every where witnessed. I concluded to remain, and commenced bath descoration being every where witnessed. I concluded to remain, and commenced holding regular meetings, which have been continued to the present time. During the visit of the General Agent, brother O. Emerson, in February, we held a series of temperance meetings, which were attended with happy results. The tide of intemperance which was rolling over the place, threatening to engulf both father and son in one common ruin, has been rolled back. There is now no place in the village or vicinity where intoxicating drink is sold. Thus there has been wrought a happy change in the moral aspect of our community. At one point where I preach regularly, there has been a deep religious interest this summer, especially among professing Christians. The attendance on public worship has been large, and a most earnest attention given to the truth. Prayer-meetings have been sustained with much interest."

Our missionary in the northern counties gives statements of his labors in interesting revivals of religion, and says :

"I have travelled through a range of country one hundred miles in extent, and have little to do with the domestic affairs of the churches. My labors among them have been little to do with the domestic affairs of the churches. My labors among them have been mostly in filling appointments, at intervals of two weeks in each place.

"The spiritual prospects of the churches seem to be goods, though there is a powerful tendency here at the West to relapse into worldliness, especially during the busy season. I have labored to prevent this as far as possible.

"All classes of emigrants are coming in. In some localities the Norwegians are numerous. In others, Germans abound; and in others, the Irish. But few of these classes attend our religious service. The Sabbath is very generally descerated, especially is this true in Minnesots. Where our denominational influence prevails, there is strong action both in Church and State against slavery. There are as yet but few anti-slavery churches. The Methodist Episcopal denomination is more extensively established than any other; but as a general thing, their influence is against the organization of anti-slavery churches. tion of anti-slavery churches.

"In some places, strenuous effort is made for the suppression of intemperance; in other places, its desolating tide rolls like a flood. Education is beginning to receive some attention. Missions are scarcely thought of. The people, many of them, seem but faintly to apprehend their duty to sustain the Gospel in their own midst, and it seems not to have entered into their minds that there is any thing beyond that required of them. I hope they will better realize their responsibilities by and by. Our prayermeetings are frequently interesting, and I trust those in bonds are remembered with sympathy. As we are a mixture of all people, we have the errors of all people, and I am constrained by experience to say, that if we need a better qualified and more devoted ministry in one portion of our country more than in another, that portion is the West."

KENTUCKY AND NORTH-CAROLINA.

In Kentucky we have had four missionaries, and have nine anti-slavery churches; in North-Carolina, eight churches; all of them refuse to fellowship slaveholders. The work in North-Carolina was for a time suspended. but is now to be renewed by one or more missionaries. The Rev. James S. Davis, one of our missionaries in Kentucky, recently visited the antislavery churches in North-Carolina. The facts reported by him show the desirableness of our doing much there.

In Kentucky, this year has been one of unusual interest and success. Our missionaries and colporteurs have enlightened the public mind on the subject of slavery, by their preaching, and by the publications circulated by them. Efforts for the conversion of souls have been blessed, and in four places revivals of religion have been enjoyed. A school was established, and the Gospel preached at Cummins, in Rockcastle county. A house for public worship, and for the school, was erected, but was burned by incendiaries early last summer. At the same place, Sabbath, July 21, while Mr. Fee was preaching in a dwelling-house, a mob entered, threatened him with death, and by force dragged him from the house, and led him a mile on foot; afterwards he was forced to go with the mob some eight miles. The house from which Mr. Fee was dragged, was not long afterwards burned, and for a length of time Mr. Fee's life was in danger from the mob, consisting of some forty men. The labors, anxiety, and distress of Mr. Fee and his anti-slavery brethren, and of Mr. Fee's family during his perils, were great. Deep sympathy was felt for them, and the prayers of thousands were offered to God in their behalf.

The Executive Committee have recently appointed three more missionaries and two colporteurs for Kentucky.

Mr. Fee reports the addition of 17 persons on profession of faith, and 3 by letter, to two of the seven churches under his care.

"The year's labor," he says, "has been subject to many interruptions, and has been "The year's labot," he says, "has been subject to many interruptions, and has been scattered over parts of eight counties. I have gone to some of those various points at the earnest importunity of friends, who have but little preaching, and are very desirous to keep allive and together what has been gained and gathered. To other places I have gone, hoping to open new doors for others to come and preach. At these places I have preached a course of sermons, laying down the great truths of the Gospel, the nature and design of a church, and the sin of fellowshipping gross inquities. I have left with the people religious and anti-slavery tracts, and afterwards sent them such aid as I could."

Some account of the mob violence and persecutions from which Mr. Fee and others have suffered, will be noticed under distinct heads.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

The following extract from a letter written by Mrs. Fee, will be read with interest:

"Thank them for that Hible."

"Last Sabbath evening, a very sable slave called at our door, and with that humble politeness which the African seems instinctively to possess, asked me if I could give him a book. I asked him if he was a slave, and if he could read. To each question he replied: 'Yes, ma'am.'

"I told him that for such we have Bibles, and are glad to have an opportunity to give them. When I handed him one, I asked him to read a verse for me, which he did intelligibly, though his sight was slightly dimmed by age. He turned to Exodus 21:16, and read: 'He that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.' He referred to other similar passages, some of which he quoted readily. As he repeated his thanks for the Bible, I told him it was not my present, but a gift from friends in other States, who gave money for purchasing Bibles for slaves, and that the money is called the 'Slaves' Bible Fund.' He said, 'Thank them for this Bible.

"As he stood in a kind of wistful reverie, gazing around at our humble home, then at me and my children, he asked: 'Do you do your work yourself?' I replied, Yes. He then asked: 'Do you not need help?' I answered Sometimes very much. He then spoke of his wife being a good 'house-woman,' and that she was hired out every year. I told him we believed 'the laborer worthy his hire,' and could not consent to the injustice of paying one person for the services of another. He exclaimed: 'O justice! justice! what a noble sight is a just man!' And as he raised his toil-hardened hands, looking at them, he said: 'I could work almost without tiring, if I could receive regular wages as other men do.""

Mr. Davis reports the addition of 18 persons to the two churches under his care, on profession of faith, and 3 by letter, from other churches. In his annual report, he says:

"The anti-slavery cause is going forward. The Kentucky News, of Newport, daily and weekly, is giving expression to the strong hatred of slavery felt by many in our State, and their love of freedom.

"In our immediate vicinity, (Cabin Creek,) an abolitionist is respected as much as any one else, though he may be subjected to occasional abuse or misrepresentation.

"Our churches, however, are not marked by that deep-toned piety which should distinguish Christians livings in the midst of so much wickedness. And at present there are but few and feeble signs of spiritual life. The pastor has been necessarily absent for a number of weeks, and the churches have not enjoyed meanwhile that attention which they might otherwise have had.

"The latter part of the winter, we were favored at Bethesda with a precious revival season. A number of immortal souls then experienced, as they trust, the sweets of sin forgiven. Professors of religion were quickened; and earnest desire for the conversion and salvation of sinners took possession of some, and they wrestled with God and pre-

Resource Conjugtes have swearly appointed there mo Mr. Waters labored in Kentucky but four months and a half, teaching and preaching, at Cummins and Roundstone. Among the families to which he had direct access, he found twelve adults unable to read or write. The following brief extract is taken from his report:

"By a great effort, we succeeded in sreeting a house of worship at Cummins, the subsequent fate of which is well known. We received help towards this, in work and various other ways, from sixteen different families. It was no doubt the desire for the school which had been promised, that stimulated many of them. When at last the schools which had been printed, that sainted many of them. When at less that house was ready and put into operation, the people seemed very highly gratified. One man who had been a bitter opposer—a man of a large family and some influence—declared his purpose to send all his children. There was much anxiety among the people that the school should go on, although it was known not only as an anti-slavery school, but as proposing to receive, and actually receiving, colored children.

"It is not so difficult to make non-slaveholders see and admit the evil and sin of slaveholding, as to awaken in them enough of high moral principle and courage to face a public sentiment created meetly by the frowns of the slaveholders. Independence of spirit is completely crushed out of the great mass of the people at the South. Nothing but a moral regeneration, which shall really induce them with the spirit of Jesus and his apostles, can wholly free them from the yoke of this bondage. There is much religion such as it is-and much preaching in some parts of the South, but it don't meet the case; it comes far short of saving the people, even those who make the most of it. Theoretical infidelity is but little known; but practical infidelity is almost universal, even among church members.

"The Christian anti-slavery movement in the slave States calls for the hearty cooperation and earnest prayers of every Christian and every lover of his country, that the Lord would open the way for his Gospel to go in there unshorn of its regenerating Emigration to Kentucky.

Several of the missionaries have written on the subject of emigration from the free States to Kentucky. We select briefly from their articles, published in the American Missionary. They think that the same principle of action which leads many to go to Kansas to prevent slavery there, should lead others to Kentucky to help to abolish slavery. After enumerating some of the advantages of Bracken county as a location for such immigration, they add:

"There are now, in that immediate neighborhood, several farms for sale. If Free State men would locate there, the church and school would be greatly strengthened. If they do not, slaveholders may buy, and crush out the free school and church. If this light shall be extinguished, whose fault will it be? Not that of the faithful and active pastor there—not that of a few praying spirits there, but of those who move away, and of those who might, but will not, come and buy out the indifferent and the slaveholders."

From an article by Mr. Fee, published in our paper Jan. 7, 1857, headed, "A College needed in Kentucky," we take the following:

"We want Christian teachers who shall labor to redeem their pupils from all sin, and who, anti-slavery wise, shall not only enlist the intellect from pecuniary and literary considerations, but who shall enlist the conscience, and under God impress the soul with a sense of its obligations to God and man—all men. These teachers should, as far as possible, be preachers—true ministers of the Gospel. In all the places where we now have anti-slavery teachers, the church influence has preceded them. We could now plant schools where we have not church organizations, but, as far as I know, not where there has not been the previous work of the colporteur or minister. Pious teachers would do great good, though they were not preachers.

"We need a college here-an anti-slavery, anti-caste, anti-rum, anti-tobacco, antisectarian, pious school, under Christian influence, one that will furnish the best possible facilities for those with small means, who have energy of character that will lead them to work their way through this world. We need working-men. I know places where improved lands, and comparatively new, can now be bought for ten or twelve dollars per acre, well watered—gushing streams of the purest water—high, beautiful, healthful, central, easy of access. Three or four hundred acres would secure a village—a home for a colony. Then let some of God's stewards say, We will band together, go out as a colony. They can thus have the advantages of good society, a school, and a church, and do good. There are places in Kentucky where they could not do this thing. But there are many other places in counties where there are few slaves, where such persons would be uninterrupted and well received.

"The place for the college is here, in the interior of Kentucky. Offer facilities for a good education here, and very many young men and young women will attend for the sake of the education, though at first not anti-slavery. A few men, under God, can make this enterprise succeed."

FROM A COLPORTEUR.

"Kentucky is now, with slight exceptions, accessible to truth, and should be occupied immediately. She has an ample fund, if rightly applied, to educate every child in her borders. The cause of education is fast gaining favor, and there is a necessity for books and tracts that will put to silence the doctrine that Christ and his Apostles fellowshipped slavery and slaveholders: books condemning caste, pride, and all unrighteousness. The friends of a pure Gospel have now, after a long struggle, an open field in Kentucky. In a great portion of the State, especially the mountain portion of it, most of the people are not only willing to hear and read on the subject of slavery, and of other sins, but are anxious to receive instruction. . . . We want in Kentucky some fifteen preachers and as many colporteurs, if we could get them—men who are not afraid to die for Christ, if need be. Will not some come to help us in our labor of love?"

Encouragements.

About the 1st of January, Mr. Davis wrote that the church at Cabin Creek was enjoying a season of much interest. He said:

"The week brother Fee spent with us was sweetly refreshing. The Spirit descended as the small rain upon the tender herb. One young man, heretofore of correct deportment, but unwilling to take part in prayer-meetings, broke through his diffidence, and now speaks for Christ. Two persons, young men, have, I trust, been converted. An aged professor, one of the earliest members of the church here, experienced a new baptism of the Holy Ghost. His prayers and conversation were, after that, full of humility, love, and joy.'

In February, he wrote that a protracted meeting had been held at Bethesda Church, Bracken county, which was blessed of God to the conversion of sinners and the quickening of the Church. Mr. Fee, who organized the church, had been called to spend some weeks in the neighborhood. While there, (Mr. D. says :)

"He became deeply impressed with the condition and promise, 'If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what you will and it shall be done unto you. This promise was plead in faith, and labor at once commenced, the man of God speaking as the Spirit gave him utterance. I reached the neighborhood on the evening of Wednesday, 18th of February, and was rejoiced to learn that so blessed a work was in progress. The weather was inclement, and the congregation small, but the exercises were solemn, and earnest heed was given to the words of the preacher.

"Twelve persons have been baptized. Four from other denominations united with the church on profession of their faith.

"The subject of slavery threw no damper upon the revival, and I trust all who read this will note the fact. The congregation had become accustomed to hear this abomination treated as a heinous sin, and they were neither shocked nor driven away by its mention when the subject required."

From Berea, Madison Co., Mr. Fee wrote in June, that he had been holding some meetings in connection with Mr. Emerick, of Ohio, which had been of more than usual interest.

"At Berea, (he says,) there were four conversions and additions; others were inquiring. The audience was uniformly good during the week, and the house crowded to overflowing on the Sabbath.

"The second week we spent at one of my regular appointments, in Rockcastle county. Ten were added to the church on profession of their faith in Christ, and sevencounty. Ten were added to the charten on procession of their natural months, and so there teen more came forward as inquirers, and for prayers. We think the indications there very good for building up a good church. All of the converts at both places commenced the work of social prayer. That duty is seldom enjoined by the surrounding denominations. Indeed there are but few, young or old, that will engage in social or public "Brother Emerick, though from a free State, seemed to meet with no hindrances on that account. With those who will hear us, such laborers are rather regarded with favor than

In many of the letters of our missionaries in Kentucky, they speak of the need of more missionaries of the right spirit to occupy the places where an anti-slavery Gospel will be welcomed by the people. Mr. Fee

"There is, with the non-slaveholders, an increased desire to read and hear on the subject of slavery. This is not mere assertion; it is confirmed by the observation of others. There are reasons for it. The passage of the Fugitive Slave Act, the Kansas others. There are reasons for it. The passage of the Fugitive Slave Act, the Kansas difficulties, the late Presidential canvass, and the decision of the Supreme Court, all these have aided in rousing the people. The mass of non-slaveholders are anxious to hear or read on the subject of slavery. This is now the theme all over the nation. 'The time' has come. . . . Non-slaveholders are beginning to say, 'Down with sectional ism!' They are sincere. They are daily seeing that slavery is cursing them, intellectually, socially, morally. What they want is faithful men, to hold up truth and speak for them, and they will, in return, protect those men. Whilst in some districts proscription is were and still preservice with them is an increasing supresservice. tion is more and still more vile, yet in others there is an increasing purpose to maintain free speech."

Mob Violence.

Our missionaries in Kentucky are called to pass through some scenes of severe trial. The following extracts from Mr. Fee's letters will show the kinds of argument with which the spirit of slavery resists the spread of the Gospel.

Under the date July 21, after speaking of the erection of a house of worship, in Rockcastle county, he wrote:

"A few weeks since, we had a protracted meeting, which resulted in the conversion of some ten persons, who united with the church. Since then, three more have been added. The prospects for a good church there were daily increasing.

"At our next regular meeting, June 21st, quite a number of reckless men were around the outskirts of the congregation. There was no special violence, but we learned the next day that violence had been intended. Yesterday, (Sabbath,) many of these young men, with others alike irresponsible, whilst I was preaching in an unoccupied dwelling-house, entered with threats of death, and with hands on their weapons. The leading man drew a repeater, presented it at me, and ordered others to take hold of me. By superior force they dragged me from the house, tearing my clothes, and injuring my superior force they dragged me from the house, tearing my clothes, and injuring my person slightly. I resisted, as I usually do, because I wish them to know I do not surrender a single right willingly, and because I wish the cases might be as clearly obnoxious to law as possible. I did not attempt to injure any one. I do not at any time carry weapons. They led me off about one mile on foot. Most of the mob were on horseback. Some had pistols drawn a part of the time. Here they rested until my horse was brought. One excellent sister, whom I shall ever remember for her true-kindness, walked close by my side this distance.

"My horse having been brought, they resolved to take me out of the county, with demands that I would not again enter it. This, I told them plainly and repeatedly, I would not promise; that I was now in their hands, controlled by superior force, but the would not promise; that I was now in their hands, controlled by superior force, but the surrender of a right or duty I should not for a moment promise. They then marched me some seven or eight miles, amid jeers, taunts, and low vulgarity, to the town of Crab Orchard, in an adjoining county.

"Brothers McLain and Richardson, who came from their labors in Pulaski county the evening previous, and were at the meeting, resolved to go with me and witness my fate. Some of the mob threatened them with cowhiding, imprisonment, and death. Part of the time they walked, and part of the time rode behind the mob, sharing their taunts

"As we marched along, slaves looked on with amazement and sorrow, masters with laughs and jeers. One impenitent man showed me an act of kindness which much affected my heart. Another man, who has been, and I believe is now a professing

Christian, offered me a cup of water. This I told him I should take in Christ's name. He answered, 'Yes,' and said to the crowd, 'I believe he is a good man, but deluded.' Afterwards he advised that I be taken out of the county on the underground railroad, to Crab Orchard.

"Our protracted march gave me opportunity for conversation with several of the mob about their treatment of me and of the slave, and concerning their soul's salvation; and also to ask myself, Can you not only feel sympathy for the poor slave, who is often much more brutally dragged, cuffed, and abused than I am; but can you now 'love your enemies, bless them that curse you, and do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you?" I felt that I did this, and told the leading man so.

"When we arrived at Crab Orchard, the people gave the mob no cheering reception the whole thing fell flat. We bade them good afternoon, and came to the house of a friend, where we obtained some refreshment and spent the night.

"On Monday, when we returned to my house, we found a large company of friends had gone in search of us. The excitement is great in this and in Rockcastle county. The better part of the community, even slaveholders, condemn the conduct of the mob."

He wrote July 29th:

"The mob feeling still rages. I went to Somerset, the capital of Pulaski county, where brother McIain has been. I there found the same spirit raging, but no outbreak. I came back to Rockcastle after meeting, and found threats in abundance, scouts out, and friends much intimidated. The friends in Madison county, who went in search of my person, were much incensed, and had they met the mob, lives would have been lost. My wife and a neighbor woman were along with them. They knew not for twelve hours where I was, but supposed the mob had me. The excitement is yet very great. The mob were of a most reckless class; their acts were so open and brutal, that very many person not before comparited to our same are most cutsories.

many persons not before committed to our cause, are most outspoken.

"The friends at the place of meeting, after I was carried away, voted to have me come back and preach. I have been with them twice since, and told them that, Providence not preventing, I would come and fill my regular appointment. In answer to the interrogation of the captain of the mob, I had told him that I would.

"My condition is at present perilous, and my wife is almost overcome with anxiety about it. I am worn down with continued riding, am not vigorous in health, and am pressed with care, but have the rest of faith. I hope that God is my friend and will overrule all for good, and grant me wisdom and grace. Pray for me."

August 14th, he wrote:

"The mob still rages. The court came on. The Judge of that county (Rockenstle) threw his influence on the side of the mob, gave up his court-house to them, and the slave power to pass resolutions against us. The mob party, as we suppose, have burned down the house rented to brother Parker, [where meetings have been held since the meeting-house was burned, and where Mr. Fee was lately mobbed,] during his absence from home, at night, and the family, wife and four small children, narrowly escaped, saving but little. Quite a number of men, last week at court, swore publicly that they would take my life. The friends at Green's and at Cummins', alarmed for their persons and property, have refused to open their houses for the present, much as they desire to hear me. I had started last Monday to go and see the people around Green's and get them quietly to go to meeting. I found that the Grand Jury had risen without any presentment, the mob was not restrained, the people are not willing to open the house. The posts of danger are now closed to me. I trust that there will be a reaction soon. The flame is fed in Rockcastle by a clan of Southern (South-Carolina) boarders, gamblers, and ruffians, who come up every season. These encourage, and treat to whisky, a reckless class, who are cat's-paws for others."

He wrote September 4:

"At the request of a brother minister, I went last week to Laurel county to assist in a protracted meeting. On Saturday, we repaired to the meeting-house. There we found a mob with guns in their hands. Part of these were from Rockcastle, and belong to a standing mob of that county—the mob that tore me from Cummins.' Objections by those who had control of the house were raised against brother Powell or myself preaching in the house. He refused to preach, and adjourned the meeting. A friend offered his private house to me, as a place of preaching. I preached that evening to a very attentive audience. Good was done. Another friend offered his house to brother Powell, as a preaching-place. He made an appointment for Sabbath. We went to the meeting; on the way we met part of the mob. Soon after we arrived, we were apprised that forty men, armed with guns, pistols, and bowie-knives, were on their way to the meeting, swearing they would 'take him dead or alive.'

"Brother Richardson was with me. The appointment was not ours; and it was deemed best that we should get away as soon as possible. The mob soom came; finding we were gone, part of them started in pursuit, and continued their search until late at night. We escaped, and returned the second day after to my house, unhurt.

"I have been beset with mobs for twelve years, yet the Lord has delivered me, and I have not been seriously injured.

"Some friends have been frightened away from the State. This is what the mobseek to secure. By this action they hope to deter persons from coming to our meetings. One of the late mob was exhorted 'not to go to Mr. Fee's meetings if he did not like his doctrine.' He said, 'Yes, but so many others believe him.' They hate the light. They neither enter in nor willingly suffer others.

"Brother Powell says he will no longer fellowship slaveholders, and will try to build up anti-slavery churches.

"Brother Jones is doing well. He is delighted with his work, (colporteur.) Four men recently surrounded him and took away some of his tracts. He took it patiently.

"The colporteur work is becoming more and more necessary; very many of the people are now anxious to read.

"The last four weeks have been weeks of great anxiety of mind and continuous bodily toil. The young in experience needed instruction, the timid encouragement, the elder to be encouraged and led forward. I feel now that all is safe. The storm is over, and the troubled surface is again becoming smooth. To God be all the glory."

KANSAS TERRITORY.

The Association has had seven missionaries in this territory during the year. One of them has died, but another has since been appointed, thus keeping the number good. At the date of our last Report, a reign of terror prevailed in the territory. Osawatomie had been burned, and several murders committed there. Our missionaries were compelled to flee for their lives, and their families were exposed to destruction, but by wonderful providences were preserved. Rev. John H. Byrd, of Leavenworth City, had just been taken from his family at night, and was for two weeks a prisoner, in danger of death from merciless ruffians. For a time diabolical acts, murders, and burning of houses prevailed, the Border Ruffian laws and authority being sustained by the Executive; but soon after the battle near Lawrence, quiet was restored, and the missionary work, which had been greatly interrupted, was vigorously renewed. The fearful state of things so long existing there not only caused a good deal of suffering among the people, but tended to demoralize them. Some of our missionaries, by request of contributors, aided in the distribution of clothing and other donations, to relieve temporal distress. The moral condition of the country seems to be improving.

During the year six churches have been organized connected with the labors of our missionaries; Sabbath-schools, Bible-classes, and other instrumentalities are being established and prosecuted with zeal.

The want of houses of worship, and the severity of last winter, greatly hindered the assembling of the people, and the operations of the missionaries. Preparations are being made at different places for the erection of churches, and some aid is being secured from the Congregational Church Building Fund, and from others.

71

The population during the past summer has increased by immigration in an unprecedented manner. No one of our Territories has been settled by a people of more intelligence than the people of Kansas, and it is hoped that soon in the recovery from alarm and outrages, the institutions of religion and learning will every where be established, and good morals abound.

The intelligence of the late elections in Kansas is cheering, and unless the most high-handed fraud succeeds, the territory must be free.

We would gladly increase the number of our missionaries in this important field, and hope the means will be given us for this purpose.

One of our missionaries, located at Osawatomie, says, in his report, Aug. 19, 1857:

"Without being here to see and hear for yourself, I do not suppose it possible for you to get an idea of the state of things, as it has been and is. I can but allude to some things which have, from time to time, been referred to in my letters—the sacking of the town; the terrible excitement that followed the Pottawatomic murders; the mobs and the dragoons scouring the country, arresting Free-State men, stealing horses, robbing and burning houses; the depredations committed by bands of Carolinians and Alabamians who were camped near; the stoppage of the mails; the rumors of invasion from Missouri, and of murders and outrage; the invasion; the battle and the burning of the town, with all the fears, excitement, and sickness that followed. The effects of these things are seen in many respects, but in none more distinctly than in their influence on the religious habits, aims, and character of the people. The tendency of every thing is to become loose. Our professing Christians are so scattered, and have such poor conveniences for travel, that it is very difficult to get many of them together in any one place. Yet I despair not; I hope to see a flourishing church built up here, if God spares my life a little longer.

"Three miles south of Osawatomie there is an interesting neighborhood. I preach there once in two weeks on the Sabbath afternoon. There is also a Sabbath-achool there, conducted by a good brother. Pottawatomie is an interesting and promising field of labor. It is becoming densely populated, for a new country. A house for schools and religious meetings has recently been commenced. I think we shall organize a Congregational Church there at an early day. My other preaching-places are destitute neighborhoods, where there are no regular meetings, except when I visit them. I think the population of our town can not be less than eight hundred: two hundred and twenty-four votes were cast here on the 3d inst. Intemperance, profanity, Sabbath-breaking, and stander abound; yet I am astonished that there is not more crime where there is no law, or none enforced. Probably not more than one twentieth of the settlers are foreigners. Anti-slavery is much talked of, but much of it is without moral principle. Perseyerance, with faith and prayer to secure God's blessing, is what is needed here."

Another missionary, located at (Upper) Osawatomie, and who has devoted much of his attention to the people on the Neosha and its tributaries, gives similar views with those above, and adds:

"Like other new countries, there is but little regard for the Sabbath, and a great amount of profanity. Professors of religion here generally become careless and indifferent. The desire for gain leads many away from Christ. There is greater attention paid generally to seeking earthly situations than to making their 'calling and election sure.' (He describes briefly his itinerating field.) It has been from Hampton up the Neosha, about forty miles, having six appointments, three on the main river, one on Wolf Creek, and two on the Cottonwood. This field should be extended fifteen miles up the Neosha, where there are settlers destitute of a faithful ministry. There are also tributaries with settlers twenty-five miles lower down the Neosha, where my labors extend, where they are destitute of a preached Gospel."

Mr. Byrd's imprisonment by violent men, already referred to, seems to have been the means of preserving his life. After his release, he wrote:

"I am clear in the belief that my capture by a party of the enemy was a providential preservation of my life. If I had been allowed to remain at home till their wrath arose to the pitch which it attained the next week, I should doubtless have been killed, as were some of my friends. For a time, some supposed I had been killed. As the ruffians were bringing in Dr. Avery a prisoner, he heard them say they had a preacher in the camp whose neck they would stretch. For a few days, in the early part of my imprisonment, I though I was in peril. But it was not long before I came to the assured conviction that the Lord would preserve me, and notwithstanding their frequent threats, I could lie down among these armed and bloody men and sleep quietly. Several times the officers doubled the guard upon us, to save us from parties of their own men who desired to slaughter us."

In his annual report, he says:

"My places of regular preaching were Leavenworth City, Eaton, ten miles distant, and an intermediate settlement. I also preached at Lawrence during the protracted absence of Rev. Mr. Lum, and also in some other places; but owing to the difficulties of last year, my labors were interrupted and inconstant.

"Atchison" (to which place he has recently removed, he says) "was formerly the strongest pro-slavery region in the Territory. Until this spring scarcely a sermon had been preached here. More zeal was manifested for the establishment of slavery than for the institutions of religion. But within a few months, eastern men have made extensive purchases of town property, and have come to reside here; so that the complexion of this community is decidedly changed.

"We have an interesting Union Sabbath-school and Bible-class. Children from families of all parties attend. I preach on alternate Sabbaths to attentive congregations. As superintendent of the Sabbath-school, and teacher of the Bible-class, I am engaged each Sabbath forenoon in town. There is an abundant field for labor in the country around. A few Sabbaths ago I preached in a thickly settled neighborhood, where they had never heard a sermor before.

"I do not know that anti-slavery principles have much advanced among us. The great body of the people within my acquaintance are strongly prejudiced against the colored man. May God speed the time when men shall recognize the brotherhood of the whole race!"

Aug. 26th he wrote that civil affairs in Kansas had just experienced a new complication, promising any thing but good to the cause of freedom. He refers to the acts of the "Bogus Legislature," dividing the Territory into election districts, in a way, as they thought, to secure a majority of members of the Council and House of Representatives.

"But," he says, "you may be assured that all these cunningly devised plans to establish oppression will fail. The great body of the people are aroused to a distinct apprehension of their rights. God reigneth, and he declares the triumphing of the wicked is short."

Our missionary at Bloomington and Kanwaca, Rev. H. N. Norton, after giving (Oct. 10th, 1856) an account of the terrors through which he, with the people, had passed, said:

"Yesterday we met and organized a Congregational Church, numbering six me mbers; two persons presented letters from other churches, and four came in on examination and by profession; one, a young lady, had been brought to Christ during the past summer. Several others are expected to unite soon."

ELEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

He gives the distinctive principles of the church as Evangelical, nonfellowshipping, slave holding, etc., and adds:

"My congregations in the north, on the California road, have been broken up in consequence of the Missouri invasion, and the burning down of some five or six houses there; but the people have mostly returned, and are re-building. I expect to resume preaching there a week from next Sabbath, and to form a church there soon. It is the desire of both these places to avail themselves of aid from the Congregational Church Building-Fund for Kansas, to build, as early as possible, suitable churches for their

On the 10th of Nov. he assisted in forming the Church at Kanwaca, composed of eight members, and directly left for the States. He returned with his family early in May. On the 10th of June he wrote:

"Our meetings are now regularly attended in both congregations, and in each place we/have Sabbath-schools and adult Bible-classes. During my absence from the Territory, my time was mostly spent in giving public information on the subject of the Geo-graphical, Political, and Religious condition of Kansas—travelling as far east as Connecticut; and I have reason to believe that my labors were instrumental in bringing out many good emigrants, and of advancing the cause of freedom and religion in the Terri-

Soon after, this an operation for a cancer on his face was performed, but without lasting benefit: he declined, and died on the 27th of August, greatly lamented by his churches and the people.

As a lover of Christ, of souls, and of human freedom, his labors have been most important. His sufferings were endured with patience, and his last hours were peaceful-death had lost its sting. A devoted wife and four daughters needing aid, as well as sympathy, mourn their loss. The statistical report and views given by a brother the day after his decease are of much interest. It concludes :

"The Sabbath is more carefully observed than in almost any part of the West. Our churches are most of them anti-slavery, but a great many of the people are in favor of the black law.

"The people generally are quite intelligent and enterprising, but as in all new countries, more or less infidelity prevails. Our prospects for freedom are brightening, but there is a great want of the fear of God among our political leaders. We can not say that righteousness prevails to any great extent; but we know that all we need is faithful workers for God, who shall gather the ripening harvest."

From the Annual Report of our missionary at Wabaunsa, Sept. 1, we extract the following:

"The past year has been one of at least outward prosperity. The church at Zean-dale has been strengthened by the addition of several members. A site for a church-building has been selected, and we only wait the promised appropriation from the Church Building Fund to proceed with its erection. It is greatly needed.

"The organization of the church at Wabaunsa in June, was a time of peculiar interest. Few churches in the west, and perhaps none in Kansas, have commenced under more encouraging circumstances. Located in an intelligent, moral, and rapidly growing community, it has a temporary church building, nearly completed, and the funds mostly secured for a larger edifice to be erected next season.

"The Sabbath-school at Wabaunsa has been well sustained during the summer. Through the kindness of Eastern friends, it has a library of some three hundred volumes. The Bible-class, sustained the entire year, embraces a large share of those who attend divine worship. At Zeandale, also, we have a Bible-class and Sabbath-school, with a good library. The Bible-class is attended by nearly all who attend public

"My congregations at Haynes', on Fremont Flat, have not been large. Nearly one half of the families in the vicinity are from Missouri and Virginia, and though they are personally friendly, and sometimes in attendance at meeting, yet to others they express dislike to 'Abolitionists,' and what they term 'preaching politics.' I regard it important, however, to occupy the ground. There is a small Sabbath-school at this point.

"My field of labor embraces a territory of about ten or twelve miles along the Kansas river, and five or six miles back from it, and there being no minister within it. I have much to do in visiting the sick, and enlisting the interest of new comers.

"About one half of the people are from New-England, and the other half, with the exception of a half dozen families, are from the Middle and Western States." There is here, as elsewhere in the West, a great tendency to the neglect of the Sabbath. Yet I think I can see a manifest improvement in this respect, on part of my field at least."

Rev. Henry Morell, of Council City, reports the formation of a Congregational Church at Burlingame, Dec. 21, 1857, consisting of nine members, at that time under his charge; also of a Free Presbyterian Church, at Council City, April 24, 1857, of thirteen members. The constitutions of these churches provide against receiving or fellowshipping slaveholders, or those who are connected with ecclesiastical bodies which do fellowship them; or those who engage in the traffic in intoxicating drinks, or are in the habit of using them. The Articles of Faith embrace all the great doctrines held by Presbyterian and Congregational churches generally.

Mr. Morell has been called to mourn the death of his wife, who died April 8th, to enter, as he feels assured, "the Redeemer's glorious presence, and enjoy the happiness, the foretaste of which had been given her here below, and had sustained her in many trials and sorrows, aud in missionary labors in Canada and the United States, among the Roman Catholics, and in Kansas." She left behind a family of six young children.

The following extracts are taken from his report of his field of labor :

"Council City is located at the south part of the aforesaid settlement, on the new [&]quot;Burlingame is located at the north part of the New-York Kansas League settlement, called Council City, on the Santa Fé road, and is about two miles and a half distant from the site of Council City.

[&]quot;At Council City there is but one man who uses intoxicating drinks. A temperance society is in contemplation. The anti-slavery cause stands good, and the moral condition of the people is encouraging; the Church, composed of pra yerful Christians, is

GENERAL VIEW.

We can not review the statistics of the last year without mingled emotions of joy and sorrow; with joy and gratitude, that so much, under God, has been done, and with sorrow that much more has not been effected. Had the churches, and we all, sought more earnestly, and enjoyed more constantly, the presence of the Holy Spirit, directing and enspiriting all in labor, and in furnishing more ample means to carry forward our work in this land, far greater results might have been secured.

We have this year passed the culminating point of a series of magnificent enterprises for worldly advantage, which have, for several years, been multiplying and growing with the extent of our country, the increase of gold from California, the expansion of the currency, and the, apparently, ever-opening avenues to wealth. The vast operations in stocks in cities, and the greed for gain manifest in the speculators in lands at the West, seizing all classes of society, and sweeping like fire on the prairies, together with the extravagant and reckless expenditure of money borrowed at enormous interest, in hope of early and splendid profits, or of ultimate independence, have presented the most formidable obstacle in the free States to the success of Home Missions. Now, that Mammon, the god of this nation is smitten by the hand of the Almighty, the finances of the country deranged, and the hopes of multitudes prostrated; and among them not a few of those who have aided in missionary and other benevolent enterprises, it will be a matter of anxious inquiry by many, how the cause of Missions is to be carried forward. But faith should rise above misgivings. The cause is God's. He is chastizing his people to prepare them for a greater work, to teach them the ends of life, and how, hereafter, to appropriate their means continuously and freely in right directions. If there shall be repentance and humiliation on the part of God's people, and earnest prayer for a blessing, we shall confidently look for the gracious outpouring of his Spirit, and the bringing in of salvation. With the willing self-denial of the children of the kingdom, liberal offerings will be poured into the treasury of the Lord, prosperity be given, such as has not before been known, to the cause of Christ and humanity, and the word of the Lord will run and be glorified.

Ministerial Support and Home Missionary Appropriations.

The question of adequate ministerial support by the churches, whether we regard the comfort and usefulness of the ministry, or the thrift and success of the churches themselves, is one of vital importance, so vital that Home Missionary Societies, while they sympathize with the churches and their missionaries, and would do all that legitimately can be done for their support, are bound, in making appropriations, not only to regard the wishes of the churches, and the present necessities of the missionaries, but to exercise, in view of all the facts at command, a discriminating and enlightened judgment, so as not to lower the sense of obligation on the part of churches to support the ministry. It should be borne in mind that, with the exception of missionaries at large distance, Missionary Societies do not determine the amount of the missionaries' salaries. This is substantially determined by the scale adopted by country churches of moderate ability, but who are self-supporting. Accurately, then, the amount of the salary is fixed by the church and the minister, or with his concurrence. The Church ordinarily assumes the major part of it, and applies to the missionary body for the balance. This is as it should be, preserving the mutual obligations of the church and the ministry, and keeping before the Church all the motives possible, to induce it to assume, at the earliest moment practicable, the entire support of the minister. If this order of things should be reversed, and the primary responsibility of the churches be broken up, their stamina would be destroyed, a pauper character would be engendered, and the ministry would early be in a state of uncertainty as to support, or of help-

Evangelists.

In our former reports, we have not over-estimated the importance of an increase in the number of evangelists, and missionaries at large, to itinerate and reach the scattered ones in new fields, to visit their brethren in older settlements, and to aid them with earnest and soul-stirring labors for the salvation of the people.

From the efforts of the small number of this class in our employ, we have a very considerable part of the good results of our work as given in our statistics, particularly in the promoting of revivals of religion, the conversion of souls, and the organization of new churches; and, in not a few instances, in the settlement of other ministers of the Gospel. They are doing a great pioneer work, preparing the way of the Lord, and are highly esteemed by their brethren in the ministry.

Some of them are men of mature minds, who have been settled in the ministry many years, whose wisdom and counsel are highly valued in all religious bodies with which they are associated. Some who are substantially of this class, and travel scores of miles in their work, have churches directly under their pastoral care.

Temperance.

Although in several districts our missionaries give interesting accounts of efforts in the cause of temperance, and of a gain in some instances, it is true that in the whole land, the need of urging the temperance reform never was greater. This necessity is beginning to be so generally felt, that it is hoped the efforts of all missionaries, and other ministers of the Gospel, and private Christians, will be so increased for the suppression of intemperance and the rum traffic, that propitious results will early be witnessed.

Evangelism and Reform.

As we review the work, and the past dispensations of divine providence and grace, we are eminently assured, that however much evangelism is abused and made a reproach by some of its advocates, who seek to prostitute it to slavery, it lays the only sure foundation of reform as it does of salvation. Its doctrines, precepts, and destinies alone can draw upon the human soul with sufficient power. As it is presented throughout the Bible, and gloriously exhibited in the sermon of Christ on the mount, we see the ground of hope for the world, both for this life and that which is to come. While, with this view, we necessarily eschew dependence upon mere humanizing philanthropy, we can never admit any religion which crushes the God-given instincts and rights of humanity. We have a Saviour who is not only God but Man, who lived, and suffered, and died for man-" for all men"-who rose again, and ever liveth-our BROTHER. That religion which enslaves a man, would chattelize the man Christ Jesus, as it does now thousands of the members of his spiritual body in this land. Such a religion must be supplanted by the religion of Christ.

The American Tract Society, and our Missions in Slave States.

It is not our design to review the position of the Executive Committee and officers of the American Tract Society in their subjection to the slave power, but to call attention to the bearing of their policy upon true missionary and colporteur work in the slave States. Had the Society been manly and Christian, from the beginning, in carrying out its object as stated in the constitution, its Christianity and "sound morality" would ere this, like leaven, have so largely impregnated the religion and temper of the people at the South, that no trouble would have arisen from the circulation of works of a decided Christian, anti-slavery character. But by a prolonged course of favoritism to slavery, in refusing to rebuke it as it has other sins, it has given comfort to the slave power and strength to its supporters, so that now religious denominations at the South, as well as slaveholders generally, give notice of their purpose to exclude any works which may be published by the Society, even remotely affecting slavery; and the officers and Executive Committee refuse to carry out even the moderate instructions of the Society at its last annual meeting. If this policy succeeds, it will greatly embolden the slaveholders to make direct aggressions upon all missionaries and colporteurs who, like ours, sympathize with the slave and are giving a true Christianity to the people, and may lead to their persecution if not their expulsion. In view of the position not only of faithful missionaries and other ministers of the pure Gospel of Christ, but of the non-slaveholders, among whom are multitudes groaning to be delivered from the curse which slavery inflicts on them, we are called on to condemn and oppose, as most mischievous and evil to all parties, and to Christianity, the policy and attitude of the Secretaries and Committee of that Society.

We are, therefore, called upon to watch the policy and action of all religious publishing missionary and other benevolent societies of various denominations, particularly those who, geographically and by ecclesiastical arrangements, regard themselves as national, and all movements like that of the United Synod of the Presbyterian Church in process of formation at the South.

It is hoped, that its fanatical and impious course in support of slavery, while it may work some evil in hindering direct Christian anti-slavery missionary efforts, will, by its separation from others, not only relieve them, but awaken what elements of freedom and spiritual life there is in them to oppose the apostasy and inhumanity, and to unite with us in Christian missions, alike to regenerate the people and to save from persecution those who propagate the faith once delivered to the saints.

Missions in Slave States.

We have before presented in our Reports, and in an appeal in the American Missionary, the importance of prosecuting our missions in the slave States and their borders, on a more extended scale. Much to inspire confidence has, under God, resulted from past efforts. Recently, several more missionaries have been commissioned to slave States, who seem drawn of the Spirit to aid their brethren in subverting slavery and other sins, and in laying foundations for the present and coming generations. Whether we regard the present and eternal well-being of the slaves, their oppressors and their families; or of the non-slaveholders and the free people of color; or the general interests of humanity, of the country and our common Christianity—we are bound to give to the South the pure and free Gospel of Christ.

It seems german to us and our principles, that we should press vigorously a work which enlightens the South, and promotes the conversion of slaveholders and others to the doctrines and practice of true Christianity, and which will thus secure the abolition of slavery. The practicability of establishing churches, non-fellowshipping slaveholders, is fully established. There is an increasing interest created in this field, and we trust that adequate means will be forthcoming with which to carry forward the enterprise.

The trials our missionaries will encounter, may be severe, but in answer to the prayers of God's people, the result of their labors will be glorious. Let us then, as we are called in the providence of God to this field, do for its millions, that which is worthy of Christians and philantropists, while we cease not to labor to enlist the Christian community to coöperate with us in the cause.

The Conflict.

The work to be done for God and humanity, in this country, is vast, and its necessities are pressing upon us with accumulative power. The present is a time of trial; a time of the wanton exercise of evil, having its highest type in the slave power, and its greatest efficiency in a Government subject to its behests. So extravagant are its doctrines, and so startling its demands, that all the elements of virtue and freedom among the people must now struggle for the mastery. Neither our Christianity nor our patriotism can stand, by defenses. Restraints and checks alone are futile. A conviction is coming, and is even now felt, that between cardinal moral, religious, and political principles, and their opposites, an issue is here making up for a struggle so intense and violent, as to necessitate the extermination of the one or the other. We pray that this conflict may not be with "garments rolled in blood," though "with burning and fuel of fire," under the lead, on the side of the just and good, of Him who is "called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." "HE will send forth judgment unto victory." Here it is that eternal motives must predominate. As with the individual soul, so with the nation-it is by the cross alone that we can conquer; without its faith and power, we perish. Let us then rise higher, and still higher, in our conception of the divine perfections, as exemplified in the mission of infinite love in Christ for the salvation of the world, of the principles of his kingdom, and of our responsibility to carry them out in the great work to which we are called , and with unshaken confidence in his promises, and joyful obedience to his command, renew our consecration to him, and to the glorious cause in which we are permitted to be co-workers with him.

AUXILIARIES.

The "Penobscot County (Maine) Missionary Association" held its 10th anniversary in Bangor, Feb. 4, 1857. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. Stephen Thurston, of Searsport, from Luke 2:14: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

The Treasurer reported receipts $310.42, and expenditures $309.91. The following list of officers was elected: George A. Thatcher, President; A. Merrill, and O. H. Ingalls, Vice-Presidents; John S. Kimball, Recording Secretary; James Allen, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer; William Sandford, Auditor; John Conant, Daniel W. Bartlett, George P. Claffin, Executive Committee.

Professor Samuel Harris was invited to preach the next annual sermon; Professor George Shepherd, substitute.

The Illinois Home Missionary Association.

This auxiliary held its last annual meeting at Galesburg, Aug. 11, 1857. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. S. D. Cochran, of Princeton, Ill., from Isaiah 35:1, 2:

- "1. The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose.
- "2. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice, even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God."

It appeared from the annual report, that the Association is in a prosperous condition, finding increased favor with the churches, and having occasion to rejoice in the recent adoption of its reformatory principles and measures by those who have heretofore opposed. A merited tribute was paid to the memory of Rev. G. W. Perkins, the late Corresponding Secretary, who deceased during the year. The Treasurer's report showed that the receipts of the year amounted to $3405.69, which, however, does not cover the expense of the aid granted to the churches, the deficiency being supplied by the Parent Society.

The action of this auxiliary in relation to an independent support of the Congregational churches in Illinois, has already been referred to.

The officers for the ensuing year are as follows:

President—Rev. Edward Beecher, D.D. Vice-Presidents—Rev. J. Blanchard, D.D., Rev. S. D. Cochran, Rev. M. N. Miles. Recording Secretary—Rev. J. E. Roy. Corresponding Secretary—Rev. Wm. W. Patton. Treasurer—Galen Eastman. Executive Committee—Rev. E. Goodman, Philo Carpenter, Esq., J. Johnston, Esq., Rev. W. W. Patton, Řev. W. A. Nichols, Rev. J. E. Roy, Rev. L. Benedict, Rev. L. H. Parker, Rev. W. E. Holyoke, Rev. F. Bascom, Rev. W. T. Bartle, Rev. E. F. Dickinson.

Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionary Society of Wisconsin and Illinois.

This Society held its first annual meeting at Racine, Wis., June 11, and reflected the officers of the preceding year, namely, Rev. Robert Williams, Milwaukie, President; Rev. Rees Evans, Chicago, Secretary; Hugh Elias, Esq., Genesee, Wis., Treasurer.

The members of this Society, and the churches with which they are connected, feel a deep interest in the American Missionary Association. Their collections have been paid into the treasury of the Association, and acknowledged with our monthly receipts.

dom and the extraction of souls. The entraction in low with or holl as well as in the according of success; the managers of a Boolet, so has labor. in the chief of oblicer to eated the great grind pla deconacted with cold that the fitte that at the se with the when the carry the chirals have the along with them; the contributer with only by great saldenial and sough tour sound and those has men firefully his mooth for cours ing one the add had Landshauds and to moving of motive on firm so that Lair to have very Christian when against the correction wil friends that fault and article neares of homeologid the most considered he yields to the other demands bloods anidosos actingibal foresant tracerat combine sombine should ee able to my with capitained that to all choic worder, all their labors. of chilar boundary there is the many bear and the bound to be the control of the second the dealers of the purious of the part of of the property of the converted has the manners and that all the power of this few array wheir over injurity and lifes.

Northing less than this can appropriate the heart of the missianers, to her meet by the appointment the depend on the continue and the course the of the same and the binner of the same and the same and the same but preparetable terrore risulative mandatored walk overse and this dea modered and control represition to every thing Christ-like, pear and labor the ages cornectly for their salanton. Scattery less then this can lend the Christian co weed for opportunities of retreathment elecatheren and deny bineed indulgances long unioned, thut in the hour of advertis, when to: finds his mosts theoremedilad, at may contail see immuliminished arms the finds use the for the progress of the worth. North a terr than this one true the executive officers of a Missionary Association undicative at their paints when commercial disaster and districts make their log one gradit and their Locare cot when for a time darlor is seen to test on the prospectoral not of their Missions and their contain later on the tree on par if the above work, and when the sone and thoughters of the things of the decide market is respond to the call of positioned and the equilibrium and the heather, "Come " su tilod buts my a

Let ea then, missistantes, executive elicers, monitors and actualisations For shreety her regulations could office and the plant Charles of the street but we may know more of the power of the level of Chalet to constrain us, to like, not the odeselves, but wholly for Hum whichard died for as and er was beginning the second of the second of the recorded to make the Christian department of the land of the land are provided the first and a factorized for the art of proper field sign for resolutions has record which was a facily represent to the price of open breakly the Constitute Cart

A Street of Service and the service of the House Resident School on the service of the service o transacione de accionante e de la lación de la proposition de la composition della c the man stage carrespon of theme. The mentionery to his night in the

the state of the s

saved. It is our work to prove the Google of Chalet; it is kind a work to ANNUAL DISCOURSE, and such an burn plain such than harden brown nicht was a far for mined to continue this sid, till class stall each. Whatever in the prove BY REV. L. A. SAWYER, a mint de cresaga bacomajneo a tem plato baccado vicalmero a tem al si-Of Westmoreland, N. Y. the or burger at sharper and a period of the report of the rest of the state of the we meet not be decayed. Carrierias she Sixt of the and the force of many and this confirmation to the real sighteen are a real to the per analysis of equipped and part to take their normalist and the con-THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST THE HOPE OF THE WORLD and their the art a series and annual property of the series and their

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15, 16.

the rest of the same of the sa

THE Gospel of Christ and of his kingdom, signifies the Christian dispensation, in distinction from that of Moses; or the covenant of God with men under Christ, with its eternal and unchangeable law of righteousness, its provisions for the exercise of mercy in the forgiveness of sins, its great expiatory sacrifice in the death of Christ, with the institutions of baptism. the Lord's Supper, the Christian Sabbath, and the Christian Church with its public worship and instructions; and the accompanying mission of the Holy Spirit, to convince the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment, and to abide with God's people as their guide and assistant in welldoing a clumber of runn, man man be obtained with where well (1 on

This Gospel, this announcement of Christ and his kingdom, and the covenant of God with men under Christ, was proclaimed to the world as good news. Angels rejoiced in the proclamation of it, and it was celebrated by the heavenly choirs. The kingdom of heaven and of God was announced as the hope of the world, and as a vast empire of truth and righteousness which was destined to fill the world with joy and peace, by filling it with holiness. Christ preached his own Gospel during his public ministry, and commissioned his disciples to preach it with him; after his crucifizion, he left the preaching of it to his disciples, and charged them to pursue it till every human being should hear the joyful sound. This work is still unaccomplished. The Gospel is not yet preached to every creature, and the injunction is still resting upon us to pursue the preaching of it. The divine requirement is explicit and peremptory, "Preach the Gospel to every creature;" and we may not desist from our labors, nor turn aside from our work, till it is accomplished, and the world saved. It is our work to preach the Gospel of Christ; it is God's work to give it success in converting and saving men. Christ did not send out his servants alone; he sent the Spirit to direct and assist their endeavors, and to make their word mighty and powerful; and he has promised to continue this aid, till time shall end. Wherever in the process of ages the Gospel has been preached in its purity, it has proved the wisdom and power of God to salvation to every one who has received it.

It is not a cunningly devised fable, nor a conjectural system of faith in respect to the invisible and the unknown. It is a system of religious truth attested by evidence which is conclusive, and in regard to which we need not be deceived. Christ is the Son of God and the Saviour of men, and his requirements of love and righteousness are a reality. Our own existence and that of our neighbors is not certified by clearer evidence, than the existence and work of Christ; neither is it more certain that we exist at this moment, than it is that Christ lived, died, and rose again, and that he ascended on high to prepare eternal joys for his disciples and followers.

It is mentioned as an inducement to preach the Gospel, that whoever believes and is baptized shall be saved, while the unbelieving will be condemned. In agreement with this, Paul says to the Philippian jailer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved and thy house." (Acts 16: 31.) and Philip baptizes the Ethiopian Eunuch on a profession of his faith in Christ as the Son of God. (Acts 8: 37-38.) Paul also tells us, that the righteousness which God approves is from faith to faith, (Rom. 1: 17,) that it is without the law, (of circumcision and other Jewish rites,) but is by a faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that believe, (Rom. 3: 21, 22,) and that being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, (Rom. 5: 1,) that as by the disobedience of one man many were made sinners, so also by the obedience of one, shall many be made righteous, (Rom. 5:19,) and that there is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, because the law of the spirit of life has made them free from the law of sin and death; (Rom. 8: 1, 2,) that is, has made them holy. Great prominence is every where given in the Scriptures, to a right faith, both as being itself a part of Christian obedience, and as tending to general holiness. But holding even the truth in unrighteousness is every where condemned. It not only fails of saving men, but aggravates their condemnation. The way of salvation by faith is not opposed in the Scriptures to the way of salvation by repentance and by holiness. Christ taught that men must keep the commandments of God in order to be saved, (Matt. 19: 16-22,) and that unless a man is born again of water and of the Spirit, he can not see the kingdom of heaven. (John 3 : 3, 5.) Peter tells us, that men must repent and turn to God that their sins may be blotted out, (Acts

2:38; 3:19,) and that in every nation he that fears God, and works righteousness, is acceptable to him. (Acts 10:34.)

There is no opposition between these statements and the scriptural doctrine of salvation by faith. Faith and holiness both agree. They belong together, and are inseparable. He that believes correctly, speaks and acts correctly; and Believer is a scriptural title for a saint, because right believing leads to holy living. The precise nature of saving holiness - producing faith, has been a subject of much debate, and many crude and false notions are held respecting it, but fortunately we have the question settled by divine authority. Paul, in a discourse on the subject of this faith, (Hebrews 11:1,) describes it as a confident expectation of things hoped for, and a full belief in things not seen. This makes the objects of saving faith to be the unseen, both in the present time, and the future. God and Christ, heaven and hell, and the spiritual world with all its objects, are to us unseen as yet, but if we believe in them, and receive them as realities, they will powerfully affect our dispositions and actions. All true holiness is from faith in these objects. God is the great object of faith, but other subordinate objects of the unseen world and other truths possess no inconsiderable importance, and are revealed for the express purpose of leading us to abandon our sins and practice that holiness without which no man shall see the Lord. We worship an invisible God and expect the rewards of a holy obedience, to some extent in this world, but more fully in the world to come; and hence are required to live as seeing Him that is invisible, and to perform all our actions in the full view of invisible objects, and of great moral truths.

Faith is not necessarily uncertain. An uncertain faith is like uncertain knowledge, of little use. All our actions ought to be predicated on the certain. Uncertain knowledge is not true knowledge, and uncertain faith is not true faith. That belief in the Gospel, which makes men holy and saves them, is a belief in it as certain; it is based on evidence which is decisive and irresistible, and which makes the contrary impossible. Such a faith is a valid basis in the human soul for a holy religion. It is not only as effectual as sight, and the other senses, in giving us objects of love and hatred, of hope and fear, but is far more so, inasmuch as its objects are of far greater dignity and importance than the noblest and most attractive object of the senses. God far transcends the most exalted of his creatures, and all creatures together. Heaven and hell are the consummation of good and evil in their final results, in which both will exist to infinity. Heaven is the world of infinite good and hell of infinite evil. When these objects are apprehended as realities, it is the same as if we saw them, and as if we saw them at hand. Faith puts us in the presence of God, and brings heaven and hell to our doors, and thus becomes a principle of action which transcends in power all others. It attracts, with infinite good, to the right and holy, and repels, with infinite evil, from the wrong and unholy. These objects may be powerless to the unbelieving, but they operate on the believing with irresistible force. The world of sense can bring nothing to outweigh them, nor to counteract their influence. All its objects are finite and comparatively frivolous and powerless, while the objects of a correct and adequate religious faith and of Christian morality, are infinite in dignity and endless in duration. They draw their subjects to the right with the force of blessings infinite, commencing in time and extending through eternity, and repel them from the wrong with the force of corresponding miseries. By such considerations, and others of a like character, the Spirit of God turns men from evil to good, from vice to virtue; leads them from sin to holiness; saves from hell and guides to heaven.

The good news of Christ relates to him as our Lord and King, claiming our instant subjection as his subjects, and our prompt and constant obedience to all his commandments. It relates to his death as our ransom, and a satisfaction for sin; but the condition of salvation is, that men repent, believe in Christ, and practise holiness. It embraces also the promise of the Holy Spirit to all that ask for that blessing; and declares his permanent continuance in the world, his constant presence with the Church, and with all the good, as their guide and coädjutor in leading them to righteousness and glory.

Faith in Christ is not simply a belief that the man Jesus once lived and labored in Judea, as is related in the Scriptures; nor that he was the Son of God, and not a man merely. All this and much more is consistent with the continued dominion of sin in the heart and life of the subject. It is a belief in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of men, as our sovereign Lord commanding us to do whatever is right and forbidding whatever is wrong, blessing us in well-doing with infinite good, and overwhelming us in evil-doing with infinite evil. This we can not receive and continue in sin.

There is a dead and ineperative faith in Christ which does not make its subjects holy, and does not save them; but its inefficacy arises from incompleteness, or else from incorrectness. An efficacious gospel must be a true gospel, and it must also be a complete gospel. It must have the doctrine of Christ as our priest and also as our king; and of the Holy Spirit of God as our sanctifier. Least of all can we allow it to be deprived of its law of righteousness, commanding us to love God with all our heart, and our neighbors as ourselves; to be perfect, as our Father in heaven is perfect, and holy as God is holy. A so-called gospel of Christ without its law commanding holiness and forbidding sin, would be a system of sin and death, and not an instrument of life. Christ was called Jesus, because he should save his people from their sins; to save them in their sins is impossible.

Such a gospel as I have now described, the same in its essential principles as that of Abraham and Moses, with its law of righteousness and covenant of grace, and promises of life eternal to all who receive it, after being for a time preached by our Lord himself, was committed to his disciples to be published throughout the whole world, and to be made the basis of a universal Messianic kingdom, that was to supersede and revolutionize all other kingdoms, and reduce the whole world to subjection to the Son of God. This Gospel is an instrument of the divine power and love, for the conversion and salvation of the whole world, and as such we ought to proclaim it abroad and make it understood, in its truth and in its fullness, till its beneficent ends shall be accomplished.

Its efficiency has been fully tested. Paul carried it to the heathen in his day, and found it the wisdom of God and the power of God to salvation to every one, that believed it from his lips; and the other preachers of that day proclaimed it with similar success. Wherever Christianity has been corrupted by a departure from the Christian law of righteousness, the system has lost its power. This has occurred in all the ancient churches; and it occurs in many Protestant churches of modern times. A gospel without Christ's law of holiness is a false gospel, and can not save the world. It can not command the faith of the world; and it can not save those whose faith it secures, because it does not call them to holiness.

No scheme of salvation is practicable which does not command whatever is right, and forbid whatever is wrong; which does not insist on perfect holiness and prohibit all sin. God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth; he is holy, and they that worship him must worship him in holiness. The gospel of Christ calls men to holiness, and requires them to die to sin, and become alive to holiness; it commands whatever is right and prohibits whatever is wrong, and has the effect of making men holy as far as they believe it. Unbelievers it can not save, because it does not reach them with its laws of justice and covenant of grace; but believers it can not fail to save, because it turns them from sin to holiness, and brings them into a covenant of grace with God, in which they serve him, and he promises to save them; a covenant sealed and ratified with the blood of Christ, and made irrevocable and unchangeable.

If we have such news, such words of love and power, a scheme of faith that can be fully proved, and that being proved and believed is able, by the grace of God, to renovate every believer, and make him a pious and good man, and thus secure his eternal salvation, besides conferring the temporal benefits which attend on a life of holiness; if we have news that can work these wonders, and accomplish these transformations, we ought to publish it abroad, and make it known as widely as possible.

The demand for such a gospel is loud and pressing; and millions of sinners wait to be initiated into its mysteries, and to be raised by it from their death in sin to the life of holiness. The world lies in wickedness to this hour; it is full of deceit and treschery, of fraud and violence, of murder and revenge, of selfishness and vice. The various systems of heathenism have been tried without effect; they do not save their votaries. Faith in Brama, Vishnu, and Siva does not save men, does not make them holy and happy. China has no saving, regenerating faith for its two hundred and fifty millions of inhabitants, except as it receives the faith of Christ. The Christian religion stands alone in embracing a law of holiness, and in making its subjects holy; and any scheme of Christianity which has not this law, and does not enforce it is fundamentally corrupt and unfit for the purposes of its adoption. Such a system can not save the world.

After ages of experiment and of human devices, the heathen world at this moment is numbered by many hundred millions, poor, vicious, unjust, treacherous, cruel, revengeful, hateful, and hating one another, elevated but little above the brutes, and in many respects degraded far below them. They have few liberal and ornamental arts, little science, and their whole existence is of little more use to themselves or others, than that of so many beasts of prey. They generally have nothing noble, nothing generous, nothing magnanimous; but have the imbecility of children without their innocence, and the forms and stature of men with the characters, in many cases, of brutes and of demons. Their idol gods can not save them, their traditionary prejudices only serve to rivet the chains of their bondage, and their systems of government are vast engines of oppression and destruction, guarding them at every point against the access of light and life.

Commerce is abroad spreading her canvass to the breeze, and is every where seeking for gain. She studies the habits of the heathen, and consults the gratification of their tastes, in order that she may fill her coffers at their expense. She circumnavigates the globe to carry them rum and tobacco, and opium, and other means of wickedness and death, and entices them to purchase these articles at the expense of the little they have that contributes to make their lives tolerable. Under their baneful influence, their vices and miseries increase, till a process of self-extermination commences, which threatens their complete destruction at no distant day. Commerce is a blessing to the good who regulate it by the principles of justice and mercy, but to the wicked, and without due regulation, it is one of the mightiest instruments of sin and misery. The traffic in alcoholic liquors, in opium and tobacco, is a withering, blighting curse to the entire world, every where sowing the seeds of sin and death; but among the heathen, the injurious effects of these poisons are the most extensive and disastrous, because they there meet with the least resistance. An unregulated and unrighteous traffic is destroying the heathen by many ten thousands a year, and contributes nothing to bless and save them. It covets their money and such property as can be obtained from them with their consent, and if it can rob them of the pittance they have, cares not for the vices and miseries to which it contributes. To leave the heathen world to the tender mercies of an unrighteous commerce, is to leave it to speedy temporal destruction, no less than to eternal woe. The heathen must be made righteous, or they can not be saved, even temporally, nor their miseries be alleviated. They want the Gospel of Christ for this purpose. That can save them; nothing else can.

The descendants of the ancient churches, Greek, Latin, Nestorian, Armenian, Coptic, and Abyssinian, all want the Gospel. The systemwhich they have is not the Gospel of Christ; but a corruption of it, in which its law of righteousness is virtually abrogated, and so far changed as to be incapable of raising its subjects to holiness and happiness. Paul says: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached. * * * let him be accursed." (Gal. 1:8, 9.) He said this in respect to those who proposed to preach the gospel of Christ, but corrupted its law of righteousness, substituting legal ceremonies for true holiness. A similar anathema is in place with respect to all similar corruptions, till time shall end; and the teacher of a false gospel deserves the curse of God, and the reprobation of all good men. Corrupting the Gospel is infecting with poison the wells of salvation, and converting the very instrument of life into a cause of death. The demand for the Gospel is very great, and extensive; and it will require a long time and great exertion to furnish it to all.

We have looked abroad; let us look at home. We are a proud and prosperous country with a population of 25,000,000 of people. We are renowned in arts and arms. Our flag is respected on all the seas, and all nations pay homage to our wealth, intelligence, enterprise, and power, We profess to be a Christian nation. The blessing of God is invoked in many of our legislative bodies, and in many cases in our higher courts. The President of the United States swears on the Bible to administer the government of the nation in a just and equitable manner, and acknowledges the divine sovereignty in his inaugural address and annual messages to Congress. Governors do the same. The entire people claim, with few exceptions, to be a Christian people, to believe in the sovereignty of God, and to admit his supremacy as King of kings, and Lord of lords, and Sovereign over all sovereigns whatever. We have an inheritance of liberty, bought by the blood of our fathers and inexpressibly dear to us, which is our continual boast and joy. With a republican government securing the supremacy of the people in the State, and making our rulers their agents and servants, and not their masters, we might have the respect of the world. But instead of this, we are incurring its shame and abhorrence.

The blood of the innocent is on our hands, the clanking of the chains of the oppressed has gone abroad with their cries of distress, into the ears of all nations. The hearts of the human race are appealed to against us, as an unrighteous nation; and the appeal is not in vain. It has obtained a deliberate hearing, and secured an unqualified condemnation of our hypocrisy and oppression, and loud denunciations of our wickedness. The world declares us in the wrong. Christian and Mohammedan nations concur in denouncing our guilt. The cry of the oppressed bondmen has entered into the ears of God, and enlists His sympathy and favor. He has heard the oppressed before; he hears and may save them now, notwithstanding the apparent power of their oppressors. With the sword of the Almighty in the scale, it is easy to see how it will incline. We are not strong enough to cope with God, and He has ample means to humble and crush us in the dust. He can make our wickedness the means of our punishment, and raise up executors of his yengeance from ourselves.

Fearful portents are already abroad. The sun of our prosperity is darkened; the moon withholds her light, and the stars of our political glory are setting fast in death. An alarming corruption of the Gospel has taken place, depriving it of its power to soften the heart of the oppressor, or to shield the oppressed, and making it a dishonored and loathsome instrument of vice and woe. The lights of the pulpit have in many cases become dim in the service of the oppressor, and the man who proclaims the law of God gets himself a blot.

Wickedness has come in like a flood, and scenes of tragic cruelty are enacted in our land with the connivance of men in power. Within the last two years a senator has been nearly murdered in his seat in the Capitol, in the presence of his peers, because he asserted the laws of eternal justice, and assailed a vast system of national oppression, which not only consigns four millions of human beings to bondage, but is plotting for an indefinite and general extension of its evils throughout the whole land; and the murderous assailant was punished with a fine, such as would be suitable for an act of violence committed against a neighbor's ox; and then glorified by the South as their champion and benefactor.

Kansas has been invaded by hired ruffians in the interest of slavery, and subjugated and governed as a conquered province under a system of oppression which would have disgraced American savages; and its ruffian invaders have been supported and aided in this outrage by the President of the United States, with the consent of the Senate and a large party of the entire nation. Ever since 1850 the President of the United States has been the public prosecutor of fugitive slaves from the entire South, and has professed himself willing and determined to pursue this vocation with the whole strength of the United States army and navy, if so ample a force should be necessary for the accomplishment of its objects. He has had but little success in capturing fugitives, but his disposition to do it, has been clearly evinced; and the American people have tolerated this foul dishonor. The Supreme Court of the nation has laid aside the spotless robes of justice, and trampled in the dust constitutional law and equity, and the supreme law of God, to lend their high sanction to oppression, bolster up with their authority its tottering cause, and provide for extending it indefinitely through the land. All this would be of little avail, and of little consequence, if it was not for the consent of the people.

In our large cities, and scattered over the length and breadth of the whole land, are multitudes of evil men, of low and vicious tastes, steeped in liquor and tobacco, thieves, pickpockets, liars, fraudulent dealers of every possible kind, profane swearers, Sabbath-breakers, neglecters of the house of God, licentious persons living in wickedness, men who fear not God nor regard man, whose sympathies are against the right and in favor of the wrong, who are ready to support every bad cause for a reward, and in most cases gratuitously, and as ready to oppose every good cause, many of whom close their career of sin and shame in prisons as felons, and some of them on the gallows. They are detestable and loathsome, living in dens of filth, breeding pestilence and death, and in many cases holding the balance of power in the nation, and deciding by their votes, the most vital questions which pertain to our national policy and government, questions involving peace and war, and all the high interests of property, personal liberty and security, morality and religion. We read in the Scriptures that righteousness exalteth a nation, but that sin is a reproach to any people. In our nation, the vilest of men hold the balance of power, in many cases determine our policy, and give direction to the measures of the government.

If any nation needs the gospel of Christ for its renovation, do we not need it? What other power can make our people a holy people, and recall us from our errors to a just observance of the laws of God? The gospel of Christ can do this, and nothing else can. It proposes mercy for the chief of sinners, and makes provision for their repentance and pardon. We must be saved as a nation by the Gospel, or we shall as certainly be wrecked and ruined by our wickedness, as Rome was under her emperors, or as Judea was under her priests. Wickedness must be checked, and piety and virtue must be promoted among us, with more vigor and more effect than heretofore, or we shall bring down ruin upon ourselves as certainly as we exist, and that at no distant period. The gospel of Christ is our sovereign remedy, and can avail to correct our evils. It can not only preserve our institutions of liberty and justice from further decline, but improve and perfect them. There is a balm in Gilead and a Physician there, that can save the lost, and restore not the sick only, but the dead. This balm is the gospel of Christ.

for an tradal weather preliming him, all super one how mother th

Also gosped of Christ, being the cred too less of the Plate, my engiteeres

IMPROVEMENT

1. The law of Christ is the supreme law of the Church. All church rules and regulations inconsistent with this, are null and void from the beginning, and ought to be instantly discarded. Churches must enjoin faith in Christ, and submission to him; they must command whatever is right, and prohibit whatever is wrong; but they must not command the wrong nor prohibit the right. As far as they do this, their commands and prohibitions are without any valid authority; and deserve only contempt. It is not enough for churches to advise in favor of the right and against the wrong; they must command. Remonstrances are no substitute for commandments.

As an enormous system of wrong, African slavery ought to be prohibited to its membership by every church in the world. If it had been met with universal church prohibition, at its origin, it would soon have been abandoned, and have passed away. The Quakers led the way in condemning and prohibiting it, some years since; several other churches have followed their example in this respect, and all must follow it. The Church of God can not tolerate slavery without abandoning the righteousness of the Gospel, and involving itself in infinite wickedness. A charity that justifies slavery, or tolerates it without justification, is a doctrine of devils, and not of God; and is incompatible with the gospel of Christ or the good of men.

2. The law of Christ is the supreme law of the state. The separation of the Church and State is one of the peculiarities of the Gospel scheme, considered in distinction from that of Abraham and Moses. It is a great improvement on the method of earlier times, and ought to be every where preserved. But in separating the Church from the State, and organizing it, as an independent body, God does not relinquish his authority over the State; he is as much the supreme Head of the State as he is of the Church; and his law of righteousness binds the State as much as it does the Church. States are under a divine obligation, to command and observe whatever is right, and to prohibit and avoid whatever is wrong, God is not King of kings, and Lord of lords, over the State through the Church, nor over the Church through the State; he is the supreme Sovereign of both directly; and gives to both laws suited to their respective objects. Many of the laws of righteousness are common to the Church and State; others are peculiar to each.

I do not say that the law of righteousness ought to be the law of the State; it is the law of the State; and that, whether acknowledged or not, and whether obeyed or not. God's requirements do not wait for the consent of men to become laws. They derive their authority from their divine Author, and are equally valid whether acknowledged or not.

The gospel of Christ, being the supreme law of the State, any enactment inconsistent with it is null and void, and is to be disregarded. If made by the legislature it is not to be respected by the courts, on the principle that the higher law supersedes the lower; if such a law is passed by the legislature and sustained by the courts, the executive department of the government ought to refuse to execute and enforce it, as still being contrary to the supreme law of the State; and if such a law is sanctioned by all the departments of the government, it ought to be resisted and rejected by the people, on the principle of the Scriptures, that it is necessary to obey God rather than man. The lower law heresy of our times and country, that laws commanding what is wrong must be respected by the courts, executed by the President, and obeyed, till they are regularly repealed by the action of the people, is a gross departure from the Gospel and from common-sense, and involves a virtual denial of the supremacy of God. God is to be obeyed, always and in all cases, oppose it who will, and command the contrary who will. His laws are not matters of opinion and of uncertainty; nothing is more certain. It is the duty of every man to know and observe them, and to encourage the observance of them by others, fearless of consequences and careless of opposition; and the man who, knowing the law of God, will not observe it because the State commands or legalizes the contrary, is an enemy of God and righteousness, and a child of hell.

3. The law of Christ is the supreme law of the family. Families, like churches and states, ought to be regulated according to the law of God. Parents ought to direct their children conformably to it, and to propose it as the only rule of their government. Any thing beyond it is wrong, and any thing short of it is also wrong. The poor success of many families, in training up their children to piety and virtue, is undoubtedly owing to a deficiency in this respect. They do not govern their children by the law of God, but by lower laws, and such as are inconsistent with it; and as a natural result of such training, their children grow up in wickedness. The proper regulation of families is one of the principal means of perpetuating and extending religion in the world; and without it, the salvation of the world is impossible. The world will not be saved till the Gospel is made the supreme law of Christian families practically, as it is really.

4. The law of Christ is the supreme law of the world. It demands the subjection of all nations and ages, and ought therefore to be universally preached and observed. Let no church promulgate any other Gospel, let no Christian missionary preach any other; but let us every where preach the gospel of Christ, and call men to him as their common Lord and Saviour. This is our appropriate work as individuals, and as an Association. The American Missionary Association is essentially Puritan, but is only so in order that it may be thoroughly Christian. Our maxim is, "First pure, then peaceable." Our aim is, like that of our Master, to disseminate righteousness, and to wage an uncompromising war against wickedness of all kinds, of all degrees, and in all countries. Especially does it become us to labor vigorously for the more thorough evangelization of our own land. Sin must be resisted in the Church and State. Its odiousness and deformity must be clearly exhibited to public view, and the friends of righteousness induced to unite their earnest and determined efforts to breast the rising tide of wickedness, and check its progress, whatever expense, and whatever effort may be necessary for that purpose. If we are faithful to our calling we shall achieve a glorious victory. Our aim is holy, and can not fail to secure the favor of God. Our work is timely, and meets a mighty exigency in the Church and State. It is the conflict of the ages, it is the battle of God; and if it is properly pursued it must be crowned with victory — speedy and glorious. "The Spirit and the bride say, Come And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

We have arrived at a momentous crisis in human affairs; and are called upon to inaugurate a new era of righteousness in Church and State. A false gospel, a gospel of unrighteousness; a carnal church, which is split into a thousand contending factions, one saying, I am of Paul and another, I am of Apollos; one claiming to be of Calvin and another of Arminius and Wesley and others, are trying hard to save the world, and to stem the tide of its wickedness. But they have not saved it, and they never will save it. We must have a revival of the old Church of Christ, which is one and indivisible. Christ must be acknowledged as our only Master, and God as our only Father; and righteousness as our only law. Then will our long deferred triumph begin, and the world be brought to the feet of Christ.

God will honor his own Church and support his own cause. He has mercies for repenting sinners, and stripes for the back of fools. The nations that serve him he will bless, but his enemies he will crush and destroy forever. Be wise therefore, O ye sovereign people! be instructed ye magistrates, legislators, and judges of the nation; serve the Lord with fear, and make your instant submission to his law; kiss the Son of God, and pay your devotions at his feet, lest he be angry with you, and you perish under his avenging rod.

Blessed is the man that sees this day and appreciates it. Saints and martyrs have wished for it long, and died without the sight. It is the great day of God, and a thousand witnesses conspire to testify that the triumphant and universal establishment of God's kingdom is at hand. It is being cried by a thousand heralds, Prepare the way of the Lord, and make straight highways for his coming. But far above the voice of herald or minister, is heard the voice of God himself, proclaiming in trumpet tones: "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Amen. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly, and bring the world to thy feet!

TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

American Missionary Association,

AND THE

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING,

HELD AT

WORCESTER, MASSACHUSETTS, OUTOBER 29 and 30, 1858.

TOCETHED WITH

List of Life Members.

ORN A. GRAY'S

16 and 16 Jacob Street, N. Y.

NEW-YORK:

PUBLISHED BY THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION,
Office, 48 Beekman Street.

TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT

American Missionary Association,

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING,

WORCHSTER MASSACHUSETTS, OCTOBER 29 and 30, 1859

List of Life Members.

JOHN A. GRAY'S FIRE-PROOF PRINTING OFFICE, 16 and 18 Jacob Street, N. Y.

NEW-YORK

PUBLISHED BY THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Office, 48 Beekman Birest.

1656

Secretary of the Foreign Department, who was on a voyage to England for the benefit of his health, and also for the purpose of conforming with the officers of the Missionary Societies in London with, a view to obtain the officers to the Missionary Societies in London with, a view to obtain the officer to aid the Ex. Con. in carrying out the benevolent intentions of the late Hev. Charles Avery, in making his runnificent bequest to the Association, he had Keen matructed to act on Mr. Whipple's behalf, and would propose Zha Atte Tust. I vis lot Mesenting, the Annual Export Preversed, and that the Secretary for the Home Department now present that part of the Report parewed by him. This being assented to Hay. S. S. Joselym communicated an Abstract of the Report for the Home

TWELFTH ANNUAL MEETING.

The action Secretars of the Foreign Department then presented an Ab

"From Greenland's key mountains."

The Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Association was held in the Salem Street Congregational Church, Worcester, Massachusetts, on Wednesday, September 29th, at 2 o'clock P.M.

The Chair was temporarily filled by Rev. Charles W. Torrey, of Worcester.

John C. Newton, of Worcester, was appointed Assistant Recording Secretary.

Prayer was offered by Professor Cowles, of Ohio.

The minutes of the last Annual Meeting were read by the Recording Secretary, Rev. Henry Belden.

Letters were read from Rev. David Thurston, of Maine, and Rev. Samuel Hunt, of Franklin, Mass., stating the reasons of their absence, and expressing their unabated interest in the Association.

The chair being now taken by the President, Hon. Lawrence Brainerd, a short season was spent in devotional exercises, in which the following gentlemen took part: Rev. John G. Fee, of Kentucky, Rev. Daniel Worth, of North-Carolina, and Rev. A. Underwood, of New-Jersey.

After uniting in singing the 72d Psalm—

"Jesus, the Saviour's name,
Forever shall endure;
Long as the sun his matchless fame,

ong as the sun his matchless fame,
Shall ever stand secure "—

Rev. D. M. Graham, of New-York, made a short address.

The Treasurer, Lewis Tappan, then made his report of the receipts and expenditures during the last fiscal year, with a certificate of the auditors, which was approved, and referred to the Ex. Com. to publish with the Minutes.

The Treasurer stated that in the absence of Rev. George Whipple,

Secretary of the Foreign Department, who was on a voyage to England for the benefit of his health, and also for the purpose of conferring with the officers of the Missionary Societies in London with a view to obtain information to aid the Ex. Com. in carrying out the benevolent intentions of the late Rev. Charles Avery, in making his munificent bequest to the Association, he had been instructed to act on Mr. Whipple's behalf, and would propose that the usual mode of presenting the Annual Report be reversed, and that the Secretary for the Home Department now present that part of the Report prepared by him. This being assented to, Rev. S. S. Jocelyn communicated an Abstract of the Report for the Home Department.

At the conclusion, the first verse of the Missionary Hymn was sung: "From Greenland's icy mountains,"

The acting Secretary of the Foreign Department then presented an Ab stract of the Report relating to the Foreign Missions, the principles of the Association, the obstructions thrown in the way of missions generally, and the encouraging condition and prospects of the Association. Before concluding, the consideration of the remaining part of the Report was deferred until the next day.

The following Committees were then appointed:

Business Committee.—Rev. M. M. Lougley, of Peru, Mass.; Lewis Tappan, of New-York; Rev. D. M. Graham, of New-York; Rev. John G. Fee, of Kentucky; and Rev. S. Thurston, of Maine.

Committee on Nominations.—Rev. F. Bascom, of Illinois; Rev. Henry Cowles, of Ohio; Thomas Ritter, M.D., of New-York; Rev. Charles W. Torrey, of Worcester; Charles Tappan, Esq., of New-Hampshire; and Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, of New-York.

Committee of Arrangements.—Richard Ball, Samuel Souther, George W. Russell, Thomas Tucker, and C. W. Angier, Esqrs., of Worcester.

On invitation of the brethren connected with the Daily Morning Prayer Meeting in the city, it was Resolved, That the Association will attend the morning Prayer-Meeting in the Union Congregational Church at 8 o'clock, on Thursday, and spend an hour in devotional and other appropriate exercises.

Rev. John G. Fee then addressed the Association with reference to his field of labor in Kentucky.

After singing another verse of the Missionary Hymn, the Association adjourned to seven o'clock, to hear the Annual Sermon.

At seven o'clock the Association, and a large audience, assembled to attend public worship, and listen to the Annual Sermon, by Rev. Stephen Thurston, of Searsport, Maine. The text was in Luke 2:14, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Subject, "The grand mission of the Gospel, as understood and sung by angels, is to promote piety and humanity in the earth."

It was a plain and very forcible exhibition of the truth, that a pure practical Christianity consists in a proper union of piety and humanity. It was this that it was the great object of the Gospel to exhibit; because

1. The Gospel is fitted to promote piety toward God, in that it works great changes in human character, finding man in a state of degradation and revolt, and elevating and rendering him obedient to God; and secondly, in that it makes such exhibitions of the Divine character, as are wonderfully adapted to draw forth the most devout emotions. And this is giving "glory to God."

2. The Gospel promotes humanity. The history of the world without the Gospel, is one of cruelty between man and man. In the first family, a brother's blood cried to God from the ground. And every where the world presents a scene of deceit, fraud, and oppression. Humane institutions were not found in Rome, with all its literature, art, and science. They are not found in China, nor any other heathen nation. They are found alone in Christian countries. Men will go into inhospitable climes to get gold. But it is only when they are imbued with the spirit of the Gospel, that they will go into such climes to carry the Bible, and do good to the bodies and souls of men. This is "good will" not only "to," but "among men."

REMARKS.

1. That religion, in which either piety or humanity is wanting, must be radically defective. Some are very pious in appearance, are very orthodox, regular at meeting, and even liberal in certain directions. But they manifest little sympathy for the poor. The cries of the down-trodden and oppressed do not reach their hearts. Others, again, are very kind, humane, and even zealous in their efforts to benefit mankind. But they have no regard for the Bible. They never pray. They do not recognize God, nor any obligation to him. They have no piety. These call the former "hypocrites," and the former call these "infidels"—a natural result of their distorted views and feelings. Both are radically defective. Piety and humanity, united in proper proportions, constitute the well-balanced Christian character.

2. We have here one reason why modern missions have been no more successful. They have not compared with those of the apostles, nor even with those of Eliot and Mayhew to the Indians. Why so? Other reasons, such as decline of faith and zeal no doubt obtain. But it is modestly suggested whether one great reason is not a disproportion between the piety and humanity of Christian nations and the Christian Church of the present day. For illustration: a shrewd Hindoo is supposed to meet a missionary, and asks him "if man is held as property is his country, and children and parents are torn from each other and sold upon the auction-block?"

The missionary reluctantly answers, "Yes," The Hindoo asks again:

West-Africa.

"Do your sacred books teach such a system?" "Yes; the patriarchs held slaves, and the Israelites were expressly enjoined to purchase them of the surrounding tribes." "Well, then," replies the indignant heathen, "Go elsewhere with your Gospel; we want it not here." But it is the object of this Association to carry to the heathen a whole and not a one sided Gospel-one inculcating both piety and humanity without compromise.

3. Therefore see what the character is of the religion which the Church should propagate. That which recognizes God as a common Father, and mankind every where as a common brotherhood-Christ as a common Redeemer, and universal man in need of the same redemption. And when this religion shall be faithfully applied, the regeneration of the world will make rapid progress, and the song of the angels soon fill the whole earth: "Glory to God in the highest; on earth, beace and good will toward men." tre ordered all the illied appeal at hands on the wanted

Thursday morning, September 30th, a prayer-meeting was held in the Union church, Rev. D. M. Graham, of N. Y., presiding.

At 9 o'clock the business meeting was resumed in the Union Church. Prayer by Rev. E. H. Nevins, of Chelsea, Mass.

On motion of Lewis Tappan, it was Resolved, That the thanks of the Association be presented to Rev. S. Thurston for his sermon, and that a copy be requested for publication.

The Secretary read a communication from A. Firth, of the Boston and Worcester Railroad, stating that return checks would be furnished the members of the Association, without charge, to any point on their road or its branches.

The acting Secretary for the Foreign Department then read the introductory part of the Annual Report, with the General View, and Concluand some analogs on the eaftering beautioned. But they have noise

On motion of Rev. George Trask, of Mass., and after brief remarks by the mover, and Rev. Messrs. Bascom, Worth, and Underwood, it was Resolved. That the Annual Report be accepted and approved, and that the same be referred to the Executive Committee to be published.

Rev. M. M. Longley, Chairman of the Business Committee, made a report in part of a set of Resolutions, which were read, and afterwards taken up separately for discussion. The first six of these resolutions underwent ample discussion, and were unanimously adopted. An adjournthose of Chot and Mayhew to the Indiana. Why sould be send them

At 2 o'clock the Association met, and with Christians of different denominations, who attended the meetings, united in commemorating the death of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, Rev. F. Bascom officiated in the distribution of the bread and accompanying devotional exercises; and Rev. John G. Fee in the distribution of the wine, with accompanying devotional exercises, more blos but redid does proft good and states but

At the close of the communion service the business of the Association was resumed. The remaining nine resolutions were severally read and discussed. The following gentlemen took part in the discussion of the resolutions during the day: Rev. Josiah Brewer, Rev. D. M. Graham. Lewis Tappan, Rev. M. M. Longley, Rev. H. Cowles, Rev. J. C. Webster, Rev. John G. Fee, Hon, Amasa Walker, Rev. F. Bascom, Rev. D. Worth, and Rev. Charles W. Torrey. The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

During the afternoon session Hon, Eli Thaver, of Worcester, being present, was invited to communicate his views of Colonization, founded on Christian principles. He was followed by Rev. John G. Fee on the same subject.

The Committee on Nominations made a Report, which was adopted, and in conformity thereto the following officers were elected for the ensuing and prospects of the Association, and its missions at home and abrevagery

d. Addresses by Roy John Mobissand Mr. Roburd Miles, who are noder appoint Hon. LAWRENCE BRAINERD, Vermont Honder appoint

5. Address by Rev. F. Ba. stable Presidents at the following Reachtlion

Rey. David Thurston, Maine, J. P. Williston, Esq., Mass., Rev. S. E. Cornish, New-York, Prof. C. D. CLEVELAND, Penn., F. D. Parish, Esq., Ohio, Rev. Jonathan Blanchard, Ill., ARTHUR TAPPAN, Conn.

6. Address by Ray, D. Worth in relation to his inficionary labors in Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Department.

Rev. GEORGE WHIPPLE, New-York, Vol. 2016 A. T.

Kentucky on behalf of the Association. Corresponding Secretary for the Home Department.

Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, New-York.

The following resolutions were offered by Lowis Tappur;

such the filmer ban merblin Recording Secretary, went a ne tan't hereboned

Rev. Henry Belden, New-York, the purpose of wolking them to be considered by the control of the Carlo of the Car

Lewis Tappan, Esq., New-York.

mo'l ads of beingering ad Executive Committee, and ods sed T beviewed hen goin! J. sels of wife and WILLIAM E. WHITING, New-York, SAMUEL WILDE, New-York, THOMAS RITTER, New-York, GEORGE H. WHITE, New-York, HENRY H. GARNET, New-York, HENRY BELDEN, New-York, JOSIAH BREWER, Mass., J. O. BENNETT, New-York, WILLIAM B. BROWN, New-Jersey, D. M. GRAHAM, New-York, ALONZO S. BALL, New-York, A. N. FREEMAN, New-York,

TWELFTH ANNUAL MEETING.

Ex-Officio Members of the Executive Committee.

George Whipple, S. S. Jocelyn,

LEWIS TAPPAN, 1 M. M. M. Jones T. Stewn

Adjourned to 7 o'clock P.M.

EVENING SESSION.

Worth, and Roy Charles W. Torroy. 'I

At the hour of adjournment the Association met in Salem Street Church, Rev. F. Bascom presiding. The exercises were as follows:

1. Hymn.

2. Prayer by Rev. Merrill Richardson, of Worcester.

3. Statements by the Secretaries respecting the principles, condition, and prospects of the Association, and its missions at home and abroad.

4. Addresses by Rev. John White and Mr. Richard Miles, who are under appointment, and expect soon to embark for the Mendi Mission, West-Africa.

5. Address by Rev. F. Bascom, in support of the following Resolution: Resolved, That the success with which God has crowned our Home Missionary work is highly encouraging; and that our growing field embracing as it does the Slave States, in addition to the vast States and Territories of the North-west, urgently demands a great increase of the number of missionaries, and of contributions for their support.

6. Address by Rev. D. Worth in relation to his missionary labors in North-Carolina on behalf of the Association.

7. Address by Rev. John G. Fee, in relation to his missionary labors in Kentucky on behalf of the Association.

8. Prayer by Rev. J. C. Webster.

The resolution offered by Mr. Bascom was adopted.

The following resolutions were offered by Lewis Tappan:

Resolved, That as a means of educating the children and youth of our country in the principles and objects of this Association, and especially for the purpose of enlisting them in our missions in the Slave States, we welcome the plan of the Executive Committee for the organization of Children's Anti-Slavery Missionary Societies, and recommend their formation throughout the country.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Association be presented to the Committee of Arrangements, to the inhabitants of this city, to the Union and Salem Street Societies, and to the choirs, for their kind attention to the comfort of the members of the Association, and for their contributions to the interests of the meeting.

These Resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The Annual Meeting was then adjourned without day; and the assembly dismissed with the benediction by the Chairman.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That we acknowledge with devout gratitude the goodness of God in preserving the lives of the officers of the Association and its missionaries the past year, and permitting the Society to meet again in this city under such favorable circumstances.

Resolved, That we hold in grateful remembrance the active and liberal friends of the cause, whose labors on earth have ceased during the past year, and would particularly bear testimony to the efficient aid rendered the Association by the lamented HUDSON, and the munificent bequest of the venerable AVERY, imploring the great Proprietor of all, that their example may be imitated by many who will consecrate their talents and property to the cause of truth, righteousness, freedom, and holiness.

Resolved, That we appreciate the labors and sacrifices of the missionaries, teachers, and colporteurs, connected with the Association; that we sympathize with them in their trials, and in their joys and sorrows; that we will bear these servants of Christ and their families on our hearts before the Throne of Grace, and contribute to their support and usefulness, according as the Lord shall prosper us.

Resolved, That we would be devoutly thankful to the great Head of the Church that the Association was founded, and has been maintained upon such evangelical and scriptural principles, and for the good that has been done through its missionaries, and other instrumentalities; for the contributions that have been made to its treasury; for the prayers that have been offered on its behalf; and for the prospect of its increased

Resolved, That we recognize with joy and gratitude to Almighty God the increased facilities of international communication, the openings of distant countries to the introduction of the Gospel, and the fulfillment of prophecy with regard to the enlightenment and conversion of the world.

Resolved. That we rejoice in the wide-spread awakening of the people to the concerns of their souls, in the numerous conversions that have taken place, in the general prevalence of prayer among the various denominations of Christians, in the accessions to the churches; and devoutly hope, that those who have recently professed the religion of Christ, will show the reality of their conversion by coming out decidedly on the Lord's side with regard to all true moral reforms, and against all sin, especially the sin of slavery, that threatens to involve the Church and nation in irretrievable ruin.

Resolved, That as American slavery is one of the greatest obstructions to the conversion of the world, it behooves the Church of Christ to bear an unequivocal testimony against it, and that the silence of the pulpit, ecclesiastical bodies, Missionary Boards, Bible and Tract Societies, and individual professors of religion, wherever it exists, with reference to this stupendous wrong, is a reproach to the country, dishonorary to Christianity, and evidence of defection in religion in those who thus cruelly ignore the rights and sufferings of their fellow-men in bondage.

Resolved, That we mourn over the obstacles that are thrown in the way of human salvation, not alone by the open enemies of Christ, but by many of his professed followers, and would especially mention, as subjects of humiliation and grief, the policy of the American Tract Society, in New-York, and the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, namely, the refusal of the Tract Society to publish tracts on the sinfulness of slavery, and the acquiescence of the Board, for so many years, while their missionaries among the Chootaws and Cherokees have been avowing pro-slavery sentiments, and preaching a pro-slavery gospel, until it is seriously proposed to abandon the mission on account of the "difficulties" that have occurred under such missionary labor; a policy on the part of the Tract Society and the American Board that must, wherever it is understood, astonish the friends of freedom and righteousness throughout the

Resolved. That we lament that the monthly concerts of prayer for Missions and the enslaved have, in many places, fallen into disuse, or are thinly attended, owing, as is be-lieved, chiefly to pastors and leading persons in the church taking less interest in them than heretofore; and that it be recommended to all the friends of this Association to exert their influence to have the monthly concerts well attended, and to cooperate in having the children and youth of their congregations thoroughly instructed with regard to the importance of Foreign and Home Missions, as one of the great instrumentalities for the prevalence of vital plety in the churches, as well as for the conversion of the world.

Resolved. That we solicit the cooperation of all Christian missionaries of this country. in praying for their native land, for the enslaved and the slaveholder, and the whole people; in remonstrating with their pro-slavery countrymen, in their private and public communications, while abroad, and in their personal efforts when at home; and in securing the prayers of the converted heathen for the downfall of slavery in this and every land, while we invoke the prayers of Christians every where that the yoke of bondage may be broken, and the oppressed go free.

48542888 8288884 4 884 2

Resolved, That, without assuming to judge any man's spiritual state in the sight of God, we consider it the duty of all Christian churches to disfellowship elayeholders of every grade, and under all circumstances, until they cease to hold their fellow-men as chattels personal, and no longer bring reproach upon the name and cause of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Resolved, That the church needs thorough instruction with respect to Christian stewardship and the obligation of Christians to give more liberally for the support of Misand thus becoming their own executors, instead of yielding their property to benevolent objects at death; and in regard to the fact that the money intrusted to them is not theirs, but the Lord's, who invites to liberal offerings, and loveth the cheerful giver, and will require every one, be he rich or poor, to give an account of his stewardship.

Resolved, That the success that has attended the faithful preaching of an uncompromising Gospel, and the circulation of anti-slavery publications, by the missionaries and colporteurs of this Association, and the establishment of anti-slavery churches in slave States, while it rebukes the unfaithfulness of the Tract Society and Missionary Boards, should inspire us with a holy determination and boldness to persevere in diffusing the light of Christianity in the midst of slaveholding communities, until, by the blessing of God, they feel the power of truth, and anti-slavery churches are planted in every slave State of the Union.

Resolved. That the events of the past year in relation to the explorations of Dr. Livingstone, and other missionaries in Africa, and the encouragements held out to promote lawful commerce, develop the resources of that Continent, especially with reference to the cultivation of cotton, and carry on with augmented means and zeal its evangelization; the opening of the great Chinese empire to commercial and religious enterprise; and the free course it is anticipated the Gospel is about to have in India, China, and the Turkish dominions; the demonstrated beneficial effects of emancipation in the West-Indies, and the freedom given to the seris in Russia; the interruptions given to the foreign slave-trade, and the increased odium attached to the domestic slave-trade and to slavery in our own country; the progress of anti-slavery sentiment in the slave States of this Union; the success in forming an international communication, by the submarine telegraph, between the American and European continents; the establishment of freedom in Kansas; the descent of the Holy Spirit upon the masses in our land; the rapid fulfillment of prophecy; the anticipations that the great benevolent and religious institutions will at length come out on the side of freedom—should excite the most grateful acknowledgments to that great and good Being who watches over the affairs of men with the design of giving universal sway to righteousness, peace, freedom, and holiness, and who has said to his Son: "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy

Resolved, That relying upon the promises of God, and the prophecies delivered in his name, and believing in the ultimate success of righteous principles, in connection with consistent practice, we are called upon to continue our efforts to bring about, under the Divine blessing, a higher standard of principles than generally prevails as it regards the theory and practice of Missions, and to appeal more strongly than ever to those of our countrymen who set a just value upon a free Gospel, to sustain such efforts by increased liberality, and by more fervent prayer, while we commend our officers, missionaries, teachers, colporteurs, agents, patrons, and the true friends of missions every where, to the keeping and guidance of Him who came "to comfort all that mourn, to preach good tidings unto the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, the opening of the prison to them that are bound, the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God."

Resolved, That as a means of educating the children and youth of our country in the principles and objects of this Association, and especially for the purpose of enlisting them in our missions in the Slave States, we welcome the plan of the Executive Committee for the organization of Children's Anti-Slavery Missionary Societies, and recommittee mend their formation.

Resolved. That the thanks of the Association be presented to the Committee of Ar rangements, to the inabitants of this city, to the Union and Salem Street Societies, and to the choirs, for their kind attention to the comfort of the members of the Association, and for their contributions to the interests of the meeting.

| 1 | 8 |
|----------|------|
| SELVI T | 20 |
| SHEET | MC) |
| Lucy | 00 |
| Dahasi | - |
| THE PAR | ~ |
| with | CE |
| igmbla | 1000 |
| CPEC, | ~ ~ |
| donure | 0 |
| | 1 |
| SHIPLE | RE |
| Mode | |
| to artis | ß |
| yrikana | 23 |
| Stoffine | 国 |
| ours o | UR |
| noqu. ii | S |
| nistian | A |
| ben bi | 用 |
| adr mi | 'B |
| ve(8) | L |
| | |

KXX

anithing Jos

lubieno dist

earny contise.

ached balth

ult for accounts or localyn, Secretary

the e is TAPPAN, Treasurer of in his hands, of ninety-ni terated, fre Among divine four Wherever Bes the of heraper's

JAMES O. BENNETT, W. E. WHITING, Free State

agon Byo. I 8 odr hos trotte stille or buleoff air Jairid & to to eath bins in Loyen P often Ham SUBSTITUTE OF STREET > should agranquelt for the House 1

TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT.*

CHRISTIANITY is a missionary enterprise. The adorable Redeemer was a missionary. His apostles trod in his footsteps. The early Christians, dispersed abroad by the providence of God, carried with them the good news of salvation. They believed that the injunctions of their ascended Lord were as obligatory upon them as they were upon "the eleven." They inscribed upon their banner the memorable instructions: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. . . Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

This command is imperative upon every one that has named the name of Christ. They are to "teach" and "preach" the Gospel, as Pastors, Evangelists, Home and Foreign Missionaries, Colporteurs, Conductors of the religious press, as parents, Bible-class and Sabbath-school teachers, as Bible and Tract distributors, in all ways, as God gives them the ability and opportunity. The Gosper is to be taught and preached; the whole Gospel-not an emasculated Gospel; not such portions only of the true Gospel as men are willing to receive. The Gospel is to be inculcated upon "all nations"—the accessible part of every nation; not a selected nation, or selected portions of a nation merely, where it is easy, convenient, and safe. Not alone in China, in Hindostan, in the islands of the sea, in the Free States of the American Union, but in all countries; in the Slave States as well as in the Free States; among the Indian tribes, not omitting the Choctaw and Cherokee nations. They also are to have a full, unadulterated, free Gospel preached to them.

Among the slaves and the slaveholders, the Gospel, as it came from its divine founder, is to be preached without concealment or compromise. Wherever God opens the way, it is to be preached, and preached faithfully, whether human enactments authorize or forbid it. As Christians we are to disregard all geographical lines and distinctions. "The field is the world." It belongs to Christ, and his word is not bound. His followers are to remember that his commands constitute the "higher law;" that they are to be obeyed at all hazards, and if human enactments come in conflict with the divine statutes, human enactments are to be trampled under feet. They are not to be resisted by force of arms, but simply disobeyed. The Christian, obedient to his Lord and Master, but disobedient to those who usurp his prerogative, is to refuse all obedience to enactments that are in conflict with the divine code, and accept whatever punishment may be inflicted; saying with the apostles when they were forbidden to teach as Christ had instructed them; "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ve; for we can not but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

. . We ought to obey God rather than men."

Nothing is to be taught as the Gospel which is not a part of it. The "good tidings," as they came from the lips of the Divine Founder of Christianity and the writings of his inspired apostles, without addition or subtraction, is to be uttered and circulated by the tongue and the press, without hesitation, fear, connivance, or mutilation. It is to pervade the whole land and the whole world like the atmosphere and the sun. "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

The Christian teacher, be he a minister, Sabbath-school teacher, missionary, colporteur, editor, or private Christian, is to go forth in the name of the Great Captain of his salvation, among his fellow-men, among gainsayers, opposers, enemies of the truth, and "lower law" men, wherever he has opportunity, as a soldier of the cross, faithful to his marchingorders: "Thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God: Be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though briers and thorns be with thee and thou dost dwell among scorpions; be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house. And thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear." . . "Speaking the truth in love."

It was in view of these truths, and under full persuasion that they had been grievously overlooked, that the American Missionary Association was organized. Its founders deeply felt the necessity of a new missionary organization; one that would aim to bring about the development of the mind and heart of Christ in the Church, in missionary societies, in the religious institutions of the country, and would send forth missionaries, at home and abroad, to preach a free, an evangelical, an anti-slavery Gospel; a Gospel that made no compromise with sin; that had no complicity with caste, polygamy, or slaveholding; that would fearlessly and perseveringly, in the name and in the spirit of Jesus Christ, proclaim freedom, peace, temperance, holiness, the equality of man before the law, and the impartial love of God.

^{*} Prepared by the Treasurer, Acting-Secretary for the Foreign Department in the absence of the Secretary, Rev. George Whipple, except the chapter on Home Missions, by Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, Secretary for the Home Department.

Believing that they were led by the Great Head of the Church, and recognizing the unmistakable hand of Providence in their earliest movements, they formed the Association, promulgated their principles, solicited funds, appointed missionaries, and embarked in the great undertaking of publishing in this and other lands what they understood to be the true Gospel, and carrying out its holy and evangelical principles, as God should give them ability, the means, and the opportunity. They felt, with the Apostle to the Gentiles, that a "necessity" was laid upon them, and could say in his emphatic language: "Yea, we is unto us if we preach not the Gospel"—the whole Gospel—in person, by a substitute, by pecuniary offerings, by active cooperation, by prayer, by all the means in our power.

The Association had to contend with prejudice, misrepresentation, and opposition, not from the ungodly so much as from the friends of other Missionary Societies. It was said that there was no necessity for a new missionary organization, and that the new Association was belligerent in its character toward older Boards. Defenses of its principles, candid and truthful statements of the delinquencies of other Societies, that had made it necessary to form a new Society, were construed into wanton attacks upon old Boards, and evidences of a wrong spirit. The Association has been obliged to contend with these obstacles.

If the Association had enjoyed the same facilities that more popular missionary bodies have enjoyed, its principles and history would have been more widely known, and consequently its income would have more rapidly increased. The Missionary Societies alluded to were not called upon to oppose a gigantic sin in which the Church as well the nation is involved, either by actual participation or persistent connivance; an opposition that has aroused the hatred of those directly engaged in it, and the strenuous though not always the open hostility of the political parties, as well as that of the "conservative" portion of the Church. These popular Societies had access to most of the pulpits, and with the aid of the ministry and the religious press, could spread before the churches, ecclesiastical assemblies, theological seminaries, and Sabbath-schools, their principles, their objects, the results of their missionary operations; and take up collections, without hindrance, at the Monthly Concerts, and in the churches.

Our Association, on the contrary, has been shut out from most of the pulpits, and Monthly Concerts, and Sabbath-schools in the courty. We have been denied the privilege of circulating our publications, and taking up collections with the freedom enjoyed by other Missionary Societies; and the channels of Christian benevolence, that might have conveyed to our treasury the offerings of many, have been choked up in numerous instances. While lamenting these unjust and injurious attempts to interfere with and thwart our efforts, we have once and again referred to the principles of the Association, as originally announced and frequently reiterated; to the manner in which its affairs have been conducted; and to the manifest favor it has received from the great Head of the Church.

We have not concealed our sentiments or conduct, or used ambiguities in answering inquiries; neither has it appeared incumbent upon us to refrain from giving prompt and explicit statements with reference to the necessity of our organization, the objectionable policy of other Boards that called for a new Missionary Society, and the obstructions to the general cause of Missions that older Societies have suffered to remain. On all fit occasions, without considering the Association an anti-slavery Society, we have not hesitated to proclaim, as became a missionary institution, the anti-slavery character of the Association, and its agreement with an anti-slavery Gospel.

We are anti-slavery because we deem slaveholding a great obstruction to the conversion of the world, a dishonor to Christianity, a disgrace to our country, a corrupter of both Church and State, a grievous wrong to our fellow-men in bonds, and a high offense against the majesty of Heaven. But we are not the enemies of other Boards. So far from it, we rejoice in all the good accomplished by them, and desire to aid them when kindly pointing out their deficiencies and errors, with a view to leading them to take higher ground; that thus they might meet with more favor from God, and ultimately from the Church.

A necessity existed for the formation of the Association, and the same necessity exists for its continuance. It took and has maintained ground on the subject of slavery, caste, and polygamy, that the older Boards alluded to did not take; and which, with reference to slavery, they still refuse to take; it has established churches and Sabbath-schools in slave States, and successfully sustained a ministry in them, on anti-slavery principles, having no fellowship with slaveholders, which those Boards never attempted; it has proclaimed an anti-slavery Gospel to African chiefs, and led them to abandon wars undertaken for the enslavement of their countrymen; and it has proclaimed the same Gospel to the Indians of this continent, showing them the incompatibility of slaveholding with the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, which these Boards have failed to do; it has, in fine, aimed to elevate the character of Christian Missions and Missionary Boards to the Gospel standard, relying upon the truth, upon divine rather than on human aid, believing in the promise: "He that goeth forth and weepeth, leaving precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." While taking this high ground against a corrupt popular sentiment, the conservative policy of many ministers and churches, and in favor of a free Gospel, the equality of man, and the rights of the poor, the Association has aimed, by the purity of its doctrine and by its practice, to recommend the missionary cause to Christians throughout the world, showing that all its professed friends in this country were not implicated in the guilt of slavery. It has endeavored, by the presentation of its principles, and by its measures, to call out the resources of the churches in aid of the missionary cause, at home and abroad; to increase the spirit of prayer for the speedy evangelization of our own country and the world; and to invoke the blessing of God upon such instrumentalities, for the conversion and sanctification of our fellow-men of every nation, kindred, and clime.

Under these circumstances it would seem that lovers of a free Gospel, and all true-hearted Christian abolitionists, (and by this designation is meant all who believe that slavery is a sin before God and a crime against men.) would rally around and cordially unite with an Association that employs no officer or missionary who is not anti-slavery in sentiment, and consistent in practice; unless in their own denominations they are acting with Societies that carry out the same principles, and refrain from patronising Missionary Boards that persist in having complicity with slavery. But such has not been the case. Facts demonstrate that it is as hard for many anti-slavery men to relinquish their old religious as it is their political associations, when these associations become time-serving or recreant to principle. They tenaciously cling to both from habit, social influences, and want of moral courage. While professing high and noble principles, too many persons thus act inconsistently, bestowing their contributions where their principles are not adopted, and throwing the weight of their influence on the side of avowed error. Such religious men, while adopting unpopular sentiments, and professing to ally themselves with unpopular reformers who contend for unpopular yet, as they believe, Christian truths, ignore in practice what they adopt in theory, as it regards a liberal support of a Missionary Association, founded on principles they can not but approve. By such inconsistency they weaken their friends and strengthen their opponents; withhold substantial aid in bringing to pass the objects they profess to be desirous of securing; prolong the controversy between truth and error; contribute to postpone the day when anti-slavery principles shall triumph, and all our benevolent institutions voluntarily use the moral power God has given them for sustaining and perpetuating righteousness and freedom.

But all are not such. There are, we rejoice to know, many consistent and devout friends of a free Gospél, who, from the beginning, or as soon as they became acquainted with the distinctive principles of the American Missionary Association, have been its firm supporters. While expressing friendly feelings toward all Missionary Societies, of every name and denomination, and praying for the success of all missionary enterprises that tend to the glory of God and the salvation of men, they have uniformly and consistently bestowed their means in aid of a Society that was anti-slavery in principle and practice, and have abstained from all participation in upholding a stupendous wrong. Their contributions and prayers have greatly strengthened the Association, while they themselves have experienced the satisfaction that results from good principles carried out into consistent practice,

The God of missions has greatly blessed our efforts. He has inclined the people to read our publications, pray for our success, and make liberal contributions. He has given us self-denying, devoted, and godly missionaries, who have been enabled to establish churches that have been refreshed by the outpourings of the Holy Spirit and the conversion of souls to God.

The Association has been increasing in influence and usefulness, and in favor with God and man. The prospect of its enlarged benefits to our own country and the world, were never so great as at the present annual meeting. In contemplation of these gratifying and encouraging results and anticipations, we thank God and take courage, while with the Psalmist we exclaim: "Not unto us, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory."

The Executive Committee have now the satisfaction of presenting a statement of the present condition of each Mission, and the general prospects of the Association.

MENDI MISSION, WEST-AFRICA.

HAS 3 STATIONS, AND 7 OUT-STATIONS.

Missionaries.—Rev. J. S. Brooks, D. W. Burton, Mrs. Burton, Mrs. Mair, Miss McIstosii, and Miss Dowie, and native Assistanta.

During the year, Mr. Burton was severely ill, but had fully recovered. Both he and the other missionaries had been weighed down by excessive but unavoidable labors and cares, owing to the weakened state of the mission. The arrival of assistants was very gratifying, and they felt new encouragement in the prosecution of the important work before them.

Good-Hope Station.

In addition to attending to the business concerns of the mission, Mr. Burton has had the superintendence of this station in its temporal and spiritual concerns.

At the last dates, Mr. Burton gives an encouraging account of the station. He says:

"Twenty-five children live under my roof, and receive daily school-instruction. All but two can read in the Bible, and learn a verse each day to repeat at evening worship. Our curve choice is taught in the chapel by a man from Sierra Leone, and numbers over twenty scholars. I am making preparations to build a neat school-house for it, and have got one hundred and twenty-five dollars subscribed among the merchants and people, to pay the cost. Our Sabbath-school was for a long time attended only by the children in the mission family, but now we have about fifty scholars, and three quarters of them can read in the Bible, and they understand English quite well. Our meetings on the Lord's day were comenced when we first began here, and it was with difficulty that we could get as many as ten or twelve persons to attend; and they were mostly Sierra Leone people. Very few of the country people could, at that time, understand English. Now, our congregation numbers about one hundred and fifty. They are generally well dressed, and appear to be interested. If our congregation continues to increase during the six months to come as it has during the past six months, our chapel will not hold them. Our school-teachef for the out-school is our preacher also.

"If we had an earnest and faithful minister here, to devote his time to the work, there might be great good accomplished. I suppose that there are more than three thousand people within five miles of this place, and I think a devoted minister would be kindly received by all of them. We have numerous and urgent calls to take children into our mission family, and if we had schools like our family school, or farms, or work-shops, or any industrious operations, to give employment to their children deach them civilized habits, we might have all we could accommodate, and have them under our entire control, with the influence and assistance of all the leading men of the country to assist in carrying out our regulations. Our prayer-meetings are pretty well attended, and we have a few people with us, who are, we think, true Christians. I have also a singing-school once a week, that is well attended, and is quite interesting.

"I have just completed fencing some twenty acres of land, which, with our former inclosure, makes about thirty acres. We have eight acres planted in crops of different kinds. I shall have about twenty acres ready for the plough another year, and if I get it started, it will be a new era in this country. We are now beginning to eat the fruit of our labor here. I have bought a pair of steers. Our little boys have planted and cultivated about two acres of broom-corn. They will learn to make brooms, and we shall find a market for them in Sierra Leone. There may be some persons who think that missionaries should not devote much time to such labors, but I am satisfied that I can reach the people, and gain their confidence far better in the way I am laboring than I could in any other way. They will see the benefits of religion and civilization, and will acknowledge that it is just what they need. I have strong hopes that the people will improve rapidly in time to come. I expect to succeed in securing a very desirable place on the Bargro river soon. There is nothing in the way, but the want of men to occupy it. Our little girls are nearly all the help we have in the house, and they do very well. I feel encouraged in the work, and that we are in the place that God would have us labor in. Though we do not see the people flocking to Christ, and are not able to report a great ingathering of converts, still the truth is doing its work, and is like leaven, affecting the whole community. The promise, 'Ye shall roap if ye faint not,' is sweet to me, and I try, in my humble way, to do all that I can for the people while it shall please the Master to continue me in the field of labor.

"It is but a few years sides, that the slave-trade was in fall operation all through

"It is but a few years since, that the slave-trade was in fall operation all through this part of the country. When we first arrived here, there was no safety for persons or property back in the country in any direction. Now it is just the opposite. We can go in any direction with perfect safety, find the people glad to see us, and willing to listen to us. In many places they manifest a strong desire to have us settle near them. It is not five years since this place was all bush—no Sabbath, no schools, no God but false gods, and no desire among the people to be any different. Four years ago, our day-school and our Sabbath-school were commenced by Miss Aldrich, with three scholars. It seemed then almost impossible to get the people to let us have their children. They looked at our operations with distrust, and appeared to care for nothing but our money. Those were dark days, but a change has come, and I trust that it is but a prelude to a great outpouring of the Spirit of God. Now is the most favorable time that I have ever known to open new stations in this country. The people every where seem to regard the mission with favor."

Mr. Brooks bears testimony to the faithfulness of Mr. Burton, as follows:

"I believe that Mr. Burton, in the position he holds as business-agent of the Association, and as a teacher, is doing a great and good work. He has had fewer things to attend to than myself, and consequently has been able to perform them with more thoroughness and success. You, and every one else interceted in the missionary work, would be highly delighted to see how much he has done at his station. To witness his success is to me a source of much gratification, and it inspires me with confidence in the ultimate triumphant success of the cause of Christ among this people. The Lord is with him."

Miss McIntosh was detained in this country until June 2d, when she embarked for Africa, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Dowie; both of them going as teachers at the Good-Hope Station—Miss McIntosh to resume her former position, and Miss Dowie as an associate-teacher. In a letter written at Freetown, Sierra Leone, July 20th, she says:

"Miss Dowie suffered considerably from sea-sickness on the voyage, and very much from debility, the result of over-exertion before leaving home. At one time we almost feared that she would hardly reach her destination, but by the extreme kindness of our friends, the captain, and God's blessing, our fears were not a little relieved by her improvement. I trust that she will not suffer much from the climate, as she is quite confined. I think that persons coming here ought to be very careful not to overtask their strength before sailing. It gives me the greatest pleasure to tell you that our voyage was all that could be desired in every respect. We were only thirty-two days from New-York. There was excellent order and good feeling on board all the time. Captain Yates gave us full religious liberty, and joined us in all our devotions. On the Sabbath we had services, when all the crew, not on duty, were present. The company of our Gaboon friends was very agreeable, and will, I trust, be the means of establishing a pleasant intercourse between the different missions. You will find the Ocean Eagle an excellent vessel for missionaries, and more especially so since no rum (that bane of the African trade) is allowed on her, as freight or in any way. You will do me a favor if, when you notice our arrival, you will speak of Capt. Yates' unwearied kindness and attention to us in our pleasant trip. Mr. Bushnell says that he has crossed nine times, but never before with such favorable circumstances. Mr. Burton is making many improvements on his place, and his boys are doing well. I think the health of the country will greatly increase as improvements are made, and that Americans need not be so much afraid as they have been heretofore. The field is wide, and ready for many laborers. I know you will send them as soon as you can."

Mrs. Mair, who, since the lamented death of her husband, with the exception of teaching at the Boom Falls station during the absence of Mr. Brooks, has been a teacher at this station, writes as follows:

"If we who have given up all, that we might have the privilege of laboring for muchabased Africa, have peculiar trials, we have also peculiar consolations. Have we not the prayers and Christian sympathies of thousands of saints who can not engage personally in this department of the great work? And is not our joy increased in proportion to the severity of the tests applied to our faith to prove its gennineness? The trial of our faith being precious, having been tried, as it were by fire. I can not tell you how wonderfully I was supported under the unexpected blow. God in his great mercy suited himself to my weakness both of body and mind. When once I had given all up, and said from the heart, 'It is the Lord, let him do as seemeth him good,' he gave me the comfort of his everlasting love. I have been able to teach the family school here at Good Hope constantly since the beginning of June, 1857. I like my work well, Mrs. Burton does every thing she can for my comfort; all the missionaries have been exceedingly kind to me. The Lord bless them for their kind Christian attentions to the dear departed: we wanted for nothing they could do for us."

Rev. John White, of North Stamford, Conn., has recently offered himself as a missionary to Africa, and expects to sail for his destined field of labor at Good Hope, this fall. Heretofore he resided several months in Africa, where he had the acclimating fever. After the lapse of a year, he proposes to return and take Mrs. White to Africa.

Kaw-Mendi Station.

TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT.

Last October, Mr. Burton wrote that he had made a visit to this station, which he found in a prosperous condition. The school had increased in numbers. He said the people there think that Kaw-Mendi will prosper though there are no white missionaries residing there. He proposed to them to build a chapel and a teacher's house, in the mission-yard, promising that the mission would furnish the lime, and pay the mason and the carpenter, if the people would do all the rest.

In a letter dated June 30th, Mr. Burton writes less encouragingly about Kaw-Mendi. He says:

"I removed Mr. Jowett, our native teacher at Kaw-Mendi, to this place, (Good Hope,) some six months since, because I had no teacher for the out-school here. He met with very little encouragement there. For a long time after I returned from America, he had but ten scholars. Afterwards it increased to thirteen. Seven of these were supported by the mission. The people there manifest a great deal of indifference about the school. Mr. Jowett does not seem to be calculated to have the management of children out of school, and we think that keeping the boys there would not be answering the expectations of those who support them. Mr. Jowett is a good man, and I do not know how we should have got along at Good Hope, keeping up our Sabbath meetings, without him. He is a very acceptable preacher. Father Johnson is as suitable a person to have charge of the meetings at Kaw-Mendi, and watch over the few church members, as any one we could find. There are not more than five or six persons there whom father Johnson and Mr. Jowett think give evidence of conversion. It is out of my power to give that station much attention. My health is so precarious, that at almost any time a journey through the mangrove swamps to Kaw-Mendi would cost me a turn of fever; and I have work enough at Good Hope for two men."

Under the circumstances, we can not blame Mr. Burton for withdrawing Mr. Jowett from Kaw-Mendi. The Good Hope station is of more importance, and needed his aid. Still, it is a source of deep regret that a station, connected with so many interesting reminiscences, should be suffered to decline. If suitable persons had offered their services, as missionaries and teachers, in response to the urgent appeals that have been made, this station as well as the others, would have been more flourishing. We earnestly hope that it will not be long before our African mission will have a sufficient force to supply all the stations with adequate missionaries and teachers, and to supply new stations as they may be opened, under the favorable circumstances that are now presented. Those now on the field have had more to do than it was possible for them to accomplish. They have borne the burden with Christian heroism and perseverance. May the Lord of missions abundantly reward them, and send more laborers into the field already white to the harvest.

Men and women are wanted for this field of "a sound and vigorous body, without any disposition to chronic disease; an active temperament, a buoyancy of constitution, which enables them to recover readily from sickness; and lean and tough of fibre, because fleshiness and softness of muscles are not adapted to a hot climate." They should also be persons who are not afraid to die, and who are ready to die for Africa. Such was Raymond, our pioneer missionary to this station, and such was Cox of the Methodist denomination. About twenty-five years ago, some one said to Rev. Melville B. Cox, of New-England, who had been recently appointed a missionary to Africa: "Do you not know that you can not live long there ?" Mr. Cox replied, while his eye beamed with unearthly fire: "I do not expect to live long in Africa, but I hope to live to get there; and it is the height of my ambition, and the brightest vision of my faith, to lay my bones in the soil of Africa. If I can only accomplish this, I shall establish a connection between Africa and the Church at home. that shall never be severed until Africa is redeemed." Such are the persons wanted for the missions in Africa. Blessed be God, there are such men and women who, having found the "pearl of great price," delight in teaching the benighted heathen to find the treasure also, and who will not be outdone by mere men of the world, thousands of whom are ready, at short notice, to go to any part of the coast, in quest of earthly riches, where > " Afric's sunny fountains Pour down their golden sands."

Rev. Dr. Wilson, who has resided in Africa, says: "Those employed in commerce, trade, etc., on the coast, are twenty times as numerous as the whole missionary force." Verily "the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light," and if the Lord does not convince and persuade his people to obey his last command, in answer to prayer, vain will be the exhortations of men. "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

During the past year, the missionary cause in Africa has met with a severe loss in the lamented death of Mrs. Maria Bennet, formerly Ta-mi, one of the Amistad captives. She caught cold on her way from Good Hope to Salem Hill, owing to exposure to the heavy rains in the canoe, and after a short illness, died, leaving her husband, two little sons, and her Christian friends to feel her loss. She was converted at Kaw-Mendi, united with the church, has lived a consistent Christian, and died in peace. She was the youngest of the three African girls belonging to the Amistad band. When brought before the court at New-Haven, Mr. Ralph Ingersoll, counsel for the Spanish claimants, bore testimony to the intelligence of Ta-mi, and the two other heathen girls. He said, while arguing that they did not need the guardianship of their anti-slavery friends, with more exaggeration than these friends would have employed: "These African girls have made as intelligent answers, and have behaved with as much propriety, as any girls of their age in New-Haven could, be they who they may." She was married to Mr. Bennet, a native African, and who was connected with the mission, about the year 1850. Her husband, after her death, wrote as follows: and defit and bouch motted and "In the midst of her illness she was near to God. I asked her if her faith and hope "In the midst of her liness she was hear to too. I saked her it her hath and however in God were steadfast. She answered at once, 'My dear, I am going to Christ,' and in a lew minutes expired.

"I rejoice to say, that though I am afflicted, I rejoice that she has gone to live with Christ. I rejoice in the Lord for the manifestation of his power toward me. He has the done all things for good. I will rejoice and praise him more and more, for he safely takes his own to rest. From her last words, I believe she is now joining the heavenly hosts; she is now on the right hand of God her heavenly Father."

Mr. George Thompson, who, at the time of her conversion, was our missionary at Kaw-Mendi, writes:

"Had no more been accomplished by the Mendi mission than the conversion of this woman and her husband, we need not be discouraged. But numbers have already gone to glory who have there been led to Jesus. Give God the praise; the work is his. May the trophies of his grace be greatly multiplied."

Boom Falls Station.

Last March Mr. Brooks wrote:

"We have seven or eight inquirers among the children of our family. This is hopeful, cheering, and very interesting. Pray for them."

In May he wrote again, thus:

"You will long before this have learned that I am at my post entirely alone. Tucker and Anderson are both away. Bennet is in town, (Freetown,) and I have neither cook, house-keeper, seamstress, tailor, nor washer-woman. My school-house, washing, wardrobe, farm, provisions and disbursements all fall upon me. Were I not aided by my boys and four little girls, with as much manhood and womanhood as they can command, I should be compelled to abandon the post. These children deserve my warmest praise.

"So far as the future can be seen, I shall hail from Mo Tappan at Boom River, so long as I am permitted to live. I am more interested in my work than I have been for a long time, and though there are some things that seem disheartening, there are others that fill my heart with joy unspeakable. Some of the boys are, to all appearances, loving the Lord! What can I ask for more than that they may all be pious? Eight of them are now anxious about their souls. Pray for them and for me.

"It fills my heart with gratitude to God to learn of the work of revival going on in America. Oh! how good God is to remember his people! Is the spirit a missionary spirit? My heart is set on the heathen, and I am solicitous to know the effect the revival of religion in America will have on the heathen-on Africa. I look for good. I believe God will yet work mightily for the outcast. His time is at hand. The work we are now doing is but a mere grain to the sands of the sea-shore. We now work in the shadow of a cleudy morning, which I believe will soon break in a flood of glory on this dark people. Am I too sanguine? Since the Lord is our Jehovah, now with us to fulfill his promises, have we not every reason to hope for great things, even glorious things, to be wrought by him! I feel like praying and expecting much.

"We have had a melting time. The burden of sin lay heavily on some. Others longed to know more of God, while several wished to know more of their own hearts. Though our number is small, we are refreshed and revived of the Lord."

Mr. Brooks' health failing, he was induced to make an excursion coastwise, as far as Goree. This short voyage proved highly beneficial, and he returned to his post greatly invigorated in mind and body. We trust he will never again be subjected to the multifarious cares that have pressed upon him on account of the difficulty in procuring assistance from this after her death, wrote as follow

In a letter dated June 21st, he says:

"I write with very different feelings from those that possessed my mind last year. Weighed down by sickness, with many harassing cares, my situation was trying and perplexing. Now, my health is much better, and I take a more cheerful view of things

"The family at Mo Tappan house has been increased during the year. We have now fourteen boys and four girls. I hope to add two more girls to the family soon. Our family is a very pleasant one, and for it I entertain high hopes. Some of its members are hopefully pious. I have made a contract for a strip of land adjoining the mission premises, and during the coming year propose having it fenced, planted with fruit trees, and if the Committee will appropriate $200 for the purpose, to build a house on it to accommodate a small family. If I can get the lumber, glass, nails, door-trimmings, ter and resin for the roof, and paint, I can furnish the work without further extra outlay.

"At Mr. Burton's suggestion, we propose to start some mechanical works here, in which the boys can, in connection with their studies, find appropriate employment. I have also encouraged a native African to engage in business for the purchase of produce to exchange for foreign goods, munitions of war and rum excepted.

"I am devoting as much time as I can command to the study of the native language. I am in correspondence with a linguist in this country of no ordinary talent and zeal. I intend to have a member of the great Mendi tribe to aid me. I want an educated man, and that tribe has such men. I expect to spend my days here, and would like to have a home I can call my own. This desire you can understand and appreciate, and I hope you will sustain and favor me in my efforts to secure so laudable an end.

"I am well satisfied that we should maintain our schools, and that God will raise up men and women to be teachers in them. Trade is also necessary, and should be promoted, by competent persons, as a handmaid to civilization. In the missionary field, as in the work of reformation at home, we must bring into requisition a variety of talent. Either as preachers of the Word, or school-teachers, or keepers of boarding schools, or laborers in mechanical or agricultural employments, we would be insufficient to effect the great end we have in view. What I complain of, is the necessity we have been under of dividing our attention among so many objects. Our numbers have been too few to enable us to accomplish the multifarious concerns of the mission."

Mr. Richard Miles, of Ohio, has recently been commissioned as a missionary-teacher, with a view to join Mr. Brooks at the Boom Falls Station, and expects to proceed to his field of labor the present fall. Mr. Miles leaves Mrs. Miles in this country, in expectation that she will join him hereafter.

During the past year a munificent bequest, not yet available, has been left to the Association, by Rev. Charles Avery, deceased, of Pittsburgh, Pa., "for disseminating the light of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the -blessings of Christian civilization, amongst the benighted black and colored races of people inhabiting the continent of Africa." Mr. Avery was a man of extensive business relations, as well as a local preacher of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. For many years he had been a liberal supporter of institutions for the education of the people of color, and had long taken a deep interest in the Mendi Mission.

In addition to this bequest, and a liberal provision for relatives, Mr. Avery bequeathed a large sum to his executors, "for promoting the education and elevation of the colored people of the United States of America and the British Provinces of Canada," relying, as is stated in the will, "on the sound judgment, discrimination, and integrity of my said executors, and their intimate acquaintance with my wishes and views in regard to the proper disposal of this world's goods by a professing Christian." The great Head of the Church, we doubt not, put it into the heart of his servant to make such appropriations of his wealth. May this illustrious exemple find many imitators, age and projdus shill no elabra nA

With a view to carry out the wishes of Mr. Avery, and at the same time to promote the health of the Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Department, the Committee, in July last, deputed Mr. Whipple to visit England. He has there had interviews with the officers of the London Missionary Societies, and other friends of missions, and gained valuable information with regard to the doings and plans of the Societies that are prosecuting missions in Africa, and the intrepid and persevering men who are on that continent in the service of their divine Lord, so that the Executive Committee can take advantage of their labors and experience in carrying out the views of Mr. Avery in making his liberal bequest to the Association.

The renowned Dr. Livingstone, and other explorers, have given their testimony in corroboration of the facts presented to the churches of this country, by our missionaries at Kaw-Mendi and Boom Falls Stations, through our publications, in respect to the superior race of inhabitants of the interior of Africa, the beauty and healthfulness of these regions, the growth of cotton, the encouragement to prosecute lawful trade, and the openings for the education of children and the preaching of the Gospel. Our missionaries have penetrated that vast continent only from one to two hundred miles from the sea-coast, but have seen enough to beekon them forward. Our limited means, hitherto, and the difficulty in obtaining suitable missionaries, have prevented the establishment of stations farther and farther in the interior. We intend, by the blessing of God. to extend our African mission, and hope, with the additional light shed upon the subject, and increased means, we shall find men and women ready and anxious to embark in an enterprise so encouraging and Christlike. In fulfillment of prophecy, Africa is now stretching out her hands unto God, and uttering the Macedonian cry : "Come over and help us." May there be many who will say, in suswer to the supplications of the heathen, and the voice of the Lord : "Here am I ; send me."

Africa is to be regenerated by the power of the Gospel. Nothing else will suffice. Attempts at civilization, prosecuted by ungodly men, will only extend the evils, not the blessings, of civilized countries. It is the testimony of missionaries at the Sandwich Islands, that the greatest obstacle to the success of missions is the influence of irreligious men from Christian lands, chiefly from our own country, who, by their profanity, licentiousness, lying, selfishness, cupidity, etc., lead the natives into sin, and prevent Christian civilization and conversions. This, we believe, is the universal testimony of missionaries. We see not, then, how American Christians can encourage the colonization of their countrymen, black or white, to regions where the religious advantages will be less than in their own country. What would have been the present state of New-England if a large portion of the Pilgrim Fathers had been men destitute of religious principle?

An article on this subject has appeared in the Southern Presbyterian Review, written by Rev. Dr. Adger, formerly a missionary, and now a professor in the Theological Seminary, Columbia, S. C., that corroborates the view here taken. He thinks the colonization scheme will prove a failure. He says:

"It proposes to rid the United States of a corrupt and worthless population, and at the same time, by this very process, and out of these very materials, to construct a virtuous, intelligent, and prosperous community in Africa."

To construct such a community out of such materials he regards as impracticable. Liberty, he says, is of "slow growth"—" the foundations of free institutions have to be laid deep in the whole history of a people"—" they must inherit liberty from sires who struggled for it, and won it by many struggles." To the argument for colonization, on the ground that its tendency is to put an end to the slave-trade on the African coast, Dr. Adger replies, first, that the slave-trade has not, in fact, been put down; and secondly, that what has been done toward its suppression could not have been accomplished without the protection of foreign governments.

With respect to the position, that colonization is in fact a Christian Missionary enterprise, Dr. Adger says: "This is its weakest and most unreal aspect." He has "tried, in vain, to recall a single instance in ecclesiastical history, ancient or modern, in which colonization has established the Gospel among a heathen people." On the contrary, heathen people have universally melted away before civilized colonies.

JAMAICA MISSION.

ISLAND OF JAMAICA, W. I.

| The state of the s | |
|--|---------------------|
| BRAINERD Missionaries, Rev. H. B. Hall, Mrs. Hall. Teachers, M. Mrs. Hoppis. | r. Thaddeus Hoppis, |
| ELIOT | Teacher, Miss Lucy |
| CHESTERFIELD. Missionaries, Rev. C. B. Venning, Mrs. Venning, PROVIDENCE Missionary, Rev. C. C. Starbuge. | |
| OBERLIN Under the pastoral care of Mr. STARBUCK. | # 127 B |
| BRANDON HILL. Under the pastoral care of Mr. VERNING. RICHMOND Missionaries. Rev. S. T. WOLCOTT, Mrs. WOLCOTT. | an amaidtaile |
| SEA VIEW (Out-Station of Eliot.) Teachers, Miss WOODOOCK and Miss | C. E. FERRIMAN, |
| ROCK RIVER(Out-Station of Eliot.) Teacher, ROBERT JACKSON. | Table Library |
| GOOD HOPE(Out-Station of Brainerd.) Teacher, W. J. Davis, | 10 to 8 10 300 % |

Condition of the churches and schools in statistical form:

| Trans. The part of the state of | Number in the Congregation. | Rec'd to the Church on profession. | Rec'd to the Church
by letter, | Deceased. | Cut off. | Dismissed by letter. | Present number of Church Members. | Contributions by the people, exclusive of their contributions for Schools. | Number in Sabbath-
School. |
|--|-----------------------------|---------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|------------------|----------|----------------------|--------------------------------------|--|-------------------------------|
| Brainerd, Ellot, Oberlin, Providence, Chesterfield, Brandon Hill, Richmond, | 350
280
75
75 | 24
4
0
0 | 5
4
0
0 | 4
2
0
1 | 232 | 3 2 | 140
85
43
40 | $114 76
162 18
18 16
32 16 | 175
160 |

| | | REPORT | |
|--|--|--------|--|
| | | | |

27

| Sonois. | Male
Pupils. | Female
Pupils. | Whole
Number of
Scholars | Contributed
for the support of the
Schools. |
|--------------------------------|-----------------|-------------------|--------------------------------|--|
| Richmond, (Industrial School,) | March 1 | Berry De | 34 | $58 20 |
| Oberin, | 17 | 13 | 30 | 4 56 |
| Chesterfield | 187.0t | del , ight | 0-73.A | production. |
| Mt. Patience,
Good Hope, | wl 96 | 95 97 | 36 | 23 46 |
| Sea View | E/52, V3 | 1924 2 | 27 | Their year |
| Rock River | migral. | sile of | 62 65 | 49 08 |

Brainerd

At an early part of the year Mr. Hall wrote:

"A few weeks ago I commenced having inquiry meetings, and the number that attend has gradually increased, until this week twenty-aix were present. * * In the little meetings which we hold among the people, the truth seems to take effect. * * We see some indications of the Holy Spirit among the people. * * Only a few of the church members appear to understand the part Christians have to do in gathering souls into the kingdom of God. * * I am often made to feel that the masses will go down to eternal death. We are stimulated to labor and to do what we can, and we find promises in the Word of God that cause us to hope that our labors will be blessed in saving some souls."

In July, he wrote: "On the first Sabbath of this month six persons were added to the Church on profession.

Eighteen were received the first Sabbath of May."

Mr. Hall writes, August 9th, as follows:

"By the statistical table I send, you will see that a goodly number has been added to the Church during the year. A futureday may show how many of these persons have been truly converted. The amount paid for the support of the Gospel here is small much less, I think, than it ought to be; and the schools have been small compared to what you have a right to expect."

Eliot

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are now in this country on a visit of some months, to recruit their health, it being many years since they visited the United States. In a recent communication, he says:

"We are filled with gratitude for the mercies which have crowned the year. The schools connected with our station, three in number, are better attended and supported than ever before. The teacher at Rock River, Mr. Robert Jackson, is a native, and has considerable energy. He is a good teacher. This school is supported entirely by the people, with such aid as we may obtain from the Government. The school at Einci is under the charge of Miss Woodcock, and is in a most prosperous condition. The Lord has blessed it. Every day reveals the fact that our most promising labors are among the young."

"The meetings of the church are attended with a good degree of interest, especially the prayer-meetings. The Lord has been with us. Our people continue to improve, being better citizens and better Christians. A man, who was once a slave, ignorant, superstitious, degraded, blasphemous, deceifful, with a violent temper, had been threatened with a severe flogging; to escape it he had fled to the woods. Here he was taken sick, and was obliged to return. A friend spoke to him of the Saviour. He listened, and received Christ as his Saviour. This man is now a bright example of faith and prayer."

Mr. Hall, in the absence of Mr. Thompson, and on his behalf, writes:

"James Maillet commenced teaching at Sea View the first of April. This school is sustained in part by the Mission, and has gradually increased. He was liked by children and parents, and we had high hopes of his usefulness, but his work on earth is finished." He died August 3d. The Missions sustains a severe loss in his death, as he was one of our most promising young men."

Chesterfield.

Mr. Venning writes, in relation to this station and the station at Brannow Hill, that no satisfactory advance has been made during the past year, either in educational or spiritual things. There have have been many obstacles to contend with; "still, looking at matters on the whole,
I do not think," he says, "that the Church of Christ at Chesterfield has lost ground. I have some reason to hope that the trials and dicipline through which we have been passing have resulted in increasing the purity and strength of its members."

At Brandon there are a few candidates for admission to the Church, but great caution is necessary, lest those who have been educated amidst so many superstitions and evil practices should mistake their present feelings for religious principles. Our missionaries have to contend, not only against the common wickedness of the human heart, but against the false instruction and bad practices of those who have been the spiritual guides and examples of the emancipated classes. The condition of the young engages the attention of the missionaries in a peculiar manner. They say:

"We labor on in our schools in hope. If such institutions as that at Richmond can be sustained and vigorously prosecuted, where the young can be educated more thoroughly than in our common schools, we shall look for a better state of things in the future. Our main hope for Jamaics, however, must be in the Church of Christ, with all its imperfections, weaknesses, and errore. We trust there is a remnant here, a church within the church, through and by whom God can work. The few yet left of those who during the darkness of slavery received and followed the truth as they understood it, and who follow it still as the light shines clearer; the few who were truly converted in the great ingatherings into the Church at and just after emancipation, and a few of those who from time to time have been admitted of late years—these are the hope of Jamaica. They are the salt of the land, notwithstanding their light, it may be, is dim, their strength but feeble and much dross may be mixed with the gold."

The people often evince a commendable appreciation of the labors and teachings of the missionaries, and a desire to do all they can to cooperate with them in promoting the temporal and spiritual welfare of themselves and their children. Mr. Venning writes:

"The little flock at Brandon Hill have shown considerable interest during the past year in putting up a new school-house, which is to serve them for chapel also; having scanty school-privileges in their neighborhood, they have determined to do what they can to establish one in connection with the station, both for their own children and for the benefit of the community around; having no timber-land in their immediate vicinity, they have to carry every stick of timber on their heads and shoulders up a steep, rough road, from a wood about two miles distant. They have now the frame-work completed and set up, and are about roofing it, and they have done so far without any help of money or otherwise. They will have to get up their boards for flooring, etc., from Kingston, seventeen or eighteen miles distant; in the purchase of which we design to help them with money appropriated by the Island Government for school purposes.

"It is to labor for the good of this people's children that we need a teacher from

"It is to labor for the good of this people's children that we need a teacher from America; a young man with a 'help meet,' who together will give themselves to the work of helping the people to bring up their families in the ways of righteousness."

Providence and Oberlin.

Mr. Starbuck has written as follows:

"Providence church, though small, is in the midst of an especially corrupt community, and I feel as if the quality of their influence compensated in no small measure for its want of quantity. We do not especially need large churches in this land; there are perhaps too many large churches already. But it is something to maintain a nucleus of purer notions of what religion is than the mass entertain. This is somewhat curiously illustrated in the case of a former deacon of Providence, who unfortunately got into a fit of contumacy, which rendered his exclusion necessary. He seceded then to the Church of England, where his vast moral superiority appeared so conspicuous, that the curate (who is himself an excellent and most devoted man) told me he thought him worth more than any of his people, and was very solicitous to retain him. Not that the mass of our churches are such, but there are those in all, who we think bear witness that a system of preaching which has aimed to develop religious self-responsibility and a high standard of right, has perhaps had an influence not altogether to be estimated by numerical reckoning. Still, when we see the multitudes, by far the greater mass that seem to care for none of these things, we can not but feel somewhat despondent. But, for myself, I feel a better heart to labor than ever before, and not the less so as a bitter experience of the instability of earthly hopes, has helped to teach my heart the more thoroughly, that all which is worth desiring is 'to be found perfect and irreprehensible at the latter day.'"

In a more recent letter, bearing date August 14th, Mr. Starbuck writes:

"The statistical table shows that in these two churches the past has been a dry year. Happily the other churches of the mission have, been more blessed, although throughout Jamaica generally, spiritual deadness seems to prevail in as marked a manner as at present spiritual activity in the churches of our native land. With a grade of moral culture so vastly below that of the churches of America, I do not believe that we could reasonably expect a movement like that; but the Spirit of God knows how to move on all hearts, barbarian and civilized, and I would fain hope that our brethren at home re-joice in this favored time, and will not forget to pray that the good work may spread into other lands. The progress of the people in outward prosperity has been quite encouraging during the past year. At Oberlin, by Mr. Hoppin's removal to Brainerd March, the school was discontinued."

Richmond

Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott have both been sick. Mrs. Wolcott soon recovered, but her husband had a very severe attack. For some time his friends gave up all expectation of his recovery. Towards the last of July he was slowly recovering. He has been worn down by excessive labor and numerous cares, being fond of working with his own hands as well as engaging zealously in building up the school. The intermittent fever has prevailed at Richmond the past season. The place was called healthy when Mr. Wolcott bought it, and it is hoped it may still prove so when things are a little more settled there.

Mr. Hall, writing on behalf of Mr. Wolcott, says:

"The scholars at Richmond that support themselves, need a vacation, and I think that in future we shall give them one during the summer months. We see no way to open the school at Richmond before a teacher arrives. Almost every person there has had an attack of fever. Some of the children, when taken, were carried home by their parents. Some have recovered and returned, while others are still sick. The same is true of those that remained at Richmond."

Mr. Wolcott had so far recovered as to write the 10th of August, and the following is an extract from his letter:

"Our school closed about the first of July for a vacation. We intended to give a vacation of eight weeks, to give the young men an opportunity for extra work. Early in July our whole family, except two small children, were taken with the common country fever, or fever and ague. The most part had only slight attacks. A few, though convalescing, are still feeble. The severest case has been my own. I am now rapidly recovering. The season is uncommonly hot and dry, and there has been an unusual amount of sickness. We are anticipating the arrival of a teacher for Richmond from the United States. One is greatly needed.

"During the last term we had 25 children and youth in our family regularly, and nine were in school from other families. In consequence of our sickness our usual first-of-August meetings have not been held. We have therefore no anniversary proceedings to report. We have obtained from the Government School Fund a special grant to Richmond of £60. About half of this will be applied to the purchase of school apparatus and for building purposes. We read with much satisfaction the accounts of the religious movement in America. When shall we see the like here? The country suffers for want of a freer communication with the United States. There is a talk of forming a company to run a steamer to New-York every two weeks. We see some clear evidence of advancing industry among the people here, and some improvement. There is much to find fault with among the people, but there are some things to be praised. Oh! if the people love d righteousness, feared God, and hated covetousness and deceit, how great an opportunity for good would their liberty give them."

Mr. Thompson says, respecting the Industrial School at Richmond :

"This school is advancing steadily. Already it far surpasses our fondest expectations, considering the circumstances under which it has been placed, and our limited means. We hope here to see realized our long-cherished plans of usefulness with respect to our young people."

Mr. and Mrs. Hills have unexpectedly left the Mission, and returned to this country, with a view to engage in business here or in Jamaica. Miss Upson has also returned.

Mr. T. B. Penfield, a licentiate of Oberlin, and his wife, Mrs. Sarah C. Penfield, have been appointed missionaries to the Jamaica Mission, and expect to sail this fall. Mrs. Penfield is a daughter of the late Mr. Ingraham, one of the earliest American missionaries in Jamaica.

OJIBUE MISSSON-MINNESOTA TERRITORY.

Rev. J. P. Bardwell, the General Agent of this Mission, has during the year visited the Mission, and under date of August 28th, has given a full report, of which the following is an extract:

"Since my last Annual Report some changes have been made. The mission stations heretofore have been on the Indian lands, and as the Indians consider all that grows upon their land, or swims in their waters, as belonging to them, they have locked upon the missionaries as intruders; consequently they felt at liberty to rob the gardens and kill the cattle at their pleasure. Two years ago last winter the Cass Lake and Winnebagashish bands sold their country to the Government, making reservations for themselves. They were quite urgent that the Mission should be removed from the reservations. It was thought best to comply and concentrate our forces at one place, on Government land. A location was selected on the west shore of Lake Winnepec, to which brothers Wright, Fisher, and Lafferty moved in November last. Brothers Spencer and Carver joined them in May.

"There is at the new location an excellent soil, and more good land than at any other place in that part of the country that I have visited. It is covered with a heavy growth of timber, mostly maple, elm, ash, white oak, and bass wood. The brethren have cleared between three and four acres, which are planted with potatoes and garden vegetables. Last winter I took a small steam-engine and a portable saw-mill and grist-mill to Lake Winnepec. Brother Lafferty serves as engineer, and soon got the saw-mill in operation. It works finely. They sawed out about 40,000 feet of timber last spring. They have built a small boat that will carry about six tons of freight, and have things so arranged that they can change the engine from the mill into the boat, and back again, as circumstances require. So we have a steamboat of our own, as well as steam mills, over four hundred miles farther up the Mississippi river, than it has ever been navigated by steam until the present season. This is as much an improvement upon the old method of cance-navigation, as the steam-mill is upon the pit-saw.

"In consequence of breaking up the old station, our school has been small. The missionaries are now preparing to erect more commodious dwellings and a school-house, and hope by another spring to enlarge the school. The prospects of the Mission are by no means flattering. Our only ground of hope is in the promises of God. Yet the Mission is not entirely without fruit. Two half-breed girls one of thom married) have been hopefully converted during the year. One member of the church at Red Lake has removed to this place, and probably others will follow. The Indians, both at Cass Lake and Lake Winnepee, are making improvements in agriculture, and will raise this year a much larger supply of corn and potatoes than ever; but most of the planting and hosing is done by the women.

"The war spirit has raged throughout the country this season more than usual. The country has been flooded with whiskey, and no effort made by the Government agent to keep it out. A change has recently been made in the agency, which I trust will be for the better. I am now receiving from Government for each boarding-scholar $66.68 per year, and am entitled to that for fifteen scholars. May the Lord open the hearts of his people to contribute more liberally to your treasury."

Although the missionaries are obliged to "endure hardness," and the General Agent is sometimes absent from his family two thirds of the year in prosecuting his arduous labors, and but few of the Indians comparatively are converted, yet there have been several remarkable displays of the power and grace of God in the conversion, godly lives, and triumphant deaths of the Ojibues. One of the missionaries, in alluding to the death of a young Indian woman, said:

"There are others at that Lake whom the Lord will gather into his garner. They are elect ones, and their salvation pays us, and you, a thousandfold for all the labor and expense in making known to them the Gospel."

SANDWICH ISLANDS .- MAKAWAO, EAST MAUI.

Missionaries .- Rev. J. S. GRHEN, Mrs. GRHEN, Six Native Assistants.

Mr. Green has made a full report of the obstacles, changes, and encouragements he has witnessed during the long period he has been a missionary at these Islands. Among the obstacles, the oppression of the chiefs was conspicuous. He did not content himself with adopting, for the removal of this and other hindrances to the free course of the Gospel, the "mining and sapping" process, but contended earnestly and successfully for the rights of the people against oppressive rulers. Another obstacle has been the superior adroitness of foreigners in competition with the Islanders in matters of business. Another obstacle of more magnitude he alludes to in the following terms:

"But the greatest obstacle to success both here and at the Islands generally, we have in the great number of men from Christian lands, chiefly from our own country, who reside among the people, and by example and precept lead them into sin. This is not true of all. We have, I am happy to say, a few respectable families, sober, and attendants on the means of grace; also a few professedly pious. But to one such there are three at least who are profane, dissipated, licentious; and many of them addicted to the grossest falsehood. Where they marry native wives, they ruin not the wife only, but as a general thing all the relatives and friends. Scarcely any of them are seen in the house of God. They easily learn to imitate the example of the foreign head of the family, and conclude to go with him the downward road, and risk the dreadful consequences. Knowing, asI do, from the word of God, the love of sin and aversion to hollness inherent in the heart, I sometimes wonder that any of the Hawaiian race become divorced from sin and escape a polluted hell, so many examples have they, from high places and low places among foreigners, of the most shameless profligacy. Judging from the conduct of officials and non-officials, of men on shipboard and on shore, with some happy exceptions, I wonder Hawaiians do not think that the one chief end of man is to plunge and wallow, to live, die, and rot in the slough of sinful indulgence! Nothing but the rich grace of God has saved a single Hawaiian from this polluted state. And oh! what a labor have we in the face of all the example of such polluted men, to try to save the nation from ruin And though the prospect of success to this extent is darker every day, still we toil on and expect to do so till we die."

In alluding to the labors and wants of the past year, Mr. Green says, that both at Makawao and the out-stations the preaching of the Gospel, the reading of the Bible, the administration of the ordinances, the monthly concerts, prayers for seamen and the enslaved, and the usual week-day meetings have not been intermitted. All these have been in the Hawaiian language. In addition he says:

"The results of these labors, the great day will declare. Some of the church seem to have made progress in the divine life. Many have adorned their profession, have honored God, and caused their paster much joy. Others have turned back and given us too much evidence that they have no part nor lot in the matter, and of others still we stand in doubt. Some have been set aside from the fellowship of the church, and a few have been admitted to the communion of saints. Some have died, I trust, in the Lord, and others of whom we had little hope, while others have removed to other stations."

And again:

"How many sad items of intelligence concerning the workings of slavery in the United States have I to communicate to our people at the morning prayer-meetings for the enslaved! I would for very shame conceal the doings of our countrymen at Washington and Kansas, only that I desire that all who have power with God should at such a time as this pray for our country. Sure I am that no arm but that of Jehovah can save the land we love. I would therefore enlist the prayers of this poor people in your behalf, and in behalf of the enslayed. So we have prayed in Hawaiian this morning, and this evening some of us have besought the mercy of God on your behalf. To us, at this distance, things at home look very dark. What will become of our country? Is an inquiry which often bursts from our lips.

"I have given our people, and foreigners, too, some account of the work of the Lord with you of the United States. We bless God for the glorious displays of grace throughout our land, and now we shall look for the fruits of holiness, temperance, purity, and the love of God's image wherever seen. Saviour I grant that we may not look in vain for an abundant harvest to the glory of God and the good of dying men, and thine shall be the glory, Amen."

The churches are congregational. Mr. Green superintends three stations and six out-stations, and the number of church-members exceeds a thousand. The people are greatly changed in their habits for the better; they have built four stone meeting houses of sufficient dimensions to accommodate all who desire to worship God in public; and there is a gradual improvement in the school-houses throughout the field.

CANADA MISSIONS.

ROCHESTER, ESSEX COUNTY, CANADA WEST.

Missionaries.-Rev. DAVID HOTCHKISS and Mrs. HOTCHKISS.

Since the last report, the missionaries have removed to a new station, where their labors among the self-amancipated victims of American slavery in Canada have wider scope, and a prospect of increased useful-

Mr. Hotchkiss writes as follows:

"We are now well pleased with our situation; we have taken comfort ever since we came here. The Lord has been blessing us in our labors. A week ago last Sabbath we organized a church of fourteen members, mostly newly converted, and I think they are generally of the very best material. There will be additions to our numbers, good and true, I trust. I have used every argument and illustration that I am master of, to draw their minds away from all those strange notions that are so common with some people, and have, at the same time, labored with all my ability, to bring them to see that there is 'no other name given under heaven, among men, by which we can be saved,' except the name of Jesus; and all the excitement in the world will not, can not save, for it is not religion, though religious people do sometimes become excited. I say to them, as Paul and Silas did to the jailer: 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.'

"Lest Sabbath I was at Little River, (my old station.) We had a good meeting, and the Lord verified his promise, that where two or three are met in his name, he will be with them. Two young women gave in their names to us that day; they were young converts. I beptized some ten or twelve youngerly persons, a little over one year ago, children of believing parents, belonging to our church, and nearly all have now experienced religion. I trust the two received last Sunday were of the number."

In a more recent letter, namely, August 30th, Mr. Hotchkiss writes:

"We have had a comfortable time since we changed our location. Peace and quietness have attended us thus far, but more and better than all the rest, the Lord has manifested His grace in the conversion of quite a number of these poor people since we came here; three in one family, two in another, three in another, etc. There is quite a number more that appear very anxious for the salvation of their souls. Although it is a difficult matter to bring them to see that they must look up to Jesus for deliverance, yet we take courage and struggle on. Our field is a trying one, but glory to our conquering Lord, we still feel like trying a little longer, "His name to glorify." Our number here has increased since I last wrote, and the people are gaining strength at each of my other appointments. Do remember us in your prayers.

"My wife's school is in a prosperous condition. She has had nearly forty scholars, and they learn well. There are numbers who can not come to school for want of suitable clothing. They are nearly naked. If there could be a large box of clothing forwarded to Mrs. Hotchkies for her school, we would see that the articles are properly distributed. My wife will be under the necessity of having an assistant next winter. Who will assist in defraying the expense?" manifested His grace in the conversion of quite a number of these poor people since we

BANGKOK, SIAM.

Missionaries .- Rev. D. B. BRADLEY, M.D., and Mrs. BRADLEY.

Only one native appears to have been converted under the ministrations of our missionaries. Two of Dr. Bradley's children, however, have made a public profession of religion. It is a hard field. But, it is to be remembered that it is the "seed time." With the eve of faith, converts are seen flocking into the kingdom. Meantime, Providence is so ordering affairs as to facilitate the means of grace, and to encourage the missionaries, who are making a free circulation of tracts in the Siamese language among this reading people, and employing all the means in their power to instruct them in the great concerns of the religion of Jesus. Their printing-press is an efficient auxiliary, and is used to great advantage. Dr. Bradley states that two young American seamen, from New-York and Brooklyn, had recently made themselves known to the Protestant Missions at Bangkok, under the strivings of the Spirit of God. He says:

"They have been in the country more than a year, but so deeply sunk in the pollutions of sin, that they wholly avoided the missionaries, so that they were not at all known by them. And now, awaked as by the trump of God, without any agency of ours, they are begging for our prayers. We have been aware that Americans and Europeans were coming into the city in considerable numbers, and that, with very few exceptions, they felt free to throw off almost all Christian restraint. We had sighed, and mourned, and prayed a little before God on account of them, but with very little faith. Now God comes to us, and rebukes the weakness of our faith, in this most touching and moving manner; and calls upon us to bestir ourselves for the salvation of our own countrymen, as well as for the lost among the heathen. An addition has recently been made to the Baptist Church in this city, from the Chinese.

"Another Chief of 'Old Siam' died about three weeks ago. He was the brother of the late Phraklang, who died about the time Sir John Bowring was here. He was always a strong opposer of very intimate intercourse with foreign nations, especially with the English. He was powerful in his influence, but not powerful enough to prevent the formation of the new Treaties. Perhaps he would have been, had he not conceived the thought that they would open the way for him to become more immensely rich than he was already. * • He had been taught the Gospel of Christ, but, to all appearance, despised it."

Dr. Bradley relates that Muan, a native who had been converted to God in his family, has been afflicted with lunacy. She was to have united with the Church the next Sabbath after she was taken sick, and had looked forward very ardently to the day when she might publicly confess Christ. Mrs. B. had suggested to her the propriety of changing her style of dress, so that it should entirely cover her person; in which the fashions of the Siamese are very faulty. She promptly made the change, and meekly bore the scoffs of her acquaintance and friends for it." "She was," says Dr. Bradley, "a very lovely and promising disciple of Jesus. How cheering it would have been to have had her a burning and shining light among her own people! But the Lord saw fit to order otherwise."

Mrs. Bradley, in a letter dated June 1st, says:

"Through what scenes of interest are you now passing in the United States! Oh! the charm that is thrown over our beloved country by the tidings of the last mail! Even in Siam the prespect brightens up by such intelligence. Zion, clothed in her beautiful garments, is mighty in prayer, and her love and faith girdle the world. Where Jesus is, there love his children to be. One with us even to the end of the world whither he has sentus, he has promised to be. I dream by night, and long by day, to be in the midst of a true revival. I long to see sinners inquiring: "What shall we do to be saved?" I wish and loope, ere long, to see myself and family, and all our fellow-missionaries, become holy, perfected in "Christian love,"

"I find myself often, in my imagination, standing in the midst of your praying bands, with my many requests for myself, family, associates, servants, pupils, neighbors, and the tens of thousands, to whom I have given tracts, and tried, in my feeble way, to lead to the fountain of living waters. Oh! would I not urge my suit, if I were with you? Our two monarchs should not be forgotten; nor should their numerous families be forgotten. I would urge my plea with the more confidence because they have had the plan of salvation clearly hald before them, and urged upon them by books, and by the verbal instructions of the missionaries. We want the effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous, which availeth much, in their behalf. We must and will have them, shall we not? Say? My dear sisters, do not forget that we are alone, and your mission is alone in this great city of Bangkok; all the other missions having moved out. The Baptist, which is the nearest, is two miles from us. We are all one in heart, but our parishes are distinct. I might urge my requests in behalf of Mrs. Smith's school of forty promising boys; for Dr. House's school of about the same number; whom I dearly love, having spent many happy hours singing with them. But I must return to my own parish, and let them build each over against his own house.

"Young men, Christian young men of New-York City! let me commend to your faith and prayer, the young men in the colleges of our Bangkok; yes, the yellow-robed theologians, who, supported by the charities of the people, march in solid columns fifty thousand strong, at the head of kings, princes, and nobles, men, women, and children, in the highway of Boodhism, (only another name for all manner of iniquity.) down to the gates of an endless hell. We will try to do all in our power to remove stumbling-blocks, that the way of the Lord be not hindered."

Our missionaries, and the respected brethren of other Societies laboring in Siam, derive comfort, we trust, from the following passage in God's word:

"They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and reapeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

COPTIC MISSION-CAIRO, EGYPT,

Missionaries. - Rev. C. F. Martin, Mr. L. S. Murad, Mrs. Martin,

This Mission has been prosecuted by Mr. and Mrs. Martin with the advantage of having, as an associate, a fellow-Christian, Mr. Murad, who is a native of Bethlehem, Palestine, and speaks the Armenian, Arabic, and English languages. Mr. Martin had acquired the Arabic, and is able to preach in that tongue. His labors had been interrupted by the illness of Mrs. Martin; and, contrary to their hopes, their residence of five months in Northern Syria did not restore her to complete health. As it seemed expedient for her to leave Cairo for a time, the Executive Committee invited Mr. and Mrs. Martin, and Mr. Murad, to spend a short season in the United States, for the reëstablishment of their health, and for the purpose of securing regular and permanent contributions for the support of the Mission. They arrived at Boston May 20th, and attended the Anniversary of the Association held that month in that city. Mr. Martin, at our request, has furnished the following report:

"The report of the Mission to the Copts in Egypt, for the past year, presents no features of special interest. The Mission has, in the providence of God, been sorely afflicted-not, indeed, in the death of any of its members, but in their necessary absence from the field for a season. Mr. and Mrs. Martin, and Mr. Murad, spent the summer of 1857 in Cairo. Mr. Murad, however, being called to Syria for a short time, in consequence of the illness of his brother, Vice-Consul for the United States at Jaffa: The heat was severe and exhausting, especially to Mrs. M. and the children; but all were mercifully preserved from sickness. Mrs. Martin's health was such, after the hot season had passed, that Mr. M. felt it would not be prudent to remain in Cairo the ensuing summer, and he accordingly wrote to the Executive Committee to that effect, designing. with their approbation, to spend the hot season on Mt. Lebanon, in Syria. The Committee, however, invited them to spend the time of absence from Cairo in a visit to this country; hoping that their presence here, and such statements as might be made, might be the means of awakening a new interest in the Mission. It was with much reluctance that the missionaries left their field; but Mrs. Martin's health, although not so seriously deranged as to prevent her attention to her duties, had been for nearly three years very indifferent, and the best medical advice gave no prospect of her recovery. without a temporary respite from the heat of Egypt. The missionaries accordingly left Egypt on the 30th of April last, returning home via France and England, and reaching Boston on the 20th May. Mr. Murad also returned with the approbation of the Executive Committee.

"During the summer of 1857, Rev. Mr. M. Cague, of the Mission of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, was absent in Syria, from necessity, and the duty of preaching in English and Arabic was shared between Rev. Mr. Barnett, of the same mission, and Mr. Martin. The services were continued without interruption during the summer, and the attendance on each was perhaps as large as could have been expected, although much smaller than was desired.

"The partial cooperation, spoken of in the last report, with the missionaries of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, was entered into soon after the return of Mr. M. Cague from Syria. He obtained a house in another part of the city, somewhat remote from his previous residence, while Mr. Martin had previously removed to some distance in another direction. Mr. Barnett remained near his former location; and the missionaries were thus enabled to operate upon different parts of the city at the same time, while they could easily meet for consultation, and on the Sabbath. It was designed, after the union in labor, to open another school, but the illness of Mr. M. Cague, which commenced in December, and laid him aside for some four months, prevented this, In September of last year, Mr. Martin obtained another house near the one previously occupied by him, but more commodious, and having one room, which, with some little expense, was made tolerably comfortable for the English service which was held in it during the winter. This service has always been considered by the missionaries as merely incidental to their other labors; but they have felt amply rewarded in it. It has been sustained with increasing interest, and the attendance on two occasions the last winter, numbered 50 persons. Many of these were, indeed, travellers, or transient residents; but the number of permanent residents has increased, although many who might come, excuse themselves on slight grounds. The Arabic service, at 9 A.M., has been constantly held, with varying attendance, not as large as we could desire, but still, perhaps as large as has often been the case in the commencement of missions.

"Mr. Murad has, for some time, resided near the Armenian quarter of the city; thus having an opportunity to labor specially among them, with whose language he is of course acquainted. He has continued his intercourse with them, and also his Bibleclass for Armenian young men. The Armenians in Cairo are intelligent and enterprising—many of them persons of wealth and influence; but they are, as a class, worldly, and little disposed to attend to the claims of personal religion. They have, in many cases, come to Egypt for business purposes, and to these they devote themselves with earnestness; but spiritual religion is far from their hearts. Still, there are among them those who are enlightened, and it is hoped that there may be, ere long, some who will openly avow the convictions which they acknowledge in secret.

"There seems to be as yet no religious movement in any class in Egypt. Indeed, so far as the labors of American Missionaries are concerned, this could not reasonably be looked for at present; as it is not yet four years since the first missionaries from the United States arrived in Egypt, and not yet have two years passed since more than one of these few has been able to preach in the Arabic language. People so long fast anchored in their own customs and belief as the Orientals generally, and so unimpressible as are they in generall, can not be expected to move speedly in any direction. Yet, when a movement does take place among such people, we may confidently expect it to be general and powerful, and permanent.

The Coptic Church forms no exception to the general state of indifference to the claims of spiritual religion. Their condition continues much the same as when our missionaries first arrived in Egypt. The school, which the present Patriarch opened nearly four years since, suffered greatly during his recent absence in Abyssinia, for want of his oversight; and the Metropolitan, who had charge of the religious interests of the Church in the interval, is a violent opposer of any thing looking in the least degree toward Protestant views; and used his brief aythority in opposition to those who were considered to favor cuch views, and also in opposition to the friends of the Patriarch, whose bitter enemy he himself was. The return of the Patriarch in April last, put an end to the agrogant assumptions of the Metropolitan. There are a few in the Coptic Church who have a considerable knowledge of the truth, and little sympathy with the errors of their Church; but their number is small, and it seems doubtful whether more than one or two of them have a spiritual reception of the truth which they, to some extent, avow and defend. Still, we can not but hope that the truth which they know in tellectually, will ere long savingly affect their hearts. It has been the aim of the missionaries, as far as possible, to extend their acquaintance and intercourse with the people of all classes, hoping thus to prepare the way for the reception of the truth by those attending the preaching services, as well as to increase that number.

"The school, in the conduct of which the missionaries had a share, after the lat of January last, continues to prosper, numbering usually about 40 scholars, mostly Copts. As soon as Mr. M. Cague's health permitted, a second Arabic service was opened, which has been attended by an audience of twelve to twenty-four persons.

"Mr. Martin's health has been, for the most part, very good, during his residence in Egypt. It was, however, indifferent, just before leaving Egypt, and on the voyage homeward. It was his expectation, in accordance with the desire of the Committee, to commence labor in behalf of the interests of the Mission, so soon as he should arrive in this country. But while in Boston and New-York, competent medical advice decided that his lungs were incipiently affected, and prescribed a cessation from public labor during the warm season; giving him, at the same time, abundant reason to hope that proper care was all that would be necessary to restore his health. It was a very unexpected trial to be thus laid aside from labor; for he was able constantly to preach during the winter; and, for a part of the time, a larger share of this labor than usual fell to him, owing to the illness of Massrs. M. Cague and Barnett. But the advice given could not be unbeeded, and Mr. and Mrs. M. have been spending the summer with their friends in Illinois. Meanwhile, be has spoken as he has been able, and it is consion for abundant thankfulness that his health is now much improved, although not yet fully confirmed. Mrs. M. is somewhat better, yet the missionaries can not return to Byypt this fall, as they had carnestly desired. It is hoped that the friends of the Association will sympathize with the Committee and the Missionaries in their trial; and unite their prayers that it may be sanctilled to them; and that the health of the latter may speedily be so restored, that this shall not be in the way of their return to the field which they have rejuctantly left for a time, although, as we must believe, by the direction of a wise Providence. And let not the friends of missions forget to pray for the now dark and desolate land of Egypt, so long in gloom, yet we hope soon to shine with the brightness

At the recent meeting of the American Board at Detroit, during one of the morning prayer-meetings, the Chicago Congregational Herald states that "Rev. Mr. Martin, missionary of the American Missionary Association, among the Copts of Egypt, said that in his progress toward the sources of the Nile, he might meet Bro. Grout, on his way up from the Zeulus of South-Africa; whereupon Bro. Grout stepped across the room, and taking his brother missionary by the hand, said most heartily:

*We will meet now—see! see! the two ends of Africa are joined!"

MR. AND MRS. SEYMOUR, AND DR. AND MRS. COXHEAD.

In last year's report, we stated that Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Seymour, and Doctor and Mrs. Coxhead, who were prevented from going to the Marquesas Islands by providential circumstances, were at California, and considered themselves under the direction of the Executive Committee. They were willing to go to another field if requested, but their communication had not been acted upon by the Committee. In reply to a communication to Mr. Seymour, describing the different fields where they might be useful, he writes:

"We have been building a church here, (Oroville, Cal.) It is a neat brick building. I have had to do almost every thing respecting it, raising the money, and superintending the building from the commencement. We are the first in the mines who have established a church and built a meeting-house without help from abroad. It has been an arduous undertaking, and has cost me much lasor. I think God has given my beloved wife and myself the privilege of doing and suffering for religion here. Another thing that has occupied my attention considerably, is the office of Superintendent of Public Schools for the county. I sought the office because I thought I might be useful in it. All these things, the building of the church and paying for it, attending to the interests of the schools through the county, and domestic cares, beside preparing for the Sabbath, have completely engrossed my time.

"All the fields of which you wrote, seem interesting and inviting. But we can not feel at liberty to leave here at present. In less than a year I shall feel quite at liberty to leave the State if I choose. I shall think that my coming to California was not altogether in vain."

Dr. Coxhead writes as follows:

"I very much fear that we shall be obliged to give up the idea of ever entering upon a missionary life, on account of my wife's health. Nothing that has been done seems to check the progress of the disease."

ten in the market of complete in the complete in the complete principle of the complete in the

HOME MISSIONS.

In reviewing the events of the past year, as connected with our Home Missions, we gratefully acknowledge the goodness of God in preserving the lives of all the missionaries and colporteurs in their respective fields of labor; in the defeat of the slave power in Kansas, and the consequent quiet now enjoyed by the people, giving undisturbed opportunity to our missionaries in pursuing their great work in the Territory; in the protection of the missionaries and colporteurs in Slave States, and the deliverance of some of them from mob-violence; and in the reaction that has taken place, securing to the missionaries and colporteurs increasing favor on the part of the people in the prosecution of their labors.

During our organization there has been no year when our pecuniary ability to sustain the missionary labors, and extend our missions, was so embarrassed; and yet no year has witnessed greater success to the cause, in the gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit throughout a large portion of the entire field, and the consequent conversion of a large number to the Redeemer. These tokens of divine favor are cheering, and inspire courage. They also call upon the friends of the Association for renewed praise and prayer, while they consecrate themselves and their property anew to the work of redemption and freedom.

GENERAL TABLE,

Showing in parallel columns,

- 1. An alphabetical list of missionaries.
- 2. The names of churches and missionary districts aided.
- 3. Dates of commissions, or time of commencing labor.
- 4. Months of labor performed singe the last report.
- 5. Hopeful conversions.
- 6. Additions to the churches, on examination.
- 7. Additions to the churches, by letter.
- 8. Number of church members.
- 9. Amount of aid pledged for a year's service.
- 10. Number of church members pledged to total abstinence.
- 11. Amount of contributions to benevolent objects.
- 12. Number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars.
- 13. Other particulars.

EXPLANATIONS.

The reports of statistics by the missioneries are to the 1st of August. In some instances the number of members in two or more churches is given together.

For "Selections from the Reports of Home Missionaries," see page 64.

| E. |
|-----|
| |
| 7 |
| D |
| |
| P |
| E |
| |
| H |
| 0 |
| Ø |
| |
| - 1 |
| |
| Ö |
| 02 |
| Z |
| |
| 0 |
| _ |
| SI |
| |
| 02 |
| O |
| |
| - |
| _ |
| M |
| |
| |
| E |
| |
| M |
| - |
| 0 |
| 9 |
| H |
| 1 |

| OTHER PARTICULARS. | Preaches at 5 other stations on the Pottoratomic Osage, etc. Preaches also as bunnuit Hill, Pleasant Point, etc., or, reminded at Garden Frairie. Everval. Now at Man- chester, fown Keryen. Labored in several places in revivals. Colored in Promising labors. Has preached also at Darrington. | D. Kalb ch. now self-austatined. Other organized, at Atchison. Preschos also at Hamiling, otherstrain Muscle done for colored children in schools. Preschos in soveral places—teaches has | Androne reviral. Proches at several places. Revival. Ministered to several Congr. chis.; two organized. Revival. Cons. expired. Statistifs reported below by his successor. Con reprined. Statistifs reported below by his successor. Ch. organized. Some revival. Ch. organized. Some revival. Interesting field, but difficult, at Biocomington much skep- | ticts Revival. Has preached in various other places. Revival. Ch. org'd. | Note that the other places. Revival. Commission expired. Commission expired. Precedes a Pinking. Precedes are creatively; visiting destitute places and galbering churches. |
|---|--|---|--|--|--|
| No. of S. School and
Bible Class Scholars. | 2552 S23383 | 3 38 28 | | | 88888 |
| Contributions to
Benevolent Objects. | 90 90
10 90 | 90 90 | 20 00
8 00
8 00 | 81 00
25 00 | 8888 |
| Pledged to Total
Abstinence. | E:: :::: | |  | 11 11 | **** |
| Dollars of Aid
Pledged. | 922 92 92 92 92 92 92 92 92 92 92 92 92 | 93 23 | 100
100
400 | 125
860
125
125
125 | 120000 |
| No. of Members. | 564 58338 | 3 40 Fa | 41 4B88 | 418 88 | 61866 |
| Admissions by Letter. | %1 % % | *    | 6 4 8 | 010 H | 0 |
| Additions on Ex-
ambation. | 103 25 1 | 5 | 44 40 4 | 15 | 4 8 |
| Months of Labor
Reported,
Hopeful Conver-
slons, | 10 12 12 14 4
 | £ - | 0.00 150 | 250 - | 61 15 |
| Months of Labor
Reported. | 220 2202 | | | | 2000 |
| DATE OF
COMMIS-
SION. | Oct. 1,1857
June 1,1858
July 15,1858
Jan. 1,1858
Mar. 1,1858
Mar. 1,1858
Dec. 1,1855 | Aug. 24, 1851
Dec. 1, 1857
Dec. 1, 1857
Jan. 1, 1858 | | Mar. 1, 1858
Oct. 1, 1857
June 1, 1857 | |
| CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | Cong. Ch., Osswatomic, Karses. Bis Free Preeb. Ch., Traverse des Sioux, Mn., Tre., June 1, 1855 Cong. Che., Union and Coral, and of Huntley July 15, 1855 Gangen P. Artfe, Ill. Cong. Ches., Anguste and Niles, Mich. Jan. 1, 1858 Cong. Ches. of Compton and Virgil, St. Charles, Ill. Mar. 1, 1858 Chystolian Cong. Ch., Portland, Me. Mar. 1, 1859 Cong. Ch., Augustin, Ill. Mar. 1, 1859 Cong. Ch., Stogontin, Ill. | Mit. Fropect Free Miss. Ch., Sugar Grove, Jefeb. III. Cong. Chs., Dement and De Kalb. III. Cong. Ch., Atchison, Kansas. Free Freeh. Chs. Cedron and Fellelty, Oblo. | Dang Chair and Annual Dansell Day Chair Ch | | Centrom Cong. Mr. Cong. Chi. M. Cong. Chi. Beetsbrugh and Dellom, Wis. J. Cong. Ch., Pietsbrugh and Dellom, Wis. J. Cong. Ch., Pietsb., Ind. Cong. Ch., Pietsb., Ind. Cong. Ch., Howal and Pinkney, Mich. Missionary at Large, Wolf Creek, lowa. |
| MISSIONARIES. | S. L. Adair | G. C. Breed. R. C. Bristol J. H. Byrd. | U. Chamberlain. N. C. Clark Warren Cochran. S. S. Cone. Nelson Cook. H. W. Cobb. | 111 | Samuel Ditto; B. A. Dwinnell. M. W. Diggs. D. L. Eston. |

HOME MISSIONS. - SCHEDULE. - (Continued.)

| MISSIONARIES. | CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | DATE OF COMMISSION. | Months of Labor | Hopeful Conver- | Additions on Ex- | Admissions by Let- | No. of Members. | Dollars of Aid Pledged. | Pledged to Total Abstinence, | Contributions to
Benevolent Objects. | No. of S. School and
Bible Class Scholars. | The second of th |
|--|--|---|-----------------|-------------------------|------------------------|--------------------|-----------------------------|---------------------------------|------------------------------|---|---|--|
| J. G. Fee | Idnorates in Ky. and Ohio, Middletown, Ohio
Welsh Cong. Ch., Big Rock, Ill.
Chs. at Berea, Silver Creek, Union, Berea, Ky | July 15, 1857 | 12 | 18
29 | 12
39 | | 46
90 | 100
450 | " | | 50
60 | No report.
Revival.
Presches in various counties, and aids other missionaries.
Revivals. |
| AND DESCRIPTION OF THE PARTY OF | Wesleyan Ch. at Howarth, Indianapolis, Kansas. | Allert Control of | 1 | 1 | 1 | | 24 | 850 | | 5 50 | 86 | Field extensive on the Cottonwood, Neosho, etc.; has several preaching stations. |
| | Evangelist, (Mason Cong. Ch., Pleasant View,) | 100,000,000 | | 1 | 2 | 9 | 11 | 800 | | 2 50 | 105 | Preaches in various places in Mason county. Ch. organized at Pleasant View. |
| J. W. Fox
J. R. Gibson | Free Presb. Chs., Monroe and Cincinnati, Iowa.
Edwards Ch., Chicago, Ili.,—.
Cong. Ch., Le Roy, N. Y.
Free Presb. Chs. North Fork and Frankfort, Ohio.
Cong. Ch., Sycamore, Ili.
Evang, In N. E. Iowa & S. bord, of Min. Ter., Iowa | July 1, 1857
Feb. 16, 1858
Jan. 1 1888 | 12
5 | 8
5 40
8
9 | 8
9
26
4
4 | 8 8 8 | 99
83
56
86
118 | 900
900
150
110
150 | | 145 00
45 00 | 120
120
150 | Preaches at three other stations. Left. Revival. Encouraging prospects. Emigration of members frequent to the West. |
| Billing Harker | Evang, in N. E. Iowa & S. bord, of Min.Ter., Iowa
Free Ch. of Bruce, II
Cong. Cha., Fayette, Illyria, Iowa
Trinity Cong. Ch., Albion, III
1st Cong. Ch. of Oregon, Ohlo. | Oct. 1, 1857
Jan. 1, 1858 | 12
12 | 75
80
5
4
5 | 27
4
4
8 | 14
2
1 | | 200
200
150
200
125 | | 5 00
70 00
12 25 | 80
80 | Labored in protracted meetings and in several revivals. Revival. Promising field. Some revival. Many foreigners. Improving state of things. Some reli- |
| Harvey Jones | Cong. Chs., Lyndon and Baraboo, Wis
Cong. Chs., Waubaunsee and Zeandale, Kansas
Cong. Chs., New Corredon, Limberlost, and
Adams Co., Decatur, Ind. | Apr. 16, 1858 | 12 | 10
8
8 | 14
4
5 | 8 9 9 | 90
57
26 | 100
800
200 | 4 | 85 00
8 00 | 81 | gious interest. House of worship erecting at Wanbannsee. Field of labor extensive in Adams and Jay counties. Ch. formed. |
| J. R. Kennedy | Evangel. in Missouri and N. W. Iowa, Mo | April 1, 1857 | 8 | 10 90
12 | 45
10 | 5 | 90
60 | 200
150 | " | 20 00
10 00
80 00 | 165 | Preached in many counties, and in some revivals. Revival. Left. Preached at Porter Vinton, etc. Revival. |
| James Kilbourn
T. S. La Due
W. F. Lincoln | Sandwich Cong. Ch., Sandwich, Ill | Aug. 10, 1857
Oct. 1, 1857
Oct. 1, 1857 | 12
10
5 | 15
29 | 19
29 | 26
14 | 60
58 | 200
150 | * | 20 00
40 00 | 60 | Promising field. Revival. Revival. Preached in many places, and promoted Sabbath-schools. |
| Norman Miller
A. R. Mitchell | Itinersted in Southern Counties of Ind. Free Mission, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Cong. Ch., Princeton, Wia. Cong. Chs., Altona and Victoria, Ill. | June 1, 1857
Mar. 1, 1857 | 19
7 | 100 | 1 | 2 | 27
20 | 150
200
200 | | 8 70
5 00 | 55 | Interesting enterprise. Revival. No ch. organized.
No further aid asked. |
| Morse | Ist Cong. Ch., Henry, Ill | June 1, 1857 | 12 | 7 | 2 | 8 | 45 | 150 | | | | Difficult field. |

| Henry Morell Free Presb. Ch., Superior, Kansas. April 1, 185. Samueli Penfield. Cong. Ch. of Wataga, Ill. Oct. 25, 185. | 12 | 15
15 | 20 | 6 | 13
58
129 | 200
75
75 | all | 48 (| 0 185 | Encouraging prospects. Revival. |
|---|-----|----------|-----|-----|-----------------|-------------------|-----|-------|-------|--|
| Lewis Pettijohn Wes. Meth. Chs., Selma, Cedarville, and New May 17, 1859 | 3 | | | | 120 | 10 | | 11 | 00 | Preaches in three counties. |
| J. C. Richardson. Preached and taught school at Rockhold, Whitley Co. Ky. | 9 | | | | | 200 | | | 1 | Now at Williamsburgh. Has preached in other places. |
| J. A. R. Rogers Preaches and teaches school at Berea, Ky Nov. 24, 1857 | 8 | | | | | 3 | | | - | Assisted missionaries in three counties. Statistics reported |
| Bobert Rudd. Cong. Ch., Knoxville, Ill. Jan. 1, 1851 E. D. Seward. Cong. Ch., Elchland City, Wis. Mar. 1, 1851 J. Sileby. Cong. Ch., Elchland City, Wis. Mar. 1, 1853 | 7 7 | 1 | | | 48
20 | 200
200
100 | | 9 (| 0 44 | by them. Left. Report not received. Left. Statistics above given. |
| George Smith Cong. Ch., Windsor, Ohio | 12 | 1 | | | 18 | 150 |  | | 50 | Universalism prevalent. |
| M. H. Smith Cong. Ch., Kankakee City, Ill Oct. 1, 1857 | 10 | 100 | 4 | 100 | 18 | 200 | 14 |  | 44 | Left. |
| G. W. Stinson Cong. Ch., Forestville, Iows Aug. 1, 1857 | 12 | 80 | 10 | 8 | 20 | 300
200 | all | | | Revival. |
| Thos. Tenney Cong. Chs., Shell Rock Falls and Mason City, May 1, 1857 | 12 | 25 | 12 | | 22 | 200 | | 20 (| 0 00 | Revival, and ch. organized at Mason City. |
| C. H. Thomson Baptist and Methodist Colored Chs., Bellefon-Oct. 1, 1857 | 6 | 12 | | | 90 | 150 | 44 | 8 0 | 0 130 | Preached to colored people in other places. Revival. |
| S. H. Thompson Presb. Ch., Greenwood, and Cong. Ch., McHen-May 1, 1857 | 12 | 80 | 28 | 5 | 68 | 175 | * | 40 0 | 0 100 | Revival at Greenwood. |
| ry, III, | 1 | 100 | | | 01 | 100 | | 99 0 | 0 00 | |
| Waters Warren Cong. Ch , East Berkshire, Vt | 7 | | | | 84 | 100 | | 00 (| 0 05 | Left. Preached also at Silver Creek and Union. Statistics given |
| O. B. Waters Preached and taught school, Berea, Ky Nov. 15, 1857 | 4 | | | - 1 | 17 | | | | 110 | above. |
| J. W. West S. Free Presb. Chs., Strait Creek and Hunting. Oct. 1, 1857 | 12 | 16 | 14 | 8 | 74 | 100 | " | | 1 | Interesting field. Revival. |
| A. A. Whitmore, Cong. Ch. of Troy, Welshfield, Ohio Oct. 1, 1857 | 12 | - | 100 | E | 64 | 150 |  | 19 0 | 0 75 | Difficult field. Some encouragement. |
| David Williams Welsh Cal. Meth. Ch., Pittsburgh, Pa May 20, 1858 | 12 | 83 | 88 | 9 | 99
35 | 150
160 | 44 | 10 0 | | Revival. |
| W. B. Williams 1st Cong. Ch. in Charlotte, Mich Jan. 1, 1858 | 12 | . 5 | 6 | 2 | 00 | 100 | | 10 0 | 0 94 | Some religious gain. Obstacles. Spiritualism and Univer- |
| Robert Williams, 1st Welsh Cal. Meth. Ch., Milwankee, Wis June 1, 1858 | 9 | 9 | | 1 | 65 | 200 | | 10 0 | 0 80 | SHIPPING THE PARTY OF THE PARTY |
| Levin Wilson Ind. Chs., Pleasant Grove, Hart Township and April 1, 1858 | 12 | 7 | 12 | 5 | 47 | 250 | 4 | 20 0 | 0 100 | Labors now generally in Posey county. Church organized. |
| Bethlehem, Ind. | 1 | | | | | 100 | u | | 1.37 | 4 |
| Lewis Wilson: Ind. Chs., Bethlehem and Montgomery, Peters-May 1, 1859 | 8 | | | 10 | 70 | 100 | " | | 50 | Preaches in several counties. |
| B. B. Worsell Cong Che of Visedland Aven Aven III Dec 19 1983 | | 8 | 8 | 8 | 48 | 150 | " | 15 | 140 | 5 (5.70 F) so pt 10 70 mm 15 (5.70 mm) |
| B. F. Worrell Cong. Chs. of Virgil and Avon, Avon, Ill Dec. 12, 1857
Daniel Worth Ten Wes. Meth. Chs. in N. C., New Salem, N. C. Oct. 15, 1857 | 9 | 28 | 85 | | 224 | 150 | 4 | W. T. | 1 | Preaches in four counties. Revival. Church organized. |
| Paris in order in order in order in order in order in order in the | | 1 | | | | | | | | |

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

DURING the year, the Association and its Auxiliaries have employed in the Home field, eighty-one missionaries, and four colporteurs. They were located as follows: In States east of Ohio, 6; in Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan, 17; in Illinois, 26; in Wisconsia and Minnesota, 10; in Iowa, 7; in Kansas, 6; in Kentucky, 7; in Missouri, 1; and in North Carolina, 1. Two colporteurs have been employed in Kentucky, one in Illinois, and one in Indiana.

Most of the missionaries are pastors; some of them minister to several churches; others have extensive districts, in which they preach, engage in revivals of religion, and promote the Anti-Slavery cause, the Temperance Reformation, and moral reforms generally. Our missionaries have organized, and assisted to organize, fifteen churches and several Sabbath-schools in their respective districts. The whole number of churches is now 116.

The statistical results, so far as ascertained from the reports of the missionaries and colporteurs, are as follows:

The additions to the churches, during the year, on profession of faith, are 586; and by letters from other churches, 300.

The whole number of church members under the care of our missionaries, is 3526.

The number of hopeful conversions during the past year, is 815.

Thirty revivals of religion have been reported in the Home field.

The members of the churches are generally pledged to total abstinence from intoxicating drinks; and are friends and supporters of the Anti-Slavery cause.

The number of Sabbath-school and Bible class scholars connected with the missionary churches and out-stations is 5402.

The contributions to benevolent objects reported by the missionaries, excepting contributions to local objects, is $1200.65.*

STATES EAST OF OHIO.

Six missionaries have been employed in States east of Ohio.

In most of their churches revivals of religion have been enjoyed; some of much extent and power. The most remarkable and extensive was in connection with the Free Mission at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. An earnest Christian abolitionist of the Presbyterian Church, at his own expense erected a house of worship to accommodate the people not attending on more wealthy churches. Our missionary, a Wesleyan Methodist, has preached in it, and in various ways labored with great success. Upward of one hundred persons were hopefully converted; four of whom were Roman Catholics. A Sabbath-school and Bible class have been organized; but no church has yet been formed. Attendants on public worship are of various denominations. Some of the converts have connected themselves with churches in the town.

The revival at Le Roy, N. Y., resulted in the hopeful conversion of forty souls; and some are still inquiring the way of salvation. The work at this place is mostly among persons in humble circumstances. Twenty-six have united with the church.

In the Welsh church at Pittsburgh, Pa., thirty-three have been hopefully converted; and the same number added to the church by profession. The depression of business has subjected the church and pastor to severe pecuniary trials, as most of the Welsh people are connected with the manufacturing establishments, and have had only occasional employment.

The field of our missionary in North-Western Pennslyvania is large. In connection with his churches, numerous preaching stations, in different towns, occupy his time. Some conversions have taken place at Cambridge. Many Sabbath schools and Bible classes are prospering under his guidance. The demand for more ministers in this region is pressing. The work is arduous; but while there are adversaries and other obstacles in the way, there is much to encourage religious effort.

The colored church at Portland, Maine, has been favored with some conversions; and the labors of the missionary are much prized.

The missionary at East Berkshire, Vt., has closed his labors there. The church still struggles under great embarrassment, arising chiefly from the large numbers emigrating from time to time to the Western States and Territories.

Although our funds and general plan will not allow us to multiply missionaries in the old States, it is matter of rejoicing that the small amount of means expended upon this field has, under God, produced gratifying results.

^{*} Collections, in some instances, have not been reported, so that they could be included above.

OHIO

Nine missionaries have, during the past year, been employed in this State. Four interesting revivals have taken place in our missionary churches, while some others have been favored, though in a less degree, in the conversion of souls to Christ. Both the missionaries and churches are often subject to inconvenience by the emigration of church members to States farther West; but, though suffering from diminished numbers, they are cheered and strengthened by accessions from the world during revivals of religion, and the use of the ordinary means of grace. On the whole the cause of truth is gaining.

The labors of our colored missionary in Logan county have again been blessed in a revival of religion while ministering among his brethren. The various settlements of the people of color in this State, mostly agriculturists, and composed of those who have at different times emigrated from Slave States, have engaged our attention. We learn that many of our colored brethren are settling in Green county, with a view to educate their children at "Wilberforce University." Numbers also resort to Oberlin, in Lorain county, for similar purposes. We rejoice in the efforts, made by these long-neglected and injured fellow-citizens, to acquire an education, and till the soil, as auspicious to the cause of freedom.

Our missionary efforts in this State and elsewhere, are aided by the "American Reform Tract and Book Society," at Cincinnati, which is circulating valuable anti-slavery and religious publications throughout the country, and thus awakening feelings of humanity toward the people of color, preventing and removing skepticism among the people generally, and inculcating right views of Christianity. Thus the Society supplies to a considerable extent the want existing in consequence of the withholding of publications on the sinfulness of American Slavery, by the "American Tract Society," at New-York. The approval of the new Society, by ecclesiatical bodies in various parts of the country, and their condemnation of the policy of the old Society, have increased the influence of the Cincinnati Society, and aided the circulation of its publications.

The recent organization of another Society at Cincinnati, whose object is to aid more directly in the circulation of anti-slavery publications in slave States, especially in connection with our efforts to extend a free Gospel in Kentucky and other slave States, affords satisfactory evidence that judicious aggressive movements of the kind mentioned, to enlighten the people of these States on the subject of freedom, will be powerful auxiliaries to our missionary undertakings.

The General Conference of the Congregational Churches, at its session last spring, did not take definite action on the subject of Home Missionaries in the State. The embarrassed state of the monetary affairs of the country induced that body to recommit the subject, with a view to its being brought forward under more favorable circumstances next year.

The agency of Rev. J. G. Brice, in this and a contiguous State, on behalf of the Association, although not so successful as could have been desired in raising funds, has been attended with many advantages to the cause. He has removed prejudices, given information, assisted in revivals, and in various ways exerted a wholesome influence in favor of a free Gospel. The seed thus sown, will, we doubt not, under the fertilizing influences of the Holy Spirit, produce hereafter a rich harvest.

Ohio, in several of its counties, is still missionary ground. There are large districts, especially those that border on slave States, which are comparatively destitute of religious privileges. Universalism, Spiritualism, and other forms of infidelity prevail. In some parts of the State the enemies of evangelical religion are in favor of freedom and temperance, and thus commend themselves to the regard of the people as friends of humanity, thereby at the same time giving currency to their erroneous religious sentiments. It is greatly to be regretted that too many churches and ministers, professing orthodox principles, in this State, by their indifference to the rights of the down-trodden, and the evils of intemperance, open the way for the prevalence of anti-Christian influences, on the part of those, who as temperance and anti-slavery people, are better than they.

Notwithstanding these exceptions, and others equally glaring in other parts of the country, we believe that it is more and more understood that the great reforms of the age are mainly promoted and sustained by the true friends of the Redeemer; and that the Gospel lies at the foundation of all true reformations in society, and will, if faithfully preached and acted out, necessarily lead to appropriate individual and associated action for the welfare of the human race.

INDIANA.

Five of our missionaries and one colporteur have been employed in this State the past year; two of them in the eastern counties, and the others in the southern part of the State, bordering upon Kentucky. Most of their fields of labor are large, extending from twenty to forty miles. One new church has been organized, and several Sabbath-schools have been organized. The churches generally have advanced in spiritual things.

Our colporteur has labored in the lower counties, and been effective in establishing Sabbath-schools. He has been successful in labors for the conversion of sinners, and also in the distribution and sale of religious, anti-slavery, and other reformatory books and tracts, especially the publications of the Reform Tract and Book Society at Cincinnati. This part of the State is emphatically missionary ground. Much ignorance prevails; few publications, either secular or religious, are read; and the masses are guided by interested political and religious leaders. In some counties the moral condition of the people is deplorable. Whiskeydrinking, Sabbath-breaking, and other evils abound; while some religious teachers countenance, by precept and example, the desecration of the Lord's day by laboring in the field, and otherwise.

One of our missionaries has recently established a Sabbath-school in the vicinity of New-Harmony, where an infidel community was gathered some years since by Robert Dale Owen. This settlement is losing its influence, but opposition to the Gospel still remains.

Institutions of learning, and of moral and religious culture, exist in many parts of the State, and even in those portions of it less enlightened and less favored the people are awakening to attend to the preaching of a pure Gospel, in spite of the strenuous opposition of pro-slavery ministers and churches, to our missionaries and their teachings.

The condition of the people of color, though they are much neglected and persecuted, is improving. In many places they are making great efforts for the education of their children, and for self-improvement. As they thus elevate themselves and their children they will be more and more respected, especially as the community in which they live becomes enlightened on the subject of religion and civil liberty, until their example will exert a benign influence upon the multitudes of their brethren in bondage in the adjacent States.

MICHIGAN.

Three missionaries have been employed in this State. Their labors have been blessed. Sabbath-schools and Bible classes have been established, and are flourishing. One church has been organized.

The churches, under the care of our missionaries, have mostly been revived. At Pinckney and Niles, the revivals were extensive. In the latter place the church, which had labored under many discouragements, has been greatly strengthened and advanced in all its best interests.

Universalism and Spiritualism are in the way of the missionaries, and exert an influence in seducing professors of religion, and in quieting the consciences of sinful men. Our misionaries have done much to correct errors in sentiment and practice. They have also made successful efforts for the suppression of the liquor traffic, and for the prevalence of right views on the slavery question. Their reformatory instructions and measures have also strengthened correct public sentiment where it existed.

Michigan took part early in favor of freedom in Kansas. Its General Association was also prompt in its utterance against the late action of the American Tract Society on the slavery question. Its ministers and churches will, it is hoped, exempt no missionary or any organization from reproof if in complicity with the sin of slaveholding.

ILLINOIS.

I sen if is a

Twenty-six missionaries and one colporteur have been employed the past year in this State. They have labored for the Association and its auxiliary, the "Illinois Home Missionary Association," whose annual meeting was recently held at Chicago, and whose collections have largely aided in the support of the missionaries.

This State has bountifully shared in the revival of God's work. Ten churches with which our missionaries have been connected have been favored with revivals, some of them extensive and powerful. Rev. B. S. Baxter, one of the missionaries, labored with much success in several of these revivals; coöperating, in several instances, with other ministerial brethren. There has been rejoicing on the part of pastors and others in mutual efforts for the conversion of sinners and the increase and edification of the churches.

The anti-slavery sentiment is deepening and becoming more general in the churches and in the community. The temperance cause, in some places, has received a new impulse. Alarmed by the intemperance of the young, caused by the temptations held out by liquor-dealers, the churches and people have by the instrumentality of legal measures and moral influence done much to abate the evil.

Notwithstanding the financial embarrassments during the year, which have greatly lessened the collections for missionary and other benevolent objects, much has been done in the State for the establishment of theological, literary, and other important institutions.

The southern part of the State, bordering upon Kentucky and Missouri, has claimed our particular attention, though, as yet, we have done but little, comparatively, for that section. Our missionaries and colporteur report that changes are rapidly taking place for the better, especially in the character of the population, which is increasing by emigration from the East. Much can now be done for the instruction of the people, and for the interests of freedom and religion.

Our auxiliary, the Illinois Home Missionary Association, at its late annual meeting took measures for the employment of two missionaries for the special purpose of itinerating and establishing churches in new villages and destitute places.

The General Association of the State, at its meeting last spring, laid over the matter respecting the organization of the State Society for Home Missions, for a year, in consequence of the financial state of the country.

Illinois may at present be regarded as the centre of the movement in the North-Western States and Territories. This vast field, with a population of seven millions of souls, and increasing at the rate of half a million a year, with its world-wide variety of people, religion, habits, and character, assumes an importance so great as to strike the Christian and patriot with awe, and should fill the heart of the Church in this land with the deepest concern, imposing upon her the obligation to take possession of it spiritually, in the name of its Great Head, to lay its foundation for God and humanity, and to mould it to his image.

WISCONSIN.

We have employed, during the past year, eight missionaries in this State. Some revivals have taken place, the cause of religion has made progress, and a more general interest in religion has prevailed, notwithstanding the year has been one of great trial to the churches financially. Much care has been taken to give sound and thorough instruction, to give the Gospel in its fullness, to inculcate the truth on the subject of human rights, that converts may be made to righteousness, and the churches be built up in holiness and truth. The temperance cause has been blessed in some localities, though it is thought that, in the State generally, it is not advancing.

Wisconsin possesses great advantages, in respect to agriculture, mines, and navigation. Its lakes on the east and north, the great river on the west, its populous cities and towns, its provision for education, its railroads and free institutions, invite the emigrant to the State, as one of the most favored localities of varied comfort and prosperity. At the same time it presents an inviting field of missionary labor. Its population, now numbering seven hundred thousand, one third of whom are from foreign countries, of every variety of religious belief, as well as practice in regard to the Sabbath and temperance, is rapidly increasing. Its wastes are destitute of Gospel privileges. This state of things calls loudly for sympathy and for missionary aid.

In many places society is formed, and churches are established; some of them have been aided by missionary societies from year to year, and have now become self-sustaining, but still there is great and urgent need of laborers in this promising field. In large districts, devoted pioneer-men are needed to itinerate and gather the people to religious worship, to form churches and schools, to give a higher direction to society, and prepare the way for a settled ministry.

MINNESOTA.

Two missionaries have been employed, during the past year, in this Territory. A church has been organized at Brooklyn, Mercer county. Some revivals of religion has taken place there. The church at Traverse de Sioux has had some additions. Much disappointment has arisen from the inability of the people to complete a house of worship, for which preparations were partly made previous to the late financial embarrassment of the country.

In order to extend the influence of our missionary at Traverse de Sioux, he is commissioned not only to preach the Gospel to that church, but to itinerate among the destitute in a large contiguous district.

The rapid growth of this Territory, the importance of immediate action for the right formation of its institutions, and the pressing applications for missionary aid, present a strong case, and the Committee will increase its force there as soon as the state of the treasury will admit.

IOWA.

The state of the s

In this State we have had, during the past year, seven missionaries. In the midst of the trouble and embarrassments occasioned by the great scarcity of money and moderate crops at low prices, the Spirit of the Lord has been graciously vouchsafed to his people, and many revivals have occurred—quite extensive, considering the communities in which they took place. Five of them were in connection with the labors of our missionaries. Under such influences, the observance of the Sabbath, the temperance and other desirable reformations, have been promoted, while there is still much to mourn over as regards the moral and religious condition of a large part of the population. The efforts of Christians and of missionary societies by no means meet the wants of this great and increasing field.

Our missionary in north-eastern Iowa and the southern part of Minnesota, acting as an evangelist, has been much blessed in his labors in protracted meetings, in laboring in revivals, Sabbath-schools, and for other true reforms.

Rev. O. Emerson, Jr., missionary at large, has labored extensively in the State; visiting feeble churches and preaching to them; laboring in protracted meetings; gathering Christians together, in districts where they were much scattered, for regular public worship, and organizing churches; aiding the committee in regard to applications for aid in sustaining missionaries, and with respect to all measures adapted to promote the educational, moral, and spiritual interests of the people. His labors have been much blessed by the great Head of the Church.

Much excitement has prevailed in this State in regard to Kansas, and a great deal has been done by the inhabitants to secure freedom to this neighboring Territory. Their attention is now directed to Missouri, and large numbers are emigrating from Iowa to that State. Thus the missionary labors in this State, during past years have prepared the way for an increase of good where the blighting influences of slavery seemed to threaten destruction to the hopes of the friends of liberty. The thrift and prospective wealth of Iowa, together with the efforts made by the people for general education, united to their increasing love of freedom, render it a desirable residence and make it an influential member of the American Union. Missionary labor here is an investment that will be ample in its returns.

KENTUCKY.

In Kentucky we have had seven missionaries and two colporteurs. Their labors have been in eight different counties, mostly in the interior part of the State, and embracing a large range of country.

The mob violence of the summer of 1857 was followed by a temporary quiet. The missionaries had increased in numbers and were laboring successfully in the different fields, when, on the 18th of January, 1858, while preaching at a place in Madison county, Mr. Fee was violently dragged out by a mob of some forty armed men, and, together with Mr. Jones, a colporteur, forced to a lonely spot on the Kentucky river, where the latter was brutally whipped. Mr. Fee was threatened, and forced to bow down to receive stripes, but they were not inflicted. A full account of this violence, and the atttendant alarm and excitement, have been given in our publications.

Not far from this time the school-house of another missionary, Rev. George Candee, in Pulaski county, was burned, and afterwards, in Whitby county, our missionary, Rev. J. R. Richardson, was threatened and held in duress by violent persons, for many hours. The whole opposition and violence have reacted upon the public mind favorably, and never were the prospects of success so promising as at the present time.

Schools taught by some of our missionaries are flourishing, and slave-holders send their children to them in preference to other schools, because of their superior character. At the exhibition of the large school at Berea about six hundred persons attended, among them several slave-holders, who listened to the speeches and heard the compositions on freedom, read by the scholars, and joined in the commendations of the Institution.

The schools in Lewis and Bracken counties have already produced numbers of valuable teachers, and some of them are now studying for the ministry. The schools in Whitby county, and in the new county of Jackson, under the superintendence of the missionaries, are doing much good. In the latter county the anti-slavery influence is very decided. A church has been established there, one in Madison county, and one in Pendleton county, by our missionaries.

The Lord has blessed several places with revivals of religion; the colporteurs are going forward with their work, distributing and selling religious tracts, anti-slavery, temperance, and other publications, and some Bibles are given to slaves and others, while the preaching of the word is well received. The ten churches in Kentucky connected with our missionaries, refuse admission to slaveholders, and they, with twelve other anti-slavery churches of the "United Brethren in Christ," are beacons of hope. They are evidences that a full and free Gospel can be preached, and such churches established and sustained in slave States, by men who are faithful to God, and who persevere in doing his work, though at times they may be persecuted for his name's sake.

The emigration of Christian families from free States to the communities of our missionaries, to cooperate with them in building institutions of education, freedom, and religion, is urged by them. Its importance is manifest. Kentucky offers a great variety of advantages to emigrants, and they have already been presented in our publications.

The effort now making for the establishment of a literary institution of a high order, at Berea, having prominently in view the education of teachers, and young men for the ministry, commends itself as a plan of high importance. It will aid our whole enterprise, and extend the influence of freedom and pure Christianity in the State. It should secure early and liberal donations from Christians, and all lovers of freedom.

NORTH CAROLINA.

In North Carolina the prospects are encouraging. Our missionary, Rev. Daniel Worth, has under his care ten churches that refuse all Christian fellowship with slaveholders. The same fidelity is here manifested in preaching an anti-slavery Gospel, as in Kentucky. Revivals of religion have taken place, and very recently one of uncommon power. One of the great obstacles to holy living in this State, as well as in other slave States, is the general use of tobacco, by women as well as men. The field of labor embraces several counties near the centre of the State. The congregations of our missionary are usually larger than those of the proslavery preachers, who are here, as in Kentucky, rapidly losing their power upon the consciences and the respect of the community. More missionaries of apostolic zeal and perseverance are needed in this State. Mrs. Worth, who was truly a help-meet to her husband, recently departed, as we trust, to a better world.

MISSOURI.

The labors of our missionary in Missouri for about six months, exploring the State, and preaching in many counties, were successful and full of promise. His reports, in the American Missionary, have given much satisfaction, and encourage the Committee to send several missionaries to that field when the means are furnished. Large numbers are emigrating to Missouri, many of them from Iowa. The prospects of freedom at an early day, though varying, are believed, in respect to Missouri, to be sure.

KANBAS.

We have six missionaries in this Territory, and another is to proceed there immediately.

There have been robberies, and murders of free-State men in the southern sections of the Territory, and frequent excitement from such causes. The agitation throughout the Territory arose in consequence of the frauds at elections, the violent measures of the slaveholders, and the unwarrantable efforts of the Government to prevent the admission of the Territory into the Union, except as a slave State. But the people at the late elections, have triumphantly declared for freedom, in spite of Government bribes and tyranny.

Our missionaries, from the beginning of the strife in that Territory, contributed much in aid of freedom, and are now pursuing their great work in preaching a free Gospel without interruption. Houses of public worship have been commenced, but the difficulty in procuring funds will prevent them from completing any of them during the present fall and approaching winter. Christians who have the means, can not, it is believed, make a better investment than in aiding in the erection of these houses of public worship, and in the support of devoted missionaries.

The progress made during the year, in many respects, is encouraging. We have at present nine churches in Kansas, and more are soon to be organized. Sabbath-schools are increasing in number, as well as the attendants upon divine worship, and some souls have been hopefully converted to God. From various sections there is a call for more missionaries. The labors of some of those now in the field embrace much extent of territory. How important that a population of upward of eighty thousand souls should speedily be supplied with true ministers of Christ, unyielding defenders of freedom, and opposers of prejudice against the colored man, which unhappily exists in Kansas! The Territory has a large number of educated men, and also no small number of an opposite class. Many of the settlements are largely composed of moral and religious persons, but others have very many irreligious and skeptical inhabitants. Now is the time to lay the only foundation upon which a good government can be erected. This foundation is the moral and religious character of the people. A superstructure in Kansas, reared upon such a basis, will not only bless the present and future rising State, but affect most beneficially the neighboring State of Missouri, while it will ornament and strengthen the whole Union.

REFLECTIONS ON THE HOME FIELD. Difficulties.

In new States and territories the obstacles to the success of the Gospel are many and formidable. From the breaking up of the earth to the settlement of villages and towns, and the erection of school-houses and churches, the work must be done when the settlers are few in numbers and weak in resources. The majority of the emigrants are not pious; in most cases the motive to emigrate is to better their temporal condition. Not a few are ignorant, superstitious, vicious, and irreligious. Even if inclined to attend public worship and send their children to school, the sparseness of the population renders it difficult.

The tendency of every thing about the emigrant is to materialize the mind and heart, and to indulge mere animal desires. Even professors of religion are apt to lose sight of the high moral and religious principles to which they have been accustomed, and suffer themselves to be carried away by the prevailing influence. The missionary has to meet these difficulties, aided, it may be, by a few truly good people, scattered and mostly poor, who, by their prayers, sacrifices, and godly example, aim to stem the torrent and lay the foundation of a virtuous and religious community.

Financial Embarrassments.

In addition to the ordinary difficulties, the whole country, and the new States and Territories in a peculiar manner, have been called to suffer severely the past, year on account of the deranged financial state of the country. The pressure has been great upon many of the churches in the Home field. In many instances the missionaries have received only a part of the amounts pledged by the people toward their support, while the diminished receipts of the treasury have made it difficult to pay the portion assumed by the Association.

In some cases, leading individuals, owing to personal embarrassment, or other causes, have not rendered the aid that was anticipated. In consequence of these things, missionaries and their families have in too many instances been perplexed and distressed. On the other hand there are instances where pledges have been redeemed by peculiar effort and sacrifices. With returning prosperity it is confidently hoped that the friends of the cause will do all in their power to aid the missionaries and the Association by liberal contributions.

The Revivel

While temporal embarrassment has extensively prevailed, spiritual blessings have abounded. "Sweet are the uses of adversity." Loss of property and straitened circumstances are often overruled for the spiritual good of those who thus suffer. The hand of God in overruling the financial distresses of the country for the revival of religion and the conversion of a multitude of souls, has been too manifest to be disregarded.

The work of God, in the awakening and conversion of thousands in the land, has been enjoyed in many places in our missionary field, while Christians generally have united in prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and made unusual personal efforts for the conversion of the impenitent. Our missionaries have, in many places, been very efficient in the work. Their continuous preaching and other labors, day and night, for weeks and months in succession, have been signally owned and blessed in the conversion of souls and in the strengthening of the churches. These churches have been faithful to the anti-slavery cause and kindred reformations, and have afforded examples worthy of imitation to churches which have ignored the claims of humanity and neglected moral reforms.

Influence of the East on the West.

The Home field is greatly influenced by the Eastern States, whether for good or evil. The religion, the literature, the habits, the fashions, the politics of the East, with its temperance and anti-slavery societies, its secular and religious press, exert a powerful influence on the States and Territories of the West. How important then that Eastern institutions should be purified, that the people should be well educated, and imbued with the spirit of a free Gospel, that our schools, colleges, theological seminaries, our pulpits, our legislative bodies, our courts of justice, and our tract, missionary, and other benevolent societies, should be incorrupt in doctrine, and jealous for the rights of men and for the ordinances of the Most High.

If, then, any are disposed to charge us with exceeding our proper bounds, as a Missionary Society, in our endeavors, through our publications and otherwise, to purify public sentiment and correct wrong action at the East, the answer is, our interest in Home Missions, as well as in the country at large, our desire to inculcate righteousness and freedom at the West and the South, so deeply affected by the right or wrong sentiments and action prevailing at the East, constrain us, as we love our country and our God, to do all we can, in accordance with the precepts of Christ, to rectify public opinion wherever it is defective, and elevate our countrymen at the East, as well as the West and South, so far as we can, to a higher standard of morality and religion.

Evangelists and Errorists.

The importance of a stated ministry for the various ends of the Gospel is deeply felt, and among the offices of a pastor, one is to save his flock from the depredations of seducers, in whatever clothing they may appear, or tongues they may speak. But in the new and destitute parts of the country, almost every district is infested by errorists of various descriptions, all denying the cardinal doctrines of the Gospel, whose deadly influence often can not be followed and counteracted by pastors of churches in all these scattered settlements. The evangelist who traverses scores of miles, laboring in neighborhoods where there is no settled minister, and watching the operations of the enemies of Christ and of righteousness, is the man to expose their errors and defend the truth in such places; and while he is to preach the Gospel generally, to promote revivals of true religion and Christian reforms, and to gather Christians in these neighborhoods into churches, he will also shut the mouths of railers, counteract the influence of deceivers, and protect the inexperienced from the power of the destroyer.

Border States and Territories.

In addition to the general work of Home Missions, we have two departments of labor of peculiar character and interest: 1. In parts of the free States and Territories bordering on slave States; and 2. In the slave States. In relation to the first department, when we take into view the fact that large portions of the people on these borders are from slave States, and hold pro-slavery and caste prejudices; that they are largely destitute of education, of Sabbath-schools, of true religious instruction, of anti-slavery literature and preaching; that pro-slavery demagogues have power to secure most of their votes against freedom; that their condition and prospects for time and eternity are so sad, we have every motive to increase our efforts in their behalf.

The bearing which this labor has upon the slave States gives great importance to its enlargement. Nothing but education, a pure Gospel, and consequently a full understanding of the principles of justice and humanity, will bring the people to value their own liberty, or to seek it for the millions of slaves near them. In this region, the few missionaries and colporteurs we have been able, with our restricted means, to send, have accomplished much; churches have been founded; Sabbath-schools have been organized; a great variety of valuable papers, tracts, and books on anti-slavery, temperance, and religion, and opposed to infidelity, have been circulated. The publications of the "Reform Tract and Book Society," at Cincinnati, have been distributed with good effect.

The relation which Kansas sustains to Missouri gives it importance in the border work, and this will be more clearly seen if we take into consideration the influences that are in operation in other Territories to subdue them to the slave power. New-Mexico and Utah are on the west; in the former Territory the government and the judiciary have done all they could to establish slavery, and in the latter territory polygamy has been allowed to exist and extend itself. The Indian nations are on the south, and all their civilization and Christianity have been gained under the influence of pro-slavery ecclesiastical bodies, by which, aided by Northern and Southern Missionary Boards, the converts have been gathered into slaveholding churches. Preparations are making to unite these Indian nations into one great slaveholding State of this Union. These alarming facts show the importance of adding to the number of our missionaries in Kansas, not only to give influence and strength to the friends of freedom, and a free Gospel in that Territory, but to operate in a moral and religious point of view upon other Territories where adverse influences now prevail.

Slave States.

Our work in the slave States is of commanding importance, whether we take into view the slaves, the free people, white and colored, slave-holders themselves, the interests of Christianity, or of our entire country. The "American Home Missionary Society" appears to be retiring from the slave States. The pro-slavery "Southern Aid Society" is working in its own way, and giving much comfort to slaveholders and to their apologists. The ecclesiastical bodies of the South defend slavery as a Scriptural and God-given institution. With the exception of parts occupied by a few churches of the "United Brethren in Christ," and some others, we have the whole field before us.

The work to be done in the slave States is unlike that in the free States. It is not only the establishing of new institutions, but the removing of old ones. The brutalizing system of slavery must be abolished and its partial religion subverted, so that knowledge, purity, freedom, and true Christianity may be established.

Our reports show that the divine blessing has rested upon the labors of the missionaries in Kentucky and North Carolina, and that the experiment made in Missouri is full of encouragement. The Gospel preached in all its parts and applications; the instituting of Sabbath-schools; antislavery addresses and discussions; the colporteur work, embracing the circulation of religious and anti-slavery tracts and books; the promotion of all true moral and Christian reforms; the organization of non-slaveholding churches; the education of children and youth by Christian anti-slavery teachers; the establishment of literary institutions on anti-slavery, anticaste bases; and the encouragement of Christian emigration from free States, are all necessarily embraced in the enterprise.

Children's, Missionary Societies.

The organization of children and youth into missionary societies, as proposed the past year, with the view of practically educating them in the true principles of Christian missions, and of inviting contributions from them in aid of our missions, especially in slave States, is regarded as of much importance. It is hoped that this measure will be generally adopted, that thereby compassion for the outraged and perishing may be promoted in the hearts of children, and the blessed art of giving be so learned by them, that by their individual and aggregated offerings great good may be accomplished; and that we, when called in the providence of God from our labors, may have the unspeakable joy of leaving a posterity standing up for Jesus, and marshaled to carry on the work of freedom and salvation.

Our Responsibility.

As we contemplate the present and the prospective condition of our country, and of this entire continent, which must in its institutions and character be deeply affected by our character and influence, hope and fear alternate. What an experiment is our country making! What is the destiny before it? Shall the fairest heritage ever enjoyed by any nation be transmitted to our posterity? Shall the religion of Christ be theirs, and freedom be universal; or shall superstition, infidelity, slavery, ignorance, and barbarism prevail? The present generation may determine this great question. The responsibility can not be met and our nation saved unless the home field be cultivated, and the great principles of truth and righteousness maintained, error forestalled, and iniquity overcome.

In view of the temporal and eternal welfare of millions, and it may be of hundreds of millions, who shall yet fill this land, let us magnify the work in which we are engaged, and with all the friends of Christ and of humanity, properly exert the power and influence with which God has intrusted us, looking to him for the aid of his Spirit, and anticipating salvation for our highly-favored yet guilty country, when it shall be said: "Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation and thy gates Praise."

AUXILIARIES.

The "Penobscot County Missionary Association," in the State of Maine, held its eleventh anniversary at Bangor, Oct. 27, 1857. Owing to a severe storm, the preacher, Rev. David Thurston, was prevented from fulfilling his engagement.

The Treasurer reported receipts $123.47. The report read by the Corresponding Secretary, said:

"The necessity for our organization is more apparent to-day than when the Association was formed, some ten years ago. 'Christians' at the South, and some at the North, your Northern ministers, we blush to say it, attempt to justify slavery by the Bible! The course pursued by the officers of the American Tract Society, is familiar to all. They disobey instructions and ignore the question of slavery. * * Although our missionaries, to some extent, have been persecuted in slave States since the 'Dred Scott' decision, yet the mob violence which has been practised, is already reacting upon the people where it has been participated in, and friends are thereby being raised up in support of a free and unadulterated Gospel. * * Let us then pray the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth laborers into his harvest, and while we thus pray, may we see to it that our works testify to the sincerity of our prayers, that both our prayers and alms may come up before God, as a memorial."

The following were chosen officers of the Association: ALEXANDER DRUMMOND, President; O. H. INGALLS and GEORGE A. THATCHER, Vice-Presidents; JOHN S. KIMBALL, Recording Secretary; JOSEPH H. PERKINS, Corresponding Secretary; James Allen, Treasurer; John Conant, Chas. W. Jenkins, and John Holyoke, Executive Committee; E. H. Fogg, Auditor.

Voled, That we recommend the circulation of the "American Missionary" paper and Voted, That Rev. George Shepard be invited to preach the next annual sermon, and that the Rev. James Drummond, of Lewiston, be the substitute.

The Illinois Home Missionary Association.

This Auxiliary has received during the past fiscal year $2050.51, the whole of which, with a remittance to it of $671, from the Parent Society for missionaries in the State, has been disbursed at the West. During the year the Committee have recommended aid by the Parent Society to various churches and ministers, to the amount of $4015; which aid has been granted. It had in the field an agent from whose vigorous exertions large pecuniary results were anticipated, but the pressure of the times has been such that the collections in the churches have been quite small. After the agent had relinquished his agency, a circular letter was addressed through the Congregational Herald at Chicago, to the churches, requesting them to take up contributions of their own accord. The response to this appeal, however, was small.

We learn, from the report of the Committee, that they employed the agent, during the brief period of his engagement, a portion of the time in doing missionary work in destitute fields, and they express confidence that his services were of value in encouraging feeble churches, and in one case reviving an organization in an important place, which had become extinct. The Committee have recommended employing a general missionary to organize new churches along the lines of railway in Illinois. Other Societies and Committees of ecclesiastical bodies have missionaries of this description, who preoccupy ground that should sustain churches in sympathy with the Auxillary. The preservation of a field which seems to lie open before the Auxillary, says the Committee, demands that it should not confine itself to the support of settled pastors, but that, while it lays aside financial agents, if their operation prove too costly, it should sustain travelling missionaries to found new churches and keep alive those that may be feeble, discouraged, and ready to perish.

The Committee in conclusion say:

"But while lamenting the circumscribed field of our operations as a Society during the past year, we would with gratitude record the abundant mercy of God to our churches, in the outpouring of his Holy Spirit. Nearly all our mission churches have shared in the rich blessing, while those who have sustained the Association by their contributions, have also been greatly refreshed and enlarged. Our prayer is, that their increase of numbers may be an increase likewise of efficiency in doing the work of the Lord."

The annual meeting was held at Chicago, in the First Congregational Church, (Rev. W. W. Patton,) August 17, 1858. President Blanchard preached the sermon from Psalms 72: 4-8. Rev. C. F. Martin, missionary to the Copts, addressed the meeting.

The following officers were chosen: Rev. Edward Beecher, D.D., President; Rev. J. Blanchard, Rev. Horatio Foote, and Rev. M. N. Miles, Vice-Presidents; Rev. J. E. Roy, Recording Secretary; Rev. W. W. Patton, Corresponding Secretary; Galen Eastman, Esq., Treasurer; B. Merrill, Esq., Assistant Treasurer; Philo Carpenter, Rev. E. Goodman, J. Johnston, Rev. W. W. Patton, T. M. Avery, Rev. J. E. Roy, Rev. L. Benedict, W. F. Gates, Rev. W. E. Holyoke, Galen Eastman, Rev. F. Bascom, and Silvanus Town, Executive Committee.

Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionary Society of Wisconsin and Illinois.

The following is a list of the officers of this Auxiliary: Rev. Howell Powell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, President; Mr. Robert R. Owens, of Newark, Ohio, Treasurer; Rev. Edward T. Evans, of Newark, Secretary. This Society was formed May 29th, 1857.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY-PAPER.

We have issued monthly, on an average, during the past year, 20,500 copies of the paper. It has been sent from the commencement of its publication gratuitously to all the regular contributors to the funds of the Association, who wish to receive it, and to such persons, for a time, as the contributors name, who are likely to become contributors. This is attended, of course, with considerable expense, but it is believed that no instrumentality used by the Committee has resulted in so much good, in making known the principles of the Society and the conduct of its affairs, and in gaining friends and funds.

It was a design of the founders of the Association that it should attempt to remove obstructions in missionary operations, as well as promote directly the missionary work. Accordingly the Committee have not thought it any departure from their legitimate labors to discuss with freedom the pro-slavery character of other Boards, and attempt by argument and persuasion to induce them to relinquish all complicity with caste, polygamy, and slavery. These discusions have produced a good effect upon the churches, and their voice has been heard in right quarters to some extent. When the Christian community are made to understand fully the disastrous influence exerted even by Boards that on the whole accomplish much good, they will insist, we doubt not, that every Tract Society, and every Missionary Society, shall not only be free from all complicity with slavery, but enter its solemn testimony against the deeds of darkness that are perpetrated in this land by slaveholders, not a few of whom belong to the visible Church, and against the system itself, that deserves the reprobation of every citizen, be he a professor of the religion of Christ or merely a friend of humanity and his country.

and sometimes of the last article and the last and the la

MAGAZINE.

This publication, which contains the same matter as our monthly paper, has met with decided approbation. Its circulation is 4000 copies. It is published in handsome form, and its cheapness as well as convenience for reading, reference, and preservation, should secure it a still larger circulation. It will be sent, gratuitously, to the Missionaries of the Association; to life members, if they request it; to all clergymen whose congregations take up an annual collection for our treasury, or present the claims of the Association annually through the monthly concerts, or otherwise; to Superintendents of Sabbath-schools; to volunteer agents who attend to the interests of the Society in their localities; to College Libraries; to Theological Seminaries; to Societies of Inquiry on Missions; and to every donor who does not prefer to take it as a subscriber, and who contributes, in a year, not less than ten dollars. We hope that every friend of the cause will volunteer to procure subscribers both to the magazine and to the funds; that each will consider the Association his society, and its interests his interests; as in this way the important principles advocated will be widely understood, and the field of exertion greatly extended.

Stop mel apathones and the service of the service o and the supplied to the substitute of a selection of which the state of the selection of th tarting 24 fd amountains a start business of the start business of the area Bio vi flames ha pelapour of erest equipt of enison of h build be in a second of the se of Enthalty and the following the first property of the control of the control of Distributed at about our vicinity of the control of the will be a William of the control of able at an and atmost we came force or exist the greater it will be don'th vine in and their density street, a see the real bears, done do bear deligious the many deal of the lost real flesh before we account whose flesh while

Sail of adulting a more of a color of the color of a color of a color of the color to not a ton sublication as wife final that is in the every region and assessment of when belong to the visit Council and contain the section that that adjusted of the residence of the first of the first of the residence of the residence of theirs of merely a literal of humanic and the country.

GENERAL VIEW.

Although the actual receipts into our treasury, of the last fiscal year, have fallen short of the receipts for the previous year nearly sixteen per cent, we have reason to believe that it has resulted from the extreme scarcity of money rather than from any diminution of attachment to the cause, on the part of the friends of a free and unadulterated Gospel. Owing to the extraordinary revulsions in the business world, and the unprecedented panic among commercial and mercantile men, during the year, though money has been plentiful in banks, and in the coffers of millionaires, the circulation of it has been remarkably limited throughout the country, especially in the Western States.

During no year since the Association was organized, have we received more encouraging expressions of satisfaction respecting its principles, and the general management of its concerns, than during the year just closed. Assurances of aid from many quarters, when the times shall be more propitious, and of remembrances in the testamentary disposition of property, have been more frequent than ever before; and relying upon these assurances, we can congratulate the friends of the cause, in regard to receipts, that the good-will felt on behalf of the great interests connected with the prosperity of the Association, is increasing instead of diminishing.

The munificent bequest of Mr. Avery, whenever it shall be received, restricted as it is to a support of the cause in only one field of our labors, will stimulate the Executive Committee to increased efforts to extend the news of salvation to the benighted sons and daughters of Africa. And we trust that the friends of the cause will not, in any quarter, diminish their contributions to the general cause, or for other missions, in consequence of the large sum given, and to be appropriated at some future day, for the cause of the Redeemer in Africa; but that they will consider that the other missions, both Home and Foreign, need additional aid to sustain and extend them.

In a spiritual view the results of the past year are on the whole encouraging. The number of conversions has not been so many as could have been desired, but in many respects good has been achieved, the kingdom of Christ built up, and a foundation laid for increased spiritual prosperity. The Spirit of God has been poured out in some places copiously, and souls have been gathered into the Church, to gladden the hearts of missionaries, and cause joy in heaven.

Our missionaries in Kansas have contributed largely to the cause of freedom in that Territory. They were called upon, in the providence of God, to contend for righteousness, freedom, and religious privileges, and they have contended manfully. "Border-ruffianism," blessed be God, has received a check, and come to an end, as we trust, and He has caused the wrath of men to praise him. There is a prospect that civil and religious liberty will be enjoyed by the people, notwithstanding men in high places have cooperated with the infatuated enemies of freedom in Missouri to prevent the formation of a free State by the people of Kansas. If these hopes are realized, there will be an opening for a preached Gospel, other means of grace, and the establishment of industrial and educational foundations that will gladden the friends of freedom and Christianity throughout the land and the world; especially, if the great principle of the equality of man before the law is observed by the people of Kansas in their formation of civil government, and perfect freedom secured to the friends of the Redeemer to publish the news of salvation, and educate the young.

The missionaries and colporteurs, connected with the Association, wherever located, have done much the past year to promote the cause of temperance, to dissuade men from the use of tobacco, a kindred vice to intemperance, and to disseminate the principles of freedom, as a necessary part of a pure Gospel. Good seed has been sown by them, and it needs only the fructifying agency of prayer, and the sweet influences of the Spirit, to cause it to take root, spring up, and gladden the hearts of the people of God by an abundant harvest.

Among the discouragements in the cause of evangelism, and the cause of missions, is the attitude maintained by the American Tract Society, and the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, with respect to American slavery. The former refuse to publish tracts on the sinfulness of this atrocious system, and thus circulate a mutilated Gospel. The latter refuse to require their missionaries, to preach a Gospel of freedom, and fence the Lord's table against slaveholders; and thus the Board teach, by their missionaries, that the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ allows property in man, and permits a denial of reading the Scriptures to the enslaved. Angels and men may well weep over such a betrayal of the cause of Christianity. We are required to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, and no where is evasion or cowardice tolerated in the Scriptures. The Tract Society has a noble opportunity to try the efficacy of an unmutilated Gospel, freely circulated among the slaveholding community in these States, aided by the power of the Holy Spirit, to cause the truth as it is in Jesus, to have free course and be glorified. And the American Board, and all Missionary Boards guilty of complicity with slavery, have an opportunity at the present moment, one long neglected, and one that may never recur, to require that a Gospel of freedom shall be preached in the Indian nations, and none other by their missionaries. God grant that the Board may help the general cause of missions, and advance, in other ways, the spiritual interests of men, by resolutely making the effort to have such a Gospel proclaimed, instead of yielding the field to the enemies of freedom and a free Gospel; relying upon the divine promise: "My word . . . shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

CONCLUSION. .

Our confidence is not in an arm of flesh, but in a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God. We believe that no human instrumentality. however ingeniously devised and skillfully employed, will be of any permanent avail for the conversion of the heathen, the upbuilding of the waste places of Zion, the demolition of error, the subversion of systems of oppression, or the prosperity of the Redeemer's kingdom, unless such instrumentality is connected with reliance on the divine promises, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and fervent prayer. While then as a Committee, we feel that our labors in this blessed cause should be begun, continued, and ended in God, we would invoke the prayers of every member of the Association, and every friend of missions, for the Executive Officers, and the missionaries, and all they attempt to influence in the right direction, whether in this or in foreign lands, that they may be faithful unto death. It is the language of the missionaries, and of the Executive officers, and they speak not only for themselves, but for the souls they labor to save: "Brethren, pray for us."

We ask also that prayer be offered continually for the prevalence of the great principles put forth by the Association, especially in our own country, that they may be understood and acted out by the Church, with the freedom and boldness becoming those who live in this age, when the Lord of missions is beckening on his true followers to a successful combat with the powers of darkness and the enemies of all righteousness. Let our prayer be, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done," in the conversion of men from sin to holiness, in the consecration of themselves and their property to the cause of the Redeemer, in the overthrow of every system of wrong, and the establishment and perpetuity of every system that honors God and promotes the true welfare of man.

SELECTIONS FROM REPORTS OF HOME MISSIONARIES.

Mob Violence in Kentucky.

Letter from Rev. O. B. Waters, Berea:

"I have to communicate another trying piece of intelligence. Last Saturday, the sixteenth January, 1858, brother Fee was again mobbed at Lewis Chapel, a place about twenty-three miles from here, in this county, near the Kentucky river. He had been there once before by the invitation of a number of respectable citizens, and was there with Bro. Jones, the colporteur, to fill his second appointment. He learned the morning after his arrival that there were threats of a mob, but requested his friends not to go armed, as some proposed, telling them he would meet the consequences.

"While he was preaching, thirty or forty armed men rode up, and sent one of their number into the house to demand that he should desist. He replied, as he has usually done in such cases, that he was peaceably exercising his constitutional right, and requested the person to be seated until he had finished preaching. The messenger returned to his company, who then rushed in and seized Bro. Fee and Bro. Jones; they tried to extort from Bro. Fee a promise that he would never return, threatening to duck him in the river till there was no breath left in him. Failing in getting a pledge. they mounted their horses, one of them taking Bro. Jones up behind him, and rode about two miles to the river, and descended into a dark, lonely ravine upon the bank. At the foot they halted and made another effort to induce Bro. Fee to promise to leave that part of the country and not return. He at length got their attention and commenced talking to them, telling them he could not make a pledge that might conflict with future duty. Said he: 'It is not impossible that some of you may yet want me to come and pray with you, and I should hate to be under a pleage not to do it.' He also told them if he did this from fear of their violence, they themselves would not respect him, and reminded them of that greater meeting, when they all must be assembled to give an account of 'the deeds done in the body.' At length one of them said: 'They did not come there to hear a sermon; they must attend to their business." They then proceeded a little way forther to a thicket on the bank of the river. They here ordered Bro. Jones to strip; he pulled off his coat and vest, and stopped. They jeered him, and told him to 'strip his linen.' They removed all his clothing except his shirt. Then bending him over, they turned that up, and one of the leaders of the gang proceeded to whip him upon the naked back with a sycamore switch or switches—these grow large and heavy. Every blow left its mark. His wounds, as seen afterwards by others, are of no slight character. Bro. Fee expostulated with them, but in vaim. When they had satisfied their cruelty upon Bro. Jones, the man who plied the whip, approaching Bro. Fee, told him if he would not promise never to return, he should be treated five times worse. Well, he told them he would meet his suffering then. They compelled him to remove a part of his clothing. He knelt to receive the blows, and then, for some unaccountable reason, they desisted without striking a blow. They then ordered them to start immediately for their houses, and, remounting, they escorted them about five miles to a place called Butler's Factory, and there left them. They came about eight miles, and put up for the night at the house of a friend, where Bro. Fee preached to the family. He says he never felt more in the spirit of preaching, and never spent a happier night than the one which followed. Bro. Jones suffered greatly under his cruel whipping."

From Rev. John G. Fce:

"Through the recent letter of Bro. Waters, you have learned that I have been in the hands of another mob, the first one in this county into whose hands I have fallen. In some portions of the county there are yet threats of further violence.

Of the later of the later of some portions of the county there are yet threats of further violence.

"In these persecutions the slave power is pursuing the most suicidal policy. It is now training many young men to disregard even righteous law—to plunder the rights and liberties of others. These depredators will turn upon their teachers so soon as in.

terest and equal convenience shall offer. And painful as are the effects of these first lessons to us, they are, probably, far less sanguinary than the movers of these persecutions will probably experience from some of these same depredators, and from others taight by them.

"I tremble in view of the ultimate fate of slaveholders. If they shall yet banish from their midst a Gospel of impartial love—the only Gospel that can save from ruinous vices —the only Gospel that can give the hope of a peaceful termination of existing evils, and prevent the sundering of the ties that bind our nation together, slavery must go out in blood

"It is painful to suffer from those, whom in common with others, we seek to bless. Yet the blessed Saviour did this, even to the laying down of life. Were it not for his example, and the present grace of God, I could not stand my many trials, which are by no means small. This is the third armed mob into whose hands I have fallen since I came to the interior; and came near falling into the hands of a fourth still more furious. These things for a time awaken fears, agitate the community, drive off hearers, and discourage friends, but they usually react for ultimate good; though it requires much patience, faith, and persevering labor to keep all stable until the storms pass. God will yet make the wrath of man to praise him.

"Since the mob our meetings in this part of the country go on as before. The friends generally stand firm; they seem to expect such bitter fruit from the tree of slavery.

"On Silver Creek, three miles distant, we have had some very interesting meetings, with good audiences and deep feeling—two came forward for prayers. Last Sabbath the audience was encouraging in numbers and the attention very good. At no time in my history have I felt that we had so much power over the consciences of men. The issue before the people is, shall God or man be obeyed? The people know that the mission aries hold up God's authority even at the peril of personal abuse and life itself. Let the name of the Lord be magnified. My prayer is that He will give success for that purpose. Fear, love of popularity, and false reports may keep many from acting right for the present.

"Brother Waters is succeeding well in the school—some five young men are training for future usefulness in freedom's cause. Some three slaveholders send their children to the school. Great good can be done by sustaining good schools. Seed is being sown that will not be easily dug up. The labor at present is hard. Pray for us."

Letter from Rev. George Candee, Pulaski county, Kv., Jan. 23, 1858:

"I have deferred writing so long as I have because I have been unsettled, and now I am more unsettled than over. I had commenced teaching school in Mrs. AfcQueen's neighborhood, but the enemies of Christ burned the school-house last night. They had tried to frighten us away before I commenced teaching, by firing guns around the house where we board. Being defeated in their attempt, they have made no other open opposition until now. I commenced teaching the 4th of January, and though there was much reluctance about sending at first, several finally commenced sending who were not expected to do so when the school commenced. The school continued to increase in interest, and all seemed to be well pleased. No one in the neighborhood speaks approvingly of the burning of the house. But still the friends have so little faith in the courts that they will probably make no attempt to punish the incendiary, though it would be a very easy matter to convict him before an unprejudiced jury. Some desire to have another house fitted up and have the school go on. It is not at all probable that this will be done. As my principal object in commencing to teach here was that I might the better prepare the way for preaching, and as I am so effectually defeated in this attempt, we expect to return to Madison county."

A more full account of this occurrence was published in the New-York Tribune of February 11, over the signature of brother Candee. He thinks the incendiary is known, but that he will be protected by influential slave-holders, some of whom have already pledged money to defend him, if prosecuted; and declare that they will raise a subscription of a thousand dollars, if needed, for this purpose. Mr. Candee thinks these men are unconsciously preparing a scourge for themselves. The following is the conclusion of his article in the Tribune:

"Now, if slaveholders will protect and encourage such characters in their outrages upon their neighbors of more just and liberal sentiments, and thus drive off their best citizens, by such means they may possibly obliterate the last spark of moral sense and feeling of justice and equity from the hearts of their non-slaveholding neighbors, and teach them that 'might is right.'

"And when they have succeeded in destroying the last regard for human rights, and shall have fully inculcated their doctrine of oppression, may they not expect that their white slaves, more degraded than the blacks themselves, will arise and use their superior 'might' against the oppressor? They have been educated to 'rob the just,' and can they not then 'spoil the oppressor' with a clear conscience? He who will rob one man will rob another."

Brighter Prospects.

From Rev. John G. Fee, August 18, 1858:

"My annual report closes with prospects of a much more cheering character than they were twelve months since. At that time the mob violence was raging to the dismay of many friends. Then previous cheering prospects seemed to mere human eyes doomed to blight and failure. Then was the hour, however, to stand firm, trusting in that God who makes the wrath of man to praise him. Moses 'endured as seeing him who is invisible.'

"In less than twelve months three of the men who were active in the mob that forced me from the house of worship at Cummins, were, in one affray, brought on by their own wickedness, killed within 'a few seconds. Yes, within a few feet of each other, those who near twelve months before were brandishing their pistols and bowie-knives over a defenseless man, were weltering in their own blood. Thus did they illustrate that Scripture: 'They that take the sword, shall perish with the sword.' The son of the first intruder on that occasion was subsequently shot by one of the mob; four more had to flee from the county because of lawlessness. Riots of a less violent character have also followed in that neighborhood—eighteen miles from my bome. Similar riots have followed other fnobs. This has been a painful experience, but I think a beneficial one to the country; very many now are saying: 'Down with mobs.' The converse of this follows, as many are heard to say: 'Free speech is right.'

"Our congregations are increasing in size and interest. There were three additions to the church here, and four to the church at Silver Creek, during the last two weeks. During the last month I organized a small church at Silver Creek—nine members then, now fourteen. The educational interests of the country are constantly increasing. The school, which has recently closed, under care of Bro. Rogers, formerly taught by Bros. Lincoln and Waters, elicited much interest. We hope by this to train young men and young ladies for teaching, and that these will exert a good influence wherever they may go for freedom and true religion. For this we need money, and friends to cooperate. The land might soon be redeemed, or at least put under a saving influence, if the money and the Christians of the free States were consecrated to the work of saving souls and redeeming the oppressed. Pray for us that we may endure to the end."

Letter from Rev. Otis B. Waters, Madison county, Ky.:

"In the course of my trip I visited Cummins' Neighborhood, in Rockcastle county, and on my return stopped a day or two and preached. After a night's rest, I set out to visit such families as would, receive me, and circulate notice of my intended meeting on New Year's night, at the house of a kind and brave-hearted widow woman, who had opened her doors and invited me to preach, although threats had been made to burn any house where we were permitted to hold meetings.

any house where we were permitted to hold meetings.

"In the course of my day's ramble, I visited a woman who lives with her son-in-law, a man who was one of the prominent actors in the last summer's mob in this place, yet she and her daughter, the man's wife, were strong friends to Bro. Fee. When he was mobbed, the old lady persisted, although in feeble health, in walking with him more than a mile, unmindful of the abuse and reckless excitement of the company. Her son-in-law coarsely assailed her with the taunt: 'Well, mother, I didn't think you would go the whole hog.' By her and her daughter (the son-in-law was absent) I was received with the greatest kindness. To converse with this woman was truly a feast to me, and more encouraged me than any thing I had met with for a long time. In a land where you may travel for days, and pass through neighborhood after neighborhood, and scarcely find a person who, when you talk of Jesus as an inward power and life, and of the giorious truths of an experimental Gospel, will not meet you with a vacant stare, it was like 'cold water to a thirsty soul' to meet with such an one. Although tried in a peculiar manner, surrounded by floods of iniquity, finding almost no sympathy, and shut out from hearing a Gospel which had any power or life in it, she was yet a woman of remarkably ripe Christian experience. On the one hand 'sighing and crying' over the desolations of the land, and on the other triumphing in the Lord, and 'filled with all icy and peace in helicying' joy and peace in believing.'

"She told me with eager interest of the meeting that was held in the house a few weeks before it was burnt—what a blessing it had been to her soul as well as the souls of others—how she had come to know more of the Gospel than she ever thought of before. Some of her expressions were exceedingly interesting to me. She said she had never until within a few months learned the value of prayer, although she had prayed all her life. 'Oh! how good it is,' said she, 'to be in liberty, (that is, the liberty of the Gospel;) not to hold one's life dear; to have no fear of death or of any thing men can do.' She 'used to be in bondage—to do her Christian duties because she felt she must; but now she felt such freedom—she did them because she loved them.' 'Often,' she said 'when I go to neva I can have nor graining of thanks.'

said, 'when I go to pray, I can not pray for giving of thanks.'

"Ah! how few of the professed followers of Christ, even when surrounded by the most favorable circumstances, can say that. The loving, self-forgetful spirit of the Gospel shone most beautifully out from her in this also, that her thoughts and anxieties for spiritual good were not for herself mainly, but for others—her relatives, friends, and neighbors. She begged me repeatedly, both to pray myself and to ask all my praying friends to pray, that the Lord would appear and open the way for the preaching of his Gospel there in its purity and fullness. I had known this woman before, but not when she possessed such a rich experience of the power of the Gospel. I found all her friends and acquaintances bearing testimony to the purity and devotedness of her life. She had long been known as an earnest and thorough abolitionist. And I may say intere, that I never knew a person in the South, in whose piety any one who knows what piety is, could have the least confidence, who was not one. Oh! thought I, as I left her, if Christian anti-slavery people in Kentucky were only all such Christians as that, what a mighty influence would they exert."

Letter from Rev. J. A. R. Rogers, Madison county, Ky.:

"At the young people's prayer-meeting, established mainly for the members of the Berea school under my charge, there has been much to encourage. The influence of Christianity has greatly softened the characters of many of the young people, and I can but hope that a host of them will yet be strong for Him who was strong to endure for them. The increased interest in education is very marked. Though many things exist which would dishearten those without confidence in God and the ultimate victory of truth, I feel thankful that we have so much to cheer us on to renewed diligence and faithfulness."

- Brief Review of the Year.

Letter from J. S. Davis, Lewis county, Ky .:

"Last Saturday, August 7, a church of six members was organized in a private house, near the dividing line between Bracken and Pendleton counties. The providence of God is so marked in opening this field, that I will call your attention to it. Three years ago last winter, a young married woman at Glenville signified her wish to unite with that church. Her husband was serious, but did not then make a profession of religion. Before the lady could be received into fellowship, the family moved into a wild and destitute region, forty miles down the Ohio. Bro. Oliver P. Grigson, during a colporting tour, found them out, and brought an encouraging report from them. In February, I went into the neighborhood to hold a protracted meeting, during which one lady united with us, making now three members, the husband having made a profession of religion at a previous meeting.

"In my last annual report, I mentioned two young men as having the ministry in view. One of these assisted in a protracted meeting last winter, with great profit of the thurch and benefit to the ungodly. I earnestly pray and hope that he will enter the sacred office in a short time. The other assisted in a meeting at another place, and is exceedingly desirous of doing what he can in this direction. He has been chosen leader of the prayer and conference meeting in the Antioch church.

"There is to too fearful an extent a degree of spiritual languor in our churches. Worldliness and indifference to the interests of Zion are sadly prevalent. Yet there is material for us to work on. The impenitent still attend our meetings, and listen with a large measure of respect to what is said. May we not have the prayers of God's people, that a precious revival may be vouchsafed unto us?"

The Grace of God shown in the Life of a Blave.

Letter from Mrs. M. H. Fee, Beres, Madison county :

"The person concerning whom I now write, is the only colored member worshipping with us at this place. She is about fifty years of age. I believe all who know her regard her as an example of deep and genuine piety. The theme of her conversation is the grace of God—its power to sustain the soul in all conditions of life. In her very expressive language she says: 'It is great riches provided for the poorest and low-est.' Her face shows the marks of former anguish; over this is thrown a calm serenity, accompanied with a cheerful voice, showing the victory of grace.

"I inquired, a few days since, concerning her children. She replied: 'Before I tell you of my dear scattered children, I must tell you of the grace of God.' She exclaimed: 'Oh! the power of prayer; I want to tell it to you-yes, I want to tell it to the world.' Then laying one hand on her sunken breast, she pointed with the other to my youngest, little T., and said: 'What but the religion of Christ could have kept me when I wrapped my babe's clothes up for it to be taken away-it was sold from my

"She spoke affectingly of her husband, who had been sold, and sent to the Southern market. She has had nine children; two of these have been sent South, the others are scattered to different masters. She is now living with one of the children of her former mistress, where she receives much kindness. She says there were times in her deep trouble, when she gave up, and ceased praying. Then,' said she, 'how my poor soul withered away, and seemed to die within me.

"She says all she can now do for her children is to pray for them; and she is cheered with the hope that two are now converted. Speaking of her hope of future happiness, she said: 'I would be willing to live over again my life of sorrow were it necessary to secure at last that rest and peace which await the faithful in Christ."

"Dear friends, we who labor here sometimes grow sad as we see the apparently slow progress of a pure Gospel; but when we meet such instances of triumphant grace among the unlearned and down-trodden, I ask myself, can not we endure to suffer with the lowly, if at last we can enjoy the fuller manifestations of God in his blessed kingdom?"

High School wanted in Kentucky.

From Rev. John G. Fee, Berea, Madison county, July 9, 1858;

"We have, as you and your readers know, been for years urging the importance of schools in Kentucky, in which to educate the youth, especially the poor, who are inured to hardness, and will probably have to endure it, in times of persecution and "We have been aiding in district schools for several years. We think the interests of truth and humanity now require a school of a higher grade—one that shall prepare young men and young ladies to go out as teachers; and as soon as possible, one that shall confer degrees.

"The school we expect to place under religious influence, such as is proclaimed in the 'Declaration' of our churches-Christian, Evangelical, but not sectarian in name or practice - receiving into fellowship those who have a Christian experience with a righteous practice, tolerating the utmost liberty of speech and practice as to modes of baptism and other points generally conceded not essential to the existence of holiness or Christian character. But immoralities, such as slaveholding, drunkenness, etc., and which are inconsistent with holiness, these, in our church relations, we shall exclude.

"In the school we want to encourage manual labor, and give every possible facility to those of small means. To carry on this school, we at once need means with which to build a few temporary boarding-houses; also to aid such young men as give promise of usefulness and have not means sufficient to secure even that preparation which will enable them to begin as teachers, and help themselves.

"The work of educating the youth of the land, and that too under righteous principles, by known and committed abolitionists, can be done. The brother and his wife, who are now conducting the school, have followed up the previous labors of Bros. Lincoln and Waters with a very prosperous and efficient school. The school has before it a very flattering prospect in all the region around.

"Now what will the friends of righteousness and freedom say? They have long prayed for us, and rejoiced in our preaching here a 'whole Gospel,' as they term it, and have encouraged us to hold on and plead for the down-trodden. Now will they help us to preach and teach-will they remember those in bonds as bound with them? There can be no doubt but that a wide and an effectual door is now open here. Peace reigns in all our borders. There is an increased interest at several of our preaching places; some additions; one small church organized, about three miles from this place.

"The school just closed has left a most favorable impression upon the community. "Some five or six hundred persons were present at the closing exhibition. The scholars acquitted themselves well. Next came a bountiful dinner for all in the grove close by. Then the people reassembled under the spacious arbor and listened very attentively to some six addresses, most of them short. The interest manifested, and which continues, was such that, could we have a few hundred dollars for boardinghouses, we might expect at another session one hundred pupils. Shall we have aid in this good work?

"If the lovers of freedom and righteousness intend to redeem this land from oppression and ruin, is there a more effective way than by educating the youth in schools where the moral and religious influence is distinctively anti-slavery?"

NORTH CAROLINA.

From Rev. D. Worth, Randolph county, November 9, 1857:

"DEAR BROTHER: I have reached my post, and preached my first sermon yesterday. I had a large and attentive congregation, and trust good was done. In addition to these ordinary classifications of assemblies, saints and sinners, we had in our assembly yesterday a few 'chattels,' who acted with as much reverence and decorum, as though they really supposed themselves human beings. A more unlooked-for auditor was a slave-trader, whom I soon recognized as an old acquaintance of some forty years' standing. I received an invitation to visit him at his elegant mansion, and partake of his hospitalities. I am gratified with the hope entertained by friends here, that a more effectual door is now opening to a free Gospel in the old North State than heretofore.

"I am in constant and daily intercourse with slaveholders: sometimes I tarry a night with one, and then I always call in the slaves and pray with them and their masters together; and it is worthy of remark, that in many conversations on the slavery subject, several of which have been with slaveholders, not a man has seemed to take any offense; and yet I have maintained the principles of an ultra school, for I am an abolitionist of the Gerrit Smith type. These facts, unless I greatly mistake them, are most hopeful and encouraging. I am told by those who know, that more hearers are in my congregations than any other minister in the circle of my travel! I mention these facts, not as flattering testimonials to me personally-no, not by any means-but to the cause I advocate. I pray God that we may have wisdom to maintain our present advantageous position, that we may not even by an indiscretion injure our moral influence and power on the hearts and consciences of the community. A few pro-slavery preachers constitute almost our whole opposition.

"In most of our churches there is manifestly increasing religious interest. In two or three cases it has been developed in the shape of a revival. At one point, a few days ago, was seen a most interesting sight. On invitation to inquirers to meet us at the altar of prayer, two fathers, with each a daughter, came forward, besides some others. The four found pardoning mercy, and rejoiced in God's great salvation within some fifteen minutes of each other. Nine were added to the church, and more will follow soon. Some accessions have taken place at other points.

"With deep sorrow I have to say that my companion is fast sinking under pulmonary disease. She is now confined to her bed. I have continued to travel till now, but feel that I shall be compelled to contract somewhat my circle of travel, until there shall be a change in these circumstances. Her health has been feeble for years, but it has been her ambition that I should not preach a sermon the less on that account.

"I will say in conclusion that a glorious open field for a reformatory Gospel is now open in 'Old North Carolina.' And the Macedonian cry, 'Come over and help us,' still reaches us from new neighborhoods. I have also found, I think, two or three ministers of the right stamp.

New Salem, August 5, 1858.

"Believing that many readers of the Missionary are interested in hearing what betides us here, I again drop you a line. The violence which was thought inevitable on the resumption of active operations here has not occurred, and I think will not. Yesterday I held a conversation of some hours with a distinguished Carolinian, a member of the last Congress. A few years past he was known as the most violent opposer of a free Gospel of any amongst us. His mind has evidently undergone a change. He spoke very kindly, and we discussed the subject of slavery at considerable length. He remarked he had often passed the spot of my birth, and inquired how long I expected to remain in the South. I replied, that might possibly somewhat depend on the course of action pursued toward me by men of the class of opinion which he was supposed to hold. He evidently understood me as alluding to the fact of his having formerly led a mob against my predecessors in this field of labor. He smiled good humoredly, and remarked: 'There is little danger.' I told him if I was to suffer for my anti-slavery sentiments I must insist on digging up the bones of our distinguished Southerners, the champions of liberty in other days, who, by their great utterances in behalf of freedom, had made me what I was; of Washington and Jefferson, of Henry and Pinckney, and Monroe and Wirt, and Randolph and Broadnax, and hanging them on the public gallows to explate for the crime of corrupting my young mind in years gone by with this whining puling philanthropy. He remarked that when those great men wrote and spoke against slavery a slave was worth but little more than a good horse is now, not half their present value; there was therefore not that interest involved in the question of emancipation as now. I replied, that few would be willing to think so meanly of those great names as to suppose them capable of regulating their judgment of sin by the amount of money which could be made or lost by it. 'Perhaps so,' was the reply.

TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT.

"I have used great freedom of speech from the pulpit on this sin; I have spoken of the absurdity of attempting to chattelize a human soul ranked and registered by God a little lower than the angels, and crowned with glory and immortality; of the wickedness of selling a man at auction to make the costs of a legal prosecution against him for the crime of shooting a wolf after one of his sheep because the law does not allow him to carry a gun; of spreading ignorance by statute and heathenism by legal penalties, punishing a man with thirty-nine lashes, and imprisonment for teaching a brother man the name of Washington, the saviour of his country, or that infinitely greater name of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world; of robbing mothers of their inlants, and selling Jesus Christ on the auction-block in the person of his humble followers; of imprisonment, pillory, whipping, and death for circulating a book in favor of human liberty deemed incendiary by slaveholders; as well as all the untold abominations growing out of this Heaven-daring and revolting crime. Thus have I endeavored faithfully to preach Christ. The results, though not so good as I could desire, are still cheering. We have received thirty-five on trial, and of these twenty-three profess a change of heart. We have formed one new church in a neighborhood which promises good results. I have concluded to remain another year in the South, the desire seeming to be universal that I should do so. Oh! may the good Shepherd continue to guide and lead his flock.

New Salem, September, 1858:

"A glorious revival of religion has been in progress for some days at the Revnolds" school-house. The result is thirty-six conversions of the most clear and powerful character. On Saturday last, forty-one were dedicated to God in holy baptism. Additions to the church, forty-two. Meral condition of the people generally not so good as in most regions where I have labored hitherto. Much addicted to the use of strong drink and the use of the filthy narcotic tobacco. Men and women seem to vie in the use of the last. They do not seem to think the command, 'Keep thyself pure,' could by any possibility apply to the use of the weed. The anti-slavery cause is evidently progressing, and some of us are striving to aid the cause with books, though at the evident risk of prosecution and conviction for circulating incendiary publications, the legal punishment for which is, first offense, 'whipping and pillory,' second offense, death! Is not this a land of glorious liberty?"

MISSOURI.

Rev. W. Kendrick states that about the middle of January last he left Memphis, Scotland county, where he had labored for some two weeks with much success. He afterwards visited many counties, and preached during the winter and spring in many places, and with happy results. After some statements of his labors in particular towns and districts, he gives an outline of facts and views under different headings : 1st :

"Denominations-The Methodists, Baptists, and Campbellites are about equal in numbers, and where I visited they make up about four fifths of the professed religious community. The Cumberland Presbyterians are next in numbers, and here and there are O. S. Pres, churches, but few in numbers. Several United Brethren and Northern Methodist Churches are scattered here and there over the country, and one Rossite church

"Piety-It is generally at a low ebb, though there was a good degree of interest to hear and receive the truth wherever I went. No doubt the novelty of hearing a stranger, and he a Congregational preacher, drew out many, but it made my soul rejoice as the Holy Ghost, in answer to prayer, led many to cry out: 'Men and brethren, what must we do to be saved?' The people gathered all around from five to eight miles on clear Sundays, or in the evenings, but few thought they could spare time on week-days to attend meetings, being so much interested in worldly things. One of the great difficulties in leading men to a saving knowledge of the truth there is, that with multitudes the great idea of getting religion, as they call it, is to become happy. Hence it is that they seek to gratify every desire that does not come in direct conflict with the plainest and most positive commands of the Word of God, and thus they fail to distinguish the difference between the happiness that results from a vital union with God in Christ Jesus, and an excited state of the sensibilities which lasts only while those influences which produced it remain. God's infinite holiness, man's sinful depravity and high-handed rebellion against a holy God, man's obligation to choose God's glory and the highest good of every creature as the great object and end of life, appears to have little weight in the minds of either preachers or people. That God is no respecter of persons, that we are to be like him or forever remain under the curse of the law-that there must be a radical change of heart effected through the truth by the agency of the Holy Ghost, and that when men exercise repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, He, for Christ's sake, blots out their sins, renews within them a right spirit, and causes them to keep his judgments and do them, are ideas that seem to have no place in their minds. Hence we see one great reason why slavery is spreading her curse and holding her victims with so firm a grasp. When I dwelt upon those truths men's consciences would wake up on the subject of slavery, and pro-slavery men would say: 'Surely slavery is a great evil-but what can we do with our slaves, they are too ignorant and too lazy to provide for themselves, and would steal, and what could we do with so many running to and fro in the land?' My reply was, that all, as far as I knew, who looked upon slavery as a sin supposed that there would be no more of this if they were at liberty than while slaves, and that it would be no more trouble to govern them than the whites. But the question is What will God have you do in this case as well as in every other? Do right and leave the consequence with Him. Other things stirred them up on the subject of slavery, and caused them to watch me with much suspicion (but without molestation.) Yet when the truths referred to were developed, their hearts would melt, and their eyes fill with tears-and they were ready to hear what I had to say. But I must not prolong this part of the subject. My labors were mostly in the county-seats. I could there reach the greatest numbers in the shortest time, and ascertain more readily how the general pulse beats on religion, temperance, slavery, freedom, Sunday-schools, and education; and there I could always find some convenient place to preach, though it is true there is here and there a meeting-house in the country, and as a general thing they came out much better in the country to hear preaching.

"Sabbath-Schools are very few even in towns of from six hundred to three thousand inhabitants; but few schools in the winter, and these poorly attended, and in the country thinly settled, so little interest in Sabbath-schools is felt that I found no place where they ever pretended to appoint a Sunday-school during winter; but in the summer almost every place where one can be sustained they have one. I saw but very few religious books, indeed very few books of any kind.

"Schools through the country generally were very few, and of a very inferior grade. The school-houses are low and small, fourteen by sixteen, or eighteen by twenty, just high enough to enable a man to stand erect in them, with one log left out to let in the light through a few panes of glass; but the children that fill these small houses are as bright, as pleasant, and as ready to learn as any children I ever saw. One great difficulty with them is that they seldom have school more than three months in the year. In the county-seats and large towns they are erecting convenient school-houses and have good schools almost all the year. I believe Missouri has donated every sixteenth section and all her wet land to common-school purposes.

"Temperance.-I learned that there was a great amount of whisky drunk in every town where I labored, but Memphis, and there they passed a prohibitory law, not permitting any to be sold except for medical purposes. I did not, however, neet an intoxicated person while in the State. A temperance lecturer, by the name of Billy Ross, is accomplishing a great work in Missouri. Though many seek to kill him, yet wherever he goes all classes gather in and around, and scores turn into the temperance ranks. It appears that the Lord has raised him up and preserves his life especially for the people.

"Slavery, in Missouri, I suppose, is in its mildest form. I was credibly informed by "Slavery, in Missouri, I suppose, is in its mildest form. I was credibly informed by souri will be afree State in less than five years. Since the land offices there have been opened, thousands from the free States have come in and are changing the whole aspect of things. I read in the Missouri Delta, a few days before I left, that in consequence of the proposed arrangement to remove the slaves from the State, there are now 50,000 people moving in from the free States, and that a much larger number are expected within the year. I was very forcibly impressed with the idea that Providence seems to be opening the way for Missouri to become a free State by distributing free State men all over the country, opening places for them to make themselves homes, and arousing the conscience of the State to the sin of slavery. It was strange to me at first that I did not find the free State men grouped more together, but I soon learned that a wise Providence had ordered it otherwise."

KANSAS.

Letters from Missionaries.

"There has been a continual emigration to this Territory for the last two or three months, principally from the Western States. Those I have seen coming in this summer and fall, appear, generally, to be of good moral character, and some of them religious. I should think that about one tenth of the emigrants are old country people."

"I think the population of Osawattomie is about two hundred. In the township there are from seven hundred to eight hundred. The two other townships in which I have appointments, vary from four hundred to six hundred inhabitants. As to moral character, we have all classes and conditions. As to intelligence, they are above the mediocrity of new settlers. On the subject of temperance, I think there has been a decided gain. Profane swearing greatly abounds. Sabbath desecration of all kinds seems to be on the increase.

"Emigrants this season are not very numerous, but in character vary little from those already here. Only a few are foreigners. No special efforts for anti-slavery, as such, but every discussion, ecclesiastical and political, involves its principles, and truth is constantly gaining on the public mind. Education has been, and is still much neglected. This is a sore evil. There is no monthly concert observed here. An increased interest is manifested in reading the American Missionary. We have a few Roman Catholics, a few Unitarians, many Universalists, Jews, Campbellites, and multitudes of infidels and skeptics of the various shades and colors."

"My entire field, in Richardson county, now embraces a population of about three hundred and fifty souls, and limited as it is, I feel that I have as much as I can do. The population is in some sense heterogeneous, coming from different States and countries, and society is in a formation state, and more labor seems indispensable for a minister than in the same population in one of the older States. Though almost every portion of the Union is represented in our population, with some European countries, yet by far the largest number of the settlers are from New England and the North West. The ratio of the foreign population is small. Both north and south of us there are important settlements composed almost entirely of Germans. These, though possessed of their characteristic industry, economy, and thrift, are, I am told, in a deplorable state, morally. Without any religious influence whatever, at least so far as the nominally Protestant portion is concerned-live like heathen-profanity and intemperance abound, and the Sabbath is almost entirely disregarded.

"Now, had a missionary of their own nation settled among them at an early day, or even had they been within the reach and influence of a missionary who did not understand their language, I can not doubt the state of things would be very different. As soon as I can get some German tracts and books, I design to visit among them and endeavor to do them some good. "It seems to me of great importance that religious and moral influences be brought to bear upon our new settlements in their very origin. Not allowing the settlers first to grow indifferent to religion, and the highest interests of society, and then after years of semi-heathenism, endeavor to bring them under Christian and elevating influences.

"Owing no doubt mainly to the material of which our population is composed, I think this community will not compare unfavorably so far as morals and intelligence are concerned, with many of the more favored portions of the older States.

"No intoxicating liquors are sold or habitually used in the community. In the freest intercourse with the people I have not seen an intoxicated man, nor have I heard an oath or any profane language except in one or two instances, within the past year. The Sabbath is at least outwardly respected, and we have but few families or individuals who are not accustomed to attend worship."

"There are very few people of color in this territory. In this town there is one very interesting family, who have redeemed themselves from bondage; some of their children are unusually bright. I will give a little incident in this connection. Judge-Lecompte lately held court in this place. Gen. S. C. Pomroy, who is their Sabbath-school teacher, was talking with the Judge, when one of these boys passed by. Gen. Pomrov called the lad to him, and remarked to Lecompte that he would give five hundred dollars for that boy. Lecompte with surprise said: 'Why, General, what would you do with him?' Pomroy replied: 'He is the brightest boy I ever knew, and I would send him to college.' Lecompte seemed to think that was a most absurd use to which to put a

"Since I wrote last, I have attended the meeting of the Congregational Association of Ministers of Eastern Kansas. It was held at Topeka. There were eight ministers present. Several members residing within our bounds did not meet with us on this occasion. The discussions were conducted in a spirited but fraternal manner. The recent action of the American Tract Society was earnestly condemned. Our people in Kansas have no sympathy with its connivance with oppression."

"I am compelled to say, as I have in other annual reports, that the people generally in this Territory, are careless with regard to the obligations of the Christian Sabbath. Many who profess to be Christians are loose on this subject. It is nothing uncommon even in Osawattomie, on the Lord's day, when worshipping God, to be annoyed by the report of guns in different directions. The majority of our settlers came to Kansas with the fixed determination to speculate and get rich; consequently their wordliness and lack of care for sacred things."

"There is considerable intemperance in the Territory. Nearly every little town has a grog-shop, around which hang many dissipated characters. There have been some efforts made to put down their miserable traffic, but there has been but little effected. Those who were once the friends of temperance show but little interest on the subject. They are so absorbed in money matters, that they fail to give that attention to reform that they should. An awakening in the temperance cause the past winter, and it was needed. The result was over two hundred signed the pledge, several of whom had fallen into bad habits,"

IOWA.

From a missionary at large:

"In reference to what I have done as a missionary, it should also be said that most of it has been done in a field so new that not very much of immediate probable result can be expected. The home is much like the foreign missionary field in this respect, that much must be done that is strictly preparatory. The missionary must gather a congregation, he must secure their confidence and respect, must bring them under the power of social sympathy, and unite what Christians there are to pray for the outpouring of the Spirit. Now this must take time, and it is the time that most severely tries the faith and patience of the missionary.

"The spring and summer have been attended with almost constant and violent rains, so as to make it impossible in a new country, to pursue any systematic labor that involved a necessity of travelling. But has nothing been done that is tangible and real? To this I reply, 1st, I have attended two ecclessiastical councils and two associational meetings, at which was transacted business of vital interest to the welfare of the churches. 2d. Have assisted at the formation of two churches. 3d, Have made explorations, consulted and taken steps preparatory to the formation of several others, some of which, I doubt not, will be organized at no distant day. 4th, I continue to be consulted as agent of the Association, and have been unwilling to lose an opportunity of usefulness in that direction, and have had considerable travel and correspondence on this account. 5th. I have made three journeys of over a hundred miles, to meet with our college trustees. These meetings have been very laborious, and of imperative necessity to the continued existence of the institution. 6th, I have maintained an extensive correspondence with ministers in this and other States, in reference to a supply of the destitutions in the midst of which I have labored; and this labor I know has not been without valuable results. 7th, I have assisted in three protracted meetings, and though I am not sure that conversions occurred in connection with these labors, I am sure that deep and salutary impresions were made. 8th, I have preached to destitute churches, and to clusters of Christians not yet organized, who are hungry for the bread of life, and it has been my pleasure to advise with and encourage them, with reference to receiving a minister or to maintaining spiritual life while they remain destitute. I have also assisted them in other ways, as in settling difficulties in the church, or building a meeting-house, or organizing a Sabbath-school. I might make other similar statements, but forbear.

"Since I came to the interior of the State, I have been impressed as never before with the prodigious extent and rapidity with which improvements have been going on the last few years. The settlement of this great North West has no parallel in the world's history. How civil, educational, and religious institutions are to keep pace with this tide of immigration, is, as far as this continent is concerned, the problem of the age. Its solution is in the hands of Almighty God. It is the strong consolation of those he has employed as his agents, that hitherto he has conducted the process in such a way, as to inspire them with encouragement to labor, and with the hope of victory.

Letter from G. W. Stinson:

"In February the Spirit descended upon various places around us, so that when sin did abound, soon grace was made much more to abound. In some of these places I had preached regularly during months past, and now rejoiced to see the aged and the young, the skeptic and infidel, all humbled under the mighty hand of God. We commenced a series of meetings in this place about the middle of March, trusting that the Lord would give success to the united efforts of his people, to promote his cause in the salvation of souls. In a signal manner he blessed the presentation of his truth, arning it with Divine power; and soon his Spirit was poured upon us like rain upon the mown grass: 'as showers that water the earth. It was not a time of remarkable excitement, but of deep feeling, pungent conviction, and of humble consecration to God. A very earnest spirit of prayer was manifested among Christians, of whom some indeed had fast hold upon the horns of the altar.

"Thirty, we hope, have passed from death unto life, while numbers have been reclaimed of those who had grievously backslidden from God. Some fifteen family aliase have been erected, upon which, we trust, the morning and evening incense ascends with acceptance to God. When I contrast the present state of our Society with that of eighteen months since, I am led to exclaim, 'What hath God wrought' Liquor-shops have been closed and intemperance almost entirely banished from our people. The late Sabbath descerator and the profane-go to the house of God, and sing and speak his praise. 'This is the Lord's doings, and it is marvellous in our eyes.' Prayer-meetings have been sustained during the summer with much interest, indicating that the work has, by no means, ceased. There has been an unusual interest manifested in the Sabbath-school, and a much larger attendance than formerly. The Anti-slavery sentiment of the people has been strengthened very much by the advancing tide of religious feeling."

From a colporteur: un findettette.

"One young man, aged twenty-one, embraced religion and became a candidate for the ministry. He is laboring zealously in the cause; though in the midst of opposition he firmly stands his ground. The morals of the people are generally not of the strictest kind. Sabbath-breaking and intemperance prevail to an alarming extent. About one third of the population is from foreign countries. The others are principally of Southern origin, that is, through Possey county. There is little or nothing done for the anti-slavery cause here, except what is done by the missionaries that labor for the American Missionary Association, and a few of its friends. The colored people are generally a despised people. Praying for them in public is never done in any of the churches. The poor colored people (themselves know but little of the anti-slavery cause; and are afraid the missionaries want to deprive them of their religious privileges. They are very sectarian. Deprive them of that, and most of their religion is gone. They have, however, greatly improved here during the last two years.

"During my mission here I have visited 935 families, white and colored, having with them religious conversation and prayer; have held 245 meetings; have addressed the people 144 times; and have travelled 3949 miles. I have succeeded to some extent in promoting a missionary feeling among the people."

WISCONSIN.

Letter from Sauk county:

"I have recently made a tour through Lynden, my old field of labor, and was greatly rejoiced to meet with as many as five cases of conversion to God, among those who there sat under my ministry. After I left they continued to meet for prayer and conference. The Lord blessed the word which had previously lodged in the heart. The good seed sprung up; fruit to God is the result. Three of the five converted were profane swearers, men of filthy conversation, corrupters of youth. May God now use them as vessels of sanctification, and to his own honor. 'Ah!' said one, 'we did not value your preaching until you were gone; it would be very different if you could labor among us now. If you can not come, do endeavor to send us another minister.' You are aware that I had many trials, and deep sorrows in that place, and much opposition. On my recent visit I was directed to a wheat-field. On reaching it, I found a number of men and youth at work harvesting. There was the veteran Christian of forty years standing. When the most hearty salutations had been given, all being grouped together-'There,' said the old man, pointing to one of the group, 'J. is converted to God, and H. is converted to God; and best of all, my poor skeptical, profane son is now become a servant of Jesus Christ.' It was a touching scene. Bright eyes spoke the language of glowing hearts. The hearty grasp of the hand seemed to say, We love you for your work-sake. Faces once scowling were now radiated with heavenly joy."

ILLINOIS.

"In this county, Wataga, we were blessed with a gradual and interesting work of grace during the past winter. The blessing descended in connection with the ordinary means of grace. We had no help from abroad, and could not hold meetings daily, or every evening. We held them as often as we could, and the Lord was with us to melt and subdue many hearts. Christians of different denominations felt it was good for them to be there. Our members were much quickened. Fifteen were hopefully brought to Christ, and ten backsliders were reclaimed. Our church and congregation are strongly anti-slavery, often remembering with interest in prayer the case of the poor slaves."

"In my last communication to you I stated that I was to commence a meeting at Plano, a station on the Burlington and Quincy Railroad. I began to labor there on the 8th of April, and have continued till now: but will close the meeting next Sabbath. This work of grace is the most powerful that I have witnessed in ten years. There was no church to help me; but I found a few old professors, very much backslidden, who revived, and sinners began to cry for mercy. More than one hundred have already professed to have found the Saviour. We shall organize a church there on Wednesday of next week. Persons of all ages, from the aged down to youth, have come to Christ. One was a marked case, a man thirty-five years of age, formerly an infidel of the hardest type.

"Brother S, told me last evening that I ought to rest for a season; but how can I when there is so great a call for preaching, and sinners going to hell all around?

"I have not been at home one week since the 8th of December; but God has blessed my family. All my children have obtained a hope in Christ, and united with the church, the past winter, excepting the youngest who is in her eleventh year. So you see while I have been weeping over sinners in other places, God in mercy has saved my own children."

"Spiritualism is working great evil in this (Kane) county."

"The cause of temperance has received a new impulse for good in this place, DeKalb county. About Christmas and New-Year's, the inroads of intemperance were too plainly manifest. Many at that time gave unmistakable evidence that they had taken the first steps in the drunkard's course. Some of our young men of promise connected with our best families were not only tempted but in danger. Even boys became so intoxicated in our streets, that their fathers, in some cases, were obliged to carry them home in their arms. Some of our professional men were seen under the influence of strong drink. These facts occasioned a good deal of anxiety and pain in the circles of the temperate and the religious. Finally, some ten weeks ago, a general meeting of the friends of sobriety was called in one of our churches. Several persons spoke, and deep feeling was manifest. We have had a general temperance meeting about every Monday evening since. We have had but a few lectures on the subject, but short speeches from many, and discussions on resolutions. The old pledge of total abstinence was adopted. More than 600 persons gave their names to this principle. Vast numbers who were before in danger have been won over to this principle. Our drinking-saloons were all stopped but two. Billiard-tables were sold and carried off. The young are no longer seen in a state of intoxication. The alarming progress which intemperance had made, became the chief instrument of our success. At no time for years past, could we have done so much as we did this winter, for at no other time were the people so fearfully alarmed as to the fate of their husbands, brothers, and sons. We are grateful to God for our success thus far,"

"The field here (Du Page county) is, in many respects, trying. The commanding influence at this point is Universalism, which destroys, in a very great measure, every sense of moral obligation. Of the children and youth we have much to hope, and we shall not despair of many of the apparently hardened."

INDIANA.

"On Monday, the second day of November, 1857, I was walking, in company with a friend, on the highway through the little village of Oakland, in Cynthiana county, when a man came suddenly from the side of the way, with his arm raised and fist clenched, and in words of anger called me by name, and stopped me. At his first words, which seemed to be the signal, a number of his friends came rushing upon the ground, and surrounded me in mobocratic fashion. In their midst I remained for about twenty minutes, receiving a volley of abusive words from the leader. His endeavors seemed to be to get me to recant something I had said in a sermon upon the 'higher law.' He had published in the Walchman and Evangelist, a Cumberland Presbyterian paper, in its editorial department, 'that the doctrine of a higher law is worse than a humbug.' I remained calm and firm, defending the truth to the last. And the Lord be praised for the deliverance which he gave me, and that restraining power which he exercised over the hands of the wicked, so that I left them without being harmed. I walked about one mile from this scene of fury, and found the people assembled in waiting for mewhereupon I preached to them from these words: 'Do not err, my beloved brethren.'

"Pray for us that we may be kept steadfast in the truth, and that we may have the presence of our Lord and Master."

"There is no church in this county that is organized on anti-slavery principles, except it be a small German church in Stewartsville, which has the following rule:

We have long since been convinced that the buying and selling of men and women, and slavery, are a great evil and ought to be abhorred by every Christian. Be it therefore known to all our fedow-members that none shall be allowed, under any pretense or condition whatever, to hold slaves or traffic in them.'

"I have organized a Sabbath-school which we call 'Hope Well,' some four miles from New Harmony, which is doing well. This place was, and is yet, the seat of 'Owen infidelity,' which has spread itself through the surrounding country. Notwithstanding it has lost its former power, it is still an enemy to the Gospel. I have had regular appointments at Knowles' school-house. The Lord is blessing the effort. His Spirit is working upon the hearts of the people. Several heads of families have come over to the Lord's side. The morals of the people generally are bad. Spirituous liquors are manufactured upon an extensive scale. Education is much neglected.

"There are no efforts of an anti-slavery character made in the churches, much less in the State. Democracy of the Lecompton type is dominant. Still there is a strong party opposed to this kind of democracy. The people of color are regarded as but little better than a beast. A person who has filled important offices, and is a ruling elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian church said: 'They (the colored people) are mere baboons, and I hate them as much as I do the devil. If there is any thing in the world I hate more it is an abolitionist.' While this is the feeling of a large class, there are quite a number of high-minded persons who would scorn to utter such language.

"I am traversing the whole county, proclaiming Christ crucified for all sin, slavery included. My regular appointments are mostly where there is no other preaching. I have to preach very much in the open air. Posey county needs churches. Will not Eastern Christians give money to build meeting-houses to be dedicated to God and Freedom? It would pay more than a hundred fold. Pray that the great Head of the Church may smile upon this part of the earth, and that it may be made as the garden of

"At the close of a discourse, showing the equality of man in the light of creation and redemption, a man arose and addressed me, in the name of the Church, stating that I need leave no more appointments there, as I could not have the use of their house. My reply was: 'My Master has said, "The time will come when they shall turn you out of the synagogue," and so it has.' The church edifice belongs to a congregation of Cumberland Presbyterians. That Church (the C. P.) is known all over the land as being pro-slavery; it having, by its highest delegated authority-its General Assemblydeclared that slavery shall be no bar to communion; so it is nothing strange that the door of one of their church houses should be shut against an anti-slavery preacher."

"Pro-slavery men here, as well as elsewhere, are very fond of using opprobrious names. Failing in their efforts to find fault with my preaching, and being unable to refute my arguments against slavery, intemperance, and other popular sins, they resort to abuse and slander. Many people that will admit slavery to be wrong, and that it ought to be removed, feel grievously insulted if called abolitionists. From early life they have been accustomed to attribute to abolitionists a love of disunion, civil war, amalgamation, and hypocrisy, with many other evils too numerous to be mentioned. Wicked and designing men have used this means to stir up the prejudices of the ignorant against the truth. Professors of religion also do this wicked thing. This form of opposition I have had to contend with ever since I came to this field. But of late it appears to have lost much of its power.

"Many individuals, and several whole families, have lately attended on my preaching, that in times past would not listen to any thing I would say, being prevented by their deep-rooted prejudices. I claim the right to express my views freely, fully, and openly, on any and every subject that has any bearing on the welfare of the human family in this world or that which is to come. I also urge my hearers to search the Scriptures daily, that they may know the truth and believe it—not because I say it is so, but be-cause the God of truth, who can not lie, affirms it. Then their faith will be in God and not in man. And the obedience that is prompted by faith and love will conduce to their own happiness, while they zealously labor to promote the happiness of others."

Letter from another missionary in Indiana:

"The people here are generally worldly-minded, but the Lord is teaching them a lesson, if they would only heed it! The late floods have done great damage to agriculture. There is also a disease prevailing among the swine, which is daily killing them by hundreds, but in all this the people do not see the hand of God, but go on in defiance of his law. On last Sabbath, while I was engaged in organizing a Sabbath-school, there were a number of hands in a neighboring field engaged in harvesting wheat, and on my way to my several appointments I found that violating the Sabbath in this way was no uncommon thing; some were hard at work in reaping and others hauling in the

"On the previous Sabbath a Mr. - harvested his wheat, although it had not fully matured, and this individual and his wife are both members 'in good standing' in the regular Baptist church, (known as whisky-Baptist,) and all this wickedness has been performed in the year of our Lord 1858.

"My meetings are largely attended, but there is needed much patience and perseverance, and withal the grace of God, in order to accomplish good here. We ask the prayers of Christians."

MICHIGAN.

"The cause of temperance is moving on with more success in this county (Berrien) than ever. Recently, one of the men most active in enforcing the law, had his leather-store set on fire as a matter of revenge. Fortunately the fire was discovered before much damage was done. This has reacted with terrible power upon the whisky-party. Since that time one of the most prominent sellers has begged to have the prosecution stopped, and I believe has given bonds in five thousand dollars that he will not sell. Another man has just been fined for the third offense one hundred dollars and ninety days' imprisonment. The rum-seller ran off by some means, but left his bondsman implicated for two hundred dollars. Another circumstance which had a telling effect is, that on the thirdday of July a national celebration was held here, and those who were foremost in getting it up declared they would have as much liquor as they pleased in spite of temperance men. The result was, they could not get a clergyman to officiate as chaplain. I am well convinced that temperance men were never more determined to enforce the law than now, and that the prospect of success continually brightens."

A missionary in Eaton county, Michigan, writes:

"We have laws against the sale of intoxicating drinks, and they have been pretty generally enforced in this county, especially during the last six months. We have a liquor-seller in our jail who is just now finishing out his three months' imprisoment for obstinately persisting in violating the law. Liquor is of course clandestinely brought in and drank to some extent, but it is seldom that we see a man intoxicated."

"Spiritualism is also prevalent to an alarming extent in this county."

OHIO.

A missionary from Lucas county writes:

"On the Sabbath we are annoyed by the whistle of the locomotive and the crack of the hunter's fowling-piece."

Another writes:

"We have few emigrants, except foreigners—mostly Germans, either Catholics or Lutherans of the conservative school—anti-temperance and anti-reform. The country is still new, and the lands are mostly held by speculators. Of course, emigrants from the New England States pass on to the great West."

Again:

"There has been since my last report a good degree of religious interest at each of my preaching places. We hope there have been a few conversions.

"When I commenced at Hall's Mill, two foremen in the mill attended; the one a Deist, the other a Second Advent Annihilationist. We had also one church member employed there. These, with Dutch Lutherans and Catholics employed there, made up my congregation, some twenty in all. The Deist was a Thomas Paine man, out and Very soon, however, there was a marked change in his appearance. I observed him closely, but said nothing to him personally for some time. At length I called on him and found him prepared to indorse the whole Christian system. When the boarding-house was refused us, he was absent on business. I had some business with him the next day, when he said to me: 'You met with a veto last night.' 'Yes.' 'Well,' said he, 'you may come to your appointment next Friday evening. We shall have a house up, ready for you.' He and the other mill-hands, Catholic and all, had agreed that it must be done. Soon after this, Mr. Hall came over and kindly offered us the use of a convenient building for the season, gratuitously. This has been fitted up and occupied since. The other foreman has joined the Methodist church in town, opposite the mill, where he is, I trust, well employed in their union, and other prayer meetings, and Sunday-school.

"I have said I found it difficult to gain access to the Dutch population (Lutherans and Catholics) on account of their prejudices. At this place there is a change, and they are interested hearers of the word preached. We have furnished them with the Scriptures in German, and they are reading them. A goodly number of the Dutch children are in our log-church Sabbath-school, and under favorable influences. This is, in a measure, owing to our excellent common-school system. They acquire there the English language, and we aim to have teachers of the right stamp, who will exert over these little foreigners a salutary influence. I am reappointed Acting Manager of Schools for the township. We have an interesting state of things at Debelt's Corners."

An incident from a missionary in Ohio. German soldier converted:

"We have received seven persons during the quarter on profession. One of these, a German, who was wounded in the war with Mexico, and, I believe, now draws a pension from Government, promises to be an efficient member of the church, has already established a Sabbath-school among some destitute German families in his own neighborhood, and promises to assist me in visiting and scattering tracts among these people."

Another missionary in this State says:

"In Toledo and Gondota several of the prominent retailers have been within the last week or two, in which the court has been in session, fined twenty dollars each, and imprisoned ten or more days. Others are on the docket still to be tried; in all, I understand, about seventy persons. Such are the decisions of the courts."

A missionary in Gallia county writes:

"The anti-slavery feeling has made some progress, especially in the Methodist Church, where it has gained, in spite of the efforts of their preachers to keep it in check. The old-fashioned anti-masonry, too, is somewhat reviving. Some are strenuously opposing it. The Lord multiply the numbers of such | Our collections for the American Missionary Association, within the year, are more than double the amount of any former year. Our little church has been diminished by emigrations. Some of our best members have left us. You will remember that a year or two since I organized a church, fourteen miles from here, and in a month nearly every one of them were in Iowa."

NEW YORK.

From Rev. John Lowrey, Saratoga Springs, April 25, 1858:

"My labors in this mission, for eight weeks past, have been very severe, holding meetings nearly every night, and visiting from house to house through the day, besides spending eleven hours in the church on the Sabbath, with short intervals between the services to take a little refreshment, and without leaving the church, as we reside nearly

"The Lord has abundantly poured out his Spirit upon the people. Since our extra meetings commenced, more than a hundred souls have been brought from darkness to light. I never heard young converts relate a clearer Scriptural experience, or give better evidence of genuine conversion to God. Some of them have been brought from Papal darkness to rejoice in salvation through faith in Christ. Several young persons who promise a life of usefulness, some that are heads of families, and some teachers and scholars in our Sabbath-school, are among the converted, and many who had not attended any place of worship for years before are now rejoicing in a Saviour's love. Our place of worship will conveniently seat five hundred, but was so crowded that we had to make extra seats through both aisles, and yet many could not find seats. Such a place has been much needed for years past, that the poor and neglected might be brought under the influence of Gospel truth, and, if properly managed and sustained, will prove a great and lasting blessing.

Several of the laboring members from the other churches have assisted some in our own prayer-meetings, but now the young converts are the best help we have, and they work well. The Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian ministers preached a few sermons each, when I was not able to preach.

"You will, no doubt, think by this time that this mission will now be regarded with favor, and that many will rally and sustain it, but many look upon it with jealousy, and those converted are the poor of this world. Mr. Andrews, who owns the house and provides fuel, lights, etc., at his own expense, does every thing on a large scale, and would rather pay out of his own pocket than ask any one for help; but there are a few who say there must be something done for me. Our condition is, in many respects, so peculiar, that a great deal of grace and wisdom is necessary that every thing may be done just right, that the work of God may not be hindered.'

The Scoffer Caught.

A Home Missionary in the North West, writing to one of the Secretaries, relates the following incident:

"Some time since, I went into a shoemaker's work-shop, and sat down and talked with the workmen, four in number. A man came in and used profane language. In connection with an eath, he used the expression, 'God's earth.' Turning to him, and looking him full in the face, I inquired, 'God's earth?' 'Yes, 'said he, 'God's earth?' 'Why, yes.' 'God's earth?' 'Yes, certainly it is,' said he, looking surprised that I should ask the question. Then, in a solemn manner, I said to him: 'I have to tell you that God says: "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.'' 'Ah!' he replied, 'you got that from the Bible—I don't believe the Bible. You think old Adam to have been a wise fellow—I think he was a fool.' I inquired if he believed what the Bible stated about Adam. 'Oh! yes, I believe that much.' I then observed that perhaps I could prove that Adam was the greatest philosopher that ever lived. 'You can't do that.' 'I will try. You remember it is said that the Lord God brought to Adam all the beasts of the field and fowls of the air to see what he would call them. In the Hebrew language the names signified the nature of the creatures.' 'Why, that is nothing, who could not do that?' Stooping down, I placed before him five different articles, and requested him to find a name for each. 'Certainly, I will.' He then began, 'Bogus, Pochahontas.' 'Stop, stop, you must find names—Adam had to invent all his names.' Looking confused, he then said: 'Well, stop a minute.' He bowed his head, the blood rushed to his face. There was a long pause. One of the shoemakers said: "Come D——, you are a long time.' 'Stop a minute.' Another long pause, and all the while his head bowed still lower—confusion covered him. Again it was said: 'Come D——, you are a long time.' No reply. I then said kindly: 'Come, Mr. D——' No reply. There was a deep silence, broken only by a suppressed laugh from the workmen. At length, raising himself up, evidently embarrassed, he said: 'Well, the fact is, Adam has used up all the names.' This produced a burst of laughter from the shoemakers, and poor D——felt utterly confounded. I took him by the hand, talked to him affectionately, besought him to read the Bible

"Is it a Need?"

From a home missionary in Wisconsin:

"Some time since, brother C—— received a letter from an old friend of his stating that she was connected with a sewing society, and having lately seen his name as a missionary, laboring in these parts, it occurred to her that some garments would be acceptable to his family. She desired that he would write her the ages and sexes of his children. He wrote, stating that, at present, he is engaged in teaching. He spoke of my family and listors here, and added that such articles would be very acceptable to me. This was exceedingly kind, and the result was, a box has been forwarded containing a variety of useful articles of clothing to be divided between brother C——'s family and my own. For some weeks my beloved wife had been saying that several gaments were absolutely needed. I could only look to God and speak to him. When I can look to him and say, 'Is it not a need!' and feel that it is a need, I have one ples, and I know that he can not deny it, or a limself. It is the Spirit's record, and the language of the tried but confiding Paul: 'My God shall supply all your need.' Is it a need? Then I expect shortly to see the hand of 'the Lord. I may be keep twaiting a while; but it is good to wait on the Lord, and for him too. And if he tarry, still to wait. In such cases he always gives what is worth waiting for. He supplies the need, and gives, in addition, his own peace, which passeth all understanding, to keep the heart and mind through Christ Jesus. In the present case I say: 'Bless the Lord, O my soul! and forget not all his benefits.' How the little ones are all led by the hand, and, when weak, folded in the bosom. Naturally we shrink from the place of entire dependence on the Lord, and yet it is the place of blessing. Jesus had not where to lay his head. Women of Galilee ministered unto him of their substance. Women of Bethany provided for him many a meal, and perhaps bestowed on him the very garment in which he spent whole nights in prayer, and on which the Roman soldiers subsequently cast lots. He was lowly; we

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

BY REV. STEPHEN THURSTON,

Of Searsport, Me.

THE GRAND MISSION OF THE GOSPEL.

"GLORY to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."— LUKE 2: 14.

This is the well-known song of the angels at the Saviour's birth. His advent had been anticipated with lively interest. Ancient believers looked for his coming with strong desire. In prophetic vision Abraham saw Christ's day, and was glad. He was the burden of ancient type and prophecy, symbol and song. Even in the degenerate age of his coming there were a pious few "waiting for the consolation of Israel," and "looking for redemption in Jerusalem."

Nor was heaven unmoved by the wondrous event. On the occasion of his humble birth, the angel of the Lord left his high abode and announced his advent to the shepherds of Bethlehem. "Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Mark now the nature of this song—its great elements. It contains two vital sentiments, which are its soul and substance. They are piety and humanity. "Glory to God in the highest." Here is piety, the spirit of veneration, love, and praise to God. "On earth peace, good will toward men." Here is humanity—kindness, compassion for a suffering race. Both these the Gospel promotes.

The grand mission of the Gospel, as understood and sung by angels, is to promote piety and humanity in the earth.

They are both combined in this wondrous system of grace and goodness, and the design of the Gospel is to give them the widest possible extension in this impious and cruel world.

I. The Gospel is fitted and designed to promote piety toward God.

In this respect it is in harmony with the first table of the law. This enjoins love, reverence, and worship of the Infinite One. Nor does the Gospel make void the law. It establishes it. It is promotive of that state of heart and type of character which the law requires. What is piety but veneration and love, developed in acts of submission, worship, and obedience? This is piety in feeling and piety in action. This it is the design of the Gospel to promote. It is eminently adapted to secure this result.

The Gospel works such changes in human character, as to lay the foundation of pious emotion and action, and makes such developments of the divine character as are adapted to call forth such emotion and action.

1. It works wonderful changes in human character.

It finds man alienated in heart, irreverent, disobedient, corrupt. He desires not the knowledge of God, nor of his ways. He delights not in his service. "What is the Almighty that we should serve him? and what profit should we have if we pray unto him?" Extensively the human family ignore the authority of God, and disown their obligation to revere and obey him. They prefer to be a law unto themselves, and to make their own pleasure the rule and end of life. They delight not in the character of God. They are enemies to him by wicked works. The carnal mind is enmity against God—the heart fully set to do evil—deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked.

The Gospel meets men in this state of alienation, and works a wondrous transformation. The way of pardon and reconciliation having been opened by the mediation and sacrifice of Christ, the Gospel brings its mighty agencies to bear upon them to restore them to love and loyalty. It sheds light upon their character and prospects, their duty and destiny, gives a knowledge of sin, and demands repentance and reform, a new heart and a right spirit. It urges this demand by the most weighty motives. It reveals the Spirit for the encouragement and aid of the weak and desponding, the weary and heavy laden—the Spirit by whose power the heart of stone is removed, and a heart of flesh given. The love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness." The man is now a new creature in Christ Jesus; old things are passed away, behold all things become new. He is prepared for the exercise of pious feeling and the performance of right-action.

2. The Gospel makes such exhibitions of the divine character as are adapted to call forth such feeling and action.

advised to eggi in the district of the property of

In his works the glory of God is seen; his wisdom and goodness, his power and majesty, so that the impiety of men is without excuse. But still more clearly is his glory displayed in the Gospel. Jehovah here reveals himself in forms of beauty and loveliness highly attractive to a renewed soul. He appears not only as the God of majesty and might, but of condescension and grace; not only as sovereign and judge, but as father and friend; not only as just and righteous, but as merciful and kind; not only as strict to mark iniquity, but as compassionate and forgiving; not only as the high and lofty one inhabiting eternity, but as dwelling with the humble and contrite on the earth. "God commendeth his love to us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." He has an ear open to our cry, a hand ready for our relief. His heart beats with infinite compassion for the sinning and suffering children of men. Treasures of grace and riches of glory are freely offered them in the Gospel. Divine goodness and grace are seen to culminate in the cross of Christ.

These exhibitions of the character of God are eminently fitted to call into exercise the sentiments of piety, to promote in regenerate minds reverence, love, and submission, devout worship and cheerful obedience. Nor is this mere theory. The receivers of the Gospel, those who have cordially embraced the religion it teaches, have ever been the men of devout piety. Ancient believers imbibed this spirit, and long ages ago one exclaimed: "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon the earth I desire besides thee." They delighted in the worship and ordinances of God, and longed for closer communion with heaven. "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God."

So under the new dispensation, the early disciples developed characters of fervent piety. Their rule of life was to do all to the glory of God. The first disciples left all and followed Christ. The pentecostal converts continued with one accord in pious worship—praising God, and having favor with all the people. The first preachers of the Gospel, though forbidden on their peril to propagate this new religion, nobly replied that they ought to obey God rather than men. They felt the "higher law" to be binding even when human interdicts crossed their path. They took not counsel of their fears, nor of a corrupt expediency, but pressed forward with unfaltering step in the great work given them to do. They could face scourging, imprisonment, and death; but they could not disobey their loved and loving Master. The sentiment of piety in them was so deep that his will they must obey, whatever became of them.

So, wherever the Gospel comes with power, the spirit of piety characterizes its receivers. They maintain God's ordinances, delight in his worship, and love the place where his honor dwelleth. They labor to propagate his truth, to extend his kingdom, to multiply the trophies of his grace, and promote his glory among men. They celebrate his praises on earth, and seek a preparation for the everlasting songs of heaven.

Thus the Gospel promotes piety on earth, and brings glory to God in the highest.

II. So does it promote humanity. "On earth peace, good will toward men."

The Gospel is an expression of good will to men on the part of God. It effects reconciliation between them and their Maker. It bestows the richest blessings on the most unworthy objects—renewal, pardon, adoption, all the benefits of sonship and heirship; acquittal at the judgment, a crown of life that fadeth not away. These are expressions of good will to men, such as none but a God of infinite benevolence would ever make.

So also does the Gospel promote good will among men, and toward men—toward each other. There are indeed implanted in our nature the instincts of humanity which prompt us to relieve the suffering and comfort the afflicted. But these instincts are often overborne by the lust of power, wealth, and animal gratification, so that man becomes oppressive, tyrannical, and cruel. The history of the race is a melancholy and humiliating history. It presents man as the cruel oppressor of his fellowman. In the first family the voice of a brother's blood cried unto God from the ground. Deceit and treachery and violence, breaking out in the forms of fraud and theft, robbery and murder, have drawn their dark lines across the pages of history. Nations have made a science and trade of the work of mutual slaughter. Might has been substituted for the law of right, and the weak have fallen a prey to the strong. The iron yoke of oppression has been bound upon the many for the gratification of the few, till creation has groaned and travailed in pain.

These mighty evils the Gospel is designed and fitted to remove. It breathes the spirit of peace and good will into the human heart. It not only cultivates and refines the natural instincts of humanity, but implants in the heart the principles of benevolence. It brings its cordial receivers under the controlling power of these comprehensive principles. It renders them just, kind, and compassionate, and leads them to respect each other's rights, relieve each other's wants, mitigate each other's woes, and bear each other's burdens.

The Gospel gives rise to humane institutions, designed to relieve a suffering race. Asylums, and hospitals, and retreats for the poor and friendless, where are they found? Not in China, not in India, not in Africa. Civilization and letters flourished in Greece and Rome, but not these institutions of mercy. A semi-civilization prevails in China, Japan, and India, but who has ever heard of these charitable provisions there for the unfortunate and suffering? Those institutions, designed to bless the sick, the poor, the vicious even, the suffering of every kind, rise only in the track of Christianity. They spring from those humane and benevolent principles and feelings which the Gospel fosters.

on ourth, and need a proportion to the everthing wings of beaven.

The same spirit which gives rise to these public charities, will prompt a people to abound in private charities. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Those who yield to its humanizing power, will abound in these works of beneficence, and often make "the widow's heart to sing for joy," and the orphan's tears to overflow with gratitude.

They feel also for the oppressed—those crushed under the tyrant's heel, or sweating and bleeding beneath the driver's lash. The Gospel proclaims liberty to the captive, the opening of the prison to them that are bound. It breathes good will to all, and infuses this spirit into all its cordial friends. It would break the rod of the oppressor, dissolve the fetters of bondage, and give liberty, civil and religious, to every child of Adam.

The good will it inspires is not limited in its out-goings to the relief of temporal wants and woes, and the promotion of temporal happiness. It takes a wider range and seeks a loftier height. It views man as destined to an immortal existence, and seeks to make this existence a blessing. Those brought under the power of the Gospel do therefore aim to win others to its embrace, and make them wise unto salvation. They cheerfully give, and toil to send abroad this Gospel into all the world. They are the projectors and principal supporters of those institutions designed to give the Bible, a Christian literature, and the living preacher to the inhabitants of the entire globe. They are the men who cheerfully go forth to distant and inhospitable regions, not to gather gold and laurels, but to carry the Gospel, to preach in all lands the unsearchable riches of Christ, to persuade men every where to become reconciled to God, and lay hold on eternal life.

Let the spirit which the Gospel inculcates universally prevail, let it gain such an ascendency in the hearts of all men as it has gained in the hearts of some, and wars would cease, the work of mutual slaughter would be staid, oppressive governments would be remodeled and become equitable and mild, rulers would become ministers of good to the people, slavery come to an end, the toil-worn laborer receive a just remuneration for his services, righteousness become the law of the race, and holiness and bliss overspread the world. There would be peace on earth, and good will among men. The bands of love would bind together the human family in one happy brotherhood. All would be animated by one spirit—the desire of promoting the highest good of the whole. Selfishness, that bane of earth, that mildew of virtue, that disturber of the peace and destroyer of bliss, would leave its throne in the human heart and hie to its native hell. The earth, through all its regions, would present a race of beings living in love and walking in peace. Humane, kind, and generous feelings and conduct would prevail in every family, in every village, town, country, and continent.

AUNUAL DISCOURSE.

87

Give to the Gospel an ascendency over the human family, and piety and humanity would be most happily blended, and the feelings of the race be responsive to the song of the angels.

Thus would men become fitted not only for a happy pilgrimage below, but also for the high destiny of their eternal state. They would become prepared for the society and sympathies, the songs and services of God's upper kingdom. "Dying would be but going home." As the current of succeeding generations should pass into eternity, they would gather in countless throngs around the throne of God and the Lamb, and, with a freshness and unction unknown to earth, sing, Glory to God in the highest, that on earth there was peace, and good will toward men.

REMARKS.

1. That religion in which either piety or humanity is wanting, is seriously if not radically defective.

The human mind is exceedingly liable to partial and one-sided views of truth and duty. It often becomes so occupied with one subject as to lose sight of others which are correlative; or with one of its relations, so as to overlook its other relations. Truth and system, as they lie in the mind, become disjointed, unsymmetrical, and deformed. In civil government some adopt such views of the prerogatives of magistrates as to lose sight of the rights of the people; while others so magnify the rights of the people as to overlook the just prerogatives of magistrates. In the domain of religious truth some men so exalt the sovereignty and agency of God as to annihilate the freedom and responsibility of man; others so magnify the power and responsibility of man as to shut out Jehovah from the government of his own kingdom. Some exalt works, to the disparagement of faith; others, faith, to the disparagement of works. Some vehemently urge repentance, without regard to reform, while others clamor for reform which involves no repentance. The wise adjustment and even balance of truth in the mind, is an attainment which multitudes fail to make un but have an an and and any an electrolimp control and

No where, perhaps, is the illustration of this truth more striking than in relation to the subject of our meditations. One class of minds are mainly occupied with religion viewed as a system of piety. They dwell on those views and relations of truth fitted to develop the feeling, and promote the practice of piety, and, it would seem, on these almost exclusively. Hence they appear highly devout. They are jealous for the honor of God. All the commands of the first table of the law they endeavor scrupulously to regard. They allow no other gods before Jehovah—no idols in the temple of their hearts. They reverence his name; they reverence his Sabbaths; they devoutly keep the ordinances; they love the sanctuary—the place where God's honor dwelleth, and would be pained if their seat were vacant on the Sabbath. They feed on those truths which exalt God and comfort the believer. They love the Bible, and the closet, and the family altar, and communion with heaven. They seem truly pious—very godly and devout. If religion consisted in piety merely, they would be preëminently religious—pattern Christians.

But when you look for their humanity, it is sadly defective, if not utterly wanting. They may give freely for the support of religious ordinances, but sparingly, if at all, for the relief of the suffering poor. They would be shocked at the neglect of religious devotions; but, like the priest and Levite, pass by on the other side, when a fellow-man lies bleeding and ready to die. They are great sticklers for sound doctrine, for church prerogatives and religious forms; but slow to engage in any work of practical benevolence.

It has come to pass that some presses, and pulpits even, which are highly orthodox and pious in their teachings, are the most determined opponents of some of the causes of humanity. They profess to adhere tenaciously to the Bible, boldly to defend the truth, are jealous for the honor of God, and the purity of the Church, but they look with cold suspicion upon every movement to give liberty to the captives. The bondman may clank his chains, and groan, and bleed, under the rigors of a most cruel despotism; the cry of oppressed millions may ascend mournfully on high; but they have no word of sympathy for them. They even appear as the apologists and defenders of this system of intensified depravity: they are willing to "accept it as it is," and defend it from the Bible. They have no words of encouragement for those who, amidst a storm of obloquy, would break the yoke of oppression; nor even for those who would put bounds to this system of violent wrong-who would say: "Hitherto shalt thou come, and no further, and here shall thy proud waves be staid." The grossest outrages may be practised upon freemen even; their dearest rights be stricken down; their habitations pillaged and burnt; their persons violated, and lives taken, all for the purpose of extending a most atrocious system of oppression; and yet the lovers of liberty and right be more blamed than the perpetrators of these mighty wrongs. More than this, they defend and sustain a government which not only winks at these outrages, but lends its mighty. power to sustain, extend, and perpetuate them. Men of wide intelligence, and deep seeming piety, employ their elective franchise, and the whole weight of their influence to sustain an administration which indorses laws and measures which should make the most barbarous despots blush with shamelaws and measures which are making our government a stench in the nostrils of the civilized world. Who shall wonder that humane, but unbelieving men, should say with infinite scorn: "Out upon such a piety-away with such a religion! There is no flesh in its heart; it does not feel for man."

But there is another extreme not less wide of the true mark. While on the one hand there is faith without humanity, on the other there is humanity without faith. There is a large class alive to the duties of humanity, yet utterly negligent of the duties of piety. They are sympathetic and kind to the poor, the sick, the suffering. They give time, and money, and toil, to stay the tide of misery which sweeps around them. They are the advocates and promoters of those social and civil reforms needful to human welfare. In efforts to stay the ravages of intemperance, and dry up these fountains of misery, none are more active and laborious. They remember those that are in bonds as bound with them, and cheerfully strive to break every yoke. They part from long-cherished attachments and associations, that they may give their influence to the most valued rights of humanity. Humane feelings are largely developed, prompting them to self-sacrificing efforts to advance the welfare of the race.

But they are strangely destitute of the sentiments of piety. While cheerfully laboring to bless their fellow-men, they show little respect for God. They feel the binding force of the second table of the law, but are lax in respect to the first. They have little reverence for God; no just sense of the sacredness of the Sabbath. They do not pray; do not keep the ordinances of religion; do not embrace the Saviour. They have no altar to God in their houses; no seat in the sanctuary. Some of them have no faith in the Bible; talk contemptuously of Christianity; are infidel in principle and influence. While laboring in one direction to promote the welfare of their fellow-men, in another they are undermining the foundations on which this welfare rests. There is a class of reformers who prate much of human rights, and loudly complain of their violation; who seem foremost in efforts to improve the condition of the laboring poor, to break the yoke of oppression, and give to all their heaven-born rights; whose loose views of piety, of duty to God, would set whole communities adrift upon the dark floods of infidelity. They disseminate principles which loosen the foundations of morality, and prepare the way for anarchy and ruin. Such as has often made France run blood, and Paris a charnel-house for her murdered citizens. They would rescue men from the oppressor's grasp, and from unrighteous and grievous servitude, but leave them in bondage to a tyrant more to be dreaded than all the despots of earth; one that kills beyond the tomb. They are humane, but not pious; philanthropic, but not truly religious.

What I affirm is that a religion, wanting either in piety or humanity, is radically defective. It leaves the character unsymmetrical, one-sided, deformed. It is not such as the Bible teaches. The first command is to love God; the second, to love men. True religion can not exist without both. For one to put on the appearance of devout piety toward God, whose heart toward man is stone, is arrant hypocrisy. How dwelleth the love of God in him who merely says to his suffering brethren: Be ye warmed and filled? Not less defective is a religion which consists merely in humane feelings and acts, while God and the Gospel are treated with irreverence and contempt. Yet one class seem content with piety without humanity; the other, with humanity without piety, and each look upon the other as deformed and derelict. One class denounce the other as hypocrites; while it is retorted back upon them that they are infidels. Which is the more correct, I must leave for the parties to decide.

It should never be forgotten that the religion of the Gospel never appears in its true beauty and glory, except where there is a sweet, harmonious blending of piety and humanity. They are integral, essential parts of the religion of Christ.

2. Does not this subject suggest one reason why modern missions are no more successful?

I would not intimate that they are a failure. They are far from it. A great work has been done this century; many thousands have been won to Christ, and gone home to glory; and many thousands more are on their way. The wonders which have been wrought in the isles of the Pacific, in Burmah, and some other portions of the heathen world, are grounds of encouragement and of gratitude. Let God be praised and the Church animated to higher effort.

Still, when compared with the early missions of the Apostles, modern missions have made slow progress. In the first mission of Paul and Barnabas to the Gentiles-and it lasted but a few months-they established churches in various places. As they entered city after city, converts were made almost immediately; not only from among the Jews, who were acquainted with the true God and the ancient Scriptures, but also from among the heathen. Saving results seem often to have followed the first sermon. A few weeks sufficed for the establishment of a Christian church, and the appointment of its officers from among its own members. Then the Apostles went on their way, and reënacted the same work in another city. About twenty years elapsed from the time Paul and Barnabas went out on their first mission to the heathen, till the great Apostle sealed his testimony to the Gospel by the blood of martyrdom. In this brief space, how numerous were the churches established in Syria, in various provinces of Asia Minor, in Macedonia, Greece, and Italy! How poorly does the success of modern missions in India, China, and Africa compare with this!

Then look at the missions of Eliot and the Mayhews among the Indians of North-America two centuries since. Eliot began to preach to the Indians at Nonantum, October, 1646. In two years, he said: "I could find at least twenty men and women with whom I durst freely join in church fellowship." Various Indian churches were formed in a few years, and many souls were fitted for the paradise of God.

Thomas Mayhew commenced his ministry in Martha's Vineyard the same year that Eliot entered upon his mission at Nonantum. In four years "one hundred Indians had entered into solemn covenant to serve the living God."

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

What is there in the results of missions among the Indians of this century comparable to this? Where have the first four years witnessed such results? Is it not manifest that the missions of the present century have not been marked with such signal success as those of former ages? Respecting the cause of this difference, it does not become me to speak with confidence. It is a problem worthy of the most prayerful inquiry. Various causes may have combined to produce this result; such as weakness of faith, lack of appropriate zeal, or too much reliance upon the machinery of missions,

With unfeigned diffidence, I suggest the query, whether, as another cause, the Gospel, as preached in this century, has not had incorporated into it some admixtures, which have, to a great extent, neutralized its power upon the Pagan mind? Does it not allow, and even justify, "man's inhumanity to man"? British Christians have sent the Gospel to India, but British arms preceded the Gospel. Messengers of death went in advance of the messengers of life. After the conquests made by British arms, and the oppressions inflicted by British power, was it to be expected that the natives would readily receive the Gospel at British hands? Is it reasonable to suppose that they would favorably regard the religion of a people who had inflicted such wrongs upon them? especially, when it should be understood that the religion they taught justified these conquests and oppressions?

So in China, the same Christian nation forced upon the empire an article of traffic deemed of disastrous influence, and which the authorities had attempted to exclude. It was forced upon them by British bayonets and cannon, at the expense of treasure, and blood, and moral right. Will a people thus wronged, look with favor upon the religion of their oppressors, or upon efforts which they, or any speaking their language, may put forth to introduce this religion among them?

The melancholy truth is, that the nations called Christian, have perpetrated the most atrocious wrongs upon the unevangelized nations of the earth. Think of the deeds of violence and cruelty practised upon Africa; her sons kidnapped, and transported, amidst all the horrors of the middle passage, to the rice, cotton, and cane-fields of Christian nations; there sold into hopeless bondage, to wear out a miserable life, amidst chains and whips, merely for the benefit of others. Some of these wrongs the Gospel has been made to justify. I submit whether these things have not mightily hindered the Gospel? Have they not diluted it, and emasculated its principles? Have they not awakened prejudice, and thus strengthened and exasperated the native opposition of the heart?

It can not be unknown to the inhabitants of China and India, that the nations of Christendom have extensively trafficked in the bodies and souls of men; nor that they have been the most formidable, warlike nations of the globe; nor that they have driven extensive commerce in commodities which carry blight, and sorrow, and death in their train. The Gospel has been so interpreted and taught as to throw the broad shield of protection over these mighty evils. May not this be one reason why it makes no more rapid progress among these Pagans?

Suppose a missionary from the Southern Church should urge upon some shrewd Hindoo the Gospel of Jesus Christ. After exhausting all his resources of argument and persuasion, we will suppose the Hindoo to ask: "Do not those who embrace your religion in your country reduce their brethren to slavery?" "Yes." "They make them serve without wages, do they?" "Yes, save a bare living." "They hold them as marketable property, to be sold like cattle in the shambles?" "Yes." "Do your sacred books authorize and justify this practice?" "Oh! yes, God permitted the patriarchs to hold slaves, and expressly authorized the Jews to do it; nor did our Saviour condemn the practice." "Enough, enough," says the Hindoo, "go, offer your religion to others, not to me." Can any thing be more natural than that he should turn away with disgust?

Is there not found in the character of Christian nations, and in the corruptions of the Gospel as received and taught by them, a most potent cause of the small success of modern missions? The inhumanities which have been engrafted upon the ever-blessed Gospel, and which it has been made to tolerate and defend, have so eclipsed its light and shorn it of its strength, that it makes slow progress among the heather.

This world presents a scene over which angels might weep. Sin early entered and spread disaster and ruin over its fair regions. Infinite Wisdom devised a method for its recovery to holiness and bliss. Redemption was wrought out by the incarnation and sacrifice of God's dear Son. God so loved the world that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Just before he ascended up on high, the Lord of missions commanded his disciples to go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. More than eighteen hundred years have since sped their flight, and what do we now behold? Three fourths of the human family are still ignorant of the cross and the ransom paid for their redemption. China, with its three or four hundred millions of immortal beings, still offers her prayers and burns her incense to gods her own hands have made. India, with its one hundred and fifty millions, has only here and there a luminous spot to relieve its mid-night darkness. Northern Asia presents various tribes of heathen barbarians. Africa, with its unknown millions, is sunk in deepest degradation; a prey to nations civilized, and called Christian. Over more than half of Christendom the man of sin bears away. Extensive regions, where apostles and martyrs spread a pure Gospel, have fallen under the power of the false prophet. Then where Protestant Christianity prevails, how widespread are the various forms of error and infidelity? Sin is still the rule, and holiness the exception. Only a few millions of the teeming population of earth give credible evidence of devout piety. Still, wide is the gate and broad the way to destruction, and it is thronged by the multitude; while few find the strait gate and narrow way to life.

Such is the melancholy picture. What Christian heart is not saddened with the view? But for the purpose and promise of Him who can not lie, we might well despair of the recovery of this world to its allegiance to God.

The Church has been shamefully remiss; or long ago, the Gospel had been published in all lands. She has been deficient both in the amount and quality of her labors. She has not done what she could. Then much she has done has been so mixed with evil as to render it powerless for good. Truly, brethren, we should lie in the dust, and seek a new baptism of the Holy Ghost. When all God's professing people shall come up to the standard of a full consecration, and live not unto themselves, then men, nor money, nor means, nor prayer, shall be wanting to publish the Gospel to every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation the world around.

3. We see what is the character of that religion which Christian missions should propagate among the heathen.

It should combine both piety and humanity. First of all, and most of all, it should claim the love of the heart and the homage of the life, as due to the Infinite One. His demand for this should be urged by the excellency of his character, the rightfulness of his claims, and the persuasiveness of his love. The remedial system should be unfolded in all the richness of its provisions, the fullness of its mercy, and its wonderful adaptednesseto the wants of the perishing. The riches of divine grace which culminate in the cross of Christ, should be developed, and the heart won to faith in the Redeemer-to such an affectionate reliance upon him for pardon and life as shall fill the soul with that peace which passeth knowledge-with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Such views of God should be presented as to excite reverence and love, and prompt to a life of obedience. Thus should the piety of the heathen be cultivated, and the spirit of worship and obedience permeate the soul and regulate the life. Then through all the realms of heathen darkness would be heard the song: "Glory to God in the highest,"

Not less explicitly should the doctrines and duties of humanity be inculcated. The Gospel must be shown to be a system of irreconcilable antagonism to all forms of social and civil wrong—that it is not only a system of love to men but among men. The great law of love it promulgates, must be seen to extend to all the relations of life—regulating all—controlling all. It must be shown to disallow, to frown upon all forms of oppression, war, and slavery; all grinding of the poor, robbing the laborer of his wages; all undue advantage of one another's weakness and necessities; all deceit, and fraud, and falsehood; "all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil-speaking, with all malice." The Gospel should be so preached as to lay its strong hand upon the all-grasping self-ishness of the human heart, and, by the grace of God, produce that large benevolence which prompts men to do to others whatsoever they would that others should do to them.

But when the fairest and fullest presentation of the Gospel is made, it will prove ineffectual unless attended by the special influences of the Holy Spirit. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." All, therefore, who are engaged in propagating the Gospel, should aim not only to disseminate a pure gospel, but also seek in fervent prayer the accompanying influences of the divine Spirit. The Gospel thus preached, and thus accompanied and received, would make all things new. Christianity would appear in its true excellency. Our all-conquering King would ride forth prosperously from conquering to conquer, till the whole earth would rejoice in his reign, and place upon his head the diadem of glory.

The aim of the Association whose anniversary is celebrated this evening, is to propagate a Gospel which shall inculcate both piety and humanity; a Gospel which shall not hold fellowship with some of the most revolting forms of human depravity; which shall not sanction and sanctify iniquities hoary with age; under whose protecting ægis no shelter shall be found for oppression, legalized or unlegalized; a Gospel without a "Southside view" to relieve the consciences of those who make merchandise of their brethren; a Gospel which frowns upon polygamy, and concubinage, and caste, and which teaches the universal equality of man and the brotherhood of the race. It is a sublime object. Let it be pursued with a zeal commensurate with its importance. While rejoicing in all the good accomplished by other Societies, let it be emulous to bear an honorable part in giving to the nations a pure Gospel—one which makes God supreme, his law paramount; a Gospel which shall work out the world's disenthrallment and salvation.

Then shall glad voices be heard saying: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever." The whole earth will then unite with "a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

and the same former. I have been a first the same of the second of th

THE RESERVE THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE

and the second of the second o

LIFE MEMBERS

PHILIPPIE . ARCHARAGE STREET

OF THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Abbe, Rev. Frederick R., Abington, Mass.

*Abbott, Moses, Woodville, N. H.
Abbott, Des. Zebsdish, Winchester, Mass.
Adsir, Mrs. F. B., Osawatome, Kansas.
Adsir, Rev. S. L., Osawatome, Kansas.
Adams, Alasson, Amber, N. Y.
Adams, Mrs. Channer, Calebungh, Ill.
Adams, Mrs. Channer, Calebungh, Ill.
Adams, Gyrus, Wist Medway, Mass.
Adams, Dr. Daniel, Keene, N. H.
Adams, Rev. Exrs. Gilsum, N. H.
Adams, Rev. Exrs. Gilsum, N. H.
Adams, Henry, Peoria, Ill. Adams, Dyrus, West Medway, Mass.
Adams, Dr. Danlei, Keene, N. H.
Adams, Rev. Ezrs, Glisum, N. H.
Adams, Henry, Peorla, Ill.
Adams, Dea, Henry, New Ipswich, N. H.
Adams, Dea, Milton, Wellington, O.
Adams, Peter, Franklin, Mass.
Adams, Peter, Franklin, Mass.
Adams, Risuson, Pranklin, Mass.
Adams, Rev. Thomas, Thompson, O.
Adams, Milliam, Medway, Mass.
Alken, Mrs. Lucy G. Cambridgeport, Mass.
Allen, Amos, Bethleham, Cond.
Allen, Rev. Bether H. Bouth Amberst, Mass.
Allen, Prof. George N., Oberlin, O.
Allen, Grege W., South Amberst, Mass.
Allen, Mrs. Etlizabeth B., Babgor, Me.
Allen, Rev. John, Farmington, Mc.
Allen, Rev. J. B., Gutsavan, O.
Allen, Miss Mary F., South Amberst, Mass.
Alling, Milton, Marcellan, N. Y.
Alvord, Rev. Alanston, La Claire, Iowa.
Alvord, Mrs. Frances L., Le Claire, Iowa.
Alvord, Mrs. Frances, L., Le Claire, Iowa.
Amsden, Adam, Weldan, Y.
Amsden, Mrs. Reliance A., Manchester, Iowa.
Amsden, Mrs. Sarah, South Doerfield, Mass.
Anderson, Jane, M., Baltmore, Md.
Anderson, Janes, Rev. Ebeneze B., New Britain, Conn.
Andrews, Spivester G., Simira, N. Y.
Andrus, Mrs. Flavilla, Chelsea, Vt.
Angler, Rev. L. H., Concord, Mass.
Armes, Rev. L. H., Concord, Mass.

CARRIAGE STATE OF THE SEC.

obinishing the section of the second by the second section in the second Washing for which the wife when the was the second the of the the state of the s the following the property of ARTHUR USER AND A STORY OF A STORY OF THE ST which there was and a programme to the state of the state

Consideration of the same of t deposit of the second of the formation and the second of the second of the second the second section of the second section is the second section of the second section in the second section is But the second production will be due of the posts of proposition of the particular to any of the interest of the four fields of their language

Last the base on and some any that office is represented to interest the superior the superior some more and superior superior superior superior a resident some and the second of the second 1 19 16 The part that and water to respect to the state of the said of the and the problem to the sound to require on the state adoption in the condensation and the first thrown to be office and the second entry the first weeks from The state of the s See all the magnetic stary and the food from absencedingle The first of and a company of the state of t the state of the same of the s

Form and are holders a settler, the design of a tradestriant and an area of the The property of the state of th a the field at could get an have the transfer to be a first the last the last

Harriston and the property of the transfer of the second of the state of the state and the state of the state of the state of the 12 mg 1800 183 and year to the first of the Booth and mention and a second second second second Armes, Res. Josiah L. Mason, Center, N. H. Armstrone, Mrs. Phila, Bouth Macon, Ill.

Arnold, Charles W., Arcade, N. Y.
Arnold, Rev. F. L., Rome, O.,
Arnold, Gideon, Arcade, N. Y.
Arnold, Gev. S. L., Rome, O.,
Arnold, Gideon, Arcade, N. Y.
Ashley, Rev. Samuel S. Northborough, Mass.
Atkins, Rev. L. S., Madison, O.,
Atwater, Rev. Edward E., Salmon Falls, N. H.
Austin, Alvin, Wheaton, Ill.
Austin, Alvin, Wheaton, Ill.
Austin, Romen, Angusta, Ill.
Austin, Romen, Angusta, Ill.
Austin, Rev. D. K., South Norwalk, Conn.
Avery, Rev. D. K., South Norwalk, Conn.
Avery, Rev. John T., Gleveland, O.
Avery, Rev. John T., Gleveland, O.
Avery, Rev. Joneph, East Lyme, Conn.
Ayer, Rev. Charles L., Central Village, Conn.
Ayer, Rev., Joseph, East Lyme, Conn.
Ayer, Rev., Joseph, East Lyme, Conn.
Ayer, Rev., Joseph, East Lyme, Conn.
Bacon, Mrs. Mary, Madison, N. J.
Bacon, Joseph T., Franklin, Mass.
Baoon, Rev. Leonard, D.D., New Haven, Conn.
Bacon, Mrs. Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn.
Baley, Dana, Townsend, Y.
Bailay, Rev., Kish,
Bain, Mrs. Mary, Mardon, O.
Baker, Calvin, West Nassau, N. Y.
Balch, Henry B., Meadwille, Pa.
Baldwin, Rev. Units C., North Eidgewille, O.
Baldwin, Rev. Units C., North Eidgewille, O.

Balch, Henry B., Meadwille, Pa.
Balch, Dea. Jonathas, Harwinton, Conn.
Balch, Mason, Francistown, N. H.
Baldwin, Rev. Curtis C., North Ridgeville, Q.
Baldwin, R. C., M.D., South Britain, Conn.
Balch, A. S., M.D., New-York City,
Ball, Capt. Noah, Townsend, Mass.
Ballard, Dea. Gayton, Globe Village, South Bridge,
Mass.
Ballard, Mary, Quiney, Ill.
Bancroft, Mrs. Anna M., Granville, Q.
Banka, David, Stauwich, Conn.
Barber, Rev. Anna D., East Cleveland, Q.
Barber, Mrs. Nancy I., East Cleveland, Q.
Barber, Chester H., Torringford, Conn.
Barber, Eber M.
Barber, Joseph B., Meriden, Conn.
Barber, Miss Mary E., West Meriden, Conn.
Barber, Miss Mary E., West Meriden, Conn.
Barber, One, Martin, Sherborn, Mass.
Barber, Orive, Sherborn, Mass.
Barber, Orive, Sherborn, Mass.
Barber, Orive, Sherborn, Mass.
Barber, Orive, Sherborn, Mass.
Bardwell, Monz. Gouth Hadley Falls, Mass.
Bardwell, Mrs. Cornella, Oberlin, Q.
Bardwall, Rev. John P., Oberlin, Q.

Bardwell, Rev. Horatio, Oxford, Mass.
Barker, Rev. Davis R., Mercor, Pa.
Barnard, Rev. Loluo, St. Josephs, Min. Ter.,
Barnard, Rev. Lucius R., Hamibal, N. Y.
Barnes, Barker, West Brookfield, Mass.
Barnes, Barker, West Brookfield, Mass.
Barnes, Blakesles, New-York City.
Barnes, Marcus, Keceeville, N. Y.
Barnes, Da. Sewall, Westminster, Mass.
Barrett, Elizabeth, Springfield, Yt.
Barrows, Henry M., Norton, Mass.
Barrett, Elizabeth, Springfield, Yt.
Barrows, Henry M., Norton, Mass.
Barriett, Rev. E. N., Newton, Iowa.
Bartlett, Rev. E. N., Newton, Iowa.
Bartlett, Rev. John, Avon, Conn.
Barriett, Miss. Emily, Newton, Iowa.
Bartlett, Mrs. Jane, Avon, Conn.
Bartlett, Mrs. Margarette B., Belpre, O.
Bartlett, Summer, Brookfield, Mass.
Base, Elisha, Hanover, Mass.
Base, Elisha, Hanover, Mass.
Baseett, Mrs. Kestlah, Walton, N. Y.
Basesett, Mrs. Kestlah, Walton, N. Y.
Basesett, Mrs. Kestlah, Walton, N. Y.
Basesett, Mrs. Kestlah, Walton, N. Y.
Batelahan, Arson, Columbus, Olio.
Batchan, Arson, Columbus, Olio.
Batchan, Arson, Columbus, Olio.
Batchan, Arson, Columbus, Olio.
Batchan, Mrs. Medical Mass.
Bates, Rev. Merrit, Gloveraville, N. Y.
Bates, Harrison, Woburn, Mass.
Bates, Rev. Henry, Almont, Mich.
Bates, Miss Naomi, Waltafield, Vt.
Bates, Dea, Samuel, Brookfield, Vt.
Batherlek, Elias, Perry Conter, N. Y.
Batten, Baw, L. B., Andover, O.
*Baach, Hon. Moses.
Beach, Rv. Aaron C., Wolcott, Conn.
Beach, Rev. L. B., Andover, O.
*Baach, Hon. Moses.
Beach, Mrs. Sarah G., Kingaborough, N. Y.
Beadle, H. Hobert, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Beadle, H. Maysus, Brookfield, Vt.
Batter, Miss. Sarah, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mrs. Sarah, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mrs. Sarah, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mrs. Maryer, Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatity, James, New York City.
Beatity, James, New York City.
Beaty, Mohlan, Mrs. Beath, N. Y.
Beadle, M. Harwinton, Oon.
Beecher, Mrs. Maryer, Ham

Birgs, Nathaniei, Torringford, Conn.
Biscos, Rev. Thomas C., Grafton, Mass.
Bishop, Clark Kingston, Penn.
Bishop, Nathan P., Lisbon, Conn.
Bishop, Mar. Elizaboth, Dane, Wis.
Bischiy, Howard N., Dane, Wis.
Bischiy, Mischart, March, Mass.
Biske, Harry, Winchester Centre, Conn.
Biske, Harry, Winchester Centre, Conn.
Biske, Harry, Winchester Centre, Conn.
Biskey, J., Parket, V.
Biskey, J., Parket, V.
Biskey, J., Parket, V.
Biskey, J., Parket, V.
Biskey, J., Barry, J., Barry, C.
Biskey, J., Barry, J., Barry, C.
Biskey, J., Barry, J., B Brewster, Albert, Le Roy, N. Y. Brewster, Edward, Esq., Buffalo, N. Y. Brewster, Emma Hart, Rochester, N. Y. Brewster, Frederick W., Brockport, N. Y.

Brewster, Henry A., Rochester, N. Y.
Brewster, Mrs. Parthenia, Rochester, N. Y.
Brewster, Mrs. Parthenia, Rochester, N. Y.
Brewster, H. Pomeroy, Le Rey, N. Y.
Brewster, E. Walden, Hannibal, N. Y.
Brewster, Z. Walden, Hannibal, N. Y.
Brewster, Z. Walden, Hannibal, N. Y.
Brewster, Z. Walden, Hannibal, N. Y.
Brewster, Wadsworth, Hannibal, N. Y.
Brick, R. Y. G. Winchester, Ind.
Bridge, John A., Quisey, Mass.
Bridgen, Edward, South Annherst, Mass,
Bridgen, Edward, South Annherst, Mass,
Brigham, Dea, J. W., Marlbornogh, Mass.
Brigham, Dea, J. W., Marlbornogh, Mass.
Brinkerhof, Hon, Jacob, Manafield, O.
Bristol, Rev. Richard C., Metamora, Ill.
Brockway, Mrs. Lydla, Nassan, N. Y.
Brokaw, David, Oberflo, O.
Brooks, Artemas L., Lowell, Mass.
Brooks, Chelstopher L., Huntstyllis, O.
Brooks, Artemas L., Lowell, Mass.
Brown, Charles Milanio, Sag Harbor, N. Y.
Brown, Ebenezer, Eindege, N. H.
Brown, Jannet.
Brown, John K., Stoncham, Mass.
Brown, Mrs. Mary M., Nowark, N. J.
Brown, Mrs. Mary M., Nowark, N. J.
Brown, Mrs. Mary M., Nowark, N. J.
Brown, Harry, Milford, Conn.
Bryant, Mrs. Luop Ann, Stoneham, Mass.
Bulland, Nathan, Medway, Mass.
Bulland, Nathan, Medway, Mass.
Bullen, Mrs. C. A., Industry, Me.
Burran, Ethan, Lowell, Mass.
Bullen, Mrs. C. Dantel, Milford, N. H.
Burran, Gantel, Milford, N. H.
Burran, Gantel, Milford, N. H.
Burran, Mrs. Bar, Dawley, Mr.
Burran, Harvey, Windham, V.
Burran, Burley, Mrs. Burland, Onn.
Burton, Mrs. Ethancheth D., Mendil Mission,
Burton, Mrs. Eleabeth D., Mendil Mission,
Burton, Mrs. Eleabeth D., Burton, Daniel W., Mendi Mission,
Burton, Mrs. Elizabeth D., Mendi Mission,
Burton, Nanoy.
Burton, Rev. Nathaniel J., Hartford, Conn.
Burton, Rev. Nathaniel J., Hartford, Conn.
Burton, Mrs. Nathaniel J., Hartford, Conn.
Bush, Rev. Charles P., Beloit, Wis.
Bush, Mrs. Julia Ann, Clear Creek, N. Y.
Bush, Dea. Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass.
Bushnell, Rev. George, Worcester, Mass.
Bushnell, Bev. Horace, Cincinnati, O.
Bushnell, Susan, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Bushnell, William F., Obertin, O.
Butler, Charles, Newburyport, Mass.
Buler, Gharles, Newburyport, Mass.
Butler, Eve. Jeremiah, Els., Newburyport, Mass.
Butler, Eve. Jeremiah, Els., New Burtoph, J. P.
Butterfield, William, Francistown, N. H.
Buttoph, J. P.
Cable, Rev. Jonathan, Lee, O.
Cable, Rev. Jonathan, Lee, O.
Cady, Rev. Dantel R., West Cambridge, Mass.
Cady, Mrs. Toresa, Collamer, O.

Calhoun, Rev. Henry C., Coshoczon, Q.
Camp, Denis, Durham, Conn.
Camp, Denis, Durham, Conn.
Camp, Mrs. Anna, Durham, Conn.
Camp, Col. Joseph.
Camp, Mrs. Styphia, Newington, Conn.
Camp, Mrs. Styphia, Newington, Conn.
Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Galesburgh, Ill.
Campbell, Mrs. Antonieste L., Felletty, O.
Campbell, Mrs. Antonieste L., Felletty, O.
Campbell, Mrs. Antonieste L., Felletty, O.
Campbell, Mrs. Alizabeth, Ripley, O.
Carey, Des. Frederick W., Greenville, Conn.
Cary, Otts, Foxbourgh, Mas.
Carpenter, Mrs. Bartet, M., Warrer, Mass.
Carpenter, Nelson, M.D., Warren, Mass.
Carpenter, Miss. Bartet L., Norwich Town, Conn.
Caryenter, Philo, Chicago, Ill.
Carier, Seth May, Winthrop, Me.
Carver, Isador M., Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Rev. Shubsel, Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Rev. Shubsel, Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Mrs. Anna T.
Calin, Roswell, Harwinton, Conn.
Catilin, Roswell, Harwinton, Conn.
Catilin, Roswell, Harwinton, Conn.
Chandler, William, East Woodstock, Conn.
Chandler, William, East Woodstock, Conn.
Chaptin, Dea. J. B., Olivet, Mich.
Chapla, Pitness, Vandeuverville, Mass.
Chapman, Rev. Danlet, Lyndon, Ill.
Chapman, Julius C., Harthrid, Conn.
Chaptin, Dea. J. B., Olivet, Mich.
Chapla, Pitness, Vandeuverville, Mass.
Chapman, Rev. Danlet, Lyndon, Ill.
Chapman, Theodore W, Belchertown, Mass.
Chase, Rev. Berjamin C., Sonth Attleboro, Mass.
Chase, Rev. Berlettown, Mass.
Chapman, Julius C., Harthrid, Conn.
Chapman, Sev. Danlettown, Mass.
Chase

Cleaveland, Mrs. Elizapeta H. v., 50. 200 Mass.
Cleveland, Mrs. Alson Niebit, Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Samuel M., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Miss Alison N., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Miss Alison N., Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Treadwell, Philadelphia, Pa.
Cleveland, Miss Elizabeth, Exetor, N. H.

Close, Gilbert, Stanwich, Conn.
Coan, Mrs. Jane L., Chelees, Mass.
Coan, William L., Chelses, Mass.
Coantes, Benjamin F., Davenport, Iowa.
Cobb, Ira H., Syrscuse, N. Y.
Cobb, Rev. Nehemiab, Cleveland, O.
Cobb, Rev. Stephen, Marcellus, N. Y.
Cochran, Rev. Samuel D., Aon Arbor, Mich.
Cochran, Rev. W., Baraboo, Wis.
Cochran, Mrs. Caroline A., Baraboo, Wis.
Cocho, John, Beacon Falls, Conn.
Coc. Orrin, Oberlin, O.
Coffin, George, Ludlow, V.
Coffin, George, Ludlow, V.
Coffin, George, Ludlow, V.
Coffin, George, Ludlow, V.
Coffin, Mrs. Matlida H., Ludlow, V.
Coffin, Mrs. L. P., Wethersfield, Conn.
Colton, Emily H., Galesburgh, III.
Colton, Mrs. L. P., Wethersfield, Conn.
Comings, Andrew, East Berkshire, V.
Comings, Rev. Elsam J., Globe Village, R. I.
Comings, Benjamin, Greensborough, V.
Comstock, Mrs. Rebocces, Williamstown, N. Y.
Comstock, Mrs. Abpy P., Clinton, N. Y.
Constock, Mrs. Abpy P., Clinton, N. Y.
Cook, Mrs. Abpy P., Clinton, N. Y.
Cook, Mrs. Lemschile, Lewiston Falls, Me.
Cook, Mrs. Emily H., Burlington, V.
Cook, Mrs. Emily H Cook, Mev. Philos G., Ludiowville, N. Y.
Cook, Marietta, Plymorth, Ill.
Cook, Rev. Nelson, Half-Day, Ill.
Cook, Rev. Nelson, Half-Day, Ill.
Cook, Hard A., Bouth Deerfield, Mass.
Cooley, William H., South Deerfield, Mass.
Cooper, Harris M., Oswego, N. Y.
Cooper, Obadiah A., Oswego, N. Y.
Cornwell, Rev. Isaso D., Hancock, N. Y. *Corwin, Mrs. Roxanna B. Cottrine, Rev. N. P., Plymouth, Ill. Covwin, Mrs. Roxanna B.
Cottrine, Rev. N. P., Plymouth, Ill.
Cowdrey, Moses, Hartland, Conn.
Cowdrey, Mrs. Zernah, Hartland, Conn.
Cowdrey, Mrs. Zernah, Hartland, Conn.
Cowde, Buel G., West Boylston, Mass.
Cowl, Rev. John, Alleghany City, Pa.
Cowles, Sbenezor, Homer, N. Y.
Cowles, Rev. Henry, Obertin, O.
Cowles, Mrs. Timothy, Farmington, Conn.
Cowles, Mrs. Timothy, Farmington, Conn.
Cowles, Waiter C., Buffalo, N. Y.
Coy, Benjamin, Livonia, N. Y.
Craig, Rev. Jawid, New Athena, O.
Craig, Rev. James, Hamburg, Germany.
Crane, Hiram, Elmits, N. Y.
Crawford, Bryce, Sparts, Ill.
Crittenden, Richard, Andover, Mass.
Crooke, Mrs. Sarah B., Hopkinton, Mass.
Crooky, Arederick, Milford, N. H.
Croby, Freeman, Milford, N. H.
Croby, Freeman, Milford, N. H.
Croby, Freeman, Milford, N. H.
Croby, Dres, Judah, Lowell, Mass.
Cross, Dr. E., Newburyport, Mass.
Cross, Dr. E., Newburyport, Mass.
Cross, Rev. Gorbam, Richville, N. Y.
Cross, Rev. John, Batavia, Ill.
Crossman, Rev. Edward N., Saybrook, Conn.
Crothers, Rev. Sammel, Greenfield, O.
Culver, Howard Z., Chlora, Gainesvilla, N. Y.
Cunning, Rev. Coytus, Jamestown, O.
Cunning, Rev. Colon, Gainesvilla, N. Y. Culver, Howard Z., Chicago, ill.
Cunmins, Rev. Cyrus, Jamestown, O.
Cunningham, Rev. John, Gainesville, N. Y.
Cuntis, Jonathan, South Woodstock, Conn.
Curtis, Elder Silas, Lowell, Mass.
Curis, Mrs. William, West Brockfield, Mass.
Cushman, Dea. J. Ellsworth, Willimantia, Conn.

Gutter, Mrs. Emite F. Werren, Mass.
Cutting, Mrs. Emite F. Werren, Mass.
Cutting, Ass. Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Slavel, H. Westminster, Mass.
Cutting, Slavel, H. Westminster, Mass.
Daile, Mrs. Joanna, Albany, N. Y.
Damor, Thomas, Westminster, Mass.
Damond, Rev. Elijah, Grafico, Mass.
Damo, Rev. Gideon, Oochin, O.
Bana, Mrs. Hanush C., Oberlin, O.
Bana, Mrs. Hanush C., Oberlin, O.
Banicla, Albert H., Oxford, Mass.
Danicla, George F. Coford, Mass.
Danicla, George F. Coford, Mass.
Danicla, Mrs. Lorissa, Oberlin, O.
Darling, Joshua H., Waraw, N. Y.
Barrow, Beln, Ollaco, N. Y.
Barrow, Beln Deming, Frederick, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, John, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, Sanael, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, Stanael, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, Charles S., Lyndon, Ill.
De Selleun, Iseae N., Fort Homer, O.
De Selleun, Jacob N., New Richmind, O.
De Selleun, Margaret J., Fort Homer, O.
De Selleun, Margaret J., Fort Homer, O.
De Selleun, Howard Chase, Fort Homer, O.
De Sellem, Howard Chase, Fort Homer, O.
De Sellem, A. G. Fort Homer, O.
De Sellem, Loward Chase, Fort Homer, O.
De Witt, Rev. Luke, Lee, O.
De Witt, Rev. Luke, Lee, O.
Dickey, Mrs. Rachel, Manafield, O.

*Dickey, Rev. William. De Witt, Ennice Marfetto L., Lee, O. Hickey, Mrs. Rachel, Manafeld, O. Plickey, Rev. William.
Dickey, Mrs. Rachel, Manafeld, O. Plickinson, Captain Enus, South Amberst, Mass. Dickinson, Licut. Enus, South Amberst, Mass. Dickinson, Mrs. Lols, South Amberst, Mass. Dickinson, Mrs. Ablagli, Hidson, O. Dickinson, Mrs. Ablagli, Hidson, O. Dickinson, Mrs. Ablagli, Hidson, O. Dickinson, Rev. N. S., Foxborough, Mass. Dickinson, Rev. A. B., Hadson, O. Flickson, Miss. Cyallis. Dissurer, Mrs. Serbs, W. Falriled, Iowa. Dodge, Mrs. Ann S., Harvard, Mass. Dodge, Evr. Benjamin, Benton, Ms. Dodge, Evr. John, Harvard, Mass. Donge, Evr. Benjamin, Benton, Ms. Doulitte, Ephraim H., North East, Pa. Douglass, Henry, Aurora, Ill. Douglass, Rev. J., Rulland, N. Y. Dove, John, Andover, Mass. Down, Danlel, Ashford, N. Y. Downs, Charles M., Salmon Falls, N. H. Downs, Rev. Henry, Norridgewock, Mc. Downs, Mrs. Henry S., Norridgewock, Mc. Downs, Mrs. Henry S., Norridgewock, Mc. Downs, Mrs. Henry S., Norridgewock, Mc. Downs, Rev. Edmund, Sherborn, Mass. Dowse, Nathaniel, Sherborn, Mass.

Dresser, Rev. Amos, Orwell, O. Drew, Marina, Howell, Mich. Drew, Zebulon M., Howell, Mich. Drew, Marina, Howell, Mich.
Drew, Zebulon M., Howell, Mich.
Drew, Zebulon M., Howell, Mich.
Drury, Joseph B., Gardner, Mass.
Drury, Samuel F., Olivet, Mich.
Dudley, Charles Augustus, Champlain, N. Y.,
Dudley, Hiram, Champlain, N. Y.,
Dudley, J. Hervey, Poughkeepate, N. Y.,
Dudley, J. Hervey, Poughkeepate, N. Y.,
Duncan, Charles, North Brookfield, Mass.
Duncan, Mrs. Lydd. G., North Brookfield, Mass.
Duncan, Mrs. Lydd. G., North Brookfield, Mass.
Duncan, Mrs. V., North Brookfield, Mass.
Duncan, Mrs. V., Bonthery, Mass.
Dunham, Rev. Issae, Dunbury, Mass.
Dunham, Rev. Hender, Mrs. V.
Durand, William, Dorringford, Conn.
Dutoher, Dea. L. L., St. Albans, Vt.
Dyer, Benjamin, Providence, R. E.
Dyer, Dea. Randall, Chatham, O.
Eager, Mrs. Mary, Woburn, Mass.
Eager, Dwight F., Woburn, Mass.
Eastman, Joshua C., Hampstoad, N., H.
Eaton, Miss Elizabeth, Cambridge, Mass.
Eaton, Dr. J. S., Brissol, N. H.
Eaton, Rebecca. Eaton, Dr. J. S., Bristol, N. H. S.

*Eaton, Rebecca.
Eaton, Miss Sussu, Frantingham, Mass.
Eaton, Essay, John S., New York City.
Eddy, Rev. Zachariah, Birmingham, Conn.
Edwards, Rev. Henry L., S. Abhington, Mass.
Edwards, Rev. Joseph, Greenwish Estation, O.
Edwards, Rev. Joseph, Greenwish Estation, O.
Edwards, Martin L., Hadson, O.
Egleston, Rev. Nathaniel H., Madison, O.
Egleston, Rev. Nathaniel H., Madison, O.
Egliott, Isaac, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Elliott, Mrs. Sarah H., Ann Arbor, Mich.
Elliott, Moody, Danvers, Muss.
Ellis, Francis B., Warren, Mass.
Ellis, Francis B., Warren, Mass.
Ellis, William, New Britain, Conn.
Ellison, John, Manobester, O.
Ely, Joseph H., Lowell, Mass.
Emerson, Kimball W., Francistown, N. H.
Emerson, Rev. Noah, Hollis, N. H.
Emerson, Rev. Noah, Hollis, N. H.
Emerson, Mrs. Harriet E., Harvard, Mass.
Empis Rev. Marcus W., Orieans Four Corners,
N. T.

Erskins Rev. John, North Kontricht, N. V.

Emmerson, Mrs. Harriet E., Harvard, Mass. Empla, Rev. Marcus W., Orieans Four Cern N. Y.
Erkine, Rev. John, North Kottright, N. Y.
Esten, George W., Booton, N. J.
Esten, George W., Booton, N. J.
Esten, George W., Booton, N. J.
Evans, Thomas W., Ripley, O.
Everson, Dea Ephraim, Andover, Mass.
Everson, Mrs. Rhods G., Andover, Mass.
Everson, Mrs. Rhods Brownhelm, O.
Fairchild, George T., Brownhelm, O.
Fairchild, George T., Brownhelm, O.
Fairchild, Mrs. Rmilly F., Olivet, Mich.
Farlhald, Mrs. Mnilly F., Olivet, Mich.
Farlhald, Rev. Minor W., Olivet, Mich.
Farlhald, Rev. Minor W., Olivet, Mich.
Farlhald, Rev. Julian, N., Wille, Farlhald, Rev. Linus, M., Wille, Fee, Rev. John G., Berea, R.y.
Fellows, Mrs. Emelline A., Durham, N. Y.
Fellows, Mrs. Emelline A., Durham, N. Y.
Fellows, Mass Lydis L., Vinton, Iowa.
Fleton, Charles, Franklin, Vt.
Ferris, David L., Darfen Depot, Conn.
Fessenden, Rev. J. P., South Bridgeton, Me.
Field, Rev. Geo. W., Boston, Mass.
Field, Mrs. Nanoy M., Marlborough, Mass.
Field, Henry Hudson, Fall Elver, Mass.
Fisher, Rev. Oalob E., Andover, Mass.
Fisher, Rev. Oalob E., Andover, Mass.

Fisher, Rev. George E., North Arnherst, Mass.
Fisher, Milton M., Madway, Mass.
Fisher, Milton M., Madway, Mass.
Fisher, Mose, Franchiovn, N. H.
Fisher, Wilter H., Franchiovn, N. H.
Fisher, Wilter H., Franchiovn, Mass.
Fisher, Wilter H., Franchiovn, Mass.
Fisher, Wilter H., Ashburnham, Mass.
Fisher, Milton M., Horliff, G.
Fitch, Janes M., Oberliff, G.
Fitch, Janes M., Oberliff, G.
Fitch, Mrs. Jane E., Oberliff, G.
Fitch, John A., Hopkinton, Mass.
Fitag, Newton, Quincy, Ill.
Fitstcher, Francis H., New York City,
Fietcher, Francis H., New York City,
Fietcher, Francis H., New York City,
Fietcher, Rev. James, Danvers, Mass.
Fietcher, Hon. R., Proctarville, Vt.
Fobes, Jabez, Lindenville, O.
Folson, Raw Geo. De Berrest, Springfield, Mass.
Follett, Mrs., Jane O., Groton, O.
Folts, Mrs. Louis I., Burlington, Wis.
Foots, Ext. Vestborough, Mass.
Ford, Ebridge G., North Abingdon, Mass.
Ford, Ebridge G., North Abingdon, Mass.
Ford, Christoge, Bast Cleveland, O.
Ford, Ors., East Cleveland, O.
Ford, Ors., East Cleveland, O.
Ford, Ors., East Claveland, O.
Ford, Des., James N., Abington, Mass.
Forter, Ext. Aston, Dryden, N. Y.
Foster, Rava, Charles, M., Fatter, Bast Claveland, O.
Ford, Des., James N., Abington, Mass.
Forter, Braken, Development, Mass.
Foster, Rev. Androw B., Petersham, Mass.
Foster, Brake Berths, Whons, Kansas.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, Fats. Dorothy A., East Claremont, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, Fats. Dorothy A., East Claremont, Mass.
Foster, Rev. Borth, W. & Bast Claremont, Mass.
Foster, George, Andover, Mass.
Foster, Fats. Borthy, W. Chons, Kansas.
Foster, Rev. Borthon, Control Springs, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Borthon, Whons, Kansas.
Foster, Rev. Bancroft.
Footer, Mrs. Rebecc., North Andover, Mass.
Foster, Fats. Rebecc Foster, Rev. S. H., Lisbon Center, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Susan M., Woburn, Mass.
*Foster, Tanimason.
*Fowler, Tanimason.
*Fowler, Tanimason.
*Fowler, Rev. Banoron.
*Fowler, Sohn Newton, East Wilson, N. Y.
Fowler, Mrs. Philisas, Lenox, N. Y.
Fowler, Mrs. Philisas, Lenox, N. Y.
Fowler, Kemas M., M.D., Washington, Conn.
Fowler, Dea. Sammel P., Danvers Port, Mass.
Frenklin, George, Lyme, N. H.
Freeman, Mrs. Susan B., Farma, O.
Freeman, Mrs. Susan B., Farma, O.
Freeman, Des. Silas, Champion, N. Y.
French, C. B., Granville, Ill.
French, Mrs. Sarah, Granville, Ill.
French, Mrs. Sarah, Granville, Ill.
Frisble, Amira, Browhelm, O.
*Frisble, Benjamin.
Frisble, Mira. Lois, Brownhelm, O.
Frisble, I. Tyler, Otisco, N. Y.
Frott, Rov. Lewis P., Aroada, N. Y.
Fuller, R. F., Wayland, Mass.
Gage, Dea. Alfred, Haverhill, Mass.
Gage, Rev. William, Concord, O.
Galiup, Mrs. Vieta, Strongaville, O.
Ganble, David, Emmetabura, Md.
Gant, Joseph R., Philadelphia, P.a.
Gariand, Mrs. Clarissa L., Acton, Mass.
Gariand, Fromas, Davisburgh, Mfcb.
Garner, Thomas, J., White Laka, Mich.
Garner, Thomas, J., White Laka, Mich.
Garner, Thomas, J., White Laka, Mich.
Gare, Lucy, Townsend, Mass.
Gates, Lucy, Townsend, Mass.

Gates, Dea. Warren, Augusta, N. Y.
Gates, Warren S., Scoharfe, N. Y.
Gay, William, Farmington, Conn.
Gaylord, Mrs. Artemesia, Sodus, N. Y.
Gaylord, Giles L., Torringford, Conn.
Gazzam, James B., St. Louis, Mo.
Gazzam, James B., St. Louis, Mo.
Gazzam, Joseph P., M.D., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Gear, Rev. Heman, Wayne, O.
Gemmel, Rev. Geo., Byron, Ill.
Ghormly, William L., Greenfield, O.
Girdwood, Rev. John, New Bedford, Mass.
Gilson, Miss Tryphena, Hopkinton, Mass.
Gilson, Rev. I. R., Frankfort, O.
Gilbert, Thomas, North Brookfield, Mass.
Gilmer, Rev. Daniel, Decatur, O.

*Glesson, Abijah. Gilbert, Thomas, North Brookleid, Mass.
Gilmer, Rev. Daniel, Decatur, O.
Gilesson, Abijah.
Goddard, Benjamin, 2d, Worcester, Mass.
Goddard, Dea, Nathaniel, Milbury, Mass.
Godderd, Dea, Nathaniel, Milbury, Mass.
Goffe, Henry K., Knoz Corners, N. Y.
Goffe, Bennere Waters.
Gooch, Dea. William, Exeter, N. H.
Goodale, Dea, David, Maribro', Mass.
Goodell, Calvin E., Woburn, Mass.
Goodell, Calvin E., Woburn, Mass.
Goodell, Orras Milbury, Mass.
Goodell, Mrs. Borothea, South Amberst, Mass.
Goodell, Orras Milbury, Mass.
Goodell, Wris, Mrs. Harvier, Mass.
Goodell, Mrs. Darothea, South Amberst, Mass.
Goodell, William S., Harwington, Com.
Goodman, Mrs. Harvier, Mrs.
Goodman, Mrs. Amells F., Cincinnail, O.
Goodman, Mrs. Harriet West Hartford, Conn.
Goodman, Trudence H., West Hartford, Conn.
Goodd, As T., Windham, V. Goold, Hiram C., Morris, Ill.
Goold, John, Windham, Yt.
Gordon, Rev. Joseph, Mercer, Pa.
Gordon, Mrs. Sarah A. R., Mercer, Pa.
Gorton, Dudley, L., Davenport, Iowa.
Goss, Rev. S. S., Meridian, N. Y.
Gould, Mary, South Deerfield, Mass.
Gowans, Mrs. Mary S., Buffulo, N. Y. Grant, Charles, Burlington, Vt. Grant, Mrs. Charles, Burlington, Vt. Grant, Rev. Joel, Lockport, Ill. Grave, Wm. Morton, South Hadley, Mass. Grave, Wm. Morton, South Hadley, Mass. Gray, James B., Wilton, N. H. Greene, Rev. John M., Hatfield, Mass. Greene, Mrs. Louisa D., Hatfield, Mass. Greene, Rev. John M., Hatleid, Mass. Greene, Nev. Louisa D., Hatleid, Mass. Greene, Mrs. Louisa D., Hatleid, Mass. Greene, Mrs. Louisa D., Hatleid, Mass. Greenewood, Den. Holland, Grafton, Mass. Greenwood, Den. Holland, Grafton, Mass. Greenwood, Den. Holland, Grafton, Mass. Gridley, Addison, South Hatley, Mass. Gridley, Addison, South Hatley, Mass. Gridley, Addison, South Hatley, Mass. Gridley, Rolling, Graftin, Oharles E., Rosweille, III. Griffin, Mrs. Chios F., Rosweille, III. Griffin, Mrs. Chios F., Rosweille, III. Griffin, H. H., Rosweille, III. Griffin, H. H., Rosweille, III. Griffin, Henry Martin, Rosweille, III. Griffin, Henry Martin, Rosweille, III. Griffin, Edwin H., Nassau, N. F. Griggs, Harvey D., Brimfield, Mass. Griggs, Rev. Leveret, Bristol, Comm. Griggs, Samuel, Lavanns, N. Y. Grimes, Andrew L., Mausfield, O. Grinnell, Rev. Josiah B., Grinnell, Gwa. Grovenor, Rev. L., Pomfret, Conn. Gulliver, Geo. R., Providence, III. Gulliver, John T., North Brookheld, Mass. Gulliver, Rev. John P., Norwich, Conn. Hadlock, Levi J., Bangor, Me. Hager, Benjamin S., Boxboro, Mass. Hae, Harry, Chelsea, Y. Hale, Rev. John G., Grass Valley, Cal. Hale, Mrs. Lucinda, Ohelsea, V. Hale, Simeon, Weathersfield, Conn.

Hall, Rev. Heman B., Jamaica Mission. Hall, Mrs. Sophronia B., Jamaica Mission. Hall, J. B.

Hall, Dea. Moses, West Brootfield, Mass.
Hall, Dea. Moses, West Brootfield, Mass.
Hall, Myron S., West Brootfield, N. Y.
Hall, Roxana, Gaston, Iowa.
Hall, Berben, Ashtabula, O.
Hall, Mrs. Stephen, Ashtabula, O.
Hall, Mrs. Stephen, Ashtabula, O.
Hall, Mrs. Stephen, Ashtabula, O.
Hally, Champela, N. Y.
Hamilton, Miss Cynshia M., Champlain, N. Y.
Hamilton, Miss Matidae, Champlain, N. Y.
Hamilton, Miss Matidae, Champlain, N. Y.
Hamilton, Miss Matidae, Champlain, N. Y.
Hamilton, Mrs. Fanny, Union City, Mich.
Hannord, Mrs. Fanny, Union City, Mich.
Hannord, Mrs. Ennice, Walton, N. Y.
Hanks, Rev. S. W., Lowell, Mass.
Hanna, Mrs. Mary, Mercer, Pa.

"Hanna, Mosr. Mary, Mercer, Pa. Hanna, Mrs. Mary, Mercer, Fa.

*Hanna, Moert, Gorge, Globe Village, Mass.
Hardwick, Benjamin C., Quincy, Mass.
Hardwick, Charles, Jr., Quincy, Mass.
Hardwick, Franklin, Quincy, Mass.
Hardwick, Dea. Thomas, Quincy, Mass.
Hardy, Nathan, Brewer, Me. Hardy, Nathan, Brewer, Me.
Hardy, Newman B., Georgetown, Mass.
Hardy, William G., Boston, Mass.
Harlow, Nathaniel, Bangor, Me.
Harmon, Mrs. Adal., Rupert, Ve.
Harmon, George S., Rome, Pa.
Harper, Rev. Almer, Sabula, Iowa.
Harriman, Heave, Georgetown, Mass.
Harris, Samuel, Danvers, Mass.
Hartis, Samuel, Danvers, Mass.
Hart, Abner N., Lysander, N. Y.
Hart, Miss Catharine, Guilford, Conn.
Hart, Miss Catharine, Guilford, Conn.
Hart, Miss Harriet L., Guilford, Conn.
Hart, William, Guilford, Conn.
Hart, William, Guilford, Conn.
Haskell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Harvard, Mass.
Hoskins, Romulus, Bangor, Me. Haskell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Harrard, Mass. Haskins, Romulus, Bangor, Me. Hatch, Mrs. Almira K., Union City, Mich. Hatch, Rev. Reuben, Malett Creek, O. Hathaway, Rev. G. W., Bloomfield, Mc. Havens, S. V. R., Plattaburgh, N. Y. Hawes, Almira K., Rrown's Corners, Mc. Hawes, etc., P. Bridgeton, Mc. Hawes, Chys. Brown's Corners, Mc. Hawkins, Horatic G., Springfield, Yt. Hawley, Amp. Parmirston. Com. Hawkes, Otts, Brown's Corners, Me.
Hawkins, Horatio G., Springfield, Yt.
Hawley, Amon, Farmington, Conn.
Hawley, Mra, Adeline, Baltimore, Md.
Hawley, Elias, Baltimore, Md.
Hawley, Elias, Baltimore, Md.
Hawley, Elias, Baltimore, Md.
Hawley, Henry D., Farmington, Conn.
Hawley, John, Summers, Pe.
Hawley, Seth, Moreau, N. Y.
Hayden, Joalsh, Hollis, M. H.
Hayes, Rev. Stephen H., South Weymouth, Ma.
Haylor, Daolah, Hollis, M. H.
Hayes, Meyd, Oberlin, O.
Haynes, Miss Marsha, E., Townsend, Mass,
Haypard, Mrs. Ann., Rouse's Point, N. Y.
Hayden, Joan Stevens, Acton Crunter, Mass,
Haypard, Mrs. Ann., Rouse's Point, N. Y.
Hayen, Rev. Buben S., Westminster, Conn.
Hazen, Rev. Reuben S., Westminster, Conn.
Hazen, Rev. Reuben S., Westminster, Conn.
Hazen, Rev. Reuben S., Westminster, Conn.
Hazen, Revish, Paris, N. Y.
Heald, Dea, Clement, Temple, N. H.
Healy, Edwin P., M.D., Medina, N. Y.
Healy, Oliver G., South Ablington, Mass.
Hopperley, Rev. George W., Minden, N. Y.
Hendes, Stephen, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Hender, Stephen, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Hender, Stephen, West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Herrick, Rev. S. L., Grinnell, Iowa.
Hoywood, Putnam H., Gration, Mass.
Hiklock, Marilla, Greenville, N. Y.
Hidden, Rev. E. N., Derry, N. H.
Hill, C. M., Newhrik, N. J.
Hill, Mrs. Eunice P., Kanona, N. Y.

Hill, Hamilton, Oberlin, O.
Hill, Oliver, Brunswick, Me.
Hills, Amos B., Jamalea, W. I.
Hills, Hezeklah, Pekin, N. Y.
Hills, Mrs. Olive, Pekin, N. Y.
Hills, Mrs. Laura G. B., Oberlin, O. Hills, Mrs. Laura G. B., Oberlin, O. Hills, Nathaniel, Danvers, Mass. Hine, Herman, Washington, Conn. Hinsdale, Dea Jacob, Wellington, O. Hitcheock, David, Worcester, Mass. Hitcheock, Mrs. E. W., Oberlin, O. Hitcheock, Henry Chapman, Oberlin, O. Hitcheock, Henry Chapman, Oberlin, O. Hitcheock, James Bostwick, Otisco, N. Y. Hitcheock, John C., Olesco, N. Y. Hitcheock, Dea. Leonard, Rochester, N. Y. Hitcheock, Russ. Barah M., Painesville, O. Hitcheock, Mrs. Sarah M., Painesville, O. Hitcheock, Mrs. Sarah M., Painesville, O. Hodge, Mrs. Mary E. Janesville, Vis. Hitchcock, Mrs. Savah M., Palnesville, O. Hodge, Mrs. Mary E., Janesville, Wis. Holbrook, Lewis, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Mrs. Affred, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Amos B., Westminster, Mass.
Holden, Francis P., North Abingdon, Mass.
Holden, John, Quincy, Mass.
Holden, Don, Quincy, Mass.
Hollister, Dea. Sherman P., Washington, Conn.
Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn.
Hollister, Ellish. Holden, Mrs. Sarah H., Woburn, Mass.
Holdister, Doa. Sherman P., Washington, Conn.
Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn.
Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn.
Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn.
Holman, Geo. W., Beloit, Wis.
Holman, Mrs. Delia E., Beloit, Wis.
Holman, Mrs. Delia E., Beloit, Wis.
Holman, Mrs. Belia E., Beloit, Wis.
Holman, Mrs. Eunice, Royalston, Mass.
Holman, Mrs. Eunice, Royalston, Mass.
Holman, Mrs. Sarah P., Royalston, Mass.
Holman, Seth N., Royalston, Mass.
Holman, Seth N., Royalston, Mass.
Holman, Saniel, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Daniel, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Daniel, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Rev. James, Anburn, N. H.
Holmes, John, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Mrs. Mary, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, William, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Royalston, Mrs. Mary, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Royalston, Mrs. Mary, O.
Holmes, Royalston, O.
Holmes, Royalston, Mrs. Mary, O.
Holmes, Royalston, O.
Hollislander, Mrs. Electa F., Oberlin, O.
Holtolander, Mrs. Electa F., Oberlin, O.
Holtolander, Mrs. Line, Oberlin, O.
Holtolander, Mrs. Electa F., Oberlin, O.
Holtolander, Mrs. Lane, Oberlin, O.
Holtolander, Mrs. Jane, Oberlin, O.
Holtolander, Mrs. Sane, Oberlin, O.
Holt

Hudson, Prof. Timothy B.
Hudson, Mrs. Beisey B., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Beisey B., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, Miss Francis G., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, Miss Francis G., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, Miss Francis G., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harriet L., Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Am Jennette, Overlin, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Am Jennette, Overlin, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Am Jennette, Overlin, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Joans W., Middleport, O.
Hudson, Richard Rush, Middleport, O.
Hudson, Rev. S. B., Rushville, N. Y.
Hulbert, Edward L., Deer River, N. Y.
Hulburd, Hiram, Stock holm, N. Y.
Hull, Rev. Joseph D., Per River, N. Y.
Hull, Rev. Joseph D., Parmington, Conn.
Humphrey, Rev. Loth
Humphrey, Rev. Loth
Humphrey, Rev. Loth
Hunt, Mrs. Abjeal E.
Hunt, Rev. N. S., Borrah, Conn.
Hunt, Sereno D., North Bridgewater, Mass.
Hunt, Samuel, Ava, N. Y.
Hunt, Rev. R. Harter P., Quiney, Ill.
Huntington, Den Eleazar, Lebanon, Conn.
Huntington, Theodore G., North Hudley, Mass.
Hurlbut, Mrs. Larey R., Litchfield, O.
Hurst, Thomas K., Dover, O.
Hurst, Thomas K., Dover, O.
Hurst, Thomas H., Dover, O.
Hutchias, Isaac, West Killingty, Conn.
Ide, Daniel M., Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. J. A. B., Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. J. A. B., Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. Sarah, Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. J. A. B., Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. J. A. B., Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. Sarah, Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. Sarah, Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Mrs. Sarah, Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Rev. Jacob, D.D., Jacks, Aaron, Methuen, Mass,
Jackson, Mrs. Charlotte R., Pratisburgh, N. 1

Jackson, Hon. William, Newton, Mass,
Jackson, Mrs. William, Newton, Mass,
Jackson, Harriet H., Racine, Wis.

Jacy, Harriet H., Racine, Wis.

Jay, Hon. William, Bedford, N. Y.

Jenkins, Charles W., Bangor, Me.

Jenkins, George R., Mount Pleasant, O.

Jenkins, Rev. John, Philadelphia, Penn.

Jenka, John Henry, North Brookfield, Mass

Jenone, Robett T., Laffageville, N. Y.

Jewett, Mrs. Harriette E., Boston, Mass.

Jewett, John P., Boston, Mass.

Jewett, John P., Boston, Mass.

Jewett, Mrs. S. A., Dayton, G.

Johnson, Momer, M.D., Oberlin, O.

Johnson, Mrs. Hamah, Gloverwille, III.

Johnson, Mrs. Hamah, Gloverwille, N. Y.,

Johnson, Reuben B., Jericho, III.

Johnson, Reuben B., Jericho, III.

Johnson, William H., Kishwaukee, III.

4.

Johnston, Rev. I. B., Bell Center, O. Jones, Rev. Charles, Battle Creek, Mich. Jones, Mrs. Calsina, Battle Creek, Mich. Jones, Rev. Charles, Battle Creek, Mich.
Jones, Mrs. Calsina, Battle Creek, Mich.
Jones, Mrs. Clarence, Harwinton, Oonn.
Jones, Jones, Tabor, Iowa.
Jones, Rev. J. H., Whitewater, O.
Jones, Phebe, West Randolph, Va.
Jones, Rev. Willard, Morthfield, Mass.
Jones, Rev. Warren G., Hartford, Conn.
Jones, Rev. Willard, Morthfield, Mass.
Jhe, John P., Newark, N. J.
Judon, Bartham, M. W. J.
Judon, Blaha, Kingsborough, N. Y.
Judson, Ellsha B.; Haymond, Wis.
Judson, Gurdon, Raymond, Wis.
Judson, Mrs. Luthens P., Raymond, Wis.
Judson, Mrs. Luthens P., Raymond, Wis.
Judson, Mrs. Luthens P., Raymond, Wis.
Judson, Myshams, De Ruyter, N. Y.
Judson, Slyvanus, De Ruyter, N. Y.
Judson, Sylvanus, De Ruyter, N. Y.
Karer, Stephen Newman, Egramont, Mass.
Kedzle, Rev. A. S., Union City, Mich.
Kedzle, George L., Yellow Springs, O.
Keep, Mrs. J. Poland, O.
Keep, Mrs. Lupy W. New Hartford, N. Y.
Kellogg, James B. F., Champidin, N. Y.
Kellogg, Jones Lorento, Champidin, N. Y.
Kellogg, Jones Lorento, Champidin, N. Y.
Kellogg, Jones Lorento, Champidin, N. Y.
Kellogg, Jones L. Y. Lorento, Jones R.
Kendall, George, Westminster, Mass.
Kennedy, Rev. J. R., Geneva, Ill.
Kephart, Rev. William en G., Pinined Post, N. Y. Keys, Sophia W., Burlington, Iowa. Keys, Sophia W., Burlington, Iowa. Keys, Rev. Eichard G., Painted Post, N. Y. Keyes, Benjamin F., West Boylston, Masa. Keyes, Julius, Olivet, Mich. Keyes, Rev. N. A., Princeton, Ill. Reyes, Rev. N. A., Frinceton, In.

*Keyes, Thomas.

Kidder, Rev. C., Warsaw, N. Y.

Kimball, Alphens, Fitchburgh, Mass.

Kimball, Mrs. Sarsh, Woburn, Mass.

King, Abaslom, Georgetown, O.

King, Evander, Otisco, N. Y.

King, Sereno F., Syracuss, N. Y.

King, Rev. Victor M., Cherry Fork, O.

King, Mrs. Adeline O., North Benton, O.

Kingsbury, Benjamin W., Newton Center, Mass.

Kingsbury, John L., Francistown, N. H.

Kingsbury, Samuel, North Sast, Pa.

Kingsbury, Samuel, North Sast, Pa.

Kingsley, Lucy Sevigne, North Cambridge, Vt.

Kingsley, Lucy Sevigne, North Cambridge, Vt.

Kingsley, Lucy Sevigne, North Cambridge, Vt.

Kingsley, Miss Elvira, Fletcher, Vt.

Kingsley, Lucy Sevigne, North Cambridge, Vt.

Kingsley, Miss Elvira, Fletcher, Vt.

Kingsley, Lucy Sevigne, North Cambridge, Vt.

Kingsley, Conn.

Kitchell, Rev. Harvey D., Detroit, Mich.

Knapp, Rev. Jared O., Harfield, Mass.

Knight, Henry O., Detroit, Mich.

Knight, Henry O., Detroit, Mich.

Knight, Herny O., Detroit, Mich.

Knight, Herny O., Detroit, Mich.

Knight, Mers Hohard, Se. Hadley Falls, Mass.

Knight, Mrs. Sarah B., Medway, Mass.

Knoyles, William, Knowlesville, N. Y.

Knowlton, Fomeroy, Worcestor, Mass.

Knoyles, William, Knowlesville, N. Y.

Knowlton, Fomeroy, Worcestor, Mass.

Knight, Mrs. Barah B., delway, Mass.

Landster, Miss Meroy, Wintbroy, Mo.

Langdon, Jervis, Elmirs, N. Y.

Langworthy, Rev. J. P., Cheisea, Mass.

Lanyloca, Mrs. H. O., West Brookfield, Mass.

Lanyloca, Rev. Amos E., South Britain, Conn.

Lawrence, Mrs. Hannah B., South Britain, Conn.

Lawrence, Henry, Gardner, Mass. *Keyes, Thomas. Kidder, Rev. C., Warsaw, N. Y.

Lawrence, Rev. R. F., Claremont, N. H.
Lesch, Mrs. Lydia, Ellington, N. Y.
Lescot, John A., North Danvers, Mass.
Leavitt, Rev. Harvey F., Yergennes, Vt.
Leavitt, Rev. Johna, D.D., New York.
Levitt, Rev. Johna, D.D., New York.
Lee, Sarab M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee, John R., M. D., New York.
Lee, Sarab M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee, Dohn R., M. D., Mew York.
Lee, Sarab M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee Moyne, F. Julius, M. D., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. M. R., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. M. R., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Mrs. M. R., Washington, Pa.
Le Moyne, Romaine, Washington, Ps.
Leonard, Rev. Fanchs, Knozville, Ill.
Lewis, Rev. John S., Lee, O.
Lewis, Lavinis, B., Huntington, Ind.
Lewis, Rev. John S., Lee, O.
Lewis, Lebabod, Lee, O.
Lewis, Rufus, Hartford, Conn.
Lewis, Rev. Wm. S., Lee, O.
Ligett, Archibald, Ripley, O.
Light, Joseph, Worcester, Mass.
Litthe, Rev. E. G., Ashburnham, Mass.
Little, Rev. E. G., Olive, Mich.
Loonie, Wollockt, R., Harford, Conn.
Loon, Rev. T. N., Aubara, Me.
Lord, Mrs. Sarah T., Olivet, Mich.
Love, Mrs. Matild, Milwalkie, Wis.
Lovell, David, Ocaham, Mass.
Lovell, Joseph Lovell, Joseph C., West Boylston, Mass.

*Lovely, Rev. Joseph C., Cambridgeport, Mass.
Loveloy, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cambridgeport, Mass.
Loveloy, John, Lowell, Mass.
Luce, Miss Rebeces E., Westbort, Mass.
Luce, Miss Rebeces E., Westbort, Mass.
Lumbard, Des. Washburu, Worcester, Mass.
Lumbard, Des. Washburu, Worcester, Mass.
Lumbard, Rev. William, Ripley, O.
Lyman, Mrs. Acheah C. R., Strongsville, O.
Lyman, Mrs. Acheah C. R., Strongsville, O.
Lyman, John, Torringford, Cons.
Lyman, Mrs. Catherine E., Middlefield, Conn.
Lyman, Mrs. Atherine E., Middlefield, Conn.
Macdill, Rev. David, Eckmanville, O.
Mahan, Barbars R., Linton, O.
Mahan, Dohn L., Linton, O.
Mahan, Braberth, Jowa City, Iowa.
Matthy, Stephen E., Syracuse, N. Y.
Manley, Emmons, Marion, N. Y.
Manley, Emmons, Marion, N. Y.
Mann, Jamas, West Medway, Mass.
Marshall, Rev. Edwards, Canton, Ill.
Marsh, Mrs. Luoy, Quincy, Mass.
Marshall, Dea. C. G., Salmon Falls, N. Y.
Marvin, Rev. Charles S., Harpersfield, N. Y.
Marvin, Thomas, Welton N. Y. *Lovell, Eliaa.

Mather, William Claylon, Simabury, Conn.
Matthews, Elizabeth Newark, N. J.
Mattison, Ira, Mount Vernon, O.
Maxwell, Rev. George, Mansfeld, O.
Maxwell, Mrs. Marisa, Mansfeld, O.
Maxwell, Mrs. Marisa, Mansfeld, O.
May, Hon. Seth, Winthrop, Me.
Maynard, Moees, Sonth Deerfield, Mass.
McClelland, J. S., Mount Jackson, Pa.
McClelland, J. S., Mount Jackson, Pa.
McClelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McCollom, Bey. James T., Bradford, Mass.
McClelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McCoor, Kenneth, West Alexander, Pa.
McCloy, Kenneth, West Alexander, Pa.
McGory, Kenneth, West Alexander, Pa.
McFarland, Levens, Brookfield, Mass.
McFarland, Levens, Brookfield, Mass.
McFarland, Mrs. Mary, Washington, Ps.
McGibeny, James, Mount Vernon, O.
McKenzy, James, Grafton, Mass.
McGibeny, James, Mount Vernon, O.
McKenzy, James, Grafton, Mass.
McKinstry, Rev. John A., Harwinton, Conn.
McMaster, Thomas A.
McPherson, Eld. James, Elpley, O.
Meacham, Dea. Simon, Pulsski, N. Y.
Mead, Diea, Jones, Greenwich, Conn.
Molville, Dea. Jonas, Greenwich, Conn.
Molville, Dea. Jonas M., East Jaffrey, N. H.
Mcliville, Mrs. Bettey, Jaffrey, N. H.
Mcritan, Mabert W., Harpersville, N. Y.
Merriam, Dea. Amos, Lowell, Mass.
Merriam, Joseph P., Sandusky, O.
Merriam, Mrs. Sophia M., Harpersfield, N. Y.
Merriam, Mrs. Benish, Monson, Mass.
Merrick, Rar, Bensel, Monson, Mass.
Merrick, Charles H., Monson, Mass.
Merrick, Kar, Boues, Monson, Mass.
Merrick, Mrs. Lower, O. McCritish, Mrs. Lowes, Merrick, Mrs. Lower, Merrill, Benjamin, Merrill, Benjamin, Merrick, Samuel O., Chicopee, Mass.

Merrill, Bertamin.

Merrill, J. W., Oberlin, O.

Merrill, Des. Sylvanus, Georgetown, Mass.

Merrill, Des. Sylvanus, Georgetown, Mass.

Merrill, Mrs. F. G., Williamsburg, Me.

Merrill, Mrs. F. G., Williamsburg, Me.

Merrill, Mrs. F. G., Williamsburg, Me.

Miles, Hev., David N., Great Basrington, Mass.

Miles, Des. James B., Charlestown, Mass.

Miles, Des. James B., Charlestown, Mass.

Miles, Des. James B., Charlestown, Mass.

Miles, Bev. Mile N., Lawn Rifney, Ill.

Miles, Thomass M., Marlborough, Mass.

Miles, Rev. Mile N., Labon, Ill.

Miller, Mrs. James C., Lisbon, Ill.

Miller, Mrs. Jacob G., Harwinton, Conn.

Miller, John, Bellevua, O.

Miller, John, Bellevua, O.

Miller, Lewis B., Torringtord, Conn.

Miller, John, Bellevua, O.

Miller, Lewis B., Torringtord, Conn.

Miller, Lewis B., Monthal, William R., Ripley, O.

Minott, Mrs. J. N., Westminster, Mass.

Mottell, Mass. Biller, Destringtor, Mass.

Mootte, Mrs. Sarah B., Madison, O.,

Montat, Addison, Madison, O.,

Montat, Mrs. Sarah B., Madison, O.,

More, Rev. D. M., Greenfield, O.,

Moore, Rev. D. M., Greenfield, O.,

Moore, Rev. D. M., Greenfield, O.,

Moore, Rev. William H., Newtown, Conn. *Merrill, Mrs. Anna.

Morebouse, Henry, Darlen, Oom,
Morgan, Prof. John, D.D., Oberlin, O.
Morgan, Rev. H. H., Hannibal, N. Y.
Morley, Mrs. Ann C., Williamstown, Mass.
Morrill, Benjamin W., Bangor, Me.
Morse, Ale, East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, Rev. Alfred, Maumee City, O.
Morse, Mrs. Caroline F., Union City, Mich.
Morse, Rev. Henry O., Union City, Mich.
Morse, Rev. Jason, Brimfeld, Mass.
Morse, Nathan E., East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, O., Great Falls, N. H. Morse, O. D., Great Falls, N. H.
Morse, O. D., Great Falls, N. H.
Morse, Parker, Sen., Metamora, Ill.
Morton, Martha, South Deerfield, Mass.
Morton, Orson E., South Deerfield, Mass.
Mosely, George T., Union City, Mich.
Mosely, Oct. Tribmas, Union City, Mich.
Mowry, Henry L., Greenwich, N. Y.
*Mowry, William H.
*Mowry, Mrs. Angelina G.
Mudge, Samuel W., Rome, N. Y.
Munson, Justus, Paris Hill, N. Y.
Murrdow, Catherine, Westminster, Mass. Murdock, Catherine, Westminster, Mass. Murdock, John Franklin, St. Johnsbury, Vt. Murdock, John Frankin, St. Johnsbi Muttahai, Marquesan Islands. Muzzy, Nathan, Worcester, Mass. Nash, John B., South Hadley, Mass. Neal, Thomas, Oberlin, O. Neal, Mrs. Sarah, Oberlin, O. Neal, Mrs. Sarah, Oberlin, O.
Needham, Dwight, Galesburgh, Ill.
Neills, Barnard, Ashtabula, O.
Nelison, Thomas L., Elyria, O.
Neison, Thomas L., Elyria, O.
Neitleon, George W., West Haven, Conn.
Nettleton, Mrs. Charlotte L., West Haren, Conn.
Nettleton, Jrman, Washington, Conn.
Nevin, Rev. Edward H., Walpole, Mass.
Newton, D. F., New York,
Newton, Dea. Gaylord, Durham, Conn.
Nevin, Dea. Gaylord, Durham, Conn. Newton, D. F., New-York,
Newton, Dea. Gaylord, Durham, Conn.
Newton. Miss Martha, Albany, N. Y.
Newton, Otis, Westborough, Mass.
Nichols, Olney, Belyidere, Ill.
Norris, Mrs. Eliza M., Hyannis, Mass.
North, John H., Torringford, Conn.
North, John H., Torringford, Conn.
North, John H., Torringford, Conn.
Northop, N. B., Medina, O.,
Northup, A. T., Otego, N. Y.
Nowell, Mrs., Bangor, Me.
Noyes, Hran N., Georgetown, Mass.
Noyes, Dea. Luke B., South Abington, Mass.
Obler, Mrs. Aan M., Hopkinton, Mass.
Odlin, Woodbridge, Excler, N. H.
Officer, Rev. Morris, Findley, O.
Olds, Rev. Abnér D., Jefferson, O.
Olds, Mrs. Ann H., Jefferson, O.
Olds, Mrs. Ann H., Jefferson, O.
Olmstead, Mynde, Hartford, Conn.
Oreutt, Oran, North Abington, Mass.
Orvik, Rev. W. B., Middleport, O.
Osborn, Seldon, Dover, O.
Osborn, Seldon, Dover, Orugheld, Mass.
Otls, Ephraim R., Greenville, Comn.
Otls, Mrs. Hannah, Kanona, N. T.
Olis, James & K., Kanona, N. T. Otts, Ephraim R., Greenville, Conn. Otts, Mrs. Hannab, Kanona, N. Y. Otts, James A., Kanona, N. Y. Pack, R. Y. Benjamin S. J., North Haven, Conn. Paine, Mrs. Elizabeth, Chatham Center, O. Page, Rev. Benjamin S. J., North Haven, Conn. Paine, Mrs. Charlotte M., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Horn A., M. D., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Bohn A., Jr., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Roy H. A., T., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Roy R. G. M., M. D., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Rev. Rodney, Honeoye, N. Y. Paine, Samuel C., M.D., Oxford, Mass. Painter, Samuel C., M.D., Oxford, Mass. Painter, Alexis, West Haven, Conn. Painter, Sydney, West Haven, Conn. Painter, Sarah M., West Haven, Conn. Painter, Julia M., West Haven, Conn. Painter, Julia M., West Haven, Conn. Painter, Julia M., West Haven, Conn. Painter, Thomas A., West Haven, Conn.

Painter, Mrs. Thomas A., West Haven, Conn.
Palmer, George A., Greenwich, Conn.
Palmer, Rev. Kay, D. D., Albany, N. Y.
Palmer, Rev. Kay, D. D., Albany, N. Y.
Parter, Eljiah, Lockport, N. Y.
*Parker, Mrs. Elisa B.
Parker, J. B., Mitchell, Iowa.
Parker, John, Granville, O.
Parker, L. F., Grinnell, Iowa.
Parker, Rev. Leonard S., Haverhilf, Mass.
Parker, Rev. Leonard S., Haverhilf, Mass.
Parker, Lulian, New Beltain, Conn. Parker, L. F., Grinnell, Iowa.
Parker, Rev. Leonard S., Haverhill, Mass.
Parker, Julius, New Beltain, Conn.
Parker, Loca, Reading, Mass.
Parker, Rev. Lucius H., Galesburgh, Ill.
Parker, Rev. Lucius H., Galesburgh, Ill.
Parker, Rev. Wooster, Belfast, Me.
Parmele, Mrs. Anna, Gilnton, N. Y.
Parmele, Curtis Silles, Clinton, N. Y.
Parsons, Rev. B. F., Dover, N. H.
Parsons, Rev. B. F., Dover, N. H.
Parsons, Helen, Gloversville, N. Y.
Partridge, Captain Clark, Medway, Mass.
Partridge, David, Worcester, Mass.
Partridge, John, Paxton, Mass.
Partridge, Miss. Lucy Y., Holliston, Mass.
Partridge, Miss. Lucy Y., Holliston, Mass.
Partridge, Miss. Lucy Y., Holliston, Mass.
Patchin, Mrs. Elisabeth P., Lodi, Mich.
Pattengill, Rev. John, Lodi, Mich.
Patton, Normand Smith, Chicago, Ill.
Patton, Normand Smith, Chicago, Ill. Patton, Normand Smith, Chicago, Ill.
Patton, Robert Weston, Chicago, Ill.
Patton, William Ludlow, Chicago, Ill.
Patton, Rev. William W., Chicago, Ill.
Patton, Mrs. Mary B., Chicago, Ill.
Patton, Mrs. Henry, Newton Center, Mass.
Peabody, Humphrey, Milford, N. H.
Pease, Rev. A. G., Norwich, Vt.
Pease, Rev. Giles, Boston, Mass.
Pease, Hiram, Oberlin, O.
Pease, J. Syron, Payneaville, Min. Ter.
Pease, Peter P., Oberlin, O.
Peace, Jisting G. Feat Ricognidal N. V. Peck, Abigail G., East Bloomfield, N. Y. Peck, Dea. Charles, Jewett, N. Y. Peck, Mrs. Esther M., Oberlin, O. *Peck, Everard. *Peck, Mrs. Martha Farley. Peck, Mrs. Martha Farley.
Peck, Mrs. Alice B., Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Rev. Henry E., Oberlin, O.
Peck, P. P., Sandusky City, O.
Peck, P. P., Sandusky City, O.
Peck, P. P., Sandusky City, O.
Peck, Jeward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Evelina H., Boston, Mass.
Peck, Mrs. Evelina H., Boston, Mass.
Peck, Jäsper O., West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Mary F., West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peck, Mrs. Mary F., West Bloomfield, N. Y.
Peckham, Rev. Saruh C., Leominster, Mass.
Pelros, Rev. Charles H., Kewanes, Ill.
Penfield, Rev. Samuel, Watsga, Ill.
Perkins, Mrs. Clarissa Ann, Paterson, N. J.
Perkins, Miss Eliza D., Kinderhook, N. Y.
*Perkins, Rev. George W. Perkins, Miss Eliza D., Kinderhook, N. Y.
Perkins, Rev. George W.
Perkins, Rev. George W.
Perkins, Rev. William, Cincinnati, O.
Perkins, Rev. William, Cincinnati, O.
Perkins, Mrs. William, Cincinnati, O.
Perry, Edwin A., Dauvers, Mass.
Pettingill, John A., Bunker Hill, Ill.
Pettengill, Moses, Peoria, Ill.
Pettengill, Moses, Peoria, Ill.
Pettingill, Moses, Peoria, Ill.
Pettingill, Mess. Lacy, Peoria, Ill.
Pettingill, Mrs. Lacy, Peoria, Ill.
Pettipill, Rev. Lewis, Godarville, O.
Phelps, E. S., Princeton, Ill.
Phelps, Mrs. Lacy Z., Elisworth, Me.
Phelps, Rev. Winhrop H., Monterey, Mass.
Phillips, Mrs. Charles, West Haven, Conn.
Phillips, Mrs. Charles, West Haven, Conn.
Phillips, Mrs. Charles, West Haven, Conn.
Phillips, Mrs. Harriet W., Methuen, Mass.
Phillips, Luther, Worcester, Mass. Phillips, Luther, Worcester, Mass. Phillips, Dea. Rufus B., Fitswilliam, N. H. Pickett, Rev. Aaron, Sandisfield, Mass. Pierce, Mrs. Anno B., Amboy, Ill.

Pierce, Ezekiel, Casaville, N. Y.
Pierce, George, Norwich, Conn.
Pierce, Mrs. Moses, Norwich Town, Conn.
Pierce, Rev. Willerd, N. Abington, Mass.
Pitts, Gyrus, Moline, Ill.
Pitts, Mrs. Margaret B., Moline, Ill.
Pixley, Albert, Detroit, Mich.
Pixley, Jrs. East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, Mrs. Jane, East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., East Ruronyon, Moline, Pixley, John H., East Ruronyon, Mrs.
Pixley, Lebberg M. Great Ruronyon, Mrs. Pixiey, Isaac C., Rickville, Mich.
Pixiey, Lebbeus M., Great Barrington, Mass.
Platt, Daniel G., Washington, Conn.
Plumb, Edward B., Clay, Iowa.
Plumb, Mrs. Betsey, Clay, Iowa.
Plumb, Samuel, Jefferson, O.
Plumb, Mrs. Caroline, Jefferson, O.
Plumb, Mrs. Caroline, Jefferson, O.
Plumb, Caroline, Jefferson, O.
Plumb, T., James S., Pa. Ponge, Mrs. Susan L., Pa.
Ponger, Mrs. Rusan L., Pa.
Pomeroy, Aianson, Strongsville, O.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Resiah, Strongsville, O.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Martha, Warren, Misss.
Pond, Component Commerce, Miss.
Pond, Lucy, Newars, N. J.
Pool, John, Granville, Ill.
Poor, William O., Beffast, Me.
Pope, Mrs. Orphs O., Strongsville, O.
Pope, Philamder, Strongsville, O.
Porter, Rev. Charles G., Bangor, Mc.
Porter, Mrs. Maria M., Danville, Iowa.
Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Quincy, Mars.
Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Quincy, Mars.
Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Quincy, Mars. Poage, Mrs. Susan L., Pa. Porter, Mrs. Maria M., Danville, Iown.
Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Quincy, Mass.
Porter, John, Dover, O.
Porter, Rev. Samuel, Bradford, Pa.
Porter, John, Dover, O.
Porter, Rev. Samuel, Bradford, Pa.
Porter, Samuel D., Rochaster, N. Y.
Potter, Ebenezer, Fitzwilliam, N. H.
Potter, Mrs. Susannah, Fitswilliam, N. H.
Potter, Rev. John D., Central Village, Conn.
Powell, Mrs. N. R., Middlefield, Conn.
Powell, Mrs. N. R., Middlefield, Conn.
Powerl, Miss Ohice, West Cornwall, Yt.
Pratt, Rev. Edward H., East Woodstock, Conn.
Pratt, Mrs. L. S., Grafton, Mass.
Pratt, Rev. Parsons S., Doriet, Vt.
Pratt, Rev. Parsons B., Doriet, Vt.
Pratt, Samuel A., Worcester, Mass.
Pratt, Mrs. Sarai, Quincy, Mass.
Pratt, Mrs. Sarai, Quincy, Mass.
Pratt, Mrs. William, Quincy, Mass.
Pratt, Dea. William, Quincy, Mass.
Pratt, Dea. William, Quincy, Mass.
Prenick, Samuel, Greenville, Conn.
Prenick, Mrs. Sophia B., Greenville, Conn.
Prentiss, Thomas, Waitafield, Yt.
Prison, Mrs. Catherine, Pittsburg, Pa.
Priest, Rev. Josiah A., Homer, N. Y.
Prindle, Rev. Cyrus, Looni, Mich.
Prindle, Rev. Lyman, Waitafield, Yt.
Putnam, Col. Jessel, Danvers, Mass.
Putnam, Rev. Rufus A., Pembroke, N. H.
Patnam, Rev. Rufus A., Pembroke, N. H.
Patnam, Rev. Rufus A., Pembroke, N. H.
Ramsdoll, Mrs. Elizabeth, Warren, Mass.
Rand, Issac, Keens, N. H., N. Y.
Rankin, Mrs. Amanda K.
Randall, William H., Albany, N. Y.
Rankin, Rev. A. E., Oakulls, III.
Rankin, Rev. A. E., Oakulls, II Reeves, Mrs. Cordelja Ann, Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, George Thompson, Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, James D., Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, Jiss Martha C., Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, Mary E., Newark, N. Y.
Reeves, Raymond M. P., Newark, N. Y.
Reynolds, Rev. William T., Klantone, N. Y.
Rice, Rev. Ence H., Jamesport, N. Y.
Rice, Mary A., Kingston, Pa.
Rich, Rev. Exckele.
Pichagris, Miss. Elizabeth M. Albany, N. Y.
Rich, Rev. Exckele. Rich, Rev. Escitel.
Richards, Miss Elizabeth M., Albany, N. Y.
Richards, Charles, Bristol, Conn.
Richards, Charles, Bristol, Conn.
Richards, Dea. Perrin N., Sunderland, Mass.
Richards, Ward, East Bridgewater, Mass.
Richards, Ward, East Bridgewater, Mass.
Richardson, Rev. A. M., Austinburg, O.
Richardson, Mrs. Eliza W., Austinburg, O.
Richardson, Daniel, Woburn, Mass.
Richardson, Elisha F., Franklin, Mass.
Richardson, Elisha F., Franklin, Mass.
Richardson, Mrs. Mary B., Medway, Mass.
Richardson, Mrs. Mary B., Medway, Mass.
Richardson, Mrs. Olay D., Medway, Mass.
Richardson, Mrs. Olay D., Medway, Mass.
Richardson, Mrs. Olay D., Medway, Mass.
Richardson, Das. Stephen W., Medway, Mass.
Richardson, Das. Stephen, Woburn, Mass.
Richardson, Das. Stephen, Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Dea. Stephen, Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Sally, Stoneham, Mass. Rider, Martin E. Rider, Samuel, East Bridgewater, Mass. Rider, Samuel, East Bridgewater, Mass Ritchie, Rev. Andrew, Greenfield, O. Ritter, Thomas, M.D., New York City. Ritter, Delia M., New York City. Ritter, Julia E., New York City. Ritter, Isabella G., New York City. Ritter, Marla, New York City. Ritter, Anna, New York City. Ritter, Anna, New York City. Ritter, Anna, New York City,

*Roberts, Rev. George.

Roberts, Nelson, Burtville, Conn.

Robertson, Mrs. Lemira J., Horicon, Wis.

Robbins, Rev. S. W., East Haddam, Conn.

Robinson, Calvin, Willimantic, Conn.

*Robinson, Elihu. *Robinson, Elihu.

Robinson, Kev. Reuben T., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Mrs. Clara C., Winchester, Mass.
Robinson, Samuel A., Brookline, Mass.
Robinson, William A., North East, Pa.
Rockford, Charles, Natick, Mass.
Rockwell, John, West Cornwall, Vt.
Rodgers, Dea. Claylon T., Strongswille, O.
Rodgers, Dea. Claylon T., Strongswille, O.
Rodgers, Dea. S. G., Huntsville, O.
Rogers, F. Amelia, Australia, N. V. Rogers, F. Amelia, Augusta, N. Y Rogers, Decius Rogers, Mrs. Hannah G., Strongsville, O. Rogers, William S., Southampton, Mass. Rood, Harvey L., Burrville, Conn. Rood, Harvey L., Burrville, Conn.
Root, Elias, Honey, N. Y.
Ropes, Rev. William L., Wrentham, Mass.
Ross, John, Hartford, Conn.
Rouse, Mrs. Frances Stead, Nelson, O.
Rowe, Mrs. Frances Stead, Nelson, O.
Rowe, Mrs. Phebe L., Stonebam, Mass.
Roy, Rev. J. E., Chicago, Ill.
Rudo, Rev. Robert, Knorville, Ill.
Rudofson, Mrs. L. M., West Gliboa, N. Y.
Russell, Mrs. Oatey W., Perry Centre, N. Y.
Russell, George W., Worcester, Mass.
Rust, Elijah S., Oberlin, O.
Sabin, Dea. William, G., Saxton's River, Vt.
Sabine, Wrs. William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y.
Sabine, Mrs. William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y.
Sabine, Mrs. William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y.
Sabine, Mrs. William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y.
Sabine, Miss Eva, Onondaga Valley, N. Y. *Safford John Safford, Mrs. Charlotte, Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. Charlotte, Cambridge, Vt. Safford, Mrs. Aura B., Cambridge, Vt. Safford, John, Jr., North Troy, Vt. Safford, Myron W., Cornersville, Teno, Salisbury, Dr. Stephen, Medway, Mass. Saupson, Mrs. Rachel, A., N. Brookfield, Mass. Sanderson, Rev. A., Mallet Oreek, O. Sanderson, Mrs. Elisa, Galesburgh, Ill. Sands, Rev. W. D., Waverley, Ill. Sanford, Rev. David, Medway, Mass. Sanford, Rev. W. H., Boylston, Mass. Sanford, Rev. W. H., Boylston, Mass.

Sargent, Benjamin R., Providence, III.
Savage, Elias, Danvers, Mass.
Sawin, Dea. J. D., Gardner, Mass.
Sawyer, Edmund H., East Hampton, Mass.
Sawyer, Rev. John, Garland, Me.
Sawyer, Rev. Rofas M., Winthrop, Me.
Schermerhorn, Miss Maris, Troy, N. Y.
Schlosser, Rev. George, Ottawa, III.
Scholes, Shadrach, Knightsylle, R. I.
Scofield, Adelia G., Olarison, N. Y.
Schlosser, Rev. George, Ottawa, III.
Scofield, Adelia G., Olarison, N. Y.
Scholes, Shadrach, Knightsylle, R. I.
Scofield, Rev. William C., Milford, Conn.
Scott, Martha Ann, South Salem, O.
Scott, Sterrfield, South Salem, O.
Scott, Sterrfield, South Salem, O.
Scott, Thomas G., South Salem, O.
Scottingour, Win. D., Oberlin, O.
Scottingour, Win. D., Grantville, Mass.
Scatton, Rev. Garantville, Mass.
Scatton, Rev. Laste Turk, M.
Schlerger, Osee, North East, Pom.
Swatil Stephen, Witcheson, Me. Sedgwick, Harriet L., East Troy, Wis. Selkregg, Osee, North East, Penn. Sewall, Stephen, Winthrop, Mc. Sewall, Mrs. Gen. Henry, Winthrop, Mc. Seward, Rev. E. D., Lake Mills, Wis. Seymour, Sarah H., Seneca Palls, N. Y. Shafer, Rev. Archibaid S., Gaines, N. Y. Shafer, Mrs. Klmfraf Galines, N. Y. Shafer, William R., Townsend, Vt. Shaw, Ebeneser, North Abington, Mass. Shaw, Josiah, North Abington, Mass. Shew, Josiah, North Abington, Mass. Shedon, Mss. Harriet H., Westborough, Mass. Sheldon, Rev. Luther W., Townsend, Mass. Sheldon, Rev. Luther W., Townend, Mass. Sheldon, Warren, Danver, Mass. Sheldon, Dr. William F., West Bloomfield, N. Y. Shepard, Rev. Frof. George, Bangor, Me. Shepherd, Rev. Isaac N., Marlon, O. Sheppard, Charles G., Fenn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, Mrs. Jane B., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, Mrs. Jane, Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, John S., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, John S., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, Morris F., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sherman, Asahel, Wayland, Mass. Sherman, Ira, Bridgeport, Conn. Shipherd, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cleveland, O. Shipherd, Mrs. Catharine, Oberlin, O. Shipherd, Mrs. Catharine, Oberlin, O. Shipherd, Miss Catharine E., Oberlin, O. Shipherd, Jacob R., Watertown, N. Y. Shipfferd, Miss Catharine E., Oberlin, O.
Shipherd, Jacob R., Watertown, N. Y.
Shipherd, Julia M., Oberlin, O.
Shipherd, Julia M., Oberlin, O.
Shipherd, Mary E., Oberlin, O.
Shipherd, Mry E., Oberlin, O.
Short, N. H., Bergen, N. Y.
Shumway, Loriston, Oxford, Mass.
Silvey, Darius Boyden, Milbury, Mass.
Silvey, Darius Boyden, Milbury, Mass.
Silvey, Darius Boyden, Milbury, Mass.
Silve, Darnoh, Moreau, N. Y.
Simmons, Mrs. Rev. C., N. Wrentbam, Mass.
Simmons, Mrs. Rev. C., N. Wrentbam, Mass.
Skelno, Mrs. Almira, Woburn, Mass.
Skelno, Mrs. Mary T., North Brookfield, Mass.
Skinner, Jason, Harwinton, Conn.
Slade, Hon, William, Middlebury, V. Skerry, Mrs. Mary T., North Brookneid, Mass.
Skinner, Jason, Harwinton, Conn.
Slade, Hon. William, Middlebury, Vt.
Smalley, Rev. Eam, D.D. Troy, M. Y.
Smalley, George R., Quincy, Mass.
Smart, Rev. James P., Kenia, O.
Smith, Mrs. James F., Andover, Mass.
Smith, Ann Eliza Brainerd, Sk. Albans, Vt.
Smith, Ann Eliza Brainerd, Sk. Albans, Vt.
Smith, Rev. Eliphalet Y., South Halley, Mass.
Smith, Benjamin, Unionville, O.
Smith, Rev. C. B., Gloucester, Mass.
Smith, Rev. C. B., Gloucester, Mass.
Smith, Charles T., Delavan, Wis.
Smith, Erwin S., Mason Village, N. H.
Smith, Erwin S., Mason Village, N. H.
Smith, George, Andover, Mass.
Smith, Gun, Gerrik, Peterborough, N. Y.
Smith, Miss Helen G., Andover, Mass.
Smith, Miss Helen G., Andover, Mass.
Smith, Hiram, Worcester, Mass.
Smith, Hiram, Worcester, Mass.
Smith, Hiram, Worcester, Mass.
Smith, Hiram, Worcester, Mass.

Smith, Des. James, Andover, Mass.
Smith, Jefferson, Prattsburgh, N. Y.
Smith, John, Andover, Mass.
Smith, John, Andover, Mass.
Smith, John, Andover, Mass.
Smith, Both, Joseph, Lovell, Mc.
Smith, Rev. Joseph, Lovell, Mc.
Smith, Rev. Lucius, New Philadelphis, O.
Smith, Mrs. Lucius, New Philadelphis, O.
Smith, Mrs. Lucius, New Philadelphis, O.
Smith, Mary Ann, Gloveraville, N. Y.
Smith, Mary Ann, Gloveraville, N. Y.
Smith, Mary O., Stanvisch, Conn.
Smith, Orange, Middletown, N. Y.
Smith, Samuel, Mansfield, O.
Smith, Miss Sarah, Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Mrs. Sarah, Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Mrs. Sarah, Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Mrs. Willis, New Haven, Conn.
Smith, Mrs. Willis, New Haven, Conn.
Smith, Mrs. Willis, New Haven, Conn.
Smow, Rev. Porter, H., Whately, Mass.
Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brockfield, Mass.
*Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brockfield, Mass.
*Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brockfield, Mass.
*Snow, Spencer. Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brookfield, Mass.

*Snow, Spencer.

Solander, Chengy, Brimfield, Mass.

Solander, Eliza Ann, Brimfield, Mass.

Soule, Dea. James, South Abington, Mass.

Soule, Dea. John, East Bridgewater, Mass.

Southworth, Mrs. Augusta L., Mount Vernon, N. H.

Southworth, Rev. Benjamin, Brown's Corner, Ms.

Southworth, Chester B., Mount Vernon, N. H. Southworth, Vincete B., South Vernon A. H. Southworth, Francis, Holden, Me. Sparks, Mrs. Elizabeth, South Onondaga, N. Y. Spaulding, Harriet N., Townsend, Mass. Spaulding, Leonard, M.D., Milbury, Mass. Spaulding, Rev. Samuel J., Newburyport, Mass. Spees, Francis. Spencer, David B., Ojibue Mission. Spooner, Rev. Levi. Spooner, Albert, Oakham, Mass. Spooner, Dea. Andrew, Oakham, Mass. Spooner, Benjamin T., North East, Penn. Sprague, Lee, Worcester, Mass. Spring, Luther, 2d, Worcester, Mass. Stackpole, Joseph, Chicopee, Mass. Stackpole, Joseph: Chicopee, Mass. Stacy, Mrs. Eliza, Cquocrd, Mass. Standish, Thomas F., Lisbon, Conn. Stanley, Augustus, New Britain, Conn. Stanley, Janes, New Britain, Conn. Stanley, Jones, New Britain, Conn. Stanley, Noab W., New Britain, Conn. Stantey, Noab W., New Britain, Conn. Stanton, Mrs. Sarah, West Dennis, Mass. Stanks, Amanda, Chateangay, N. Y.
Stead, Rev. Benjamin F., Astoria, N. Y.
Stearns, C. H., Fitchburg, Mass.
Stearns, Hannah L., Charlestown, Mass.
Stebbins, Mrs. D. S., West Brookfield, Mass. Steel, James, Chillicothe, O. Steel, James C., South Salem, O. Steel, Mrs. Jane, Chillicothe, O. Steel, John, Chillicothe, O. Steel, Rebecca Jane, Chillicothe, O. Steel, Thomas B., Elizabethtown, N. J. Steel, Rebecca Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Robecca Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Thomas B., Elizabethtown, N. J.
Steele, Rev. George M., Warren, Mass.
Steelle, James, Stoneham, Mass.
Steelle, James, Stoneham, Mass.
Sterling, Sylvanus, Bridgeport, Conn.
Sterry, Rev. De Witt Chinton, Lake City, Min. Ter.
Stetson, Des. Jacob, South Amherst-Mass.
Stetson, William, Marborough, Mass.
Stetson, Des. Jotham, Medford, Mass.
Stetson, William, Jr., Marlborough, Mass.
Stetson, William, Jr., Marlborough, Mass.
Stevens, Miss Philenia, Stoneham, Mass.
Stevens, Miss Philenia, Stoneham, Mass.
Stewart, Mrs. Jane, Bloomingburgh, O.
Stone, Rev. Robert, G., Ferenderor', V.
Stone, Hon, Washington, Oakham, Mass.
Stone, Rev. Harvard, Mass.
Stone, Rev. R. S., Di., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Stowell, Rev. Abijah, Thomaston, Me.

Stranahan, Mrs. Anna, Litchfield, O. Streeter, Rev. B. W., Westerville, O. Strieby, Rev. Michael E., Syracuse, N. Y. Strieby, Ellen F., Syracuse, N. Y. Strong, Dea. Abnor. Relievue, O. Strong, Butler N., Xenia, O. Strong, Daniel, Wothersfield, Coun. Strong, Mrs. Elizabeth E., Edinburgh, O. Strong, Marie, wetersteen, country, O. Strong, Mr. Elisabeth E., Edinburgh, O. Strongth, Rev. Joseph.
Sturges, Maria S., Washington, Iowa.
Sturges, Mrs. Mary M., Manshidly O.
Sturges, Rev. A. A., Micronesia.
Summer, Mrs. Mary, Oberlin, O.
Fatt, Ira, Kingsville, O.
Fatt, Ira, Kingsville, O.
Fatt, Lewis, Fitzwilliam, N. H.
Falcott, Mrs. Betsey, North East, Penn.
Falcott, Henry, West Hartford, Conn.
Falcott, Henry, West Hartford, Conn.
Fanner, Edmund P., Canfield, O.
Fapley, Col. Nathan, Danvers, Muse.
Taplan, Mrs. Sarah J., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Taylor, John, Chelses, Muss.
Taylor, Mrs. Hannab Z., Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Rev. Lathrop, Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Nathan, Pittsfield, O. Taylor, Nathan, Pittsfield, O.
Taylor, Zophar, Harvurd, Mass.
Thefir, Rev. J. Outler.
Ferrel, Mrs. Electa, Plymouth, III.
Terry, Mrs. Harriet, Terryaville, Oonn.
Terry, Rev. James P., South Weymouth, Mass.
Terry, Rev. Parshall, Thompson, O.
Thaithmer, Henry B., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Thatcher, George A., Bangor, Me.
Thomas, Rev. O. A., Middletown, Wis.
Thomas, Rev. James A., Ohio City, O.
Thomo, Rev. James A., Ohio City, O.
Thompson, Adas, Ranson Center, Mich.
Thompson, Arba U., Swaineville, N. Y.
Thompson, Arba U., Swaineville, N. Y.
Thompson, Charity, Jersey, O. Thompson, Rev. Aaron, Manchester, O. Thompson, Charity, Jersey, O. Thompson, Rev. Elias, Strengsville, O. Thompson, Mrs. Eliasbeth, Southboro', Mass. Thompson, Rev. George, Oberlin, O. Thompson, Mrs. Martha C., Oberlin, O. Thompson, Mrs. Martha C., Oberlin, O. Thompson, Rev. J. C., Washington, Pa. Thompson, Lev. J. O., Washington, Pa. Thompson, Rev. John, Augusta, N. Y. Thompson, Rev. John Wilmot, Constantia, O. Thompson, John, Augusta, N. Y.
Thompson, Rev., John Wilmot, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Rev., Leander, West Amesbury, Mass.
Thompson, Mrs. Anna A., West Amesbury, Mass.
Thompson, Mrs. Anna A., West Amesbury, Mass.
Thompson, Lewis, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Lewis, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Mrs. Nancy M., Jamaica Mission,
Thompson, Mrs. Phebe T., Middlefield, O.
Thompson, Mrs. Phebe T., Middlefield, O.
Thompson, William, Jersey, O.
Thompson, William, Jersey, O.
Thompson, William, Jersey, O.
Thorp, Cartts, Binghamton, N. Y.
Thrail, Rev. Samuel R., Tramont, Ill.
Thrasher, Mary Ann, Stafford, Com.
Thurston, Mary Ann, Stafford, Com.
Thurston, Rev. David, Stockton, Me.
Thurston, Mrs. Prudence, Brown's Corner, Me.
Thurston, Mrs. Prudence, Brown's Corner, Me.
Thurston, Mrs. Prudence, Brown's Corner, Me.
Thiston, John, Farmington, Me.
Todd, Rev. John, Gaston, Iowa.
Todd, Rev. David, Buda, Ill.
Todd, Rev. William, Polo, Ill.
Tomblen, Lucius, West Brookfield, Mass.
Tompkins, John B., Paris Hill, N. Y.
Toerey, Rev. Charles W., East Claveland, O.
Torrey, Rev. Charles W., East Claveland, O.
Torrey, Rev. Charles W., East Claveland, O.
Torrey, Ziba, Abingdon, Mass.
Townsein, Rev. Benezor G., Eibridge, N. Y.
Transk, Rev. George, Fitchburgh, Mass. Trask, Cev. George, Fitchburgh, Mass. Trask, Erv. George, Fitchburgh, Mass. Trask, Israel, Beverly, Mass. Tucker, Rev. Joshu T., Hollston, Mass. Tucker, Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass.

Tucker, Thomas H., North Brookfield, Mass.
Turner, Rev. Ass. Denmark, Iowa.
Turner, Rev. Edwin B., Morris, Ill.
Turner, Capt. Gurdon, Bridgawster, N. Y.
Turner, Rev. Josiah W., Gr. Barrington, Mass.
Tattle, Edmund M., Meriden, Conn.
Tuttle, Leveritt, Torringfold, Conn.
Tuttle, Lawritt, Torringfold, Conn.
Tuttle, Lynan, Camden, N. Y.
Tuttle, Thomas, Clinton Corners, Wis.
Tyler, Caleb G., Georgetown, Mass.
Tyler, Rev. C., Galeshurgh, Ill.
Underwood, Ber. Almon, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Rev. Almon, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, H. Beman, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Miss Ehoda, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Rufus S., Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Des. Bydney, Harwich, Mass.
Upham, Zenas H., Windham, V.
Upbon, Miss Sarah Ann, Obelin, O.
Ustick, William A., Bloomingburgh, O. Newark, N. J. Tucker, Thomas H., North Brookfield, Mass. Upson, Miss Sarah Ann, Oberlin, O.
Ustick, William A., Bloomingburgh, O.
Van Alstine, Rev. N., West Sand Lake, N. Y.
Vandike, Rev. S. A., Winchester, O.
Van Houten, Rev. Henry, Hawley, Penn.
Van Valkenburg, Mrs. Lydia, South Egrement Mass. Van Valkenburgh, Mrs. Mary E., Malden Bridge, N. Y. Saccincia, Str. Law, P., Saccincia, Str. N. Y. Van Wagner, Rev. James M., Wakeman, O. Venning, Rev. Charles B., Jamajos Mission. Viall, Mrs. Elizabeth F., Jerseyville, Ill. Voorheis, Mrs. L. W., Vassaar, Mich. Voors, Peter E., Dennysville, Me. Watte, Rev. H. H., Winded, N. Y. Wakedleld, Rev. William, Harmer, O. Wakeman, Rev. Joel, Almond, N. Y. Walsoe, Rev. James, Huntsville, O. Wakemanuel, Sen., Windham, O. Waldo, Rev. L. F., Kewanee, Ill. Walker, Hon. Amasa, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Mrs. Hannah A., No. Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Mrs. Catherine, Mansfield, O. Walker, Freeman, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Mrs. Catherine, Mansfield, O. Walker, Freeman, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Freeman, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Horace D., East Abingdon, Mass. Walker, Rev. James B., Sandusky City, O. Walker, Mrs. R. H., Sandusky City, O. Walker, Dea. Lyman, Townsond, Vt. Walker, Dea. Lyman, Townsend, Walker, Nahum, Bloomfield, Me. *Ward, Rev. Horatio G. Ward, John, Newton Center, Mass. Ward, John, Newton Center, Mass. Ward, Jonathan, Birmingham, O. Ward, Rev. Josiah J., Knowlesville, N. Y. Ward, Langdon Storer, Boston, Mass. Ward, Milo Woodruff, Geneseo, Ill. Ward, Rev. Samuel R. Warner, Charles A., Chicago, Ill., Warner, Jane M. Hadley, So. Egremont, Mass. Warner, Jane M. Hadley, So. Egremont, Mass. Warner, Julia A., Chicago, Ill. Warner, Syander S., Chicago, Ill.,
Warner, Jana M. Hadley, So. Egremont, Mass.
Warner, Julls A., Chicago, Ill.
Warner, Sheldon, Pitcher, N. Y.
Warner, Mrs. Lucy C., Pitcher, N. Y.
Warner, Rev. H. G., Jericho, Ill.
Warner, Seth, East Hampton, Mass.
Warren, Mrs. Almira, Grafton, Mass.
Warren, Mrs. Almira, Grafton, Mass.
Warren, Rev. Israel P., Plymouth Hollow, Conn.
Warren, Rev. Waters, Three Oaks, Mich.
Washburn, Dea. Ichabod, Worcester, Mass.
Waterbury, Lewis, Polo, Ill.
Waterman, Daniel, Taberg, N. Y.
Waterman, Daniel, Taberg, N. Y.
Waterman, Daniel, Taberg, N. Y.
Waters, Rev. John, Southfield, Mich.
Waters, Mrs. Waters, Galesburgh, Ill.
Waters, Lucy Burhank, Millbury, Mass.
Watson, Mrs. Elizabeth It, Woburn, Mass.
Watson, Mrs. Elizabeth It, Woburn, Mass.
Watson, Marvey, Torringford, Conn.
Watson, Millo, Harwinton, Conn.
Watson, Millo, Harwinton, Conn.
Way, Mrs. Ann Amella, Kirkwood, N. Y.

Way, Mrs. Ann Amella, Kirkwood, N. Y. Way, Rev. Palmer M., Kirkwood, N. Y. Weaver, Philip, Bangor, Me.

Webb, Walter, West Meriden, Conn.
Webb, Rev. W. D., Plainfield, Ill.
Weber, Lawrence, Springfield, N. Y.
Webster, Rev. J. C., Hopkinton, Mass.
Webster, Mrs. Susan A., North Brookfield, Mass.
Webster, William, Sennet, N. Y.
Weed, Ebbenser, Darlen, Con.
Wellington, Rev. H., St. Johnsbury, Center, Vt.
Wellington, Mrs. H. L., St. Johnsbury, Center, Vt.
Wellington, Daniel, Bloomfield, Mes. Wells, Bes. Daniel, Bloomneid, Me. *Wells, Rev. Elias. Wells, Mrs. Mary S., Mansfield, O. Wells, Samuel S., Gloversville, N. Y. Wells, Susannah, Gloversville, N. Y. Wolla, Samnal S., Gloversville, N. Y.
Welsh, Mrs. Mary, Strongaville, O.
Wels, Beve, Rawson B., Oswego, N. Y.
Welsh, Mrs. Mary, Strongaville, O.
Welsh, Rev. Rawson B., Oswego, N. Y.
Wort, Rev. David, Ligonia, Ind.
West, Bav. J. W., Georgetown, Brown Co., O.
West, Jesse, Tabor, Jowa.
Wheeler, Elanson H., Charlotta, Yt.
Wheeler, Charles, Mexico, N. Y.
Wheeler, Erie C., Milford, N. H.
Wheelock, Mrs. L. P., Cambridge, Yt.
Wheelock, Mrs. L. P., Cambridge, Yt.
Wheelock, Mrs. L. P., Cambridge, Yt.
Wheelock, Mrs. Elizabeth R., Brunswick, O.
Whipple, Rev. George, Jersey City, N. J.
Whipple, Mrs. Elizabeth R., Brunswick, O.
Whipple, Berry E., Hillsdale, Mich.
Whipple, Berv, J. N., Brunswick, O.
Whipple, Samuel L., Jacksonville, Ill.
Whitcomb, Mrs. Haryert, Mass.
Whitcomb, Mrs. Haryert, Mass.
Whitcomb, Mrs. Abby F., Harvard, Mass.
Whitcomb, Rev. W. C., Stoneham, Mass.
White, Charles S., Woburn, Mass.
White, Charles S., Woburn, Mass.
White, George H., Shelburne Falls, Mass.
White, Bev. James C., Cleveland, O.
White, Bea. John, Acton, Mass.
White, Rev. James C., Cleveland, O.
White, Bea. John, Acton, Mass.
White, Mrs. Paulina L., Strongsville, O.
White, Wallam Angustus, New Road, N. Y.
Whittle, William Angustus, New Road, N. Y.
Whittler, Whitcomb, Mrs. Bethlah, Woburn, Mass. White, Thomas A., Bangor, Me. White, William Angustus, New Road, N. Y. Whitford, Mrs. Bethiah, Woburn, Mass. Whitford, Hiram, Woburn, Mass. Whitham, Mrs. Elizabeth, West Alexander, Pa. Whitham, Rev. Joseph E., West Alexander, Ps. Whitham, Rev. Joseph E., West Alexander, Ps. Whitham, Rev. J. D., Keene, O. Whitmore, Mrs. Cynthia A., Chester Factories, Whitmore, Mrs. Cynthla A., Chester Factories, Mass.

Mass.
Walkmore, Rev. Zolva, Chester Factories, Mass.
Whiting, Danlel, N. Brookfold, Mass.
Whiting, Ablgall G., Strongaville, O.
Whitney, Frederic, Weekminster, Mass.
Whitney, Harrison G., Weetminster, Mass.
Whitney, James D., Sandusky Chy, O.
Whiton, Chestory, Westford, Conn.
Whiton, Miss Mary Elizabeth, Boston, Mass.
Whiton, Mary Elizabeth, Jr., Boston, Mass.
Whiton, Mass Morris, Jr., Boston, Mass.
Whiton, James M.
Whiton, James M.
Whiton, James M.
Whiton, James M.
Wieting, Rev. Philip, Hyndesville, N. Y.
Wieting, Rev. Philip, Hyndesville, N. Y.
Wieting, Mrs. Philip, Hyndesville, N. Y.
Wieting, Mrs. Philip, Hyndesville, N. Y.
Wieting, Mrs. Philip, Hyndesville, N. Y.
Willox, Mollssa, R. Erle, Penn.
Wilcox, Millsa, S. Erle, Penn.
Wilcox, Rev. Philo B. East Bridgewater, Mass.
Wilder, Lucinda E., Hanover, Mass.
Wilder, Lucinda E., Hanover, Mass.
Wilder, Carene, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Henry, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Henry, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Mrs. Laura, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, John F., Wetersfield, Ill.
Willoox, Rev. Wm. H., Reading, Mass,
Williams, Albert E., Buffalo, N. Y.

Williams, Austin F., Farmington, Conn.
Williams, Ellen, Fast Hartford, Conn.
Williams, Mrs. Hartford, Conn.
Williams, Mrs. Hartford, Conn.
Williams, Mrs. Hartford, Conn.
Williams, Anna Maria, Farmington, Conn.
Williams, George Autin, East Hartford, Conn.
Williams, George, Aresle, N. Y.
Williams, Rev. J. M., Farmington, Ill.
Williams, Rev. J. M., Farmington, Ill.
Williams, Rev. Wolvett, Charlotta, Mich.
Williams, Rev. Wolvett, Charlotta, Mich.
Williams, Rev. Wolvett, Charlotta, Mich.
Williams, Cowerte, West Bioomfield, N. Y.
Williams, Cowerte, West Bioomfield, N. Y.
Williams, Cowerte, West Bioomfield, N. Y.
Williams, Charlotte, E. Westher, M. H.
Wilson, Alexander, Francistown, N. H.
Wilson, Lisa A., Francistown, N. H.
Wilson, Rev. Harm, Bt. Catherines, C. W.
Wilson, Mrs. J. Adeline, West Union, O.
Wilson, Martin, Kalamazoo, Mich.
Wilson, Rev. Levit B., Windham, O.
Wilson, Martin, Kalamazoo, Mich.
Wilson, Per. Samuel, D. J., Xenia, O.
Wilson, Martin, Kalamazoo, Mich.
Wilson, James, Francistown, N. H.
Wilson, James, Francistown, N. H.
Wilson, Samuel, D. J., Xenia, O.
Wilson, Mrs. Mary B.
Wilson, John, Dover, O.
Wilson, Martin, Kalamazoo, Mich.
Wilson, Samuel, Danvera, Mass.
Wilste, Abraham, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Winchester, Melana T., Anathuburg, O.
Wilson, Rev. Horace, Great Barrington, Mass.
Winter, Leara E., Shutesbury, Mass.
Wisherby, Routa L., Grafton, Mass.
Witherby, Rufa E., Grafton, Mass.
Witter, Des. John, Lisbon, Conn.
Woloott, Joseph Hr., Farmington, O.
Witter, Des. John, Lisbon, Conn.

Wolcott, Rev. Samnel, Providence, R. I. Wolcott, Rev. Seth T., Jameice Missisn, Wolcott, Mrs. Mary J. O., Jameics Missisn, Wolcott, Mrs. Mary J. O., Jameics Missisn, Wolcott, Mrs. Mary J. O., Jameics Missisn, Wood, Rev. Abel Meriden, N. H. Wood, Ballyah, Westborough, Mass. Wood, Mrs. Hannah, Westborough, Mass. Wood, Mrs. Ann, Quincy, III. Wood, Benjamin F., Westminster, Mass. Wood, Franklin, Monticello, Min. Ter. Wood, Rev. John, Townsond, V. Wood, Franklin, Monticello, Min. Ter. Wood, Rev. John, Townsond, V. Wood, Rev. S. M., Pawila, Y. Wood, Timelhy Dwight, Westminster, Mass. Wood, William W., Brabec Falls, N. Y. Woodruf, Edward Payson, Sty Ecervilla, N. Y. Woodruf, Dwight Alasson, West Avon, Conn. Woodward, Austlin, Franklin, Mass. Woodward, Josiah Logg, Millibury, Mass. Woodward, Josiah Logg, Millibury, Mass. Woodward, Mrs. Mary, Casenoria, N. T. Woodworth, Rev. W. W., Mansfield, O. Worte, Alasson, Hartford, Conn. Wright, Mrs. Ann W., Westfield, Pa. Wright, How. Edward, West Haven, Conn. Wright, Mrs. B. P., Walnut Hills, O. Wright, John M., Canon, Ill. Wright, West, Homer, O. Wright, William E., North Brookfield, Mass. Wright, William E., North Brookfield, Mrs. Wright, Pas. Lyman, Galva, Ill. Wright, West, Homer, O. Wright, William E., North Brookfield, Mrs. Wright, Pas. Lyman, Challen, D. D. Wright, William E., North Brookfield, Mrs. Wyle, Rev. Samuel, Spate, Jl. Wyle, Rev. Samuel, Spate, Jl. Wyle, Rev. Samuel, B., D. D. Yille, O. Wright, Mrs. Man, Machaburgh, Pa. Zag, Spanuel, Detroit, Mich.

STEWARDSHIP.

418. 4 HARDEN WAY GOVE THE WAY

EVERY human being is a steward of the Lord Jesus Christ. We are responsible for the use of property, time, and influence. The Saviour will require each one to give an account of his stewardship. The day is at hand! When shall we be prepared for the grand assize? The answer is, to-day; every day. Life, as we all know, is uncertain. Health is precarious.

We speak now of the use of property. Let every one, having property, use it as he would do if to-day were his last day on earth. "Go to now, ye that say, To-day or to-morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain: whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away."

There are various classes of persons who give, as they think, to the Lord. We name three of them: The first class are those who aim to be their own executors. They give frequently and systematically—"as God, hath prospered them"—and have nothing left at death to bequeath to the cause of Christian benevolence. The second class give moderately—most of them very moderately—during their lives, intending to give "something handsome" in their wills. Some of this class execute wills and do as they purposed to do, but a larger proportion of them die without leaving any will. The third class give little or nothing until death is about to force their possessions from them, and then, fearing thus to go to judgment, they give largely, but hurriedly and injudiciously; and their purposes are often defeated by their heirs. Some of them emancipate their slaves on their death-beds: they are the best of their class; but how much better to have done it sooner!

The first class, it is hardly necessary to say, are the happiest and most useful persons. They enjoy daily the luxury of giving. They see the fruits of their benevolence. If Christians, they are conscious of the divine approbation, and of an approving conscience. The second class enjoy but little of this. They fare, it may be, sumptuously every day, and cause the crumbs to be shaken to Lazarus, the representative of the Lord, who lies at their door, while their posthumous charity does not half or a quarter of the good it would have done if it had been judiciously given by the testators themselves during their life-time. The third class have nothing but animal enjoyment, and this but for a very brief period. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest."

SYSTEMATIC AND FREQUENT GIVING.

At the commencement of a new fiscal year, it seems desirable and important that the friends of the Association should have well-defined ideas and purposes with respect to the use of their property, in support of the sacred cause of missions. Some donors, in letters accompanying their contributions, use the words, "your" instead of "our" Association. It may be an inadvertence. Each friend of free missions, each friend of the Society, each contributor to the treasury, each subscriber to the publications, should consider the Association his as much as it is the officers', or missionaries', or most liberal patrons'. The Association is in fact the Lord's, and he admits to common partnership, in the blessed work, all who love him, and the souls of their fellow-men. It is his, and it is theirs.

The last fiscal year the receipts fell short of those of the previous year about sixteen per cent, leaving a debt to friends who had loaned money, some of them much beyond their convenience, of more than five thousand dollars. We could not recall our faithful missionaries, we could not lessen their scanty compensation, we could not neglect to send reapers into the fields when the harvest was perishing—a few, at least, as the exigencies of the cause imperiously required—and we could not anticipate that the funds would be so greatly diminished.

We are satisfied that the reasonable wants of the Association can be supplied by its friends, without frequent and importunate urgency, if they will follow the Scripture rule, and be frequent and systematic in their contributions, as the Lord prospers them. Brethren! try it. How often does it occur that the great Proprietor of all takes away hoarded wealth, or disappoints his people in their prospects of gain, because they do not give cheerfully and liberally as or while the Lord is prospering them ! Many are their regrets that the money they might have used for benevolent purposes, the deposits they might have made in the "Bank of Faith." the treasure they might have laid up in heaven, has been swept away, irretrievably gone, because they would use't for accumulation, when the cause of Christ was suffering for want of timely aid. The investment is lost! Principal and interest are gone! They have not done any good! What a fool I have been! Such exclamations, such self-reproaches, and such vain regrets often come to our ears. A beloved friend, who has been a pretty liberal donor to our treasury, lately said: "I did intend to do more the past year for the cause, but the investment I made in a factory wholly deprived me of the means. I have recently lost five times more in one year than I have ever given to a cause that has been ever dear to me, one that called forth my prayers and exertions, and which I always intended to aid more liberally. My means are now gone, that might have been saved." How many thus risk and lose property that might have been loaned to the Lord, at a compound moral interest that would have enriched the loaner and blessed the world!

There are those who act more wisely, and who will never be tormented with remorse, either in this or the next world, because they have restricted their benevolent action. We have before us a letter from a donor of this class, a dear brother, who from the beginning of our Christian enterprise has helped us steadily, and in every emergency, "as the Lord has prospered him." In reply to an inquiry whether he did not give too much to the missionary cause, he says:

"My family and myself are very careful and prudent in all our expenditures; and if we expend more than some others do (of equal means) in the work of spreading the Gospel, it is because we live in the most simple and economical manner, as to dress, furniture, food, etc., etc. We economize to do good, in some humble degree we hope, as good stewards ought to do. We have enough of every thing that our comfort demands. God has been exceedingly gracious to us in all things, and has filled us with peace and comfort. My wife and myself are like-minded and work together in these things. I have realized in her the truth that a 'prudent wife is from the Lord.' She is a woman of good common-sense and sound judgment, and is not ashamed to appear in plain clothing any where. . . You see then the secret of our means of doing, and I am glad to bear this testimony to her worth; that with the strictest economy in her family she is always ready to help those who need. All we have has been freely bestowed on us by our gracious Father, and why should we withhold? 'The blessed Gospel of the Son of God' has filled our habitation and our hearts with joy, and why should we not desire earnestly to bestow the same blessings on the poor slaves of the world and of sin? Of course you must not expect us to leave you any thing when we are gone. We are our own executors; we wish to see the good done while we live; it will pay a larger interest than any Trust Company; and we don't want to leave a bone of contention between our heirs and the Gospel of Christ. I hope you will excuse this egotism-your remarks

"If all the friends of the Association would adopt the plan of making a monthly offering, however small, I think it would not fail to make a large increase of the income. Where the payments are only once or twice a year, we generally give what is convenient at the time of paying, with perhaps but little thought beforehand to prepare for it. When the time of paying is distant, we spend money for various objects, oftentimes for unnecessary expenses, which if we paid to the Association monthly would be saved and put into the Treasury of the Lord for high and holy purposes. 'Short visits make long friends,' and 'short settlements make pleasant accounts.' I fully believe frequent offerings would make a fat treasury.

"The monthly concert collections are on the same principle, but as our Association has but few congregations that make collections for it at monthly concert, I would hope an effort to get individual friends to make monthly offerings would be effectual in a large increase of funds."

How wise are such counsels! They are from one who well understands both the theory and the practice of "frequent offerings." We must close this article by relating an anecdote. Mr. A., one of "the Lord's collectors," once applied to Esquire B. for a subscription to a highly meritorious object. After explaining it fully, the Esquire replied: "It is a noble plan; I can give you $100 toward the object without feeling it." "Without feeling it!" exclaimed Mr. B., "I do not wish you to give in that way, for although it may do us good, it will not do you any. True benevolence is giving until the giver does feel it, until he practises self-denial. Such giving is acceptable to the Lord." The Esquire assented, and doubled his subscription. "Can you give $200 without inconvenience?" asked Mr. B. "Oh! yes!" said the Esquire, "I shan't feel it at all." Mr. B., who cared for the soul of the gentleman more than he did for his money, replied: "You have not come up to the mark yet. This giving without feeling it is not the giving that is well pleasing in the sight of God. Would $500 to such an excellent charity be felt by you?" "Why, no," said the other, "not at all." Mr. B., with a respect and kindness that won upon the heart of the Esquire, asked him to name a sum that he would feel, were he to give it. "I think," said he, "$1000 would make me feel it; nothing short of it would." "Well," said the collector, "that is the right sum then; such giving will be pleasing to the great Proprietor of all. It will do the object I present immense good, and do you a great deal of good, too." "You shall have it," said the Esquire, "it is the first time I ever gave to a good object and felt the pressure."

THE MORAL DISCIPLINE OF GIVING.

We take the following from a report of Prof. Shepard's sermon at the late meeting of the American Board. It deserves a wide circulation:

"This principle that every one at stated times lay by him in store for this purpose, according as God has prospered him, would be sufficient, if we may suppose in him the thoroughly Christian heart. To add this, namely, let him lay by for charity a generous proportion, is leaving it still quite too indefinite. To say a tenth of all that comes in, is greatly unequal. There is neither justice nor benevolence in this as the universal law of giving. For the object I have in view, this statement may be an approximate; at least, may stand preparatory to one more definite, namely, that a person give in measure and continuity sufficient to feel it. How little probably is given in the Charch of God where this is the effect! How very few, probably, from the measure they give have any, even the least, sensation of inconvenience. Of self-denial, and real sacrifice from giving, I suppose the great majority of Christian givers know nothing. In all such cases, of course, the entire personal benefit and discipline from giving, is lost. According to the statement now in hand, the sensation-principle, the tythe system, or the law of tenth, can be no general rule, for, in very many cases, the amount dictated by the rule would hardly be enough to throw any, even the smallest twinges, into the soul's cleaving selfishness. A tenth can be given, and the man never know, by any appreciable diminution, that he has given any thing; of course, he can give all that, and vastly more, without beginning to feel it. What is done, is but shelling off some of the loose outer scales of one of these Leviathans of wealth. The giving, to be effectual as a discipline, must be on a principle that shall reach and restrict the desire for getting—the intent to have more; for all the mischlef, and meanness, and smallness lie in that—emanate from that. On that it is, all Scripture pours its intense and concentrated reprobation.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

American Missionary Association,

AND THE

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING,

HELD A

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 19 AND 20, 1859.

OGETHED WITH

List of Life Members.

NEW-YORK:

PUBLISHED BY THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Office, 48 Beekman Street.

1859.

JOHN A. GRAY'S
PIRE-PEOOF PRINTING OFFICE,
16 and 18 Jacob Street, N. Y.

HARRIST CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY

MINUTES

OF THE

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING.

THE Thirteenth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened at the First Congregational Church, Chicago, Ill., on Wednesday, October 19th, 1859, at 7½ o'clock P.M.

In absence of the President, Hon. Lawrence Brainard, of Vt., Rev. J. Blanchard, a Vice-President, took the Chair, and opened the meeting with prayer; Rev. J. E. Roy was elected Secretary for the meeting.

The following were appointed as a Business Committee:

Rev. W. W. Patton, Ill.; Rev. H. Cowles, Ohio; Rev. O. Emerson, Iowa; Rev. Wm. DeLoss Love, Wis.; Rich. P. Waters, Esq., Mass.; Lewis Tappan, Esq., New-York; Rev. A. Mahan, Mich.

Rev. G. B. Cheever, D.D., New-York, preached the Annual Sermon before a very large congregation, from Isa, 62: 1, 10.

"For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth. . . . Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the high way; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people."

After the Sermon, the Association adjourned, to meet Thursday morning, at 9 o'clock, for business.

Thursday morning, 8 o'clock. Members of Association joined with the members of the First Church in their morning prayer-meeting.

At 9 o'clock the Association was called to order for business, by the presiding officer, and united in singing the Missionary Hymn; after which prayer was offered by Rev. L. Taylor, of Bloomington, Ill. Rev. Wm. E. Holyoke, of Polo, Ill., was appointed Assistant Secretary. The minutes of the last Annual Meeting were read by the Secretary, J. E. Roy, of Chicago.

On motion, a Committee on Nominations was appointed by the Chair, as follows: Prof. Henry E. Peck, Ohio; Rev. J. E. Roy, Chicago;

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING.

Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, N. Y.; Rev. Warren Cochran, Wis.; H. B. Spelman, Esq., Ohio.

Rev. G. Whipple, Corresponding Sec., reported a letter from Prof. Cleveland, expressing regret for his absence, and inviting the Association to hold their next meeting at Philadelphia.

The Treasurer, Lewis Tappan, read his report, with the Auditors' certificate, which was unanimously accepted, and ordered to be printed.

The Report of the Corresponding Secretary, Rev. Geo. Whipple, for the Foreign department of the Association, was presented, after which Rev. John White offered remarks upon that part of the report relating to the Mendi Mission in Africa, of which he is a member.

The Chairman of the Business Committee, Rev. W. W. Patton, reported a series of resolutions including a Memorial to Congress, for the consideration of the Association.

Rev. Mr. Jones, of Michigan, then offered some remarks upon the Mission among the Indians at Grand Traverse Bay.

The Secretary of the Home Department, Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, presented the Report of that department. On motion, to accept the Reports of both Secretaries, after remarks by Rev. Wm. DeLoss Love, of Wis., Prof. H. E. Peck, of Ohio, Secretary Whipple, Lewis Tappan, Esq., Prof. Cowles of Ohio., Rev. Mr. Cherry, of Mich., it was voted to accept and print them. Closed with prayer by Rev. G. B. Hubbard.

Recess till 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Association convened at 2 o'clock and the meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Geo. Schlosser of Ill.; a Committee of enrolment, consisting of Rev. Mr. Andrews, Mich., Rev. H. W. Cobb, Ill., and Jacob Butler, Esq., Iowa, was appointed.

The Resolutions reported by the Business Committee, were then taken up seriatim, and, after discussion and amendment, were adopted.*

Prof. Peck, from the Committee on Nominations, reported the following gentlemen for officers for the coming year:

. President.

Rev. DAVID THURSTON, Maine,

Vice-Presidents.

Hon. F. D. PARISH, Ohio, J. P. WILLISTON, Esq., Mass., Prof. C. D. CLEVELAND, Penn., ARTHUR TAPPAN, Esq., Conn., Rev. JONATHAN BLANCHARD, Ill., JACOB BUTLER, Esq., Iowa, E. D. Holton, Esq., Wisconsin.

Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Department.

Rev. George Whipple, New-York.

Corresponding Secretary for the Home Department.

Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, New-York.

Recording Secretary.

Rev. HENRY BELDEN, New-York.

Treasurer.

LEWIS TAPPAN, Esq., New-York.

Executive Committee.

THOMAS RITTER, New-York, HENRY BELDEN, New-York, J. O. BENNETT, New-York, D. M. GRAHAM, New-York, A. N. FREEMAN, New-York,

WILLIAM E. WHITING, New-York, SAMUEL WILDE, New-York, GEORGE H. WHITE, New-York, HENRY H. GARNET, New-York, JoSIAH BREWER, Mass., WILLIAM B. BROWN, New-Jersey, ALONZO S. BALL, New-York.

This list of officers was unanimously appointed by the Convention.

A resolution, thanking Dr. Cheever for his sermon, and requesting a copy for publication, was unanimously passed.

Rev. Mr. Goodman invoked the Divine Blessing, and the Convention adjourned, to meet in the evening.

Thursday Evening, 71 o'clock. Association met for the purpose of celebrating the Lord's Supper. Rev. G. F. Magoun, of Iowa, made remarks and administered the bread, and Rev. C. F. Martin, late of the Coptic Mission, made remarks and administered the wine. After singing, the Rev. John White, of the Mendi Mission, made an address on the Foreign work, and presented for examination an African lad from the Mission School. Rev. O. Emerson also made an address upon the subject of the Home work.

On motion of Rev. W. W. Patton it was voted to adopt the recommendation of the Executive Committee to discontinue the Ojibue Mission.

On motion of Richard P. Waters, Esq., of Mass., it was resolved that the Executive Committee be requested to have the Annual Report of the Treasurer, and the Reports of the several Missions, for the next year, so prepared that they can be conveniently referred to separate Committees for consideration and report.

On motion of Rev. George Whipple it was voted that the thanks of the Association be presented to the Committee of Arrangements in Chicago; to the trustees of the First Congregational Church; to the people of Chicago, for their hospitality in entertaining the members of the Association; and also to the choir for their acceptable services.

^{*} The resolutions and memorial are published together in another place.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING.

7

After singing the Doxology, and prayer by the President, the Association adjourned, sine die.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the Divine guidance and blessing vouchsafed to the Association during the year past, as well as in former years, demand our most thankful acknowledgments, and should lead to increased devotedness and liberality on the part of all connected with this Missionary enterprise,

Resolved, That one of the greatest obstacles to the success of the Missionary work, is the sanction virtually given to Slavery by Missionary Boards, ecclesiastical bodies, professed ministers of the Gospel, church members, editors of the religious newspapers, and others, who sanction, apologize for, or sustain the iniquitous system; and that the people of God are called upon to abstain from all action which gives countenance to such offences.

Resolved, That inasmuch as God in his Holy Word has said: "He that stealeth a man and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, shall surely be put to death," the Association believe that holding men as property is always a sin against God and man, and that all traffickers in the blood and sinews of their fellow-men, whether foreign or domestic slave-traders, slave-buyers, or slave-holders, should be debarred from Christian fellowship until they repent and free themselves from all complicity and responsible connection with slavery.

Resolved, That the sacredness of the Missionary cause, and the honor of Christ, require that Missionaries as well as Missionary Churches should be free from all complicity with slavery, and that support should be withdrawn from such as persist in upholding the unchristian system and practice, and withdrawn in such a way as to demonstrate both to the Church of Christ and to the world that it is done because the offence is heinous, and inconsistent with allegiance to God and love to man.

Resolved, That the only just mode of conducting missions requires the adoption of the perfect standard of holiness given by God in the Bible, and that for missionaries or missionary societies to allow any sin to go unrebuked among the people where they carry the Gospel, or to suffer any members of their churches to practice any sin without using all legitimate means in their power to effect church discipline with such transgressors, is a palpable violation of the spirit and principles of the Gospel, and the sure precursor of multiplied mischiefs to missions and the Church God.

Resolved. That while we believe that some who sought the discontinuance of the Choctaw Mission of the American Board of Foreign Missions meant thereby to advance the cause of freedom and humanity, we yet regard the act as an occasion of sorrow and shame to the Christian world, as indicating either an unfaithful administration of the Gospel in that Mission, or a failure of Christianity successfully to encounter slavery after an experiment of forty years.

Resolved, That we view with unmingled horror the reopening of the foreign slave trade, its justification by influential men in the councils of the nation, and the unfaithfulness or incapacity of the General Administration in securing the conviction and punishment of the violators of the laws of the land against this piracy; and as this trade is the greatest obstruction to our mission in Western Africa, the Executive Committee cause the memorial to Congress on the subject of enforcing the laws against piracy, herewith presented, to be transmitted to both Houses of the National Legislature, and endeavor to secure their support to the prayer of the memorialists.

Resolved. That we rejoice in the existence and activity of Tract Societies that publish and circulate Bible truth without mutilation, suppression, or the fear of man, and that we deem it their duty to publish and circulate the truth in regard to all sin, without respect of persons, and especially the great sin of the age, being convinced by our own experience in the circulation of such tracts, in both the slave and the free States, that such publications are eagerly received and read, while they are blessed to the conversion of souls and the honor of Christianity.

Resolved. That we earnestly request that Ministers of the Gospel and Superintendents of Sabbath Schools will cause the missionary intelligence contained in our monthly paper and magazine to be communicated to their churches and schools, frequently and impressively, until all under their instruction shall be made acquainted with the same, and be led to cordial coöperation in the great work of diffusing light and securing support to the cause of missions as prosecuted by our Association.

Resolved, That we recommend to the friends of the Association to make more earnest supplication to the great Head of the Church for the increase and success of its Missions; more liberal contributions to the treasury systematically and at stated periods, and greater personal exertions in the circulation of the Society's publications.

Resolved. That we regard it as of the highest importance that in all our instrumentalities and agencies for the extension of the cause of Christ, we should seek to be imbued with His spirit, lest all our labors and prayers be in vain; and that while we should endeavor to cultivate a reformatory spirit such as shall be adequate to the great wants of the age, we should aim to receive and disseminate the doctrines and spirit of true piety as well as of morality, as absolutely essential to the successful prosecution of the cause of missions.

Resolved, That the success attending the efforts of this Association in the Southern States of the Union, especially in Kentucky and North-Carolina, and the peculiar wants of the various classes composing the population of that section, should encourage the people of God to furnish the means of prosecuting this department of the Home Missionary work with increased vigor.

MEMORIAL

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, the Memorial and Petition of the American Missionary Association respectfully represents as follows:

That your memorialists are an incorporated body, under the laws of the State of New-York, and that they are engaged in propagating the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ in the destitute portions of the Union, in fereign heathen lands and elsewhere, by supporting missionaries, diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, establishing schools, and in all proper ways extending the blessings of civilization and Christianity. The Association, however, is neither an ecclesiastical nor a denominational body, and is not supported by denominations as such, but by individual Christians, ministers of different denominations and laymen.

Your memorialists further represent that they have for many years sustained a misstountry, and to all who have come under its influence. There are, however, serious obstructions in the prosecution of the work. It is known to your memorialists, and to all who are conversant with the history of Africa, that one of the principal obstacles in the progress of civilization and the extension of Christianity in that country is the domestic slave-trade, which owes its origin and prevalence chiefly to the foreign slave-trade. This traffic introduces intoxicating drinks and implements of crughty and death, stirs up contention among the tribes, producing vast and desolating wars, and leads to the most debasing vices and crimes, so that it is a well-established fact that the excess of barbarism, on the western coast of Africa especially, is the effect of the foreign slave-trade, and that in the interior, beyond the reach of that influence, the negroes are far more civilized, industrious, and peaceful.

Along the shores of Africa, wherever the foreign slave-trade is carried on, the natives form the worst and most wretched population of the whole Continent. There is more drunkenness than elsewhere, greater cruelty, a lower morality, more crime, more misery of every kind, than is ever seen where the foreign slave-trade does not prevail; and it is the policy of the slave-traders to corrupt the natives by intoxicating drinks and other appliances that they may have power over them, and that they may more successfully carry on their iniquitous traffic.

In view of these considerations, and of all that pertains to the welfare of the African tribes, and especially of those over which the Association exerts a beneficial influence, your memorialists, in common with a large portion of the people of the United States, feel a deep concern at the recommencement, on the part of citizens of this country, of the African slave-trade. Cargoes of Africans have been brought into the country by American citizens, in American ships built and fitted out in these States in defiance of the law which stigmatizes such traffic as piracy, and against a treaty with a foreign power; and the unfortunate victims of this nefarious man-stealing have been sold, and, with their posterity, consigned to perpetual bondage.

have been sold, and, with their posterity, consigned to perpetual bondage.

This piratical and illegal trade, this inhuman invasion of the rights of men, this outrage upon civilization and Christianity, this violation of the laws of God and man, is openly countenanced and encouraged by a portion of the citizens of some of the States of this Union; the perpetrators, who were taken flagrante delicto, have been acquitted on a jury trial; and citizens of this country are combining to reopen and carry on the foreign slave-trade, while a party is forming favorable to the repeal of the law that attaches a death-penalty to the crime—a law which was founded upon the broadest-principles of philanthropy, religion and humanity, and is in exact consonance with the Divine Law.

Your memorialists, as American citizens and as Christians, feel compelled, in view of the crime and sin alluded to, and their disastrous effects upon their mission in Africa as well as upon their native country, most earnestly and respectfully to entreat your Honorable Bodies to cause the law of the land against the foreign slave-trade to be rigorously enforced, additional laws to be enacted if necessary to insure the conviction and punishment of pirates who may be engaged in the foreign slave-trade, that the honor of the nation may be preserved, treaty obligations fulfilled, and the country saved from the disprace of renewing a traffic held in abhorrence by the civilized world, and from the displeasure of the Supreme Ruler of the Universe.

The cause of missions is dear to the hearts of the Christian people of this country;

The cause of missions is dear to the hearts of the Christian people of this country; they look to the constituted authorities with deep anxiety at the present crisis, they have a deep sense of the solemnity of the obligations which treaties, superadded to the claims of natural justice, have imposed on the government of their country, and they justly apprehend the continued displeasure of the Great Ruler of nations if a traffic so abhorred of God and man is suffered to exist. It is their prayer, and the prayer of your memorialists, that the blessing of Almighty God may rest upon the Congress of the United States, and that He will so enlighten the minds and guide the deliberations of those who are called into the councils of the nation, that the faith and honor of the people and their government shall be preserved, all portions of their fellow-citizens saved from the guilt of piratical depredations upon the unoffending inhabitants of a distant continent, and the judgments of an incensed God be averted from their beloved land.

And as in duty bound will ever pray.

6 10 00 10 8 -À 0 H K 0 A H R S URER' S A RE

| 3. | | | | er month, circu | | | ition, including travelling ex-
Clerks, etc.,
t year's account,
tember, 1899. | 100 |
|--|--|---------------------------|----------------------------------|---|--|----------------------|--|--|
| EXPENDITURES. For Home Missions, Including colportage. | Mendi Mission. " Jamatca Mission. " Olibue and Ottawa Mission. | Sandwich Islands Mission, | Siam Mission.
Coptic Mission. | Publications: American Missionary, (21,000 per month, circulated gra- | Office Expenses, Rent, Stationery, Fuel, etc., | Bank N | Collecting Agents. Travelling Expenses of Officers of the Association. Expenses of Annual and Anniversary Meetings, including travelling ex- Ponses of Spakers. Salaries: Corresponding Secretaria. Treasures Officers dec., Pald borrowed money. Part of $6.69.8 if in last year's account. Balance, being cash on hand 13th September, 1889. | The second secon |
| For E | 350 | 3 3 | 3 1 | 4 | 1 1 | 4 1 1 | | 23 |
| - 1 | | | 00 | | | | 4,617 65 | $55,222 88 |
| 1/11/2 | 4,708 59 | 4,607 89 | 4,848 69 | 8,755 75
9,869,97 | 5,986 80 | 1,980 71
8,585 29 | is due to | |
| - 1 | | eb., | March, | May. | July, | Sept.,
Oct., | ting Deb | |
| | r Nov | PH | | | | | | |
| | mary for Nov | 1 1 | 3 3 | 3 3 | 3 3 | 11 | d, dedu | |
| T.S.
er, 1859. | Missionary for Nov | 11 | 11 | | 33 | 33 | fnourred, deduc | |
| EIPTS.
eptember, 1859. | uerican Missionary for Nov | 10 10 10 10 |  | | 33 | 33 | optember, 1868, | |
| RECEIPTS. 18th September, 1859. | the American Mesionary for Nov | 11 | 11 | 33 | 33 | == | 18th Boptember, 1868, | |
| RECEIPTS. ending 18th September, 1859. | iged in the American Missionary for Nov | 11 |  | | 3 | 33 | n hand, 18th Sepkember, 1898, borrowed and Debts incurred, deduc
Association, | |
| RECEIPTS. For the Fiscal year ending 18th September, 1859. | ptember, acknowledged in the American Messionary for Nov., $2,735 96 tober, | 15 | | | 33 | 33 | Cash on hand, 18th September, 1859, Money borrowed and Debts Incurred, deducting Debts due to the Association, | The state of the s | ending September 18th, 1859, JAMES O. BENNETT, ANTHONY LANE, of LEWIS TAPPAN, T $ 3 for with expenditures fare, the expenses of the for them should be include were double what they now sum expended i gratuitously, the s elrculated g

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

THE eighth article of the Constitution of the American Missionary Association declares that "this Society, in collecting funds, in appointing officers, agents, and missionaries, and in selecting fields of labor and conducting the missionary work, will endeavor particularly to discountenance slavery by refusing to receive the known fruits of unrequited labor, or to welcome to its employment those who hold their fellow-beings as slaves."

The Executive Committee, as the agents and representatives of the Association, have endeavored to execute the trust reposed in them, with a strict regard to this provision of the Constitution, and to the principles which are embodied in it.

Holding in mind the guilty and lost condition of all men by nature, the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ, their only Saviour; the necessity of regeneration by the Holy Spirit, and of repentance, faith, and holy obedience in order to salvation; and the duty of the missionary to call upon all to break off from their sins by righteousness, to repent, believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and bring forth fruits meet for repentance, they have not regarded slaveholding as the only sin against which they must contend, nor sought to measure the comparative guilt of the slaveholder in the eyes of the Great Searcher of hearts, but have endeavored to fulfill the command to preach the Gospel to every creature-yet, acting on the conviction that slaveholding is a sin, a sin against God and man, against the soul of the master and the soul of the slave, and that it is a great wrong to the Church of God, to the crushed and outraged slave, and to the master himself, to lend him such countenance in his wrongdoing, as to receive him to the fellowship of the Church while holding his fellow-man in bondage, its missionaries are instructed to apply the Gospel for the overthrow of this sin as for any other; and, in gathering churches and administering discipline, not to receive slaveholders into the church, nor administer the communion of the Lord's Supper to any who hold that relation. They have not welcomed to their employ any who do not cordially accede to these views.

We are called upon to report the death of one of the officers of the Association, which has occurred since our last Annual Meeting. Our excellent brother, Rev. Samuel E. Cornish, of New-York, died November, 1858. He had been officially connected with the Association from its organization, first as a member of the Executive Committee, until the meeting of 1848; and since as a Vice-President, which office he held at the time of his decease. The text selected for his funeral discourse was appropriate: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." One of our foreign missionaries, Mrs. Brooks, of the Mendi Mission, also departed this life in May last. She had been connected with the mission about a year.

Twelve missionaries and assistant missionaries have during the past year been sent to their several fields of labor. Of these, ten have gone out for the first time, and two have returned, after spending some time in this country. Nine are now under appointment, and expected to sail early in November.

The deaths of fourteen life members of the Association have been reported to us, and three hundred and fourteen new members have been added. The aggregate number of names of life members, now on our list is two thousand five hundred and twelve.

The monthly issues of the American Missionary, in paper form, is 21,000, and of the same as a magazine, 4700. The aggregate number of copies of the two during the year is 308,400.*

MENDI MISSION, WEST-AFRICA.

GOOD HOPE: Missionaries.-Rev. J. WHITE, Mr. D. W. BURTON, Mrs. BURTON, MISS S. G. Mc IN-TOSH, Miss Dowie, Native Assistants.—Rev. George N. Jowett and John Johnson.

BOOM FALLS: Missionaries.—Rev. J. S. BROOKS, Mr. RICHARD MILES, Mrs. MAIE, Mrs. BROOKS. Native Assistants.-Three.

Under Appointment.—Rev. G. P. CLAFLIN, Rev. J. H. Dodge, Rev. C. F. Winship, Mrs. Miles, Mrs. CLAFLIN, Mrs. Dodge, Assistants.-Mr. and Mrs. Cooper.

KAW-MENDI: an out-Station of Good-Hope.

Kaw-Mendi.

Of the missionaries connected with this Mission, at the date of our last report, Mrs. Mair and Miss Dowie are at present absent. Mrs. Mair, (who has spent two years in Africa,) with the approval of the Executive Committee, is absent for the improvement of her health; Miss Dowie has not been able to labor in Africa. Soon after her arrival at Freetown she was prostrated by disease, which it is supposed had long been latent in her system, and was detained there till about the first of November, when she was able to be removed to the Mission. It was soon found that she would not be able to remain there, and by the advice of physicians, and of the Mission, she returned to this country in June last.

^{*} The paper is sent free to all donors to the funds of the Association, who express a wish to receive it. The price of the magazine is fifty cents per year.

Mr. White and Mr. Miles sailed for the Mission in November, leaving their wives in this country, and reached Good-Hope, December 16th. After suffering several attacks of fever, Mr. Miles, by the advice of a physician, returned to this country, arriving here June 10. He expects to return soon, and take Mrs. Miles with him. By the advice of the Mission, Mr. White has since returned, for the purpose of taking out his family with him this fall. Much to the regret of the Executive Committee, his rejoining the Mission is likely to be delayed by causes beyond his control.

Good-Hope.

This station is increasing in interest and apparent importance, and seems to be in a highly prosperous condition. Previous to Mr. White's arrival, there had been no resident ordained missionary connected with it, and no church organization. In December last, the members of the Mission at that station formed themselves into a Congregational church, with Mr. White as their minister. Mr. Burton was chosen deacon, and publicly set apart to that office, the last Sabbath in December. Mr. White wrote as follows:

"We then proceeded to examine those who desired to unite with us in church fellowship; and in regard to four men the examination was entirely satisfactory. They are all heads of families, and their 'walk and conversation' appear to be such as becometh the Gospel of Christ.

"Last Sabbath was truly an interesting day for Good-Hope. The little church sat down for the first time to commemorate together the Saviour's dying love. The four individuals referred to, came out from the world and took upon them the 'vows of the Lord, for 'God to live, and for God to die.' It was an affecting and interesting scene! One other joined by letter, so that the little church is now (including the missionaries,) composed of ten members.

"I am happy to add that others are expected to join at our next communion, and some are beginning to inquire the way of life; for the latter I have appointed a special meeting every Monday evening."

account every monday evening.

At their second communion season, March 6, eight more were added, making the number eighteen. At this time Mr. White wrote:

"We have others as candidates, a few of whom may probably unite with us at our next communion; we desire to exercise great care in the reception of members, as there are many who would gladly join us, but we stand in doubt of them. Our congregation is steadily increasing, so much so, that our chapel is not only well filled with attentive worshipers on the Sabbath, but is getting to be uncomfortably crowded and needs enlargement. One of the most interesting features of our present operations, is the apparent interest of the people, not only to come and hear God's word, but in all that is done to extend the cause of Christ."

A monthly concert of prayer had been previously established, in which there was much interest. Four more were added to the church at its next communion, and others were again reported as candidates. The work of God seemed to be advancing, and the whole aspect was encouraging. Some of the children in the Mission family were said to give evidence of a change of heart, and nearly all were seriously disposed.

When Mr. White left the Mission, Rev. George N. Jowett was elected as a supply for the church. Subsequent intelligence indicates continued prosperity. Mr. Burton's last letter says: "I think our church members are trying to live near to God, and that they are feeling an interest in the conversion of the heathen, such as I have never seen before." We can but hope this feeling will continue, and the little church gathered there be like a city set on a hill, that others through them may be led to glorify God. There has been a daily religious exercise in the Sherbro language, but most of the instruction at this station is in English.

The Mission school at Good Hope is under the immediate charge of Miss McIntosh. It numbers twenty-four scholars, and is prosperous. The children of this school are entirely under the control of the Mission, most of them having been given up by their parents to its care for a series of years, reaching to their majority. It is the policy of the Mission to train the scholars to some useful employment; and both males and females spend a portion of each day in manual labor. Active, useful occupation is required, as tending to promote a healthy development both of manly and Christian graces. An out-school connected with Good Hope is under the charge of Mr. Jowett. The number of its scholars has not been recently reported.

Some trouble has occurred to the Mission from the presence of wicked white men near the station, who have exerted their influence (but too successfully in one case) to corrupt the children of the school, and annoy the Mission. Our missionaries in Africa find that one of the greatest obstacles in the way of their success is the presence of men from so-called Christian countries, or the evil agencies they have introduced. Rum, the slave-trade, and wars undertaken to supply that trade, stand in the way of the missionary far more than heathen superstitions; and when the Spirit of God takes hold of the heart, the last stronghold is, in some cases, the appetite for rum, the white man's dread gift to Africa.

During a portion of the year, there was an expectation that a Papal mission would be established in close proximity to this station, as several Romish priests were at Freetown ready to sail to the Sherbro. While remaining there, however, they were nearly all cut off by the yellow-fever

Mr. Burton's letter of August 10th, the latest yet received, reported all well at the Mission, and that the Church and school were prospering.

Kaw-Mendi.

This is now regarded as an out-station of Good Hope, and in the very trying circumstances in which the Mission has been placed from want of laborers, has had no assistant missionary connected with it during the year. The aged interpreter, Father Johnson, as he is familiarly called, has removed to Good Hope.

At a meeting of the Mendi Mission Association, held in February, the condition of the Church at Kaw-Mendi was considered, and the following recommendation adopted :*

"This Association would recommend, in regard to Kaw-Mendi, that the members of the Church, if they decide to remain there, he encouraged to meet for religious services, and maintain their Christian profession, until a teacher or minister be procured to take charge of that station, and that in the mean time an effort be made to secure a person of suitable qualifications for that work, who, as a requisite, shall possess a good knowledge of the Mendi language."

They do not recommend that a white missionary be stationed there, but a native assistant, who shall be frequently visited and counseled by some ordained missionary appointed for that purpose. As the Mission is to be largely increased this year, we hope both these things may be done, and that what remains of the Church at that station may be strengthened and established in the faith. We can not report the number of Churchmembers at present in good standing there.

Boom Falls Station.

During the early portion of the year, every thing at this station seemed to be highly prosperous. Mrs. Brooks, during her short residence there, had very much endeared herself to the children, and was exerting a very happy and salutary control over them. Mr. Miles had joined the Mission, and was expected to relieve Mr. Brooks of secular care, so that he could devote his whole time to preaching, and to reducing the language to written form. Mr. Miles, as has been stated, returned to the United States. Mrs. Mair having previously obtained the consent of the Executive Committee, left for her home, and on the fifth of May, Mrs. Brooks died, soon after having given birth to a child. Thus, in a short time, every thing seemed reversed, and Mr. Brooks was again left with only native assistants, in charge of a station, and with outside labors, that would furnish abundant employment for many strong men,

Though greatly afflicted by the death of his wife, Mr. Brooks was not in despair; on the contrary, he wrote as follows:

"I am determined to increase the work, so long as health will allow me to do so. "I am determined to increase the work, so long as health will allow me to do so. The more I see the emptiness of worldly joys and hopes, the more do I see the great need of labor for joys above, both for myself and others. I most earnestly hope that help will soon come to us. If the friends of our Mission could feel, as they should, their duty to make known the Gospel to the heathen, it seems to me that they could not long live as they do, quite like other men.

"It may seem strange to you that I am not disheartened. I most solemnly declare I am not, and can see nothing peculiar to this field that is truly discouraging. Indeed, my hopes are enlarged, my faith is strong, and I feel as much spirit and life to labor, as when I first entered this field, and a much better will and judgment.

The Lord is blessing us, and we prosper. Rest assured the day is fast approaching when the Gospel will have free course and be glorified."

Of Mrs. Brooks and her labors, Mr. Brooks bears the following testimony, in which he is sustained by all who knew her intimately:

"Mrs. Brooks had only become so well settled in her new sphere of usefulness as to love it, and feel a deep interest in this particular field. She had not only an interest, but a growing and active interest, for the salvation of the children and people in our neighborhood. Her efforts for the Sabbath-school, for the short time she was here, were more efficient than have been those of any other missionary at this station. She seemed to understand better than any one of us, how to bring in and retain members of the school. She never allowed a member of the school to be absent and escape a reproof, the first time they passed within the sound of her voice. She administered these reproofs with so much grace and good sense, so much promptitude and faithfulness, that I have felt reproved and spurred on to duty myself. Her improvement of all the means of grace she had was also remarkable. Especially was this the case the last few weeks of her life. She has been such a comfort and blessing to me, as calls for lasting praise and gratitude to God. I feel deeply afflicted, and at a great loss to know what to do. I know God is good, but oh! how strange his ways appear to us!"

Early in the year, Mrs. Mair, writing of the Mission family at Mo Tappan, said:

"It is truly an oasis in this desert of heathenism. Of course, much remains to be done for them, but I can not help rejoicing at the good beginning that has been made. Some are in a serious state of mind, others of them profess to have begun the Christian life; but often I tremble for them in thinking of the powerful heathen superstitions and temptations that will assail them when the time comes for them to act for themselves—temptations before which many who have been trained in the Mission have already fallen. Out of the Mission there is no Christian society in which they can mingle, no favorable public opinion to help them on in the good way, but on the contrary, their relations, the revival of old habits, and the desire to become great in the eyes of their family, all tend to draw them away. The obstacles against which they have to struggle are legion, and I want to enlist the prayers of all the good people I can, for those in the Mission who have begun in earnest to think about their souls' salvation, and for us who are trying, by God's blessing, to turn, and to keep, their feet in the right path."

The following account of the rise and progress of this station is taken from a recent communication from Mr. Brooks, under whose auspices it was established:

"Braw, a chief whose memory is dear to all who knew him in the latter years of his life, having become acquainted with Mr. Raymond, and the object of his mission, invited him to visit his country, and establish himself there, to teach the Mendi people. Frequent communications passed between them, and Braw took special pains to urge his invitation. Mr. Raymond regarded it with favor, as wholly providential, but, from want of help, could not at once accept it. Before he was able to realize his wishes, he fell a victim to incessant labor, and his crushing care and responsibility.

"In 1850 Mr. Thompson visited Braw, and made arrangements with him and his associate chief, to commence a station at Tissana. A country-house was erected, and the materials were collected for a school and meeting-house. The native assistant, to whom this work was committed, proved unworthy, and was dismissed from the mission. War soon broke out, and prevented any further progress at that time. The country-house rotted down, and the building materials were scattered."

In the year 1852,

"The missionaries again visited Braw, made new arrangements for a mission in the Boompey country, and selected a more eligible site than Tissana. The Mission were then in expectation of immediately receiving materials from America for houses to be erected in the Boom and Boompey countries. The necessary negotiations, both with the Boompey and Upper-Boom chiefs, for ground to be occupied by the Mission had been satisfactory; and lumber, tools, goods, and laborers, were sent to Mo-Colong to lay the foundation for the house for the Upper-Boom station, when war again broke out between the Jong and Boom people, preventing further progress.

^{*} The Association here spoken of consists of the members of the Mission only. Its meetings, after the manner of some Congregational Associations of New-England, are composed of ministers and delegates. At its second meeting George N. Jowett was examined, and subsequently ordained to the ministry, and John Johnson licensed to preach the Gospel.

"The missionary to whom the work of opening these stations had been committed, after a careful review of the whole matter, a prayerful consideration of other openings, and free consultation with others, formed the purpose of carrying out the original instructions of the Executive Committee, notwithstanding these untoward circumstances. On the first day of March, 1853, the missionary, accompanied by three school-boys and guides, left Kaw-Mendi for Boom Falls. On the third day of the month, the necessary arrangements having been made, the little party took possion of the place now occupied by the Mission, and commenced clearing it. A small house, twenty feet in diameter, was erected, from such materials as the place afforded; and in April, the Boom Falls Mission-house was dedicated.

"The little company had fully counted the cost, and agreed to abide the issue. They were content to share the mere necessaries of common "country life," in times of trial, for those were days which tried the power of endurance. With war on every side, men provided little more than sufficed for the necessities of the day; food of every kind was scarce; much of the time neither flesh, salt, nor oil could be had; several times the rice or cassada for the morning meal could not be had overnight; and for weeks at a time they subsisted wholly on those articles, with occasionally a lime or orange for a relish. Yet no one of that company ever lacked his daily portion, though they often had barely enough of one simple article for a single meal. They depended on One who could, and did, feed every living thing, by giving them only one meal at a time.

"Six little boys were at once taken into the family, swelling the number to ten, and a school was started. From the first arrival at Tissana, public worship, morning and evening, and Sabbath services, have been sustained; and so long as the strength of the resident missionary would allow, stated weekly meetings were held at five different villages. In the first two months the Mission was in full operation. Since that time the work has slowly but steadily progressed, with a few necessary interruptions, until now a little community is formed in circumstances of great comfort and prosperity."

Foreign Help Employed.

"The foreign help employed at the station has been very limited. In 1854 Dr. T. G. Côle joined the Boom work, but, after spending about one month, removed to Mo-Colong to open an out-station. The people there had been greatly disappointed that the missionaries had been driven away by the Boompeys, in an unjust war to catch children to supply the demand for slaves. That they had then established a mission among their enemies was a sore trial to them. They claimored for a share of attention, and made it difficult to travel up and down the river. The opening of a school at Mo-Colong, where a building was already erected, seemed a necessary compromise. Ds. Cole undertook to establish such a school under a native teacher, and it was opened on the morning of the twenty-fifth of December, 1854."

Mr. Brooks then makes a statement, showing that all the labor expended on that station by foreign male missionaries is equal only to four and a half years' labor of one man.

The missionary labor from foreign females has been still less. Until July, 1855, no female missionary had ever visited the Boom field. Mrs. Brooks then joined her husband, and labored these three months, when she left, on account of ill health, and soon died. Mrs. Mair, (with her husband,) joined the station in 1857, but soon left, returning again in 1858. In the meantime, Mrs. Locks, an estimable woman from Freetown, spent nearly a year in charge of the Mission family, where she made herself very useful, and will long be kindly remembered. In September, 1858, the late Mrs. Brooks joined the Mission, where she labored eight months, when she died, greatly lamented. Altogether there has been about one and a half years of female missionary labor at the station, or, including Mrs. Lock's residence in the family, two and a half years.

Notwithstanding this, there has been not less than two thousand congregations convened to hear the word of life, and not less than ten thousand different individuals from every part of the Mendi country have heard directly from us, the news of salvation by faith in the Lord Jesus.

Boom-Falls Church.

The Boom-Falls Church was organized on the 8th of April, 1854, consisting of four members, and possessing the ordinary powers of Congregational churches. Since its formation, there have been in fellowship with the church twenty-five members. There have been four deaths, three dismissals, two removals by letter, and three without letters. There are now in church fellowship thirteen.

There is still a class of hopeful inquirers, who need much patient instruction. Three or four will doubtless soon be asking for baptism, that they may be separated

Three or four will doubtless soon be asking for baptism, that they may be separated unto God, a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

The church seems to be in a healthy condition, possessing fully an ordinary degree of piety. During the last six months, it has contributed for benevolent purposes the sum of £4 16s. 6d, to be appropriated by vote of the church. It will doubtless be expended in building a meeting house at Mo-Gbongo, a town against which these people were at war but a few years since.

The report of the Sabbath-school, under the care of Mr. Thomas Bennett, was encouraging. There are thirty-two scholars: eighteen of the mission children, ten children from families in the neighborhood, and four aged men.

In the work of reducing the Mendi language, it was reported, that, in the last two years and a half more than ten thousand Mendi words had been collected and committed to writing, and the most of them defined in English. A primer had been prepared and sent to England for printing; the translation of the Gospels had been commenced, and a few sacred hymns composed, so that the praises of God were now sung in the native tongue.

Mr. Brooks gives an instance where the singing of these hymns in the Mendi tongue had had a happy effect. The Sabbath before, visiting Mo-Gbongo, to hold meetings, he found the people under considerable excitement, created by an annoying visit of a band of warriors, to extort presents. The warriors were in the "barry," making a very noisy "palaver" with some of the people of the place. He passed them quietly, and seated himself, with an interpreter, in the chief's yard. The band followed with horn, fife, and drum. After shaking hands with the chief of the band, and before they could urge their demands, he sang the hymn entitled "God is great and good." Before the first verse was sung, the horn was stopped, the fifer held his fife noiselessly to his mouth, and the drum was still. The singing went on. The chief of the party retired, leaving his musicians and company listening silently to the sweet words of the song. Other hymns were sung, and all quietly retired, the musicians, who should have gone with the chief, being the last to leave.

Since July 10th, there have been regular Sabbath exercises in six native villages, besides the station, and regular labors in three of those villages on one or more of the week days. In these Mr. B. has the assistance of Mr. Leigh, Mr. Richmond, Wm. Brooks Tucker, and Albert Tucker. At some of these, great interest has been manifested, and the hearts of the people seemed to be touched.

In March, Mr. Brooks wrote that there was a growing religious interest at the station. The Monday and Thursday meetings for prayer and conference were well attended; and an inquiry meeting was held every Friday afternoon. At the succeeding communion season, four were admitted to the church on profession of faith, one a convert in the school. Mr. B. says:

"I regard the separation of this young man unto the people of God with no ordinary interest. He reads, writes, speaks, and translates into Mendi with considerable ease and accuracy."

The church there now numbers thirteen members.

Two new stations (including Salem Hill) are expected soon to be occupied by white missionary laborers; and in addition, a beautiful location has recently been obtained on Sherbro Island, for an out-station, where a day-school and regular preaching will probably be established. One of these new stations is in the Bargroo country, where the people speak the Sherbro language, and are apparently desirous of having a mission established. Our missionaries are negotiating for a mission site, which, if obtained, it is thought, will prove comparatively a healthy location.

Although the Mission has suffered from the want of a sufficient number of laborers, yet we can not but regard it, to the honor of God's grace, as in a very promising condition, more so than for some years past. The native members of the Mission churches seem to feel a deeper interest in the spiritual welfare of their heathen neighbors, and those of them who, in the opinion of the Mission, are qualified for direct missionary labors, seem ready to enter upon them with the right spirit. We earnestly entreat for the Mission the prayers of all God's people that the lives of the missionaries may be preserved, and that converts may be multiplied and kept from the thousand temptations that beset them.

The Mission have not been able yet to open the station authorized at Salem Hill, owing to the want of sufficient help. This station is in the Sherbro country, is reported as high, dry, and pleasant, with fine springs of soft water. The people have been long expecting a station there, and are pleading with the missionaries to come and live with them, and teach them and their children the knowledge of the true God. The missionaries have had their hearts set on it, and have possession of all the land they need for mission purposes. We hope they will be able to commence there this year.

But there is demand for enlargement every where. Mr. White enumerates several places which the missionaries desire to occupy, where they would be cordially welcomed, and adds:

"As I look upon this wide-spread field on every hand, and dwell upon the importance of the work, as I seem to hear wafted on the evening and morning breeze the mournful cry of distant tribes, 'Come over and help us,' my heart is pained within me that the laborers engaged in cultivating it are so few and feeble. How much we need your prayers, and the prayers of all God's people! These we earnestly desire, but still far more importunately do we desire the aid of the Holy Spirit that we may be enabled to do something, at least, in preparing the way for others."

He relates an instance where, when traveling through the Bargroo country, an aged chief called his people together to listen to the words of the missionary, and took his seat by his side. People outside making some noise, the chief went out and addressed them:

"My people, you know not what you do. A 'God-man' has come to speak to us, and I command you all to be still, and listen to what he says. He brings you true word, and I want you not only to hear God's word, but hold it in your hearts."

Again Mr. White wrote:

"If we could have laborers as rapidly as the way is open to receive them this work, I am persuaded, would go on gloriously. Oh! will not the sons and daughters of the church—at least some of them—will not some of the subjects of the 'revival' come here, and devote their lives in the cause of Africa's regeneration?"

A few extracts from one of Mr. Brooks' letters will indicate what some may regard as the outside influences of the Mission. After mentioning the necessity of direct labors against polygamy, (that vice of all heathen lands,) slavery, and the slave trade, he says:

"The influence of the Mission in favor of Peace is far felt, well understood, every where acknowledged, and can never be extinguished. It is generally acknowledged that the Mission at Boom Falls has been the cause of the last six years peace in that quarter."

Slavery.

"The question of slavery, perhaps more than any other, is affected by our presence and labors.

"A chief remarked to me, some time since, that slaves were no longer of value to him..... A year or two since, he sent some of his slaves to the bush to cut him a farm. They made the farm—worked hard—built themselves a village, and sat down for themselves. At harvest they fetch him what they choose. They no longer ask him for tools, clothes, or seed. They sell rice, make oil and sell it, make cances and sell them; and, so long as they treat him as a child should treat his father, he can have no ground for a palaver, and, when he dies, his children will be as likely to be subject to these very slaves, as the former slaves to them."

The Slave Trade and Lawful Commerce.

"When I first came to the Boom, there was no trade in the river, because of war. Before the war the chief traffic was in slaves; two-thirds of the cances afloat in the Boom waters were engaged in the slave trade. That trade is virtually stopped. Not as many slaves are now carried out of the country as there were cances then in the traffic. In the place of the slave trade has grown up a spirited trade in produce. This year the palm oil purchased in the Boom river from the mouth of the Kittam to this place can not be less than 50,000 gallons—more than one-fourth of the whole shipment from the colony of Sierra Leone in 1853, the year I came to the Boom. The quantity of palm kernels purchased is not less than 10,000 bushels—about one-third the quantity shipped from Sierra Leone the year I came here. The quantity of rice I can not give, but it must not be far from 15,000 to 20,000 bushels. These form the staple articles of export. The whole of this trade has sprung up within the last fifteen years. In this legitimate trade are the elements of progress."

The following incident will be regarded with interest by those who knew personally the "Amistad captives:"

"One of these, John Smith, was once a member of Kaw Mendi Church. He left Kaw Mendi a long time since, and lived very careless until within the last year, when a tornado, heavily charged with electricity, in passing the place where he was living, killed several people. The lightning from the same cloud killed, at different places within a few miles of this place, twenty or twenty-one people. In farm belonging to the people where Smith lives, five persons were killed. This circumstance alarmed Smith, and aroused him to a sense of his condition as a sinner with whom God was angry. He remembered the words of the law, and of the promises in the Gospel. He began to pray in his family, to keep the Sabbath, and talk of the things he had heard respecting the soul, sin, and the judgment. The people, alarmed by the same sad providence, listened, and begged him to tell them more, and pray for them, that God's anger might be turned away from them. He declined praying in public, telling them he was not a missionary, and could not read the good book; that he was not able to teach them, but he would pray with them in his own house. Since then, all the people in the village (which is small) have kept the Sabbath, and met in Smith's house for prayer. He has had morning and evening prayer during the last six months. Now, may we not expect good to come out of this? The fruit of the seed sown at Kaw Mendi will yet be seen. I have no doubt but that the work done there will be all God has designed it should be. Though Kaw Mendi be uninhabited, the effects of the work done there will last longer than we shall, so that we may die and be out of mind when the rich harvest of that mission effort will be reaped year after year. I do not believe in efforts for the salvation of men being lost. I have not so learned Christ. And when I see an instance like the case of Smith, hope revives and I rejoice."

The observations of another year do but strengthen the views heretofore expressed by your Committee, of the comparative importance of Africa as a field of missionary labor, and of the especial duty of this Association, composed as it is of Christian abolitionists, to prosecute their work vigorously in that direction, especially by increasing the force and efficiency of the present mission.

The conviction that it presents peculiar openings for the preaching of the Gospel, and the religious education of the people, and that hundreds of missionaries more than are now there, might find fields in which they could labor with as much hope of success as in any part of the world, is not derived solely from the testimony of our own missionaries, but from that of missionaries of almost every society having laborers there, and of distinguished travelers, who have penetrated its interior. To quote the testimony, especially of Livingston and Bowen, on this point, would be to quote from almost every page of their books. In the providence of God, that continent is now laid open, as never before, to the preaching of the Gospel, and in almost every region where missions have been established, there is a very manifest desire to have their number increased.

The attention of the commercial world is being steadily fixed on Africa. It discovers there an almost unlimited capability of production of some articles of commerce, supplies of which, from other quarters, were failing to meet the continually increasing demand. Especially is this true in relation to cotton. The statesmen and manufacturers of England are unquestionably looking to Africa, rather than to any other quarter, for that large increase of it which is becoming absolutely necessary for the manufacturers of Great Britain, and to meet the continually augmenting consumption of cotton fabrics.

While this promises much good to the people of that continent, there is great danger that the slavery now existing may be increased and strengthened by the rapid rise in the value of labor, and that it will thus become so firmly established as to require the toil of ages for its removal; but the spirit of Christianity, the practical working of the law of love, is sufficient to meet and overcome this danger. Another argument is thus providentially presented for the enlargement of missionary labor. A wise expediency should lead Christians at once to forestal this evil.

Neither time nor space will allow us to spread out the claims of that country on the Christian world, and especially on the United States, for the blessings of the Gospel, on the ground of just compensation for the wrongs heaped upon her. They can only be hinted at. Send to Africa one missionary of Jesus Christ, with the spirit of his Master, for every hundred of her sons torn from her bosom, and carried into perpetual slavery; give to this cause one dollar for every hundred that have been received through the unrequited toil of her children, or from the sale of their flesh and blood, and the day of her redemption will have drawn nigh; and from the East to the West, from hill-top to hill-top, her free children will lift up their hands and their voices and praise God for his abounding grace. Surely, Christians will not think it too much to refund in this way one per cent of what has been unrighteously made in trading with the bones and sinews of the sons of Africa.

It is peculiarly appropriate that Christian abolitionists should select, send forth, and sustain missionaries, who rightly appreciate the requirements of the Gospel, and who will be fearless and faithful in the application of them. Can it be doubted that Africa and her descendants in this country have stronger and more urgent claims on Christian Abolitionists than any other quarter of the globe? When will they recognize the full extent of these claims, and joyfully, cheerfully, generously respond to them?

The Association has acted on the principle that no man who has any doubts as to the essential, enormous wickedness of slavery, or any hesitancy in treating it as a sin, ought to be sent as a missionary to Africa. Christian men, whose sympathies are with the oppressed, whose hearts God has so touched that they are filled with the compassion of Christ, who appreciate the practical operations of the great law of love, these should be selected and sent forth, by tens and by hundreds, to preach the Gospel in these opening and rapidly enlarging fields.

JAMAICA MISSION.

ISLAND OF JAMAICA, W. I.

BRAINERD. Missionaries, Rev. H. B. Hall, Mrs. Hall. Teschers, Mr. Thaddeus Hoppin, Mrs. Hoppin.
ELIOT. Missionaries, Rev. L. Thompson, Mrs. Thompson. Teacher, Miss Lucy Woodcock.
CHESTERFIELD. Missionaries, Rev. C. B. Venning, Mrs. Venning.
PROVIDENCE Missionary, Rev. C. C. Starbuck.
OBERLIN Missionaries, Rev. T. B. Penyield, Mrs. Penyield. Teacher, Miss Sarah M.

TREAT

EASS, Mrs. DOTGLASS.

SEA VIEW........(Out-Station of Eliot.) Teacher, John Williams.

ROCK RIVER,.....(Out-Station of Eliot.) Teacher, Robert C. Jackson.

GOOD HOPE......(Out-Station of Brainerd.) Teachers, W. J. Davis, Jos. Mitchell. Teachers, not located, Mr. S. B. Wilson, Mrs. Wilson, Mise R. J. Vrasir.

Mr. and Mrs. Penfield, who were under appointment last year, joined the Mission in Nov. last. Mr. and Mrs. Douglass, and Miss Treat, have been since appointed, and sailed from New-York, May 10th. They arrived at Jamaica the 25th. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, and Miss Veasie, whose appointment is also recent, sailed for the Mission the 12th inst. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, and their daughter, expected to return, with the missionary company, in May, but under advice of physicians, Mr. Thompson remained here for the further improvement of his health, and his family went without him. He sailed the 12th of October, 1859.

| Stations. | Number in the Congregation. | Rec'd to the Church on profession. | Rec'd to the Church
by letter. | Deceased. | Cut off. | Dismissed by letter. | Present number of
Church Members. | Contributions by the people, exclusive of their contributions for Schools. | Number in Sabbath
School. | |
|---------------|-----------------------------|---------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|-----------|----------|----------------------|--------------------------------------|--|------------------------------|---|
| Brainerd, | 350 | 6 | 0 | 2 | 1 | 1 | 142 | $215.60 | 175 | |
| Eliot, | 200 | 5 | 2 3 | 2 3 | 8 | 4 | 77 | 95.61 | 80 | |
| Oberlin, | 120 | 1 | 3 | 3 | 1 | 100 | 46 | 20.95 | 130 | 1 |
| Providence, | | 1 | 1 | | 1 | | | | . 627 | |
| Chesterfield, | 150 | 5 | 4 | 4 | 4 | | 62 | 55.74 | 70 | |
| Brandon Hill, | 100 | 7 | 0 | 3 | 0 | 0 | 38 | 18.34 | | |
| Richmond, | | | 3 | 12 | | | 100 | | | |

| Schoots. | Male
Pupils, | Female
Pupils. | Whole
Number of
Scholars. | Contributed
for the support of the
Schools. |
|--------------------------------|-----------------|-------------------|---------------------------------|--|
| Richmond, (Industrial School,) | | e VIII | | |
| Eliot, | To 5 . 14 | | 59 | $30.99 |
| Oberlin, | 23 | 22 | 45 | 22.06 |
| Chesterfield, | CONTRACTOR | 57.1.15 | 70 | 49.92 |
| Brainerd, | | | 103 | 41.64 |
| Good Hope, | no Strong | 10 C P 1 | 23 | 8.69 |
| Sea View, | 200 | No. | 19 | 4.08 |
| Rock River, | 1000 | Marian Maria | 94 | 25.25 |

Brainerd.

In reporting the condition of the Brainerd Station, Mr. Hall says:

"From the statistics you see that Brainerd has remained about stationary. A part of the time the congregation has been unusually large, and to a casual observer every thing would appear to be in a prosperous condition; and yet the whole year has been characterized by a want of spiritual life in the church, while dissensions among brethren have been frequent.

"A part of the time I have had an inquiry-class on Monday morning, which has been well attended, though I fear more as a matter of form than from any serious intentions to turn to God. Sometimes, when we do not see the progress that we feel is desirable, we are led to ask what good we are doing by our labors here. But if matters have not progressed as we could desire, they evidently have not retrograded, as they would have done had the Church and community been left without the labors of a minister.

"We hope that some have been converted, and that others have been quickened and built up, and that some seed has been sown, that will bear fruit at another day. "W. J. Davis left Good Hope at the beginning of this year. Joseph Mitchell went into the school there a few weeks since. It seems to be in a prosperous condition "

Eliot.

The protracted absence of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson from this station, though apparently necessary, has been a cause of severe trial to the church there. Mr. Hall, who reports the statistics, says:

"The church at Eliot has evidently suffered from the long absence of their pastor. During the year, eight members have been cut off, six of them for a violation of the seventh commandment. Among those cut off were some of the most prominent members of the church. These are fearful developments.

"Some at least of the members of the church seem to be benefited by the trials through which they have passed. There evidently are some who understand the Gospel, and exemplify it in their lives. God has in this church, as in all our churches a seed to serve him, and the moral force of the church is not lessened by cutting off lifeless branches.

"The school at Sea View was taught a few months by John Williams, (a native.) who left at the end of last year, since which time there has been no school there, for the want of a competent teacher.

"Robert C. Jackson has had a large school at Rock River, but the people do little for his support."

Chesterfield and Brandon Hill.

These stations, though several miles apart, have both been under the pastoral care of Mr. Venning, who has also had charge of the large school at Chesterfield. He says he has been able to prepare little more than a statistical report.

The whole number of members in the two churches, is one hundred. Sixteen have been added during the year.

Referring to the exclusion of some members from the church at Chesterfield, he says:

"We have had trying times in the painful and vexatious work of discipline, which issued in the excommunication of three or four persons. At times, while passing through these troubles, it seemed to me as though every thing was going to destruction, but God has been better to us than our fears; and I now hope that his gracious design is, to bring good out of all the evil things that have happened, and to cause them to issue in the establishment and building up of His church here. A few serious-minded persons have lately made a public profession of their faith, and been added to the church.

"The little church at Brandon Hill has suffered somewhat from the death of two or three of its efficient members. A few persons however, have been brought into the church, and four or five others now stand as candidates for admission. The brethren there have gone on steadily with their new building, till now it is about completed. For the present it will have to be used both as a chapel and a school-room, having also under the same roof small apertments for the teacher. We hope at some future time, the good hand of our God being upon us, to put up a separate house for a dwelling.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

"In such matters we must have in mind the training of the people. We have accordingly encouraged them to build such a house as their own labor and money could accomplish, or nearly so, without incurring any debt. The only assistance we afforded them was £20, out of a grant made annually to our schools from the government."

This church and station had been for a long time destitute of a resident pastor, and the people were prepared to welcome the advent of one among them. After his first Sabbath there, Mr. Penfield wrote :

"I enjoyed the services of the day deeply. The chapel was nearly filled, (an unusual thing for Oberlin,) and the audience were all attention. I think I shall like the people well, as I hope to do them much good. They have so long been without a steady pastor, that they seem overjoyed in the prospect of my living among them. I should judge that the church was in a somewhat backward state, but we could hardly expect it to be different."

Feb. 2, after having been examined by an ecclesiastical council, called for that purpose, Mr. Penfield was ordained, and installed paster over the church. The exercises were deeply interesting, and the appearance of things was thought to warrant a good hope for the future.

In communicating the statistics of the church, the 1st of August, Mr. Penfield calls attention to the fact that before his arrival both the congregation and the Sabbath-school had dwindled to the small number of 20 or 30. He says:

"During the eight months that I have been with this people there has seemed to be a steady increase in the interest manifested by them upon the subject of religion, and of growth in grace. There has been but one united with the church on profession of faith; still we think that, through the mists, we can see the first faint glimmer of the coming day."

From Providence, under the pastoral charge of Mr. Starbuck, and from Richmond, under the care of Mr. Wolcott, we have received no statistical report, owing, we doubt not, to the uncertainty of the mail between this country and Jamaica.

The Industrial School at Richmond has been suspended during a part of the year, for want of a teacher. Mr. and Mrs. Douglass are now there, and have entered upon their labors. We hope the school will speedily be more than restored to its former condition.

The following extracts from an article published in the Jamaica Watchman, will show the character of the school, its condition at the commencement of this year, and its hold on the public confidence. After a criticism on the examination in one or two studies, the writer said:

"But the exercises, as well as compositions, a number of which were presented, showed that the minds of the scholars had been at work—had been gathering ideas, and gaining the power to express them in due connection and in appropriate language. The female pupils here, as usual, exhibited the facility of expression in which girls commonly have the advantage, while in good sense and moral value, their pieces were not at all behind hand. A very commendable feature in all the essays was an entire absence of that wordy pompousness which is so ridiculously common with those of this class that have gained a little smattering of letters. Our young friends of both sexes at Richmond seem to have learned that the power of speech is not given for display, but to express ideas. The modest and sensible style of their compositions is pro-bably due to the love of display being checked by cultivating the sense of responsibility. It is constantly impressed on them that education is not meant to lift them above customary duties, but to fit them for the better discharge of those duties."

To correct an error in relation to the objects of the school, the writer

"The conductors of Richmond aim to impart knowledge for its own sake, and to teach industry as the sure means of personal independence. Their chief aim is neither to make teachers nor laborers, but reliable, intelligent men and women, fitted, according to disposition or occasion, either to teach others or to take their place as sober, exemplary householders, prepared, in short, to work either with their minds or hands. Such a leaven among the masses of Jamaica will be perhaps not the least efficacious agency of moral and temporal good.

"The increase of the school, though not rapid, sufficiently testifies its hold on the confidence of those who need its advantages. Limited accommodations have hitherto compelled the postponement of many applications, but at present there are thirty-six pupils, thirty-three in daily attendance, and applications for the next term far exceed the present capacity of accommodation.

"The easy terms of admittance facilitate its increase." In return for four hours labor each working day, a young man or woman is provided with board, lodging, and tuition. Time is given to earn the needed amount for clothing and other necessaries.

"A hundred acres of land belonging to the school, and a large amount of private land adjoining, in addition to domestic labors, furnish the pupils work. It has been meant from the first to afford facilities for learning trades.

"Besides pupils whose labor is of some account, the superintendent has in his family several friendless or orphan children of tender age, for whose support he has made himself responsible. It is expected and desired that the number of these should increase, but it is needless to say that the resources of Mr. Wolcott are limited, and the benevolence of others may be fitly exercised in relieving a burden which is too heavy for one man's shoulders."

The friends of the oppressed and the supporters of missions among an emancipated people, may certainly rejoice in the uniformity of the testimony borne as to the favorable results of emancipation. Were this the proper occasion, it would be easy to multiply evidence to almost any extent from missionaries of all denominations, from governors of colonies, colonial records, and parliamentary reports, and from the speeches and writings of ministers of the crown and other statesmen, showing the general prosperity of the islands and colonies where emancipation has taken place.

The most noticeable apparent exception to this testimony is drawn from the island of Jamaica, but it would not be difficult to show that much of the alleged adversity which forms the basis of this contradictory testimony is, after all, but seeming adversity. The absentee proprietors, the owners of mortgaged estates, and a few others doubtless experienced loss-at least their affairs were brought to a sudden crisis, by the emancipation act; but the masses were immensely benefited. By far the larger part of that which is real is the result, not of emancipation, but of slavery—the exposure of a delusion that could no longer be held, the development of a previously existing bankruptcy, that could not be concealed after the light of freedom had been shed upon the island.

Freemen always gather around them manifold more of the comforts and luxuries of life than are allowed to slaves; and the changing of the condition of nineteen-twentieths of any population, from that of slaves to freemen, will, of necessity, greatly multiply the consumption and diminish the export of every article that contributes to the comfort, or ministers to the real or supposed wants of the emancipated. The prosperity of a country is the prosperity of the people, and must be measured by the improved condition of the mass; not that of a few persons, less than one-twentieth of the whole. With these obvious truths in view, Mr. Wolcott wrote, as published in the February number of the American Missionary.

"We believe a candid inquirer may find facts here to prove that emancipation has not been less beneficial to Jamaica than to other islands. I believe that in the apparent deficiencies will be found the foundation for a broader and deeper independence, and a more thorough development of manhood than in any other of the islands. The production of the great staples by large planters is indeed much less than formerly, but the same production by small farmers is largely on the increase. The amount of exports does not give a true basis for calculating our comparative prosperity. Home consumption is now incomparably greater than in the 'pulmy days' of slavery, and of course home enjoyments."

The following extract from a despatch of Lord John Russell, quoted by the Governor of Barbadoes, as to the favorable results of emancipation, has some bearing in the same direction:

"Carrying into effect the religious and benevolent views of the nation at large, it was their object to convert slaves into freemen, to rescue their brethren of Africa from the lash of compulsory toil, and establish them as Christian men on the soil where they had been transported as chattels or beasts of burdon. On this, the principal question of all, there is, I am happy to say, no room for doubt. None of the most inveterate opponents of our recent measures of emancipation allege that the negroes have turned robbers or plunderers, or blood-thirsty insurgents, What appears from their statement is, that they have become shopkeepers, and petty traders, and hucksters, and small freeholders—a blessed change which Providence has enabled us to accomplish."

There can be no possible question but that the moral and spiritual condition not only of the emancipated, but of all the people of the Island has been improved by emancipation, and the missionary labor thereby rendered more efficacious. Those who argue against this from the defections of a few, or the occasional exhibition of an adverse state of things, must, to be consistent, argue against an emancipation wrought out by direct divine appointment, and by divinely constituted leaders, or they must deny the facts of Jewish history. If any thing additional were needed, we might say, with the Bishop of Barbadoes:

"It is a common mistake, in revolutions of this kind, to look for speedier results of a beneficial character than the nature of things admits. External changes inaugurate a new state of things; they do not at once accomplish it; the seed is sown, but the harvest is not yet. In regard to slavery in particular, I need not say that its sequels are not to be got rid of in one or two, or even three generations, and yet we are only in the first."

In this first generation there are favorable results exhibiting manliness, moral worth, and Christian character, such as were nearly impossible in a condition of slavery. The good results that God by his providence and his gracious blessing has granted to the labors of Christian missionaries, are fast and effectually silencing the objections of those who argue against the safety or the expediency of emancipation.

The reports of missionary labor among the colored people, not only of Jamaica, but wherever they have been subjected to the almost dehumanizing influences of slavery, often call to mind incidents connected with the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt under divinely appointed leaders. At one time God seems to be walking in their midst, blessing and sanctifying them by his presence and the operations of his Holy Spirit, and the heart of the missionary rejoices, as Moses did on the further bank of the Red Sea. Again, under the power of some great temptation, or when the restraining influence of the Spirit, or the stated means of grace, are for a time withdrawn, all things seem to go backward, and developments of wickedness take place, in most cases having a marked relation to the evils of their former condition, that try the missionary as the Israelitish leader was tried when he brake the tables of stone, and seemed ready to give up the people in despair.

Yet, in the midst of all this, we have confidence that in every thing which relates to the moral and spiritual improvement of the people, the missionary of the cross has as much reason as Moses and Aaron had, to believe that their emancipation from slavery was of God, and that labors for their improvement are appointed by him, and will have his blessing. The spiritual condition of the emancipated people of Jamaica will compare not unfavorably with that of any people who have been brought out from under the crushing influences of oppression.

OJIBUE MISSION.

LAKE WINNEPEG, MINNESOTA TERRITORY.

Missionaries—Rey, S. G. Wright, Joseph S. Fisher, David B. Spencer, E. W. Carver, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Spencer, and Mrs. Carver.

There has been, for some years, both among the friends of missions and the missionaries themselves, a growing feeling of discouragement in regard to missionary labors among the Indians of the far Northwest, and a strong doubt as to whether the prospect of future favorable results was such as to warrant the continuance of these labors. A large number of missions, vigorously prosecuted for a long time, by several distinct missionary bodies, both in this country and England, have been successively abandoned.

This feeling has been for some time on the increase among our missionaries to the Ojibues, northwest of Lake Superior, and two years since it so nearly culminated that they were almost ready to abandon their work, and leave the country. The remembrance of some extraordinary manifestations of Divine grace in the conversion, the godly lives, and triumphant deaths of some of the Indians, which they had from time to time witnessed as the result of their labors, and their unwillingness to leave, like sheep in the wilderness, some whom they had every reason to believe were Christ's little ones, restrained them, and led them to determine on one more effort, by concentrating on a single station the labor that had theretofore been expended on two or three. There was not, however, such confidence of hopeful results as is often, under God, a presage of success. They felt that it was a last effort, and it is not improbable that this feeling may have contributed to the result.

Some of the causes for discouragement had such rapid increase or development that one of the missionaries, Rev. Mr. Wright, and his wife, felt that the good likely to be accomplished would not warrant their remaining there, if the funds for their support were to come wholly from the Church, but as an arrangement had been entered into by which the Government would sustain, for some years, their school operations, he consented to remain.

The letters received from the Mission, last Autumn, indicated to the Executive Committee that the missionaries were rapidly coming to the conclusion that their work for those Indians was about done. In December the Corresponding Secretary wrote to the Mission, requesting them to communicate in full the causes of their discouragement, and their views as to the future prospects of the Mission. Their replies, exhibiting great unanimity of views and feeling, brought before the minds of the Committee some facts before wholly unknown, and were conclusive that the Mission could not be sustained by the missionaries. Mr. Carter determined to remove without waiting for the further action of the Committee.

At the request of the Committee, Rev. Mr. Bardwell, who had formerly been connected with the Mission, who, for many years, had acted as general agent and superintendent of the same, and was perfectly familiar with all its operations, visited it. A meeting of all the members of the Mission was held. After a full expression of their individual feelings, it was decided unanimously that the Mission ought to be given up. If those who have had sixteen years experience among these Indians, who have a good knowledge of their language, and in whom the Indians, as well as the Committee, have as much confidence as they can be expected to have in any company of men, are unanimous that it is their duty to withdraw from them, there seems to be little hope that strangers, who would have the language to acquire, would succeed any better. The Executive Committee therefore recommend the relinquishment of the Mission. Mr. Wright will remain there during the winter, at least; but his support will come wholly from the Government. Mr. Spencer has removed to another part of the Indian country, to engage in a school supported also by Government.

From the reasons given by the brethren for the conclusions to which they have arrived, we note the following:

For sixteen years the Indians, among whom their Mission is located, have had the Gospel preached to them, and though there have been some bright fruits of these labors, the anticipations of the missionaries are very far from having been met. Most of those who have professed religion were converted during the first five or six years' labor there, and now the remainder of the people seem to have rejected the Gospel. They turn a deaf ear to its invitations, and will not attend religious meetings.

The parents have so little regard for the education of their children, that it is almost impossible for the missionaries to retain them long enough to do them any real good.

Intemperance has greatly increased within a few years, and the facilities for obtaining the means of intoxication are increasing yearly. "The whole nation," says Mr. Wright, "is being ruined by the use of whisky. Not less than three barrels a day are sold at Crow Wing to the Indians. A part of it is brought to Lake Winnipeg. . . . Last winter a drunken gang came when we were all asleep, and broke a window, demanding admittance. The next day they came again, and began their depredations. Drunken Indians are everywhere, and our church members do not all resist the temptation."

It is stated that through the licentious habits of vile white men on the frontier, a destructive disease is rapidly spreading among the Indians. A physician has been sent into the country by the Government, to minister to the affected. He says a very large proportion of the Indians are diseased, that it has increased a hundredfold within a few years, that even little children are affected, and are dying with it. The facts that have been reported to us, showing the extent and dreadful effects of this disease, can not be detailed here.

The influence of traders in the country, and of many of the Government officials, is such as to thwart the influence of the Mission, and work the destruction of the Indian.

Combined with these and other discouragements, and the fact that the blessings of the Spirit seem to be withheld from their labors, there has been a constantly increasing impression on the minds of the missionaries that their work there was done, and that God was directing them away from that field. The fact that men and means were greatly needed in more promising fields, has ripened this feeling into conviction, in accordance with which the brethren and the Committee, after earnest prayer for Divine guidance, have acted.

While he remains in the country, Mr. Wright will look after and instruct the little flock, and it is hoped that most of them are rooted and grounded in the faith, and will be kept by the power of God unto salvation.

Of the steadfastness of the little church at Red Lake Mr. Wright has given the following account:

"Early last fall, a Catholic priest from among the Ottawas established himself at Red Lake. As we supposed, he spared no time in visiting our members there. His object was to prevail upon them to abaudon their faith at once; and, as he had heard that I intended to visit them, he was very anxious to overthrow their faith before I should come, lest my influence should prove a barrier in his way. He commenced his labors by telling them that we were heretics, and they could not listen to us again without periling their souls. He visited them frequently, urging them to join the true church without delay.

"To all his arguments they replied in substance as follows: 'We are not able to argue this matter with you, for we are ignorant, but we can not abandon our religion and join yours. One reason is, when we received the Word, we received it as the Word of God. We were taught to put all our trust in God alone. We were taught that all our own works could not secure the favor of God, or the pardon of sins. We believed, gave ourselves to the Lord Jesus Christ, trusted in him for salvation, and found what we sought, the favor of God. Our faith, we trust, has purified our hearts, and what do we need more? Again, we are acquainted with those whom you instruct, who put confidence in you, and we know, and you know, that they are all addicted to drunkenness, gambling, dancing, slandering, cheating, lying, etc. Now what motive can we have to join such a people? And further, several of our praying friends have been called away. We witnessed their departure from this world, and they all died in peace. The faith we hold carried them triumphantly over the river of death, and we have no doubt but they are now with the Lord in glory. These reasons are sufficient to convince us that our teachers are true and right, and that we shall gain nothing by listening to you."

"The priest gave up all hope of converting them, and addressed his labors to his own people, but his labors were suddenly arrested by death."

OJIBUE AND OTTAWA MISSION.

GRAND TRAVERSE BAY, MICHIGAN.

Missionary, Rev. GEO. N. SMITH.

This Mission was taken under the care of the Association last December. It is located in the Northwestern part of Michigan, at Northport, Grand Traverse Bay. The Indians among whom he labors are part Ojibues, and a part Ottawas. To these Mr. Smith preaches in their native language. As the white population is continually increasing in that region, he preaches a part of the time to them. At the commencement of this year (1859) the church consisted of forty-nine members, (forty-one being natives, twenty-four males and seventeen females.) One of the white and ten of the native members were then under censure. Some of them seemed to be inclining back to Romanism, from which they were originally received.

Mr. Smith now reports eight months' labor. In this time there have been seven hopeful conversions among the Indians, all of whom have joined the church. It now consists of fifty-five members, forty-eight being Indians, and seven whites. Mr. Smith says: "We have but one church, but I preach in three different places; in Northport, every alternate Sabbath morning, to a white congregation; in the afternoon, to a native congregation, and a third time, to a white congregation, at a place which I have called the Head of the Harbor, nearly three miles from here by land—nearer by water. It is a newer settlement than this, and promises well. There is no liquor sold in that vicinity, to my knowledge.

"Every alternate Sabbath, I preach at Onumuneseville, three miles from home, an Indian village, unmixed with whites situated on the shore of Lake Michigan. The Indians own all the land in the vicinity. The Government school is kept there. The scholars are advancing very well.

"Before we came here, that band was in what is denominated a Pagan state; now almost all the heads of families, and a good proportion of the young people, are members of our Mission Church, and their daily walk is, as far as can be seen, worthy of the Christian name.

"One thing connected with that band I must mention as worthy of note. The chief's son, Wasacquam, soon after he joined the church, came to our school a few days, learned the alphabet and how to construct simple words, and then sought other aids from time to time. He then taught his wife, (he had quite a family at that time,) and the young men and women, married and single, so that in a short time a large proportion could take their hymn-books and single without difficulty. Many of them can read the Scriptures, and to the friend of missions their condition is very encouraging. The old chief, Onumunese, died two years ago this fall. Though he never professed religion, he almost always came to meeting, and used his influence decidedly to promote civilization and religion among his people.

"The population of this village (Northport) is thought to be 300, and 300 more reside in the vicinity. I think the morals of the place have improved during the past year; a better class of people have come in this summer, and though considerable liquor is still sold and used, and drunkenness prevails, yet not so much so as last year. Not so many Indiana drink as formerly many Indians drink as formerly.

"In view of all the facts, I think we have cause of gratitude for the past, and hope for the future, both in relation to the native and white population, and with the blessing of God resting on our unworthy labors, we shall expect that society will be established on the only true foundation, the principles of the Gospel, and many souls, as the result, be made heirs of immortal life."

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

MAKAWAO, EAST MAUI.

Missionaries, Rev. J. S. Green, Mrs. Green, six native assistants. One station, three out-stations.*

Under the figure of the watchman upon Mount Seir answering to the inquiry, "What of the night?" "The morning cometh, and also the night," Mr. Green, in reporting his own labors, briefly reviews the history of the Islands, and of missionary labors there, showing that while, through the abounding grace of God, there has been frequent reason to say concerning individuals, the churches, and the nation, "the morning cometh," there has often been reason to add, "and also the night." We can only make some brief quotations from this review.

In consequence of the failing health of Mrs. Green, concerning which there are very serious apprehensions, and of his own labors, in this, his thirty-first year of missionary life in the Islands, he says:

"We still observe the monthly concert on the first Monday of each month. On the second Monday we pray unitedly for schools; on the third, for seamen; on the fourth Monday, when there are five Mondays in the month, for the cause of peace, and on the last for the enslaved. Other labors of the week are much as reported in former years."

[&]quot;Our mission was originally called Old Wing Mission, after a very aged chief, (said to have been over 100, perhaps 110 years old, uncle of our chief at that time,) who died the year our mission was established.

^{*} Mr. Green formerly reported six out-stations. The number of churches, or of preaching places, is not diminished; but where two churches meet together at their communion seasons be regards them as one station.

33

These consist in a meeting with his people at sunrise, which generally lasts two hours; preaching in English at 11 o'clock A.M.; and again meeting with the people, old and young, at 1 P.M. for the study of the Bible. This is often followed by a short meeting with the church.

After stating some of the benefits of this English service, Mr. Green adds:

"If things continue to improve as they have done for the last five years, we shall need a house for worshiping in English, and shall have many hearers. I hope we may ere long have a church of Christ among the 'foreigners.'"

Out-Stations,

"Kenkea.—This district is in Kela, some twelve miles from Makawao. There we have a stone meeting-house, with a bell. Directly below Keokea, on the sea shore, is another stone meeting-house, with a bell. This, Kalepolepo, constitutes with Keokea one station, the two congregations uniting on communion days. This church, from a small beginning and a feeble state, has greatly increased, is decidedly prosperous, is breaking forth on the right hand and on the left, and enlarging its borders. Kahikinui, a small lava district, has united with Keokea, and is an out-station of this church. The people there are about building a small stone church. During the year past, fifty-seven individuals have united with the Keokea branch. Present appearances seem to warrant us in saying concerning this branch of our church, 'The morning cometh.' May the light continually strengthen until the perfect day.
"Hullo is another branch church. Of the church here we began to predict the "Hurlo is another branch church. Of the church here we began to predict the coming night. But at our last communion season we were encouraged. Some backsidiers were restored, and several from the world were propounded to unite with the church. I hope to do more for both branches of our church, now that our son, Joseph Porter Green, has returned from school, to teach our English-Hawaiian school, and to labor with me on the Sabbath, both at Makawao and also at both the out-stations. An excellent Sabbath-school, the best in all my field, is taught at Huelo. The adults also commit by heart the precious oracles of God. Their beautiful stone meeting-house is nearly finished, when the church and congregation will be very comfortable, and that without being in debt.

"Makawao is the central church, and the place of my residence. Three individuals have united with it during the year. We hope ere long to receive others."

Of the prospects of the nation, the future of Hawaii, Mr. Green writes. doubtingly. He says that now:

"After all that God has done for the Hawaiian race, its chiefs, and people, the old heathen 'Hula,' a licentious, shameful dance, is revived and practised at mid-day, defended and patronized by the Government press, winked at by chiefs and foreign ministers of the King, and actually to be licensed at Honolulu, and this, though the King himself admits that it is of such a character that no man can say one word in its favor."

Another fact is, that strenuous efforts are being made in which two of the ministers of the King, one from England and one from the United States, are active, to repeal the law restricting the natives in the purchase, sale, and use at pleasure of intoxicating drinks. The bill for repeal has already once passed the House of Nobles, but was defeated in the House of Representatives. The defeated nobles hope for the return of a more pliant set of representatives, and the passage of the bill. Mr. Green says:

"Should the prohibition be repealed, the utter ruin of the nation would seem to be speedy and certain." He concludes his report by saying:

"Pray for us, brethren and friends, that we may be saved from unreasonable and wicked men; that God will give repentance to chiefs and people, and yet save the Hawaiian nation from impending ruin."

CANADA MISSION.

ROCHESTER, Essex Co., Canada West.—Rev. D. Hotchkiss, Mrs. Hotchkiss. DRESDEN, Rev. L. C. Chambers.

Mr. Hotchkiss continues his labors among the colored people of Canada at the Puce River, Little River, and Pike's Creek.

At several times during the year he has written very encouragingly concerning his field of labor, notwithstanding he meets with some severe trials. In January, in answer to the inquiry, "What is the Lord doing among you?" he wrote:

"Unless I am greatly deceived he is doing wonders." I never saw a more evident change, a constant revival spirit, no enthusiasm, no jumping, but a large weeping congregation. There never appeared to me so great an opportunity for doing good, and we are trying to improve it. Our numbers, of course, are not so large as in well filled towns or neighborhoods, for we are comparatively small; but, considering our numbers, our congregations are large and very attentive, and they keep coming in. We now number twenty-five church members here at the Puce, with a good prospect of more. If we do not prosper here, it will not be for a lack of a willingness on the part of our God, in answer to your prayers."

The church at Puce was formed in June, 1858, with fourteen members; seventeen have since been added; three have been excommunicated, and one has died. The number of members is now twenty-six. In his last report he says: "Our meetings here are well attended and very encouraging. Several of our school children appear serious, and a number have manifested a good deal of engagedness, and speak freely of their determination to give up all for Christ."

The church at Little River contains thirteen members. For some time past, there has been serious opposition to his labors at this place, but a change has taken place for the better; his audiences are now large and attentive, and he hopes the Lord is about to bless his word abundantly. At Pike's Creek there are now but five members; one has been added during the year, and one has died.

Mrs. Hotchkiss has continued to teach, with very encouraging success, throughout the greater portion of the year, but has at length been compelled by failing health to relinquish this charge. The school is at present vacant.

Rev. Mr. Chambers has received his appointment during the year. He is a colored brother, and is laboring among the colored people, mostly in the vicinity of Dresden. He has two regular preaching places, at some distance from Dresden, and other occasional appointments. He has a large Sabbath-school under his charge at Dresden, and smaller ones at his regular appointments away from there. He has organized two small churches since his appointment, and has from time to time reported the apparent presence of the Holy Spirit, the hopeful conversion of some of his hearers, and their connection with these churches. The number of members in them at present is not given. From his letters we judge they are in such a condition as to furnish him good ground of hope in the future.

SIAM MISSION.

BANGKOK, SIAM.

Missionaries, Rev. D. B. BRADLEY, M.D., and Mrs. BRADLEY.

There are very cheering indications that the long tried faith of missionaries in Siam is about to be encouraged and strengthened by the manifestations of the Divine blessing in the conversion and salvation of souls. For many long, wearisome years they have labored and prayed with little visible success, yet they have hoped that he who sent them forth to preach his Gospel, in the midst of such great darkness, would yet make it manifest that that Gospel was the power of God unto salvation, by making it effectual even over character as unreliable and hopeless as that of the Siamese. That the missionaries should not have been fed to abandon their work as lacking the Divine sanction, can only be attributed to the grace of God strengthening their faith in his assurance, "Lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The several missions in Siam are now rejoicing in the apparent conversion of some of their people to Christ.

In May last, Dr. Bradley wrote: *

andafara + + 10 Jul

"We have now a little more interest manifested for the concerns of the soul than formerly. Two of our printers seem a good deal serious, and have expressed a desire to be Christians. Indeed, Sawat, a very interesting young man, about whom I wrote you a long time ago, is now foreman in the office, and appears a good deal like a Christian. He protests against idolatry, and has for years been endeavoring to live as did Joseph of Arimathea before the passion of Christ."

Dr. Bradley also spoke of a young priest, who had become very familiar with all the religious tracts and portions of Divine truth published in Siamese. He affirms that he is no more a worshiper of idels, and wishes to be a Christian; and has become a voluntary distributor of religious truth. He added: "A Siamese teacher in the Presbyterian Mission Boarding School gives very cheering evidences of being a regenerated man, and stands propounded for admission to the church of that mission."

In June, Mrs. Bradley wrote, in the absence of her husband, expressing her confidence in the hopeful conversion of several of the Siamese, who had been more or less connected with their Mission.

July 15, Dr. Bradley wrote:

"The Lord, in great mercy, has, as we trust, visited a number of Siamese men and women, connected with our family and with our printing office, by the special influences of his Spirit, and made them willing, in the day of his power, to believe in Christ and give their hearts to him."

He said the young men, mentioned by him in May, continued steadfast in the service of God, and seemed to be growing Christians; and that on the second Sabbath in June, during his absence, the special power of the Spirit seemed to be present: "And eleven Siamese, besides the two young men mentioned, publicly confessed Christ, solemnly promising that they would henceforth and forever renounce idolatry and be true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God. All these still hold on to their profession, and some of them appear quite well. For these we can not but rejoice and praise the Lord. But we rejoice with trembling. They take part in our prayer-meetings, and seem to pray in the spirit."

Three weeks before, Dr. B. wrote that a noonday prayer meeting had been established to meet the wants of those who lived so far off that they could not be with them morning and evening. This was well attended. He says:

"Our brethren of the Presbyterian Mission attended on the 9th inst, and expressed themselves as having there seen wonderful things for Siam, and as having lively hopes that it was the genuine work of the Spirit. One of the young men who prayed had formerly been under their tuition three or four years."

All the missionaries in Siam make occasional tours into the country for preaching. They are sometimes gone two or three weeks. In a recent tour made by Dr. Bradley, in company with the Rev. R. Telford, of the Baptist Mission, they were gone sixteen days, and preached in twelve different towns; nine of them had never before been visited by Protestant missionaries. "It was rare," says Dr. B., "that they did not find, in every company, some who had heard the Gospel at Bangkok, or learned something of it from the tracts and portions of the Bible distributed by the missionaries." Some of the incidents of these preaching tours are very interesting. One of them is thus related by Dr. Bradley:

"At a service which we held on board our boat, in the evening, I was pleased, and a good deal encouraged, by the demeanor of a gray-headed woman, to whom I had preached in the morning, by the wayside. Before the meeting, she brought a little present of rice, as their custom is, and said she was much interested in what she had been taught in the morning; that she believed it was truth—that God was indeed alive, the maker and preserver of the Universe; that Buddhism was therefore false and ruinous, and that she was determined to be a follower of Jesus. She moreover said that in hearing me preach she seemed to realize the fulfillment of a dream, which she had a shortstime before, of having found a most precious diamond, on Mount Kouluang. Upon this I turned to the parable of the pearl of great price, and read it to her. I was surprised to find that she, a sooman sixty-five years old, could read it herself, and that, too, without the aid of glasses. A copy of Matthew, and a tract on prayer, were given to her. She asked for nothing but the Gospel, excepting that she wished to cultivate our acquaintance, and to have us and our colleagues call at her house whenever we passed along that way."

In the printing-office, to which Dr. Bradley alludes, he is very much assisted by his two older children. The burden of the work is performed by Siamese workmen, and goes on during his absence under the supervision of his family. There are frequent ealls for printing, both in English and Siamese, for which pay is received. From this source, and the rent of mission buildings, not needed at present, a sum has been received large enough to defray all the expenses of the mission for the year. Dr. Bradley asks imploringly for additional missionary aid, and the increasing importance of the work there gives emphasis and urgency to his entreaty. The Executive Committee will be glad to send another missionary family

COPTIC MISSION, EGYPT.

Flattering as were the prospects of this mission at its commencement, no favorable progress has been made in relation to it during the year. Judging it probable that the operations of the mission would not be speedily resumed, Mr. Murad, in May, requested a release from its connection, that he might seek employment elsewhere-at the same time expressing his readiness to return to Egypt whenever the Committee should call upon him, if not at the time bound by other engagements. The Committee were gratified at this expression of Mr. Murad's views, and gave him an honorable release from his connection with its missions.

Rev. Mr. Martin's health has continued such that the Executive Committee have not felt willing definitely to decide upon his return to missionary labors in Egypt. A council of physicians, held in New-York last winter, decided that it was unsafe for him to do so, under the ordinary circumstances of missionary life. His affections, however, were so strongly fastened upon this field that, until very recently, he has been unwilling to relinquish the idea of returning to his labors.

From their confidence in the opinions of the council of physicians referred to, the Executive Committee, while they assured Mr. Martin that they would provide with pleasure for a return to his labors among the Copts, with a suitable reinforcement, if the condition of his health warranted it, felt bound to express their opinion that his own apprehensions and those of the physicians were too well founded to warrant his doing so.

On the 17th of September he requested a release from his connection with the Association, in the following letter:

"After long waiting and careful deliberation, with carnest prayer, we are at last forced to the conclusion that the providence of God does not favor our return to Egypt.

"As you are aware, the best medical advice which we could obtain has decided."

"As you are aware, the best medical advice which we could obtain has decided." that it is unadvisable for me to return to Egypt, under the ordinary conditions of missionary labor. The experience of several months since this advice was given has only confirmed my acquiescence in it. Nor do I see how any arrangement for our return could be made which would not be likely to involve either the risk of health or a material abridgment of our usefulness in the missionary field for a considerable time to come.

"Under these circumstances we are forced, though with great reluctance, to the conclusion that it is probably our duty to relinquish the hope which we have so long cherished of being able to return to the field in which it was our privilege to

"We had hoped that it might be ours to live and die in the field of our 'first love.' We do not relinquish it because we have, or ever have had, a doubt as to the success of labor there, nor because we have, or ever have had, a doubt at the success of labor there, nor because we desire to leave the service of the Association; but because, with the best light we can obtain, we think Providence indicates that duty does not call us to return to Egypt.

"I therefore respectfully request for Mrs. Martin and myself that we may be released from our connection with the Association.

"We shall ever be thankful that we were permitted to labor in Egypt for a time; and that during our entire connection with the Association, now covering a period of more than six years, secondality and Christian feeling.
"With Christian regards, I remain, of more than six years, nothing, so far as we know, has ever occurred to interrupt egards, I remain,

"Very respectfully yours,
"C. F. Martin."

At the next meeting of the Committee his request was granted. There has not eyet been time for the Executive Committee to mature any plans to meet this new condition of its affairs, to from I a will mard application of the age count and bounds and rate on I.

the near that are the state of the second track to the following the second of with the analytic reality of the second second to be second to the second and to ment to supplied that the second set rings one region factors all tall had been been under the best the savered mendies to attend through vives material continue with a state of marrot cur of firm the concerns of a farmer door, as hift save but to portal post filipon of crafting that on the first the figiting properties, with administration of the second s

HOME MISSIONS

The year just closed has been one rich in blessings from the "Lord of the Harvest," The number of laborers in our Home field has been increased, and a greater amount of good secured, we believe, than in any former year. Amid the various trials and exposures of some of the missionaries and colporteurs, we have renewed occasion for gratitude to God for the protection he has vouchsafed to them, and for his saving mercies to others through their instrumentality. Never have the friends of the cause had so much reason for encouragement, and at no former period has it been so evident that our trust in the Divine promises, with regard to the accomplishment of the objects of the Association, would be realized.

GENERAL TABLE.

Showing in parallel columns,

- 1. An alphabetical list of missionaries.
- 2. The names of churches and missionary districts aided.
- 3. Dates of commissions, or time of commencing labor.
- 4. Months of labor performed since the last report.
- 5. Hopeful conversions.
- Additions to the churches, on examination.
- 7. Additions to the churches, by letter.
- 8. Number of church members.
- 9. Amount of aid pledged for a year's service.
- 10. Number of church members pledged to total abstinence.
- 11. Amount of contributions to benevolent objects.
- 12. Number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars.
- 13. Other particulars.

EXPLANATIONS.

The reports of statistics by the missionaries are to the 1st of August. In some instances the number of members in two or more churches is given together.

For further explanations, see page 42.

For "Selections from the Reports of Home Missionaries," see p. 58.

OME MISSIONS .- SCHEDULE.

| OTHER PARTICULARS. | Church edifice building. Church organized at Mt. Gilead. Church organized at Henderson. Revival. Preaches in various places. Revival. Efforts ageins gambling and intemperance. Church edifice building. Church organized. Preached much against slavery. Sermons published there. Now missionary agent in New England, etc., among people | Presides often in protracted meetings, etc. [Lenyroring field. Revival at Demont—since at Do Kaib only. Presides also at Whithrop. Mo., and other places. Two Hatches organized. Hatches organized. | Interesting gold, Same service is to Colon. Edward in cher phones sho. For other places. Labored in other places sho. For Pur revirsals. Two churches organized. Church editio built. Presched in other places. Church organized at Lincoln. Fresched. In Commission cleaned organized at Lincoln. | See Pee |
|--|--|--|--|---|
| No. of S. School and
Bible Class Scholars. | 118
100
100
110
110
110
110
110
110
110 | - | 00 100
00 642
00 70 | 8888 |
| Contributions to
Benevolent Objects. | 6 50 146
40 00 131
16
7 90 50
116 | 35 90
150 90 | 40 00
60 00
6 00 | 86 . 98 |
| rledged to Total | 2 23 2 3 | 3332 2 | 111 1 | 1111 511 |
| Pledged. Pledged to Total Pledged to Total Abstinence. | 100 1100 1100 | 200 400 000 | 200 100 | 800 24 600
800 24 600
800 24 600 |
| No. of Members. | 85 8 88 8 8 | 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 2 | 151
161
24 | 4835 848
4858 848 |
| Additions by Let- | 12 10 10 1 | 01 to 12 | 8 8 | or 4 0 00 |
| Additions on Examination. | 8 1 8 | 5 H | 180 | H4 68컵 |
| stons, | 8 PH 4 | 1 27 | 250 | 88 1 |
| Months of Labor
Reported.
Hopeful Conver- | 55 04T - | . wg % ; g | 202 0 | සෙයස් සෙයස |
| DATE OF COMMISSION. | Oct. 1, 1858
June 1, 1858
Jan. 1, 1859
Jan. 1, 1859
Jan. 1, 1858
Mar. 1, 1858
Arrell 1, 1858 | Obio Mar 7, 1859
Dec. 25, 1859
June 1, 1859
Sept. 1, 1859
and Bar- April 1, 1859 | 16,1859
1,1858
1,1858
2,1858 | Nov. 1, 1857
July 1, 1857
Dec. 1, 1858
Dec. 1, 1868
April 1, 1869
Jan. 1, 1869
Oct. 1, 1869 |
| CHUROHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | | Agent and Missionary in Sto, Ohio, Octors. Che. of La Ports and Rawnowyllis, Ohio List Cone. Che. of La Ports and Rawnowyllis, Ohio, List Cone. Ch., Paterson, N. a. (Cone. Ch., Actalison, Kanasa. Stefano, C. Ch., Earl, Paw-Paw, Dundee, and Barlington, Ill. | Free Fresh. Chs., Fellctr, and Cedron, Ohlo
Chs., at Bantons and McKes, Ky.
Cong. Ch., Cambrige, Centerville, Riceville, and Storretania, Pa.
Cong. Chs., McLean and Nebraska, Ill. | Come Ch. Wayne Centre, III. Wayne Centre, III. Union Ch. of Christ, Brocklyn, Minn Union Ch. of Christ, Brocklyn, Minn Drong Cha, Chitton and Kanawaca, Kansaa. Cong. Ch., Wantegan, III. Ewragelist, Quaquelcon, Iowa. Jan. Glenville Ch., Cabin Creek, Bestheada Ch., Ger. Jan. Glenville Ch., Cabin Creek, Bestheada Ch., Ger. Jan. Glenville Ch., Cabin Creek, Bestheada Ch., Ger. Oct. |
| MIBSIONARIES. | B. L. Adafr. M. N. Adams. B. M. Amsden. E. Andrus. Geo. Barnum. G. W. Bassett. R. C. Rireo. | M. Brigger
H. A. Bu
In H. By | J. B. Campbell
Geo. Candee
U. T. Chamberlain.
H. W. Gobb | B. B. Cone. J. T. Cook. Melson Cook. Joseph W. Cross. G. T. Commins. James B. Dayls. |

HOME MISSIONS.—SCHEDULE.—(Continued.)

| MISSIONARIES, | CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY DISTRICTS. | DATE OF
COMMIS-
SION. | Months of Labor
Reported. | Hopeful Conver- | Additions on Ex- | Additions by Let- | No. of Members. | Dollars of Aid
Pledged. | Pledged to Total Abstinence. | Contributions to
Benevolent Objects. | No. of S. School and
Bible Class Scholars | OTHER PARTICULARS. |
|--|---|--|------------------------------|---------------------|------------------|-------------------|--|---|------------------------------|---|--|---|
| Samuel Dilley
O. B. Donaldson
Miles Doolittle | Buena Vista and Pisgah Cong. Cha., Fort Recovery, Ohlo. Cedron Cong. Ch. of Chill, Ill. Cong. Ch. of Lowell, Wis. Cong. Cha., East Troy and Rochester, Wis. Cong. Cha., Eeedsburg, Wis. | April 1, 1859
Oct. 17, 1858
Sept. 3, 1859 | 12 9 | 15
16
5 | 12
5
4 | 1 1 5 | 32
27
27
30
58 | 100
150
100
100 | | 1 00
13 00
8 00
11 50 | 80
57
70 | Buena Vista is in Ind. Revival Revivala. A deacon preparing for the ministry. Progress making. Revival. No report from Rechester. Preaches also in destitute piaces. Revival. One brother |
| Cyrus H. Eston | Congregation, Livonis, Mich | Nov. 1, 1858 | 9 | 4 | 10 | 1 | 45
52. | 75
450
100
450 | | | 85 | preparing for ministry. Labored only part of the time at Livonia. Labors extensively in destitute fields. No report. Added other missionaries in revivala. Commission closed. Presches in various counties; aids missionaries; is promoting Literary institution at Rorea. Revival. |
| J. W. Fox | Itinerates, Indianapolis, Kansas. Cong. Ch., Leroy, N. Y. Cha., Adama, Valley Farms, and Paris, Iowa Free Presis, Cha., Frankfort and North Fork, Ohlo. Ist Cong. Ch., Prospect City, Ill. Evangelist, Eight, Iowa | Feb. 15, 1858
June 1, 1859
Jan. 1, 1859
Sept. 18, 1858 | 12
12
7 | 8
25
25
25 | 8
18
25 | 1 1 8 | 40
58
25
92
18 | 2624
100
200
90
150
200 | | 175 00 | 115 | Presched to Hawarth Wes. church, and at three stations on the Cottonwood, Necsho, etc. Commission closed.
Revival.
Revival. Promising field.
Labors extensively in Northern Iowa. Three revivals. Two |
| T. H. Holmes
Wm. Holmes
Ezra Howland
E. J. Hughes | Cong. Ch., Lima and Illyria, Iowa Free Ch., Sunbury, Ill. Cong. Ch., Baraboo, Wis. Maple Grove Cong. Ch., Cato, Wis. Trinity Cong. Ch., Albion, Ill. Evangelist in Southern Ill. Cong. Ch., Oregon, Ohlo. Weish Cal. Meth. Ch., St. Clair, Pa. Female Missionary teacher, Evansville, Ind | Jan. 1, 1859
Jan. 1, 1859
Dec. 24, 1858
Aug. 1, 1858
Sept. 1, 1858 | 12
8
12 | 60
8
6 | 8 | 2 2 | 16
15
90
48
40
18
84 | 200
100
100
150
200
400
125
100
150 | 4 | 5 00
17 50
70 00
14 70
5 78 | 82
80
40
50 | young men preparing for the ministry. Left. Revival. Preaches in many counties. Opposition, but progress. Difficult field. Many foreigners. Some success. Preaches some in other places near. Teaches a colored school, and missionary to colored and |
| E. F. Jones | Welsh Cal. Meth. Ch., Danville, Pa | Jan 1 1850 | 7 | 10 | 5 | 6 | 89
49 | 140
200 | | 4 50
10 00 | | white people. Preaches also in Bloomsbury. Labored with Zeandale Church till March. Revival at Wabaunsec. |

| Joseph H. Jones | Cong. Chs., New Corydon, Limberlost, and | Feb. 1, 1859 | 6 | 2 | 1 | | 25 | 200 | all | 12 0 | 0 110 | Preaches extensively in Adams and Jay counties. |
|------------------------------------|---|--------------------------------|----------|----------------|---------|-----|----------------------|--------------------------|-----|--------------------|--------------|---|
| Thos. W. Jones | Adams Co., Ind. lst Cong. Ch., Augusta, Mich. (tinerated in Southern Illinois | April 1, 1859
Nov. 17, 1858 | 5 | 10 | | | 75 | 100
400 | 4 | | | Building a parsonage, encouraging prospects. Labored some in Southern Indiana. Preaches in Jackson, Rock Castle, and Clay Counties. |
| W. G. Kephart | F. P. Chs. Huntington and Raccoon, Pine Grove,
Ohio. | July 1, 1858 | 12 | 1 | 1 | 11. | 65 | 150 |  | 130 | | Left, |
| John Lowrey Jas. McChesney | Cong. Ch., Sandwich, Ill.
Cong. Chs., Paris and Bristol, Wis
1st Wes. Meth. Ch., Saratoga Springs, N. Y
1st Cong. Ch., Babcock's Grove, Ill. | June 1, 1858
Jan. 1, 1859 | 12
7 | 2
25 | 2 2 | 1 | 67
48
20
21 | 150
100
150
200 | | 85 6
4 5
4 7 | 0 50
8 87 | Encouraging field,
Left.
Revival. Church organized. Four Roman Cath, converts.
Preaches in two other places. |
| Norman Miller | Free P. Chs. of Clarkson and Worthington, Ohio. Plym. Cong. Ch. Minnespolis, Minn Cong. Ch., Princeton, Wis | July 1, 1858
April 1, 1859 | 8 | | | | 50
81
88 | 200
100
200 | | | 50 | Church edifice erected. Left. No report. Revival. Prospects favorable. Building church edifice. |
| John Parry | Free Presb. Ch. of Superior, Kansas | May 18, 1858
May 18, 1859 | 8 | 80 | 25
8 | 2 | 40
21
58 | 100
150
75 | * | 11 0 | | No report. |
| P. C. Pettibone
Lewis Pettijohn | Cong. Ch., Wataga, Ill. lat Plymouth Cong. Ch., Wis. Wes. Meth. Chs., Cedarville, New Burlington, and Xenia, Ohio. | Sept. 1, 1858
May 17, 1859 | 11
12 | 30 | 85 | 10 | 75
120 | 100
75 | " | 20 0 | 90
50 | Many Germans. Church organized. Revival.
Church of colored persons organized at Xenia. |
| G. H. Pool | ist Cong. Ch., Chesterfield, Ill | Nov. 20,1858 | 7 | 19 10
11 | 8 | 22 | 42
65 | 100
175
200 | u | 9 2
82 8 | 5 150 | Labored in many places. Revival at Prairie Bottom, Left. |
| Samuel Porter | 1st Cong. Chs., Bradford and Otto, Pa | June 1, 1859 | 2 |  | | | 89 | 200 | | 8 0 | 0 112 | edifice. |
| A. L. Rankin | Missionary at large, Ill | April 1, 1859 | 4 | | | | | 600 | | | | Itinerates (on railroad lines) from Chicago to Cairo, Organized three churches. |
| J. C. Richardson | Teaches school and preaches, Williamsburgh, Ky | Dec. 10, 1857 | 8 | | | -0 | 6 | 90 | - 1 | | 1 | Preaches in Whitley and other counties. Difficult field. Progressing. |
| J. Silaby | Chs. at Union and Silver Creek, Ky
Cong. Ch., Riehland City, Wis
Cong. Ch., Windsor, Ohio | Mar. 1, 1858
Nov. 1, 1858 | 6 | 4 | 1 | 2 | 13 | 400
100
75 | u | 4 9
80 0 | 5 50 | Also teaches at Berea, and preaches in various places. Commission expired. Left. Difficult field. |
| J. B. L. Soule
Geo. W. Stinson | 1st Cong. Ch. of Benton, Mich | Jan. 1, 1859
Aug. 1, 1858 | 8 | 1 6 | 8 | 1 | 12
45
28 | 150
100 | " | 170 0 | 0 55 | Interesting field. Revival. Left. Revival. |
| C. H. Thompson | Cong. Chs., Shell Rock and Mason City, Iowa
Bap. and Meth. Chs., Urbana and Bellefontaine,
Ohio. | Oct. 1, 1858 | 5 | 86 | 86 | 1 | 122 | 100
125 | | 16 9 | | Preaches to colored people in two counties. Revivals. |
| J. W. Torrence | Cong. Chs., Ringwood and McHenry, Ill
Free Presb. Chs., Mercer and Harrisville, Pa
Itinerating in North Carolina | Oct. 1, 1858 | 10 | 10 | 10 | 8 | 36
71 | 150
80
150 | " | 10 0
27 1 | 0 40
0 80 | Revival at Ringwood. Labors in company with Rev. D. Worth mostly. See statistics by D. W. |
| Z. P. Weed
David Wert | Itinerated in three counties in So. Ind | May 16, 1859
Nov. 1, 1858 | 8 | 2
10 | 4 | 5 | 37
26 | | | 82 0
24 0 | 0 40 | Preached for Cong. Chs., Boonville and Ohio Township, etc.
Teaches col. school, and labors with that people at Oberlin.
Revival at one preaching station. |
| 1999 | Free Presb. Chs., Strait Creek and Huntington,
Ohio. | The second of the | | 5 | 9 | 5 | 16 | 100 | | 7.7 | 0 15 | |

| - |
|------|
| 7 |
| Ď |
| .5 |
| 1 |
| 6 |
| 0 |
| • |
| |
| 10 |
| B |
| EDUL |
| D |
| 0 |
| 50 |
| HI |
| 4 |
| CI |
| to |
| 1 |
| L |
| |
| S |
| × |
| |
| 0 |
| H |
| |
| D |
| S |
| 100 |
| H |
| K |
| - |
| 904 |
| H |
| |
| × |
| V.5 |
| 0 |
| |
| H |
| 2000 |
| |

| Asav. | ihs. Left Milwankee ganized. Revival.
h. Building churchival. |
|---|---|
| OTHER PARTICULARS. | 17 00 115 Commission expired. 18 00 185 Preaches also to Fish Creek and Bethel chs. Left Milwankes. 18 00 186 Preaches also to Fish Creek and Bethel chs. Left Milwankes. 18 00 11 Linearies in Passy Co. mostly. Ch. organized. Beviral. Preaches also to Haris Township church. Building church. 19 89 90 Freaches In four central counties. Revival. |
| No. of S. School and
Bible Class Scholars. | 115
1188
1188
1188
1188
1188
1188
1188 |
| Contributions to
Benevolent Objects. | 17 00
12 00
13 00
12 38 |
| Pledged to Total
Abstinence, | E 2 2 2 2 |
| Dollars of Aid
Pledged. | 150
200
200
150
160
112
200
200 |
| No. of Members. | 138 88
138 88
159 50
164 64 |
| Additions by Let- | 83 41 18 |
| Additions on EX- | 910 H 201 41 |
| Hopeful Converslons. | ଖଳ ଖଳ ଖଳ |
| Months of Labor
Reported. | 20° 20° 20° 20° 20° 20° 20° 20° 20° 20° |
| DATE OF
COMMIS-
SION. | Oct. 1, 1888
Nov. 1, 1888
Jan. 1, 1889
April 1, 1869
May 1, 1869
Dec, 12, 1858
Oct. 15, 1858 |
| CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY DISTRICTS. | A.A. Whitmore Cong. Ch., Troy. Welshfield, Ohio Oct. 1, 1858 12 Robert Williams Welsh Cong. Ch., Pitchopt. Ra. 1888 6 Robert Williams 187 Welsh Cong. Ch., Milwankee, and Vale Jan. 1, 1888 15 Hoat, Sparta. Wis. 1888 16 Hoat, Sparta. Wis. 1889 15 Hoat, Sparta. Wis. 1889 16 Hoat. Ch., Charlotte, Mich. 1889 17 Lewis Wilson Ch., Mark Montgomery and Bethielsen, Ind. April 1, 1889 12 Ewis Wilson Ch., Montgomery and Bethielsen, Ind. May 1, 1889 12 Dasa. Worth Cong. Che., Avon and Prairie City, III. Dec, 12, 1889 12 Dasa. Worth Cong. Che., Avon and Prairie City, III. Dec, 12, 1889 12 Dasa. Worth Cong. Che., New Salem, N. C. Oct. 15, 1888 12 |
| MISSIONARIES | A. A. Whitmore David Williams Robert Williams Lovin When Lovin When Lovis Wilson Lovis Wilson B. F. Worrall |

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

The Association and its Auxiliaries have employed, during the year, in the Home field, ninety-eight missionaries, five colporteurs; and two female missionary teachers. They were located as follows: In States east of Ohio, 9; in Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan, 26; in Illinois, 24; in Wisconsin and Minnesota, 15; in Iowa, 9; in Kansas, 6; in Kentucky, 7; in Missouri, 1; in North-Carolina, 2; and 1 in District of Columbia. Three colporteurs have been employed in Kentucky, one in Illinois, and one in Indiana.

Most of the missionaries are pastors; some of them minister to several churches; others have extensive districts, in which they preach, engage in revivals of religion, and promote the Anti-Slavery cause, the Temperance Reformation, and moral reforms generally. Our missionaries have organized, and assisted to organize, sixteen churches and several Sabbath-schools in their respective districts. The whole number of churches is now 130.

The statistical results, so far as ascertained from the reports of the missionaries and colporteurs, are as follows:

The additions to the churches, during the year, on profession of faith, are 669; and by letters from other churches, 330.

The whole number of church members under the care of our missionaries, is 4346.

The number of hopeful conversions during the past year, is 1059.

Thirty-five revivals of religion have been reported in the Home field.

The members of the churches are generally pledged to total abstinence from intoxicating drinks; and are friends and supporters of the Anti-Slavery cause.

The number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars connected with the missionary churches and out-stations is 6216.

The contributions to benevolent objects reported by the missionaries, excepting contributions to local objects, is $1444.92.*

the north and books and the state of the source of the state of the more resigned to be the state of the stat

^{*} Collections, in some instances, have not been reported, so that they could be included above.

STATES EAST OF OHIO.

In this portion of our missionary field, nine missionaries have been commissioned, viz.: one in Maine, (with the colored church of Portland,) two in New York, and six in Pennsylvania, three of the latter ministering to Welsh churches. In most of the churches there has been progress, and several of them have enjoyed the gracious presence of the Holy Spirit in the revival of his work.

In connection with the work of the Lord in the congregation of our missionary at Saratoga Springs, a church has been organized. Four of the converts were Roman Catholics, all young men of interesting character. Three young men are preparing for the ministry; two of them are sons of the missionary. The general conservative character of the place and the churches, and the opposition to thorough anti-slavery sentiment and action, especially during the summer months, when the Springs are the resort of many slaveholders and their apologists, render our missionary enterprise there repulsive to many; but God has blessed it to the reformation and salvation of souls. The publications of this Association have been given to many visitors, and thus the principles of a free and pure Christianity, it is believed, have been presented to many leading minds, that will reach both the free and slave States.

The most extensive work of grace in this district has taken place in connection with the labors of the missionary in the north-western section of Pennsylvania, resulting in the hopeful conversion of two hundred and fifty souls. In this field two churches have been organized, the cause of temperance and anti-slavery advanced, Sabbath-schools increased, and much secured for the future in matters relating to human progress and salvation. In this work he has been sustained in part by the Congregational Association of the district, which has given its counsels, prayers, and contributions for the building up of the waste and feeble places of this extensive region.

The Association has recently appointed Rev. Amos G. Beman a missionary-agent to labor among the people of color in several of these States, and we rejoice in knowing that he is cordially welcomed by those to whom he ministers, and that he meets with encouraging success.

OHIO

Fourteen missionaries have been employed in this State during the year. Five revivals of religion have been enjoyed, two of them among the people of color in Logan and Champain counties.

Our missionaries, in their several localities, and Rev. J. G. Brice, missionary-agent, have done much, by preaching as well as by intercourse and discussion with ministers and others of various denominations, to impress upon them the importance of the principles of this Association in relation to the questions of slavery and caste. Mr. Brice has also aided various ministers and churches in times of religious interest, and has been much blessed in his labors.

In some localities Spiritualism, Universalism, and various other forms of unbelief have obstructed the work of the missionaries, poisoned the minds of the people, and prevented multitudes from attending to the means of grace. In many instances the leaders manifest much interest in most or all questions of reform and of humanity, but unhappily neglect the claims of the Gospel.

In some of the churches there are numbers of colored persons who enjoy equal privileges with their white brethren, while their children are welcomed in the Sabbath-schools. Much pains is taken relative to them in localities where they are numerous.

Efforts are made on the subject of temperance, and some of the churches have rules against the sale of grain to distillers.

The remarkable events bearing upon human freedom in this State this year, have aroused the people to the danger to personal liberty, arising from the encroachments of slavery, and the execution of its behests by the national government. The imprisonment of nineteen citizens, including a professor of a college, and minister of the gospel, on the charge of rescuing a colored citizen from those who were attempting to carry him to a distant State as a slave, aroused the people to a new view of the atrocious Fugitive Slave Bill, of the inhuman Dred Scott "decision" of the Supreme Court, and of the infinite evils of slavery. But the meetings of the people in conventions held in view of this outrage, enlisting statesmen, Christians, and citizens in all the walks of life in behalf of the prisoners, alarmed the official authorities and their allies, and the release of the citizens who had been so barbarously treated, afforded new evidence that slavery and its servile agents cower before the resolute and determined will of freemen who are conscious of their rights, and calmly determined to maintain them.

The present is a most auspicious time to give increased circulation to the excellent publications of the American Reform Tract and Book Society at Cincinnati, and to the publications of kindred societies; to enlist the pulpit and the press in proclaiming the truth; to occupy the public mind with the claims of freedom and a pure Gospel; and to urge the churches to exorcise the spirit of pro-slaveryism and caste yet existing, and give full proof that they maintain true Christian principle and practice.

Our auxiliary for Ohio and Pennsylvania of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist denomination, is promoting the principles of the Association, and raising means for their diffusion.

MICHIGAN.

Seven missionaries have been under commission in this State the past year. In three instances revivals have taken place, and many of the porteur is doing a good work in preaching, in spiritual labors from house to house, in establishing Sabbath-schools, and in circulating tracts and other religious, anti-slavery, and temperance publications. One missionary in the eastern part of the State has a large field in two counties, with three churches, and labors much among the various denominations. He has formerly met with great opposition, but though prejudice still exists. the leaven of Christianity and freedom is working out favorable results.

ILLINOIS.

In this central State of the North West we have had under commission. in connection with our auxiliary the Illinois Home Missionary Association, twenty four missionaries.* Five revivals of religion have been enjoyed, four churches organized, and Sabbath schools and Bible classes established. In some instances earnest efforts have been successfully made in the temperance cause, and the interests of freedom and Christian reform have been promoted. The educational efforts in the State and the remarkable system of Bible distribution so perfect and universal, (having some 1400 Bible Societies in its various counties,) together with the increasing attention to the circulation of tracts and the purpose to secure the united action of the friends of religion and of freedom in supplying the people with publications, maintaining a free and pure Christianity, and rebuking slavery and all iniquity, are tokens of great promise.

In a State of so great extent and variety of population, the various forms of good and evil, of truth and error, that distinguish the Western States are found. One of the chief instrumentalities for the correction of these evils, and the increase of good agencies, is the Home Missionary enterprise. The southern half of the State, reaching to the border of two Slave States, is receiving the special attention of the Executive Committee, and several missionaries have been employed itinerating, and otherwise presenting the claims of the Gospel, with the claims of humanity. The peculiar character of the larger portion of the people-being emigrants from the Slave States; their need of education and other elevating influences; their pro-slavery spirit; their need of salvation, all call loudly for a great increase of laborers. Rev. Wm. Holmes is laboring in many counties near the southern border, on behalf of the Gospel and of freedom, and enlisting some earnest men on behalf of the principle of the Association, both in adopting and promoting them. His account of outrages committed upon a worthy family of four colored persons, under the Black Act of the State, has aroused the indignation of the better portion of the community, who are making efforts for the repeal of this inhuman Bill, which it is hoped will be successful.

* This auxiliary held its annual meeting at Bloomington, May 28, 1859, and its interesting doin were published in the Congregational Herald of Chicago.

churches seem to be gaining in spiritual strength, and in an increase of the number that attend upon the means of grace. In several places the cause of temperance has received a fresh impulse, arising mainly from the efforts of the rumsellers and their victims to break through the stringent legal obstacles to the sale of intoxicating drinks. Gambling in several places has prevailed to such an extent as to alarm the citizens and arouse them to efforts to put an end to this vice. In this work our missionaries and churches have been prominent and zealous. Success has attended their efforts against this immorality to an encouraging degree.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

The anti-slavery sentiment also is increasing, and becoming more influential, though it is opposed by some ministers and professors of religion. Spiritualism and Universalism in several places hinder the prevalence of true religion, and lead many to destruction. A village where one of our missionaries labors part of his time, presents a remarkable population having been originally settled by Hicksite Quakers, whose descendants are now almost entirely skeptical and infidels. There is, however a considerable number of young people who listen to the preaching of the word, and who meet with some of mature years in a house of public worship built some years since by a church now nearly extinct. It is hoped that this people may be brought to embrace the Gospel of Christ.

There are yet large sections of this State sparsely settled, where the missionary must go after the scattered ones or many may perish.

INDIANA.

In this State five missionaries and one colporteur have been employed. Though most of the missionaries have churches, a large part of their work is itinerating in large districts. One has for his field the extreme southwest county of the State and extends his labors into other counties.

A revival of religion, of an interesting character, took place under the labors of two of our missionaries at Hopewell near New Harmony, the settlement of Communists, and the former residence of Robert Dale Owen, their leader, that resulted in the organization of a church, which, however, meets with some opposition. The whole border section, especially the southwestern part of the State, near to Kentucky, requires a speedy increase of missionaries and colporteurs. The people are principally from the slave States; are much given to Sabbath-breaking, whisky-drinking and kindred evils; are poorly educated, and retain their proslavery prejudices, and their hatred of the colored people, who are kept in degradation and at times are subject to outrage. But the objects of this hatred and abuse are striving for the education of their children, and are making efforts to elevate themselves.

At Evansville we have a female missionary teacher, whose efforts among the adult colored people, and in the schools, as well as among the poor white people, are much prized, and blessed. Our missionary colOur colporteur in Pope County is doing an important work in circulating tracts and books, mostly from the Tract Society at Cincinnati, both religious, anti-slavery, and reformatory, and in cooperating with missionaries in his and other counties.

The labors of the Rev. A. L. Rankin, under the more immediate direction of our auxiliary at Chicago, on the great lines of the Central Rail Road from Chicago to Cairo, and on the line of the Ohio and Mississippi Rail Road, in the more middle and Southern sections of the state are encouraging. On these roads villages are springing up where the institutions of the Gospel are to be established. In connection with the labors of the missionary, three churches have been organized, and preparations are making for organizing others. In all the field called "Egypt," comprising 54 counties, the claims of the Gospel, with the entire work of reform, are to be promoted. The work is now fairly commenced. Some of the ministers in this region, begin to look favorably upon the cause, and to cooperate with the missionaries, although the great majority of them, we regret to say, stand aloof or oppose the movement.

WISCONSIN

In Wisconsin, twelve missionaries have labored during the year. The blessing of God has attended their labors; four revivals of religion have been enjoyed; and one church organized. In some cases the missionaries extend their labors into sparser regions, at greater or less distance, and generally among those who have the least means of rising to competency and worldly advantages. In these labors much good is effected. In one instance the gracious visitation of God came in connection with meetings of parents to pray for their children who were present at the meeting. Some of the converts are men of strong minds, who have broken away from infidelity, and are now pleading with God for the salvation of souls. Most of the churches and people are struggling with pecuniary embarrassments, arising either from insufficient crops, or the small prices given for produce. In some districts actual suffering has existed.

The German and other foreign population is large in this State. Romanism, other superstitions and errors, and German rationalism abound in some districts. Some recent facts reported in our monthly paper, show that the difficulties of meeting their destructive influence are formidable, but where there is faith and holy living, with clear and instructive preaching of the Gospel, it is encouraging to believe that these obstacles will be overcome. Even in Wisconsin, where slavery is so resisted, there are in and out of the church, those whose energies are enlisted against freedom and in favor of the policy and oppressive acts of the national councils.

The cause of reform in its various aspects is pressed by our missionaries and churches with encouraging success. Education and Sabbathschools are increased, and tracts and other publications for the promotion of pure religion and freedom are circulated, though in a limited degree compared with the need of the people.

Our auxiliary in this State and in Illinois, of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, is showing a missionary spirit, and is contributing to our Foreign and Home Missions, while the aid they ask for their churches is not large, and they appear to be increasing in means for the building up of their religious institutions.

MINNESOTA.

We have had three missionaries in Minnesota. In two places, revivals of religion have taken place; in one instance preceded by a remarkable temperance reformation. A church was organized there, (Henderson,) and earnest efforts made in the Sabbath-school cause, and in behalf of other important interests. In this and in other places where our missionaries labor, the moral tone of the community has been greatly improved. The Sabbath, which was generally desecrated, is now observed, and much attention given to the means of grace. A neat house of worship has been erected by the Congregational church at Minneapolis. The people generally, including the missionaries, have suffered much from poor crops, and the great scarcity of money, rendering it impossible at times for many to pay even their taxes. But this State has elements of prosperity; it is rapidly filling up, and seems destined to make gratifying progress. Its true life and power, however, will depend upon the success of efforts early made to secure to the people the means of grace and the enjoyment of civil and religious freedom.

IOWA.

Nine missionaries have been under commission in this State; three of them itinerating and engaging in efforts for the salvation of souls, in protracted meetings, and in other ways advancing the interests of the kingdom of Christ and true reform.

In these labors the missionary pioneer, Rev. O. Emerson, and the other brethren are subjected to many trials, incident to missionary life, in new settlements, but they feel richly compensated while enjoying the presence and blessing of God upon themselves and their labors. In connection with their efforts, six revivals of religion have taken place, and upwards of two hundred souls have been hopefully converted, while four churches have been formed.

In some of the revivals, sinners of the most obdurate, hardened, and vicious characters have been converted; and places proverbial for immorality and irreligion have been the scenes of the mighty power of God unto salvation. Even horse-thieves and counterfeiters have been among the number who were converted to God and righteousness. In no section have the people suffered more the past year, pecuniarily, and, in some districts, from scarcity of food, than in this fertile State.

The missionaries feel that God has over-ruled these chastisements for the spiritual good of many, and broken the raging fever of land speculations, formerly the bane of religion in the State. In view of this fact, the missionaries, sharing deeply in the distress of the times, nevertheless rejoice in the Lord.

Special efforts are making to secure common-school instruction to all the children; the appropriations and law of the State favoring the end desired. The cause of freedom is rapidly advancing and gaining strength and efficiency every year, in this young but large and thrifty State.

KANSAS.

In this Territory we have had six missionaries. Their reports during the year indicate an increase in spiritual interest, and decided progress in things connected with domestic and public welfare. The dangers and strife of past times having given place to peace and general quietness, it was natural to look for material advantage and prosperity, and the gain in cultivation and varied improvements has been most apparent. The Pike's Peak gold mines mania for a time threatened to withdraw a large part of the population to the mountains, but the discouragements and sufferings of some of the early explorers last spring, and the return of many, served to moderate this spirit of adventure in the inhabitants of Kansas.

The principles of freedom seem to be working in the body politic, though injustice is done to the colored population as it respects their political rights. Notwithstanding the failure of the pro-slavery party in the Territory to attain its objects, the greatest vigilance is essential to circumvent intrigue and the influence of corrupt governmental instruments, ambitious politicians, and office-seekers.

The population in some of the counties is mostly from New England and the middle States, while in other localities every variety exists, native and foreign, with every form of religion and irreligion. Not a few are infidels, and some from the Eastern States have abandoned the faith of their fathers, and become active opposers of true religion, and most injurious in their influence upon the community in its vital interests.

There is no want of religious teachers of a false character; and professedly evangelical ministers, at the principal points, so struggle for sectarian advantages, that they hinder the progress of the Gospel, and weaken the means and influence of those who, if they could combine the Christian elements of each place, might be strong and influential.

The year has been growned with blessings, and in three instances the Holy Spirit has been poured out; revivals of religion have taken place greatly to cheer the churches and the hearts of the people of God. Sabbath-schools and Bible-classes are advancing, though hindered in so m instances from the want of teachers and other causes.

While these churches have been strengthened and extended, districts are visited by our missionaries for the instruction of the people, and their salvation, for the observance of the Sabbath and for the cause of temperance, and good morals generally. It is to be lamented that neither their efforts, nor those of temperance organizations, have secured the people against the prevalence of intemperance and other immoralities, except in a limited degree.

It is an encouraging fact, however, that most of the churches are building houses of worship. They are in some instances aided by the Congregational Union Building Fund. There is much need of more extensive effort and expenditure for the promotion of general education. Some foundations are being laid for colleges, and one specially promoted by the Congregational Association of the Territory, has received liberal donations from wealthy citizens of the Eastern States. A monthly magazine is published under the direction of the Congregational Association at Lawrence, which promises much usefulness. It is not possible to magnify the importance of the missionary work in Kansas, and of every Christian effort at the present period of its history, to make it a tower of strength to freedom, and a power for Christ and righteousness.

MISSOURI.

We have had one missionary in Missouri who has explored it very considerably, and preached in many places, while some souls have been converted in connection with his labors.

There is much inquiry on the subject of slavery, with a desire to abolish it, but there is not much feeling in view of the sinfulness of slave-holding. Few of the ministers of religion preach against the iniquity, and even those who acknowledge its wrongfulness have closed lips in public on its sinfulness.

We have recently sent a missionary to the north-western part of the State, to reside and labor for the enlightenment of the people on the subject of slavery in connection with all the claims of the Gospel of Christ. In a recent letter he gives encouragement of some cooperation, and in one instance, from a minister of the Gospel. It is designed to send more missionaries to this field at an early date. There is much emigration from lows and other free States into Missouri, and we expect the aid of such as are Christians and friends of freedom, in establishing churches and in promoting anti-slavery efforts.

KENTUCKY.

We have under commission in this State seven missionaries and three colporteurs. The year has been one of much encouragement and advance in our work. Although in two counties some demonstrations of mobocratic opposition to the missionaries were made, and in one instance a missionary and his wife were held for a short time at their lodgings, under menaces by a few men, composing a "visiting committee," no other forms of violence have been attempted.

In all the counties where our missionaries reside, and where our eleven churches are planted on the principles of refusing fellowship to slave-holders, the way is open for extending missionary labors. The readers of our publications will have noticed articles of great interest from the missionaries during the year. Four revivals of religion have taken place, and in some locations beneficial changes have been wrought among the people.

In Jackson county the work has been advancing with marked improvement in society. Opposition (from some of the wicked to the churches) exists, but acknowledgments of the superior morality and character of these converts from their own number are freely made. Recently, the Judge of the Circuit Court of that and other adjoining counties, who is a slaveholder, in his charge to the grand jury, remarked that anti-slavery men have as good a right to promulgate their sentiments as he or any others had to utter their own.

In the county of Whitley, which is the county nearest to East-Tennessee, where last year our missionary met with persecution, and where injustice towards him under the forms of law yet exists, a favorable change has taken place, and much desire is expressed for the continuance of the school which he has in part instructed.

In the early part of this fiscal year a struggle existed in Berea in relation to caste in the school, but our brethren stood firm to principle, and after full discussion, the result was decisive for the equal right of colored children and youth to the privileges of the school.

(During the summer, chartered privileges have been secured for the contemplated institution of learning at Berea. About one hundred and ten acres of land have been secured for the seat of the institution, and Rev. J. G. Fee is now at the East, endeavoring to secure funds for the payment of the lands and the erection of buildings of moderate cost, having reference to better buildings hereafter, when the plans connected with the institution can be fully carried out.

Although the preaching of the Gospel, and the spread of publications, Bibles, tracts, etc., by colporteurs and others, for the salvation of souls and the abolition of slavery and all immorality, are the first great objects of attention, it is necessary to educate the masses and labor for their general improvement.

The object of the institution is to raise up teachers and preachers for the State, opposed to slavery, caste, and all ungodliness. It will prevent discouragement to people from the North who wish to settle in the State, and assure them that their children shall have means of education as in the free States. It will prevent their own best people from emigrating to free States to secure education for their families. It will lift up from ignorance the people extensively. Though Christianity is to precede and lay foundations for civilization, the elements of civilization in it early develope themselves in schools, general knowledge, in letters, arts and sciences. The recent thirst among the slaves for instruction in letters, (some being taught by the children of slaveholders,) and their desire for the Bible, are signs of promise.

Our colporteurs are doing more than heretofore in giving the Bible to the slaves, a small proportion of whom can read. They are also circulating freely among the white population, religious, anti-slavery, temperance and other tracts and books, mostly from the Cincinnati and Boston Tract Societies, and are laboring from house to house for the salvation of souls.

Inquiries are being made, and a tendency is manifested by some pious persons in free States to settle with their families in Kentucky. It is hoped that in every section where our missionaries are laboring, such persons may speedily settle to engage in agricultural pursuits, the mechanical arts, or in some other way identify their interests with those of the people in promoting the welfare of society and the cause of Christ and freedom. We hope that as Providence is fairly opening Kentucky to the friends of freedom, all will be done that is practicable, with reliance on Divine aid, to make it the model State of our operations at the South.

NORTH-CAROLINA.

Two missionaries have been employed near the center of this State, laboring in several counties. They have under their care ten churches, all of which non-fellowship slaveholders, and the missionaries preach in several districts, where churches are not yet established. During the year revivals in different places have taken place under their labors, and seventy-six souls have been hopefully converted to God. Slaveholders at times attend their preaching, and no violent opposition has arisen. The sin of slaveholding is presented in its heinous character and evil influences. In one instance a religious paper noticed a communication in our paper, written by Mr. Worth, and called the attention of the civil authorities to it, but no molestation has taken place.

We have as yet no colporteur in North-Carolina, but our missionaries and other persons connected with them, distribute religious tracts and anti-slavery and other reformatory publications.

The attendance on the ministrations of our missionaries is very encouraging. They represent the spiritual condition of their churches as generally good, and that there are new indications of a revival of religion-One young man is expected soon to enter the ministry. The cause of temperance, as well as anti-slavery, is on the advance, and the future is regarded as full of promise.

55

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

During the last winter, some aid was furnished to Rev. Geo. W. Bassett, in his truly missionary work in the city of Washington, D. C. His anti-slavery, "Higher Law" and Gospel sermons were heard by distinguished members of Congress, and at their request some of them were published. Mr. Bassett was enabled to enlist some of the citizens and Christians in his labors, but having expended his means, he retired in the spring with a hope of securing aid at the North for future efforts at Washington. In his report he says:

"During my labors in Washington, I experienced positive aversion and even hostility from the clergy of the city. Not one of them called on me, or showed me the least sympathy. I can not but humbly hope, however, that my labors accomplished three results: 1st, showing the public that there was a Christianity that could be neither bribed nor intimidated from duty. 2d. That the most radical anti-slavery sentiments could be advocated in a Washington pulpit with perfect impunity—requiring only loss of reputation and the expenditure of money. 3d. Help and sympathy have been given, to members of an afflicted and persecuted race, the wanderer has been sheltered, and the hungry and the outcast fed.

REMARKS ON THE HOME FIELD.

REVIVALS.

The many gracious visitations of the Holy Spirit in the revivals of religion, connected with our missionaries and churches this year, call not only for thanksgiving, but for a state of soul receptive of a new baptism from Heaven. Were the blessing to be measured by the salvation of the individual souls converted to God in these revivals, and their eternal joy in heaven, no effort could reach its height and value; but when we look at the influence of these converts through life upon others, and their prayers and instrumentality as members of the church of Christ, and in some instances as ministers and missionaries of the cross, how it is magnified! No one can tell its importance to a church in all its hopes, and power for time to come, or to a town or village as a purifier and elevator of society.

By such revivals the public mind is prepared to receive every good, and incited to promote freedom, temperance, and every work of beneficence. The missionaries or others who are most honored in such seasons, as "laborers together with God," have gained a holy and salutary influence; and where they are itinerating in large districts of country, the whole region is blessed by their labors.

kun genurba oft per di regarble lisa an ilum en rearis successful to deviver a to employed your own stood to deis expected your of enter the ministry. The course of

THE WEST

In its past and present relations to this Association, especially on the "Slavery Question."

At the commencement of our Home work, the West presented peculiar claims to our efforts, and as we have had means it has enjoyed them. Our missionaries have long been known at the West as "Free Mission Men," and their churches as "Free Mission Churches;" and Christian anti-slavery papers published at the West in Ohio and Illinois, have propagated sentiments peculiar to those who regard slaveholding as a stupendous evil.

The early North-Western Home Missionary Association in Illinois, and the Western Home Missionary Association in Ohio, worked in harmony with us, and were aided by us. Finally, some five years ago, the "Illinois Home Missionary Association" was organized as our auxiliary, and has in that State cooperated with us, and from twenty to forty missionaries have been under our commission there, from year to year.

With from fifty to ninety missionaries in the entire West, annually, and many "Free Mission Churches" organized and instructed by them, no one can doubt the important agency that has thus been exerted in the great reformatory work, over the whole field, in both civil and Christian society. Each of our missionaries has been an agent for the promotion of every good cause, and as a body of devoted men, they have performed a vast Christian anti-slavery and reformatory work, as well as done much to promote true religion. The good effected by such a body of Christian men in the community, in connection with ecclesiastical bodies, and in other relations, eternity alone can disclose.

But is the desired result in the church yet secured? Is there no pro-slavery in any of the influential denominations at the West? Greatly in advance as is the Congregational body, and extensive as are its anti-slavery influences, a conclusion that all the leaven of pro-slavery conservatism is removed from it even at the West, is far from being correct. One thing, however, is, we think, secured—the heart of the mass of the people for the highest degree of anti-slavery sentiment and action, not-withstanding the failure of either of the political parties to adopt the cardinal principles of justice and humanity. Henceforth the denomination or denominations that shall strike for the highest claims of God and of humanity, will have the majority of the people, as well as the highest piety and best influence of the growing West.

In view of the necessities of the South, as well as for the true development of some of the States of the West, we have felt that at an early day the Western churches and ministers should manage and sustain their own Home Missions. We regarded the movements of the General Associations, of Ohio and Illinois two years since, to institute measures to do this work within their own bounds with much satisfaction, and we hope that the pecuniary embarrassments of these States will not long continue, and that having ability, they may do this work. It is not necessary, in order to retain the interest and sympathy of the good people of the mother States East, to lean upon them for an indefinite period; and never can the full power of the Christians of States so far advanced in means and influence be appreciated, until they assume an independent stand in matters so evidently within their own responsibility.

ENLARGEMENT IN THE SLAVE STATES.

It has been one of the prominent aims of the Association, to bring its principles and influence to bear upon slavery for its extinction, and to give the largest increase possible to our force in the Slave States, as the men and the means are provided. God has favored us in the States of Kentucky and North-Carolina, and we have commenced a work in Missouri. The way is opening for a rapid increase of laborers in these fields. The increasing confidence in the course pursued by our Missionaries and churches, in regard to slavery and non-fellowship with slaveholders, and the happy results already seen on the field from their varied efforts, have awakened a deep interest in the public mind; and produced a conviction that great enlargement should be given to our operations. Relatively, we should do far more for the Slave States than the free. In this state of things, when more men are offering to go as missionaries and colporteurs to Kentucky, than ever before, and every thing calls for earnestness and enlargement in the Slave States, all the friends of Christ and of humanity are imperiously called upon to furnish the means, and thus enable the Association to prosecute the work with increasing vigor and success.

The work proposed is to give a pure Gospel, freedom, all the blessings of salvation, and a true civilization to nearly one half of the States of this Union, who are groaning under the burdens and guilt of Slavery. It is to open the prison doors, to save the oppressed and the oppressor, and the vast population of non-slaveholders. It is to regenerate the people, to save them from untold miseries, prevent the effusion of rivers of blood—and unite in one brotherhood the people of the North and South. We seek also to bring all to repentance of the sin of upholding oppression, and of trampling down the entire colored population, and to save our guilty nation from the fierceness of God's anger, by its timely repentance, and to make it the messenger of mercy to the world. For the attainment of such an object, how gladly should Christians contribute their wealth, make sacrifices, endure sufferings, if need be, and count not their lives dear unto them!

obta Malan Mustaka. We supported our transport of the Gagest

Assertight on of this and Minestern years rated to multiple passents to

CONCLUSION.

The offer of salvation for a lost and ruined world, has its foundation in the love of God. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The love of Christ, manifested in his voluntary humiliation, suffering and death, was plead by the great apostle of the Gentiles, as a vindication of himself and his fellow-laborers, for their extraordinary missionary zeal and activity. They were constrained by it to live not for themselves, but for Him; and how could they live for Him more truly, than by making his love known among all nations, in obedience to his commandment?

Every true missionary organization originates in the same feeling, and so far as its officers and missionaries are baptized into the right spirit, they are willing, if need be, to make the same sacrifice and self-denials, for the accomplishment of the same end, the sanctification and salvation of man.

In the providence of God, the missionary enterprise is made a part of the plan of salvation. The prophets were his missionaries, sent to proclaim a coming Redeemer, through whom the world might be saved, and Christ did but extend and perpetuate the work in the utterance of his last command. Christ says, it behoved him to suffer and to rise from the dead, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations. "How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard, how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?"

Regarding these truths as self-evident, and encouraged by the blessing given to our efforts, both at home and abroad, and the evident increase of a determination to have missionary labors not only divested of all complicity with slavery, but directed toward its extermination, the Executive Committee feel like calling upon the Association to give to the Officers and Committee now to be chosen their most cordial coöperation, and to place in their hands the means for a wider fulfillment of the great command: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature,"

Mindred Town to the American State of the St

SELECTIONS

CORRESPONDENCE AND REPORTS OF HOME MISSIONARIES.

From Rev. J. G. Fee, Berea, Madison Co., April 12, 1859.

"The question of opening the school on strictly Christian principles, to all persons irrespective of color, had come before the proposed trustees, and was assented to. This had been the teaching and practice of the church here, in its associate capacity. Two colored persons (slaves) are members, and always, when present, at our communion seasons, take part at one and the same time with others. This seemed to be expected of Abolitionists, in church relations.

"But the question of having colored children come into the school-room, with white children, had not come practically before the people of this district. A providence brought the question directly before them. Some opposed. Bro. Rogers, who had had the care of the school, announced his purpose not to enter it unless open to all. Some proposed to shut the house against the anti-caste school. The issue was fairly before the district. Appeals were made to prejudices, threats held out. On the other hand Christian considerations were held up from day to day before the people. At length the district election for district trustees or directors came. Two sets of directors were in nomination, one for an anti-caste school, the other set against it. The directors for the anti-caste school were elected by a majority of more than three to one, this too at an unusually large meeting of the voters of the district."

"After making all due allowance for those who were influenced by a desire to have a good school go on, for the benefit of their children, I regard the vote, being as it is in a slave State, and in a county where there are five thousand slaves, as a good testimony against a manifest sin, and one speaking well for the faith and conscience of the people

June 14, 1859.

"Tis pleasant to know that even a few of the toil-worn slaves can have the Word of God to cheer them in their many privations, and bid them look to a land of rest that remains for the people of God."

"It has been said by 'conservative' men and boards, that our known opposition to Slavery shuts us out from the slaves-prevents our doing them good. Many facts refute the assertion. Our universally known position in all the land is a living commentary upon the Bible we distribute, and on all other Bibles; it disabuses the mind of the slave of the idea, that the God of the Bible is a great Moloch delighting in the suffering of his votaries, and conniving at the vilest system of oppression under the sun."

"The slaves have less and less respect for the professed piety of their masters. As a consequence, when they can, they are fast separating themselves from the places where their masters worship, and seeking assemblies of their own. 'Tis/all important that these should have facilities for obtaining the Word of God. The fields are white unto the harvest." * * *

July 7, 1859.

"The way still opens. A short time since some twenty-three men, citizens of Estill Co. in this State, sent me a written request to come and preach. I went, and found at the meeting-house a very encouraging congregation. The slave power had got up a counter petition, praying me not to come. A committee was also appointed to request me not to preach, after I came on the ground. These two last requests I respectfully declined, and went into the house, and preached to an audience which was very attentive and respectful. The pro-slavery men came in, after the sermon, and endeavored to deter from further preaching. The friends present told them in unmistakable terms, that I should have the privilege of speaking.

"Objection was then made to my using the meeting-house, the opposers urging that they had paid money towards its erection, and had the right to control its use. Our friends voted to have the meeting remove to the larger dwelling house of one of their number. The people assembled there Saturday, and on the Sabbath in a beautiful

"The opposition withdrew, leaving the friends of righteousness to hear in quietude. This they did, not from regard to right, but because the majority of the good citizens were determined to maintain freedom of speech."

Aug. 1859.

"The influence of the church here is for the higher law of God, as paramount to any or all human enactments: also the church influence is against caste as well as against slavery. In all these respects the testimony is positive and decisive.

"Regular meetings are held by the members of the church and other friends for temperance. As a result of all this the moral power of the church is greatly increased, and a degree of morality above other communities in the county, characterizes this community. The Sabbath is more generally observed than formerly. A Missionary Association is in a state of organization in the church. The friends connected with the reformatory movements here are persons generally of small means and not trained to giving : hence contributions are small.

"The efforts to build up a school here for the education of the youth of the land is regarded by most of the neighbors with favor. To promote this end we have secured by contract 109 acres of land, eligibly situated, and located in the midst of friends. On this we expect to erect for the present, some one or two inexpensive buildings. This amount of success would give to the whole enterprise prestige, and demonstrate to the people that we desire to do them good. We may hope thus to gain sympathy and confidence. Shall we have the means?"

Distributing Bibles to Slaves in Kentucky.

In a recent report of A. G. W. Parker, Colporteur, he writes:

"I have spent eleven days in visiting slaveholding families, for the purpose of giving Bibles to such slaves as could read. In 52 of such families I find 507 slaves, and of that number 21 can read a little. To 18 of the 21 I have given Bibles. Twelve of these were men and 6 women. All of the men but one were professed Christians and most of them preachers, and I think good men. One of the six women who received Bibles was a professor. In prosecuting my work I receive many cold looks from the slaveholders, who not unfrequently put on very long faces when I announce to them

"The number of slaves in the families visited ranges from 2 to 83. In two of these families there are two slaves, in each, who can read; in none of the others is there more than one who can read at all, and in many of them not a slave who can spell out a word of the story of Jesus."

From Rev. George Candee, McKee, Jackson Co., Ky, March 30, 1859.

"The Lord has cheered our hearts and rebuked our unbelief very much by his work in this neighborhood. Six or eight profess conversion, and some of them seem to be born into the kingdom, men and women grown. Two or three of them can not read a word, others have read more since their conversion, in about two months, than they have before for years. Their habits of thought and action were deprayed, intemperate, profane; they were Sabbath-breakers, prayerless, altogether ignorant of what is essential to Christianity; and yet under the power of God's grace they have been changed into obedient, loving Christians. They seem now to feel that they must love God and obey him in every thing they do, and they seem glad to know that this is a condition of receiving his grace. They now love total abstinence, have pleasure in keeping the Sabbath holy unto the Lord, and take it for granted that it is the Christian's privilege to pray; hence they all pray in their families every night and morning, voluntarily bear a part in the prayer-meetings, and esteem it a peculiar privilege to pray for their enemies. Oh! it does the heart good to hear them plead in their broken but meaning language, for their enemies. They have now no use for revolvers and bowie-knives, but are intent upon having the blessing of God come upon their enemies. Most of these converts have a few drops of colored blood in their veins, which occasions much prejudice against them."

September, 1859.

"Aggressive opposition seems to have entirely ceased in this community. Every body appears to respect us, and acknowledge our rights. The man who has been most active in opposing us has made application to have us board him and his family a few weeks, until he can build again, as he has sold his house and lot."

"The circuit judge of some ten to fifteen of these mountain counties, a slaveholder, has lately instructed the grand jury of an adjoining county (Laurel) that the abolitionists have just as good a right to preach their doctrines as any body else has a right to preach his. This will do great good. We feel that the door for preaching the Gospel is thrown wide open by this act. I think the people are generally convinced that our doctrine, as they call it, must prevail. In some neighborhoods, instead of connecting every thing bad with Abolitionism, every thing good is identified with it. If a man chews tobacco, he is said not to be a thorough Abolitionist.

From Rev. J. S. Davis, Cabin Creek, Lewis Co., June 6, 1859:

"There is here, at this time, greater excitement than has been for eight years before. We have a few members in Mason county, west of us, and one of them, three months ago, invited me to preach at his house. I did so, and addressed an orderly and attentive congregation. The first Sunday in April, I preached at the house of another member, in the same neighborhood, and left an appointment there for the first Sunday in May. On that day, a mob of about twenty men assembled, some of them with guns, and prevented me from preaching.

"A week or two before that, a negro had killed his master, about six miles from this place, and the excitement was very great. A hundred false reports were in circulation during the month of my absence, and the impression was general that a mob would be here yesterday. I called on two magistrates, and requested them to be present. One, a member of the Presbyterian church, who, from certain anti-slavery professions, received the votes of a number of our brethren, refused to come, though he said he would draw up any necessary writ required by law, after violence was done. The other, our old friend Fearis, was in attendance.

Mr. Davis states that on the day appointed a large congregation assembled. He preached from Luke 12:4,5, "Be not afraid of them that kill the body," etc. Two or three of the mobocrats were there, but they were quiet. Perfect order prevailed, and it was a time of blessing.

August, 1859.

"At Glenville we had a precious work of grace. Rev. George Candee, of Jackson county, spent four weeks, laboring faithfully with us, and by his earnest and solemn rebukes stirring up cold professors, and striking conviction to the impenitent.

The feeling was deep and silent. A good ground-work was laid, and when his labors closed, we felt grateful to God that we had been led to repent of our backslidings, and renew our consecration to him.

"After a short interval, Rev. Jacob Emerick, of Middletown, Butler Co., Ohio, came to labor with us; and for two weeks preached day and night with great acceptance and power to congregations which increased from the first,

"As a result of the labors of these excellent men, twenty persons were propounded for admission to the church, and most of them have since been received. A few have, I regret to say, returned to the world; but others give good evidence of a saving

From Rev. J. A. R. Rogers, Berea, Madison Co., Ky., Aug. 29, 1859:

"There are few truths that the missionary learns more fully than that 'God's mill grinds slow, but it grinds very fine.' The first part of this proverb at least, he usually learns through much sorrow and hope deferred; but if he can feel that God is using him to carry out the truth contained in the latter part, therein he finds his comfort. I feel confident that God is using your missionaries in Kentucky to do a thorough work, however slow for a time may be its progress. The more carefully I examine the example of Christ and the apostles, the more am I convinced that if we have erred in making practical tests of membership to our churches, it has been in giving too little rather than too much emphasis to that self-denial and love for Christ and our neighbor which Jesus declared to be requisite to true discipleship. Unless we do our work well, it will accomplish but little and have to be done over again and at greater cost than was necessary at the first to produce the same result. The members of our churches here need far more pastoral care than those in most of the Northern States. That under the circumstances we have prospered so much, is a cause of gratitude and a plain manifestation of the power of God.

"The recent two days' meeting at Silver Creek was refreshing to my own soul. Could the patrons of the Association have been present and seen the simplicity of heart manifested by some of the members of the church, they would certainly have left determined to increase their donations."

From his annual report:

"Some of the pleasantest Sabbaths of the year have been spent in destitute neighborhoods in the mountains. In no place have I told the story of the cross to more attentive listeners than in some narrow cabin, perched on a mountain side, and filled with rough but earnest men.

"My labors in the school here have made large drafts upon my strength, and would have been insupportable had I not felt they were demanded in God's Providence. It is believed that the way has been effectually prepared for a literary institution at Berea, which has recently been founded and received chartered privileges. increased facilities thousands around us could be educated and rendered useful. Will not those who love the cause of the poor supply the necessary means?"

From Rev. Wm. Kendrick, Aug. 1859:

"We have not erected any houses of worship; but here (Jackson county) we feel the want of suitable houses where all who come may be seated to hear of the way of life. We very much need a meeting-house at McKee. Here is an organized church of eleven members and no house of worship. When it is fair weather, we preach in the grove, but when stormy, at Rev. George Candee's or some of the neighbors', where but very few can gather. If some of the friends of the blessed Redeemer, and of humanity, would donate some $200 or $300, we could build (by the aid of the people here) an excellent house of worship in the county seat of Jack-

"The moral condition of the people generally is very low; profanity, drunkenness Sabbath-breaking, licentiousness, etc. are common. Yet there seems to be, among many, a great desire to learn the way of life. Idleness here seems to be the parent of all the other crimes committed against God and their own souls. Very little is being done as far as I can learn, for all true reforms, except by your missionaries, or those under their instruction."

NORTH-CAROLINA.

From Rev. D. Worth, New-Salem, Randolph Co., Jan. 15, 1859:

"We held our second quarterly meeting on Saturday and Sabbath last at the Reynolds' school-house. This place has witnessed the conversion of some forty or fifty souls the past season. These young converts were on hand, and our experience meeting bore testimony to the burning love of God in the soul. The melting story of the cross from the lips of these young men and women fell on the congregation with mighty power. Six united with us on the occasion, and more will follow soon. We are engaged at a new house of worship at this point, as the place is 'too strait for us.' Thanks be to God who prospers the truth, the converts to an anti-slavery gospel, here in the midst of the South, have doubled that of any pro-slavery denomination around us, on a field of like labor! Let our dear brethren every where remember us in their prayers,"

July 5, 1859:

"The friends of a pure Gospel will, doubtless, be gratified to learn that your missionaries on this Southern field are still combating for light and truth, and that victory seems evidently inclining to the side of right. Never was the prospect of ultimate success in the Old North State so gratifying as now. Near two years have elapsed since I came to the South, yet all is peace and quiet. I think I have fully declared the whole counsel of God on the great sins of war, slavery and intemperance. Neither have I spared that filthy narcotic, tobacco, the sin and shame of Southern habits. But above all, the unparalleled wickedness and stupendous blasphemy of a man-stealing religion-one that converts Abraham into a slaveholder, and Paul into a slave-catcher—that professes to rely on inspiration for its authority, and on the Bible for its slave code—that makes long prayers on Sunday, and robs cradles and trundle-beds on Monday—which professes to love Jesus Christ with the whole heart, yet sells him for a good price into the cotton-field or rice-swamp—that sustains this 'huge infernal system for the destruction of men, soul and body,' I have denounced with whatever of zeal, or ability, or emphasis, I have been able to bring to the encounter. I have put in circulation a large number of our standard anti-slavery authors, so that my books are doing a work little inferior to the living preacher. This field of labor is destined to become one of great interest. We have had several cheering revivals through the past year, the fruits of which we trust will long appear. For all these mercies we desire to feel humbly and truly thankful. May we have grace and wisdom to improve all things right."

MISSOURI.

From Rev. G. H. Pool,* St. Charles Co., Feb. 24, 1859.

"In my last to you, I spoke of having made an arrangement to hold a meeting near St. Charles. It commenced two weeks ago this evening, in what is called the Prairie Bottom, (a very beautiful country, and the most fertile soil I ever knew; a deposit made by the rivers between which it lies.) The attendance was large from the beginning, and increased until the close. The roads were exceedingly muddy a part of the time, but the people came out with their lumber wagons and four horses or mules hitched to them, with master, mistress, and slaves all in together, a thing I never saw before. Great seriousness and profound attention characterized the congregation all through; all seemed interested and all denominations took an active part. The result was a glorious revival. The people speak of it as one of the most general ever known here. The meeting commenced on Thursday evening, and continued until the next Sabbath evening week, with increasing interest, and at times we were crowded almost to suffocation. Many professed a change of heart. I baptized eight on the last Sabbath, (of both colors.) There are some others who wish to be baptized before I leave. Some friends have made for me an appointment in a little town seven miles from this."

"A very promising young man in his seventeenth year, beloved by all who knew him, professed religion and was baptized. He says, he is called of God to preach the Gospel. He Is an orphan, and lives with his old ount, a poor woman, who is anxious to have him educated. Now can you do any thing to facilitate this matter? Can't some wealthy Christian whom you know give him aid? We took up a collection on Tuesday night of $9.25. I never was among a more hospitable people than these. They have invited me to become their pastor. Most of them are opposed to slavery. I expect to go North soon."

KANSAS.

Letters from Missionaries.

"Mount Gilead is some 15 or 16 miles south-west of Osawatomie. I have preached there, or near, once in two weeks most of the time since I came to Kansas.  * A Congregational church was organized there on the first Sabbath of May last. * * * Osawatomie church has received additions at each communion during the year. The general type of piety in these churches appears to be very low. There are a few noble exceptions.

"Some time since intemperance, gambling, and horse-racing appeared to have full swing in and about Osawatomie, but temperance men were aroused, and a great change has taken place, though the struggle is not over. Anti-slavery of a certain kind prevails, but the brotherhood of man is not the basis of much of it.

"One sister in our church, living in a neighborhood of errorists, where she can but seldom have the opportunity of hearing preaching, not long since spent some days in visiting her neighbors and talking with them. As a result she has now a Sundayschool of over twenty scholars that she takes charge of herself. She raised a few dollars towards a library, and I solicited some. She now wants me to come and preach as often as possible in connection with the school."

From another missionary:

"The country is increasing in population, and improvements are being rapidly made. The morals of the Territory are generally bad, there is much profunity, and little regard for the worship of God. The majority of our settlers do not keep the Sabbath strictly, and it is with much difficulty that their children can be secured to the Sabbath-school. Our late emigrants are generally enterprising, and a few of them religious. I should think that about one twentieth of them are foreigners."

Another missionary writes:

" Atchison, July 22, 1859.

"The colored people who come here seem to look to me for counsel and assistance in their various concerns, I have the glory, or the shame, of being called the 'nigger preacher.' At the recent Fourth of July picnic, a Sabbath-school celebration, some persons desired to turn the colored children out of the procession. There were, however, too many Christians here who regard the common rights of men for the spirit of caste and prejudice to succeed in thrusting out some of the best behaved and teachable children in the schools. In this part of the territory the prejudice against color is exceedingly virulent in many; yet even in this respect a great improvement has been made within four years in this place. In 1856, antislavery men were here exposed to all the terrors of organized mob violence, and in several instances barely escaped with their lives. When I see the actors in those days of lawless violence who remain here, I am reminded of Esop's lion, whose teeth had been pulled out; the lion's nature is all there, but he has lost the power to bite.

"The people have rendered me considerable assisfance in building a house this spring, and I think before a long time they will be able to do much to support a minister. All the denominations are straitened to build meeting-houses for

"Through the energy and liberality of friends, chiefly of Gen. S. C. Pomeroy, we are about to have erected an excellent house of worship this summer. With it, I think this church will at once become an active and efficient worker in the field of the Lord. Without it we are placed under great disabilities."

At a later date the same missionary writes:

"I preach also regularly in Winthrop, Missouri, to an attentive congregation. A notice forbidding me to preach there any more, was posted in the ferry-boat, and I was threatened with tar and feathers if I did so. I did not regard it, and have not been molested."

From another missionary:

"The past year has been one of some real prosperity to the church. A good number have, we trust, been converted to God. Some of these united with the church at our last communion; others will, we hope, unite the next opportunity. The good effect of the season of refreshing we have had, upon both the church and the community, in some degree remains.

"The most discouraging feature of my field of labor is, that the community at length has become divided up into sects.

"In seeking a field in the West, I earnestly desired to find one unoccupied, where my labors were really needed. And for two years it was to me a matter of gratification and thankfulness that I was neither building on another man's foundation, nor was I engaged in a struggle with any of my brethren of other denominations to build up a denomination, instead of laboring to promote the highest spiritual interests of the entire community. But one denomination after another has come, until we have four ministers on a very limited field, each striving to build up a church of his own denomination. While the harvest is perishing for lack of laborers, here there are four of us doing the work which one could do much better than all four. It is morally certain that not more than one self-supporting church can be gathered here for many years to come. Till that time the Missionary Societies in the East may be called upon for aid."

^{*} Itinerated, preaching in various parts of the State north of the Missouri River.

From another missionary:

"In March of the present year, in connection with my labors at Mainstown, several young men were hopefully converted, and others manifested an unusual religious interest. On the seventeenth of April a Congregational church was organized there, consisting of six members.

"A house of worship is now in process of crection at Clinton, and we hope to have it inclosed suitable for meeting in September. It is small, but sufficiently large for our present wants, and when finished will cost from $700 to $800; $200 was furnished by the 'Church Erection Fund.'

"I have preached at several points on the subject of dancing and other public amusements. I have also, on different occasions, plend the cause both of the enslaved and the free colored man. In the cause of temperance some successful efforts have been made. The infidels, who are numerous in this community, occasionally make a public effort, but are, I think, losing ground. On the whole, your missionary feels encouraged to go forward in the strength of God to consecrate himself anew to his work, expecting to reap in due season."

Another missionary writes:

"My hope has been wonderfully realized. The Giver of all grace, the Father of mercies, has heard my prayer, and poured upon this people a spirit of grace and of supplication, agreeably to his promise. Old professors have been quickened, and many of the impenitent have been brought, I hope, to saving faith. Twenty-five professed their faith in Christ, and united with this church on the twenty-second of last May, and some others have united with other churches; others intend to unite with us at another communion season.

"The Sabbath-school and Bible-class have been considerably increased. The congregation is more than doubled. The religious spirit is predominant in the community at large. The prayer meetings also (three each week) are very solemn and well attended.

"Dancing and other parties of amusement, as well as gambling, are not heard of anymore; intoxication is also of rare occurrence. The people are now engaged in building a house of worship, and have already subscribed out of their poverty to furnish the means of accomplishing it."

IOWA.

From a missionary at large:

"We are able now to trace the results of the great financial revulsion that came upon us less than two years ago. Having observed those results, I seem to see clearly that it was, for the West, both in reference to temporal and spiritual things, the very best that a God of wisdom and mercy could have done. The lessons it has taught will not soon be forgotten. The influence it has exerted in moderating an eagerness for wealth that as a madness possessed the great mass of our people, in promoting habits of sober industry, and especially in directing attention to spiritual things, is of incalculable value.

"As to the extent to which the great revival has affected the West, my impression is that, making all due allowance for the disadvantageous circumstances in which the people are placed, the number of conversions, and the change wrought in the public mind on the subject of religion, can hardly have been greater at the East than here.

"As to the great enterprise of freeing our land from the curse of slavery, although the interest manifested is not what we desire, it is much more than it was in years gone by, and it is steadily increasing. The leaven of anti-slavery sentiment is steadily permeating every organization, both secular and religious. In view of the openings at the South, and the change that has been effected at the North-West, it seems to us worthy of consideration whether the Association ought not to enlarge its operations in the Slave States, even though it should involve a diminution of the number of laborers in this region."

From an evangelist, Rome, November 23d:

"I proclaim the truth against intemperance and slavery, and against every species of iniquity that infests the communities where I preach. God blesses these labors, and pro-slaveryism, rum-drinking, Sabbath-breaking, and profanity are very much lessened. I usually labor in places where sin is running riot, and where, because of iniquity, the love of professing Christians has grown cold. I found at Rome no person who had any faith that a revival effort would succeed. The same was true at Quasqueton. The last night of the year I preached at Littleton. It is a very hard place. Profanity, Sabbath-breaking, gambling, and kindred vices prevail."

He wrote from Littleton :

"Is is now twelve days since I commenced meetings here. The Lord has wrought gloriously among the people; at least sixty have professed faith in Christ, or are earnestly seeking salvation."

From another evangelist:

"The anti-slavery cause is on the advance, and would increase a hundred-fold if the pulpit would bring, like Cheever, the logic of the word of God to bear upon slavery, the system of heaven-daring wickedness that has entwined its slimy folds around the horns of the altar of many churches in this land, and, through some proslavery 'priest' cries out, preach Christ and let politics alone. Many ministers professing to be reformers do not preach against slavery. They will not receive slave-holders into the church, but they will receive pro-slavery persons who hate the colored man."

From a missionary:

"The command 'remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy,' is by far too little heeded. Now that the harvest season has arrived, the readiness of many to appropriate the Lord's day to gathering their crops is especially manifest. We greatly need a Sabbath convention in this State. The influence of such a convention would do much towards creating a moral sentiment in society in favor of the Sabbath, making it a disgrace to be seen harvesting, fishing, or gunning on that day."

From another missionary:

"The past year has been one of great depression, and severe suffering through the West, especially in Iowa and the frontier States. It has been with great difficulty that actual suffering for want of food and clothing has been avoided. Of course little or nothing could be done by way of money for the support of the Gospel or any benevolent object. All seemed compelled to enter into a struggle for enough to cat and wear. I have never found so hard work to keep my family from actual suffering as the past season, and only partially succeeded. But in it all, God has been good. Men's hearts seemed to be open, and they loved to pray, and hear the truth, and many we hope have passed from death to life."

MINNESOTA.

Letters from a missionary.

"The church at Henderson was organized May 1st, 1859, consisting then of five members. Others proposed to come in as soon as they could procure their letters from the churches East, whence most of them come. Tardiness in respect to this matter has prevented them from yet uniting. The congregation at that place has usually been attentive and in many respects deeply interesting. They want a minister to settle among them and yet they do not feel able to contribute much of anything to his support at present. The cause of temperance has been blessed and prospered among them during the past year. Drunkenness has diminished ten-fold, and Sabbath desecration and profane swearing have hidden their deformed faces. The Sabbath-school, supplied this spring with books, is now in a flourishing condition.

"The church at Bell Plains is in a languishing condition. Owing to high water this spring, I have not been able to keep up my regular appointments at that place, and hence there have been no stated services held in that church for the last quarter of the present year. They need a minister very much among them at least half his time. But for the difficulty in crossing the Minnesota River, Henderson and Bell Plains would make an inviting field for missionary efforts of any one man. The church at Traverse is still suffering under the embarrassment, occasioned in the attempt to erect a house of worship a year ago last summer. The present debt is about one thousand dollars. Early in March last, this church was quickened and many of its members comforted and strengthened in the service of the Lord. But since then, they have suffered spiritual declension, and many of the inseparable evils of such a state.'

From another missionary:

"I think I can say that my influence among this people has been blessed, not only in the salvation of souls, but also in changing very much the habits of the people. The Sabbath, almost universally desecrated before, now is as generally respected, ordinary avocations are laid aside and some place of religious worship attended. The people, mostly anti-slavery, have become more enlightened on that subject, and their relations to the slave, politically as well as morally, are felt. There is very little intoxicating liquor used in the region around us, and we hope the time is not far distant when the people will be temperate in all things."

WISCONSIN.

Letter from a missionary :

"Our weekly prayer-meetings have been filling up. The children have come in. God has remembered His covenant with His people. The hearts of the fathers and mothers have been turned to their children; their souls have been burdened for them; prayer has been answered, and several have been converted. Others are anxious.

Last Sabbath was to us a feast of fat things. A large proportion of our church were "Last Saboath was to its a least of the things. A large proportion of our church were together. The Lord appeared with us. Our sanctuary was indeed a Bethel. Seven were added to us, a part of them the first fruits of this work of grace. Two of them were our own beloved daughters. We are greatly rejoiced that all three of our daughters have recently entered into covenant with God and His people, and in the simplicity of childhood and the vigor of youth are engaged in the Lord's service."

From the same of later date:

"I recently took a pedestrian tour of three days and a half, visiting some very destitute neighborhoods lying west and north-west of this village. During the time I preached four times, attended and spoke in one temperance meeting, visited forty-seven families, distributed a large amount of religious reading and conversed with large numbers in respect to their spiritual interests. I was kindly received every where, even in Catholic families, and hope to be able to engage in like service often during the year.

Very many, even of the disciples of the church, are scattered abroad over these new settlements, who have no one to care for their souls as under shepherds."

From another missionary:

"In March, I received an invitation to preach every other Sabbath through the year, (at hours that would not interfere with my established duties,) in a new house of worship, two miles off, recently erected. It is called 'The Outsider's Church,' having been built by non-professors, for the avowed purpose of having whom they pleased to preach in it and true to the intent, all kinds of strange birds are flitting around it. The invitation was unexpected, I at once accepted it, and am much interested in my work in that corner of the vineyard. I always find there a large congregation of attentive hearers."

From another missionary:

"In their search after what they regard to be truth, the speculative and imaginative faculties are most predominant. The remark is often made that the Germans are phlegmatic, and while this is true, they are not indolent, but a persevering energy is manifest in all their spheres of action. In their researches they are not startled at any results to which they may arrive, though they make shipwreck of every thing pertaining to God and his truth. The well educated and a majority of them are thorough scholars in the solid branches, and in modern and ancient literature-base their rationalism upon the supremacy of reason, making it the Supreme Judge and dictator in all matters of faith. Therefore the reason is to decide what elements shall be included within the boundsries of religion, and the boundaries are to be filled up with the activities which reason prompts, and not from any impulses or excitements or motives from Divinity in any form. They therefore assume that their reason authorizes them to deny the supernatural origin of religion, and for this reason they deny a Christian revelation. * * * Their errors, so destructive to all the interests of time and eternity, must be removed by the Gospel, if removed at all."

ILLINOIS.

Letter from a missionary:

"The past quarter has been one of arduous labor and great joy to us. I commenced a protracted meeting at Wythe, January 7th, which lasted 17 days. I had no ministerial aid, but preached 18 times, visited about half of each day except the Sabbath, and held prayer-meeting every other day after the first week. The church was much revived and encouraged, difficulties of long standing between professors of religion were settled, and 12 or 15 persons, mostly young, professed faith in Christ.

"February 5th we commenced a meeting with the Cedron Church, which lasted over 3 weeks. There Bro. Eells, (one of the deacons now studying for the ministry,) rendered the cause good service by visiting, conducting prayer-meetings, and exhorting. I never enjoyed a better meeting. God was with us 'of a truth;' our congregations were good and solemn. The young persons that attended were interested; even little boys and girls of the ages of 8 and 12 came forward for prayers. Some fifteen or sixteen adults found peace in believing, among them a number of heads of families, one man and wife about 50 years of age.

From a colporteur in Southern Illinois:

"Three years since, many refused to receive tracts; now many seek and receive them with thankful hearts, and read and circulate them among their friends. Recently, some have inquired for Christian anti-slavery books, and purchased $1.50 to $2 worth at a time. Some have bought packages of temperance tracts to distribute. Less than three years ago, many refused me a night's lodging. Now, they seldom charge for such favors, and many ask me to pray with them. 'You are welcome,' 'You are more than welcome,' and 'Call again,' are common responses. But while this is true in the main, we occasionally meet with hard cases, (may God have mercy on them, they know not what they do,) who oppose the freedom of the colored man, and his elevation, and in fact, all Christian and moral reform. From this class but little is to be expected. May the work of reform move on, until all Western 'Egypt' shall embrace Christ, and receive the truth in the love of it."

From an evangelist in Southern Illinois:

"In my humble opinion the Society has not a more important field under its care and culture than Southern Illinois, and in proportion to its importance are the difficulties of the work and the consequent trials of the missionary. On the one hand there is the ignorant bigotry of sectarianism. On the other the violent opposition of mere politicians, and everywhere the general uprising of the heart at enmity against God. These all oppose the truth as it is in Jesus, which proclaims liberty to all men, which recognizes the natural equality of all men, and insists on the reception of the very spirit of Jesus as a qualification for Heaven, manifesting itself in love to God and love to man.

as a qualification for Heaven, manifesting itself in love to God and love to man.

"In traveling and preaching through so large a portion of Southern Illinois the missionary finds now and then encouraging prospects. Sometimes the word is received gladly; sometimes the tear of pentience is seen to moisten the cheeks; sometimes the affectionate grasp of the hand at the close of a meeting gives the assurance of sympathy, and suggests to the laborer hope, while he remembers it is written: 'He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious-seed, shall doubtless come again rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him.'"

From a missionary at large:

"I have partially explored the field from Chicago to Cairo, not as yet having had time to do any thing on the main line northward. On that portion over which I have passed, there is work enough for a dozen earnest men. The villages along the entire line from Chicago to Cairo have principally grown up within the past five years, and have an aggregate population (exclusive of Chicago and its suburbs) of 25,000 souls: this enumeration does not include the farming communities: and an aggregate church membership of 1284 distributed smoog the various denominations as follows: Congregational 128, New School Presbyterian 225, Old School Presbyterian 106, Cumberland Presbyterians 125, Methodists 500, Baptists and others 200, making a fraction more than 40 to each 1000 souls. These church members are scattered along a railway of 353 miles in length. The estimates in this report are as accurate as can be expected, being made from published statistics, inquiries, and personal observations.

"The fifty-four counties and parts of counties comprising what is usually known as Egypt, upper and lower, I find by the census of 1850 contains a population of 254,312 souls, having a church membership according to the published statistics of 1858 and 1859, in the aggregate of 40,000, as follows: Congregationalists 363, New School Presbyterians 1640, Old School Presbyterians 1100, Cumberland Presbyterians 5046, Methodists 1700, in full membership, and 3000 on probation, making a total of 20,000: Baptists 9044, and all others 2907—making of all the denominations 157 church members in each 1000 souls.

"The above will give a view of what has been accomplished by all the churches to extend thir membership. But this is not the worst view of the moral condition of this portion of the State. With a few hongrable exceptions, as at Salem, Carbondale, and a few other places, comparatively but little has been accomplished in the temperance reform, and still less in the satisfavery movement.

"However, there is a deeper interest manifesting itself in the public mind on all questions of morals. There is a growing willingness to hear on these questions, while a great amount of work must be performed before Southern Illinois will be regenerated. There is great reason for encouragement, so long as mon will hear the truth."

From another missionary :

"In Esmen there is no church organized, and at present no preaching except by myself and Rev. Dr. Bettleheim, formedy a missionary to Japan, and now a resident of this place. He is a man of much learning and some influence. He has written a series of articles in one of our county papers in 'defense of American Slavery, as in accordance with the teachings of the Bible,' and his influence is on the wrong side of every question of feform."

"Much interest is being awakened in this vicinity on the subject of slavery. Many of us have felt that we have not been doing our duty either to the slave or the nation unless we labored directly and earnestly for the immediate abolition of slavery; and that the doctrine of non-intervention with slavery, either in the territories or states, is indefensable either on principles of Christian morality or sound policy. This has led to the formation of the Livingston County Abolition Society, which is devoted to opposition to slavery, both in Church and State. It embraces within its membership Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists, and United Brethren, several of whom are ministers."

INDIANA.

From a missionary who has preached in several counties in South-Western Indiana:

"The prevailing religion in this region is exceedingly superficial. The majority of church members, so far as my observation has extended, never open their mouths in vocal prayer in the presence of others, unless it be in the excitement of a so-called revival; and very few professors, heads of families maintain any form of family worship. Very many church members visit upon the Sabbath, and during their visits discuss the markets, crops, politics, news, and in short any thing which they would discuss upon any other day. I took occasion to reprove a certain family for an instance of this visiting which came under my observation. 'Oh!' said they, 'every body does so in this neighborhood—nobody thinks any thing of it.' 'And does that make it becoming and Christian-like?' 'Oh! no, we don't suppose it's right.'

"There is also a very great neglect of public worship, often even on the part of the church members themselves. I have been reliably informed that in a certain church not far from here, numbering over a hundred communicants, the usual attendance upon the Sabbath day is not over sixty, many scarcely ever attending except on the regular quarterly communion days, when they all gather in."

From an evangelist:

"January first, I organized Hopewell church with twelve members. It is located in Posey county, four miles from New Hamony. There is no other church organization near, except one of the Old School Bapiss order. It is in the midst of a thickly settled neighborhood. The people are mostly from the South, and are extremely wicked. Swearing, Sabbath-breaking, whisky-drinking, card-playing, dancing and carousing, is the order of the day among a large portion of the inhabitants. In politics, Democratic,—in religion, a compound of Old School Baptist, Universalism, and Infidelity; their literary attainments very limited. But I have noticed a fast increasing desire among the young for reading.

"Here Hopewell church, in the providence of God, has been born, and still lives with prospects brightening every day. It meets with persecutions, but God is so over-ruling the wrath of wicked men, that it causes his people to watch and pray, and to keep themselves pure."

From a missionary in Adams and Jay counties:

"Two thirds of the people of this section are openly pro-slavery, and sustain the present administration. Among the remaining one third, not one in every hundred is willing to be called an Abolitionist. Denominations that are known elsewhere as distinctively anti-slavery, are here 'deaf and dumb' on the subject of Slavery and Intemperance; and even actual supporters and office-holders in the pro-slavery party. Yes, professing Christians, whose book of discipline refuses admission to slaveholders, and forbids the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage, use whisky in public and private, and vote for pro-slavery officers in the county, state, and general governments! Such an abandonment of Christian principles by professing Christians, while they hold still to the name and ordinances of Christianity, has a strong tendency to make some people reject Christianity altogether. It makes others cleave with superstitious tenacity to certain ordinances, ceremonies, and forms; while justice, mercy, truth and charity, are neither practiced nor possessed.

"Living and laboring in such a field, it is my constant aim, on all proper occasions, to correct the prevailing public sentiments, and to show that a religion that does not bring with it temperance and charity, can not be the religion of Christ. A man who hates his brother without cause, and helps the oppressor to rob him, 'has not the spirit of Christ;' therefore, 'he is none of his.' I have a stronger desire to bring the existing churches to occupy right ground on these subjects, than I have to see many uniting with the Church. A Christian oppressor is no better than a Christian drunkard. He who keeps his brother man in bondage, for his own gain, is a robber. And those who, by their influence, and their votes, help the oppressor to rob his victim, are partakers of the oppressor's crimes, and justice demands that they be made partakers of his punishment. I am of the belief, that those whose outward life contradicts their profession, are to be judged and known by what they practice, and not what they profess. 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' saith Christ. I can not rejoice over any man's conversion, who is not willing for the sake of others, (to say nothing of his own safety,) to abandon his cups, and his pro-slavery preferences, and political associations. If you were to report to me, that all the people in the Empire S ate were converted last Sabbath, yet, notwithstanding that they hate negroes, both those who are in bonds, as well as the free; that their political principles are strongly pro-slavery; that they buy liquor, and driuk it as a beverage, and give it to others, I could mourn over such a delusion, but not rejoice over such a conversion."

OHIO.

From Rev. J. G. Brice, missionary agent :

"I have rarely presched any where, without more or less seriousness, and a marked attention being manifested by the congregations. I have been greatly cheered by the presence of God with me, in my efforts. The anti-slavery cause is steadily on the advance. Men's minds are becoming more enlightened on this subject; they are more outspoken in their rebuke of pro-slavery churches, who justify or tolerate this system of iniquity, and there is a fixedness of purpose to labor for its overthrow; and, as a consequence, their sympathies are increasingly with us, and ere long we will not have to struggle under embarrassments, as we have done, in the prosecution of our work. Intemperance, in many places, is fearfully on the advance. I notice, also, in my frequent visits to the churches, and my intercourse with private Christians and ministers, that those individuals and churches, that are right, on the great principles of reform, partake most of the spirit of Christ, and are advancing in the divine life: our cause is taking a deeper hold on their affections, and they are becoming more deeply interested in our efforts to send the Gospel to those who have it not.

"On the other hand, there are here pro-slavery churches, who are deplorably ignorant on the subject of Slavery, many of whom are under the influence of a wicked prejudice, in regard to color. There is no excuse for this ignorance. They are wilfully ignorant. Light is shining all around them, but they will not come to the light; they will not impartially and prayerfully, in the light of God's truth, investigate the subject. The curse of God is upon these churches. Formality and worldliness are fast creeping in, and eating out what piety there was. These churches have no sympathy for us, and our work. They are entirely indifferent to the wrongs of the oppressed, and indulge in a spirit of hatred and persecution against those who are laboring for the removal of these evils from the Church, and the country. I know churches, where the ministers who preach to them, dare not even pray from the sacred desk, for the slave, for fear of giving offense to many of their mombers! The Lord have mercy on such ministers and churches.

churches.

The failure in the banks last year, and the pressure of the times as a consequence, together with the failure of the crops, have been the cause of the failing off in the contributions for the past financial year."

From a missionary:

"La Porte has been emphatically a hard place. Two or three years ago, it was the stronghold of Spiritualism, intemperance, and licentiousness, but there has been a great improvement within a short time. A year ago, we held a revival, in which about twenty persons were converted. Since then, much less has been said about Spiritualism, although there are many believers in that delusion, in this place and vicinity. The dealers in ardent spirits have been prosecuted, fined, and imprisoned, and although the traffic is not suppressed, we can report progress in the temperance cause. The church and community here, are strongly anti-slavery. We have a rule on our church record, requiring members to abstain from the use of alcoholic drinks. On the whole, the moral condition of the community is improving. Our church is usually filled during the morning service, and excellent attention is given by the audience."

From a missionary among the people of color, in Logan and Champaign counties:

"My field is one of growing interest. The Lord visited the people of Urbana in January last, with great power. Persons of all ages and classes, were brought to the foot of the cross. The people are very poor, yet they have out of their scamy means, contributed to this Association, and often, when not saked pay the traveling expenses of the missionary. But there is much error among them, owing to the want of proper religious instruction. Their preachers are ignorant men. The result of all, is that they young people, that are now being educated at the common schol-ly, do not attend meeting, and are fast becoming skeptics. But they are anxious to hear intelligent preaching. The Sabbath is not well observed in some localities. There is a great work to be done in the Southern part of this State, among the colored people."

From a missionary:

"We were blessed in the good providence of God, with a precious revival in this place, in January last. There were more than twenty hopeful conversions. All seem to be doing well, and pursaing a humble, Christian walk. I have several different points of preaching, at all of which I have encouraging congregations. Upon the whole, after a survey of the field, I think our prospects were never more encouraging, than at present.

"Our Sunday-schools are well attended. Our missionary concert, and weekly prayer-meetings, are regularly observed, and interesting. The poor slaves are always remembered in the prayers of the brethren. Several Catholic children are in our Sab-bath-school. Great improvement in Sabbath observance, and an evident growth of anti-slavery and temperance sentiment, is manifest."

From another missionary:

"Distilleries raise their heads on every side of us. Their owners offer a few cents more a bushel for grain than other persons. Thus the farmer is tempted to sell them his grain. I am sorry to say that many professing Christians fall under the temp ation. Our churches have taken a decided stand against this traffic, and have made it a disciplinable offense. This has brought upon us the wrath, not only of rum-sellers, and rum manufacturers, but of those who sell their grain. We have had some trouble, but we expect to maintain our integrity, trusting in God for support."

MICHIGAN.

. From a missionary:

"The most interesting feature in connection with our work, during the past year, is a great apparent increase of interest in the prosperity of our church, on the part of those who do not profess to be Christians. This is shown by a far greater willingness to contribute for the support of preaching, by a larger attendance on public worship, and by many expressions of kindly feeling.

"Spiritualism appears at present to be the most popular form of error. We have lately had a series of lectures upon the subject, purporting to show its uses and abuses. The lecturer professes loudly to be a reformer, but what virtues he inculcates, that your missionary fails to inculcate, or what vices he condemns, that are not condemned by your missionary, I have failed to learn. The good results of this 'reform,' are not yet apparent, although one, avowedly speaking under the influence of spirits, exhorted his hearers to be better than Jesus Christ, and not rely upon an atonement, but work out their own salvation.

"Sabbath desecration is still a great and crying sin among us. The temperance cause appears to be prosperous. There is also an increasing interest in the anti-slavery cause. Your missionary has preached upon the subject here, and, by invitation, in a neighboring town."

From another missionary:

"We are now in the midst of a struggle for the suppression of gambling and drinking, such as has never been known in Niles. Our city council have passed an ordinance, granting license for billiards, drinking, and ball-alleys. The Press is now liverally groaning under articles against their action. One pro-slavery paper turns champion for billiards, balls, and whisty; and, I think the matter will come to a crisis soon. May it result in the suppression of these moral pests.

"The young man who entered the ministry, through the instrumentality of this church, and is located at St. Joseph, in this county, is doing well. They have a fine house of worship, almost completed, and the acciety is growing rapidly.

"There is a growing desire to suppress all Subbath descration in our city, and I think some definite action of a public character will soon be taken.

"I feel sometimes as though the struggle with the terrible tide of conservatism is a hard one, but there is no discharge, and I mean to go cheerfully, and boldly or, and expect to fall with the harness on. On the whole, the future of this church is full of promise, and if we keep near the throne of grace, I have no fears."

PENNSYLVANIA.

From a missionary:

"Revivals, of more or less extent, have been enjoyed in all my several regular fields of labor. In Cambridge, in connection with the three other evangelical churches, there have been during the winter and spring a goodly number of hopeful conversions; the four churches sharing in the labors and the fruits of the revival.

"In Centreville, without the aid of any efficient church or ministerial cooperation, a meeting was held some three weeks with most pleasing and hopeful results. Of the fruits of that revival, a Congregational Church has been organized, consisting of forty members-to which at their first Communion since, fourteen were added. Others have united elsewhere, and still others will unite somewhere.

"At Riceville, occasional labor has been blessed to the encouragement of the feeble church there, in affliction and in severe trials, and to the awakening and hopeful conversion of some sinners.

"Last fall, at Sterrettania, a Congregational Church was organized, consisting of nine members, mostly by letters from other churches. Rev. J. M. McLain, from Obio, commenced a series of meetings there in March, but being taken sick it fell to my lot to take his place. Some good was done. The Methodists (the only other church there) labored with the Congregationalists with one heart. Several were added to each of those churches.

"At the close of our Association in Mercer, the third week in February, it was the unanimous advice of the Association, that I should comply with the request of the Congregational Church there, and their worthy pastor, Rev. D. R. Barker, to remain and preach a few days. Being a stranger, it devolved upon me to do the preaching mainly for four weeks, while Brother Barker and his church, assisted by the hearty co-operation of several other pastors with their churches, labored together with most blessed "Eternity alone can unfold the good accomplished in these churches, and among those who before the meeting were far off from God, but now are hopefully brought nigh by the blood of Christ. To Him be all the glory.

"You have asked me to give you the number of hopeful conversions in these meetings. It is difficult. I can say however, that eighty-seven have united with the four churches immediately under my care, and there has come to my knowledge, just about that number who have united with other evangelical churches, and candid judges whom I have consulted in these different places after the meetings, think that about as many more give evidence of hopeful conversion, who have not united anywhere. Several rum shops and drunkard-making establishments, have been broken up, and their keepers become Christians, and are now engaged in honest business. It would be pleasing, and perhaps profitable, to record instances of conversion among the extremely aged, and among the intelligent of juvenile years, of Roman Catholics, drunkards, infi-dels, and skeptics of various grades; of whole households dedicated to God; of the fundamental changes wrought in whole communities; bad habits abandoned; family altars erected in scores, etc. But this communication is already too long. All these things are the Lord's doings. They are marvelous in our eyes. To Him we will ascribe all the honor and glory.'

Under his supervision are ten Sabbath-schools, and seven Bible classes—with 672 scholars, and

From another missionary:

"We have a population of some 4000, nearly all emigrants from different parts of Europe, almost all coal miners; and the majority of them very low in their moral character. I have strong ground to believe, that the visits which I frequently make during the week, are blessed of the Lord. Some of the most ignorant and immoral character of this place, have been converted, and added to the church under my care. I preach occasionally in other towns and villages in the neighborhood, and attend all our quarterly, and some annual meetings. The principle of anti-slavery is strong among our people* generally."

NEW-YORK.

From Rev. John Lowrey:

"SARATOGA SPRINGS, March 1, '59.

"We have had some prosperity here during the last quarter, in the conversion of about twenty souls; several others have been awakened in our meeting, who have since found peace and united with other churches. We have organized a church of fifteen members; no doubt others would have joined with us, but for our reformatory principles; but we would rather have few in number, if right on the subject of reforms, than many if otherwise. We suffered greatly in coosequence of not forming our church in the spring, as many would have joined us then that have united with other churches; but we still hope in God to succeed and have a church that will stand up for Him and the truth."

He wrote April 20th :

"Last Sabbath was our communion season, and we had a very precious time, waiting on the Lord. There was one haptized who several years before had renounced Popery and experienced religion, and has lat-ly renounced Popish baptism.

"A few months ago I found a young man, a German, who had been sent by his friends to a Roman Catholic college in Germany, to prepare for the priesthood, but soon be-coming sick of Popery, he left in disguit, and embraced infidelity. He has been in this country about three years; I conversed with him freely several times about his soul, and invited him to our meeting; he was awakened, came forward for prayers, and has since found peace in believing. He is now an exhorter, and intends devoting himself to the work of the ministry.

"Since my last, several have professed religion, and among them are three young persons, who have been brought up Roman Catholics; one of them, an interesting young man, had been lately confirmed. The priest is much displeased, and threatens punishment; but we hope that opposition will not hinder them, and that they may be faithful unto death. A French Catholic, who has been a long time afflicted with cancer in the mouth, and can not long survive, has been converted, and is now enabled to rejoice in hope of eternal life."

In August he wrote as follows:

"Many think that the people here ought to take hold of this free church enterprise, and support me, while laboring to save souls. I suppose they would if I were not a reformer, and especially an abolitionist; for the sin of abolitionism is almost unpardonable, especially in the months of July and August, when so many Southerners and pro-slavery people from the free States, flock to the springs. Some facts have occurred here, illustrating the tremor that seizes upon ministers and others, when it is proposed to introduce the subject of Slavery, or induce them to aid in relieving the oppressed."

From Rev. A. G. Beman :

"PORTLAND, March 1st, 1859.

"There are in this city about 400 colored people, in the midst of whom our little church stands as their only religious home. They are from various parts of this country—more than a dozen different States of the Union being represented—while some are from the British Provinces, some from South-America, and some from the West-Indies and Africa. There are about a hundred families—more than ninety of which your missionary has visited as a minister of the word, seeking the "lost sheep of the house of Israel," comforting and strengthening believers, and striving to win souls to Christ. About an eighth of them are members of the Christian Church, thirty-nine of them in the 4th Congregational Church, to which I minister. The attendance on the public worship of God, has greatly increased during the year. A marked improvement is seen in the attendance upon the weekly prayer meetings and lectures.

* The Welsh.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

"There are now more than one hundred members of the Sabbath school and Bible-classes; the number has doubled during the year, and the interest of all is constantly increasing. I have an interesting Bible-class of young ladies—number sixteen. Some have become hopefully plous, and all have made commendable progress in that truth which, by the grace of God, is able to make them 'wise unto salvation.' We hold monthly Sabbath-school concerts. At the last one, twenty-six of the children recited pieces or selections from the Soriptures, in the presence of an audience of a many persons as our church could hold. This is usually the case; and with the prayers, and addresses by different speakers to the scholars, the occasion is always one of deep interest. The school is indeed, under God, the 'nursery of the church.' May all its members become the heirs of eternal glory.

"Your missionary has held several temperance meetings, which have been addressed by himself and others. One hundred and nine persons have subscribed the pledge of total abstinence—some of them are beld and faithful soldiers in the 'cold water army'—many of them are the young and promising. This subject has been frequently presented to them in its bearing upon their temporal and spiritual, their social, moral, and intellectual welfare, and its relation to their elevation in society, and to their duty to 'remember those in bonds as bound with them.'

"I have often spoken on the subject of missions, giving, in a number of discourses, the 'Origin and History of the Mendi Mission.' Familiar with it from the beginning—having had a personal acquaintance with Cinque and the Amistad Africans, and the friends who gathered around them in those perilous hours, when danger and death threatened them—having seen the arm of God made bare for their deliverance, and his Providence as a 'wall of fire around' the Mission in Africa, for its defense—my soul always quickens with new zeal, whenever I have the unspeakable privilege of presenting its claims to the sympathy and support of the people of God. That is a glorious spot in Africa. 'There shall be a handful of corn in the earth—upon the top of the mountain, the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon.'

"During the year there have been a few conversions—some backsliders have been quickened to new life—some have letters to join this church. About a dozen will, I trust, in due time become communicants in the church."

Abner Kneeland. Infidel efforts defeated.

From Rev. O. Emerson, Iowa.

"I spent a Sabbath with the church at Farmington, Van Buren Co., Iowa. The town, with the contiguous neighborhood, has some one thousand five hundred people, and is located on the Desmoines river, which separates this State from Missouri. Some members of the church live in a land of slaves. The expectation that one or more slaveholders would propose to unite with it, led the church at an early day to adopt a rule, excluding slaveholders. But I fear that the presence of slaveholding influence tends to repress speech and action on the subject. The place is interesting, as the spot where Abner Kneeland planted himself, with a considerable number of his followers, at an early day, to make a grand experiment of what kind of society could be established in a natural paradise which God had made, but from which Hz was to be systematically excluded. The infidel church was planted 'in advance of all others,' No missionary had yet appeared as the voice of one crying in the wilderness. Scarcely had the voice of prayer been heard at the altar of family devotion. Kneeland made his onset upon the Gospel, at the point where he knew the prejudices of the people would be most easily excited. He constituted himself the guardian of public liberty. His mission was to show that churches and ministers had always been hostile to the independence of the dear people. To spread that sentiment, he and his followers labored for a considerable time, until they thought themselves strong enough to control the elections of the county. The infidel party was constituted, and men duly nominated to fill the several offices."

Overthrow of the Infidel Party.

"No sooner was this done than every religious and political distinction was forgotten. Men of all parties and of no party, of all religions and of no religion, united as one man to destroy the new combination. More than this, some of the most wicked and profane men in society were speedily officious in their zeal for the overthrow of the party. This last 'Yankee notion' was as little to their taste as any they bad ever seen or heard of, from that quarter. They reasoned as earnestly, canvassed as zealously, and swore as lustily, as such men are wont to do when their strongest prejudices or their dearest interests are invaded. As a result, the defeat of the party was overwhelming and its prestige forever destroyed. Soon after the leader died, some leading men removed, and the remainder, seeing the utter hopelessness of the attempt they had made, are making no systematic effort, and the party, as such, has long been dead.

Meanwhile six churches have been formed, all claiming to hold the great essentials of religion, and none of a contrary character. All of them, I believe, maintain stated preaching, and five have houses of worship. This demonstration against the infidel party is an illustration of the prevailing sentiment of the West on the subject of religion. The people generally are very far from being ready to obey the Gospel in humility and faith. They are not generally prepared to accept the truth that it is the duty of the minister to reprove all sin, and especially the sins to which his bearers are exposed, or into which they have fallen; but when the question is of an open rejection of the Gospel, as a restraining, elevating force in society, the conviction is almost universal that it can not be dispensed with."

"Black Law" Outrage in Southern Illinois.

From Rev. W. Holmes:

"Permit me to record a recent outrage against humanity, morals, and religion, committed under the operation of Illinois 'Black Law.'

"A man and his wife, both born and raised in the State of Ohio, as I understand, left Ohio for Wisconsin, where they own some land, intending to settle there. Being delayed by the rains and other causes, they found they could not reach Wisconsin, the place of their destination, soon enough to put in crops this season, and concluded to call on some friends living a few miles from Marion, Williamson Co., with whom they had been very intimate formerly, in Ohio, hire some land if possible, put in crops, wait till after harvest, then pursue their journey. The friends let them part of their own house, ten acres of land were hired, prepared, and planted with corn. God, the great husbandman, smiled upon the industry of this man, and his labors have prospered. Soon there began to be whisperings, threats followed. 'This was not to be tolerated-it was against the law.' Nothing could be said against the character of the parties, the man was sober, honest, industrious, and peaceful; the woman pious and godly, without reproach, a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. I visited the scene of action, accompanied by Rev. H. Patrick. We endeavored to calm the fears of the parties interested, recommended some persons to call on the malcontents and explain matters, show that the individuals in question did not intend to remain in the State longer than fall, when they would remove from their midst. We also appointed a meeting in the neighborhood with a view to create public opinion in favor of humanity, and mercy. After having done this, we departed, hoping that all might be for the best.

"But that same night, at nearly ten o'clock, a dozen sons of Belial, armed, went to the house where their victims lodged, and marched them off to a Justice of the Peace, six miles distant. They were tried by a jury of twelve men, found guilt of a high misdemeanor—remaining in the State more than ten days—and fined $100 and costs. When this was secured, they were suffered to depart, and between one and two o'clock, P.M., they reached the house of their friends, weary and disconsol ate. They immediately left the country, for one more civilized. We held our meeting, however. Brother Patrick and myself delivered anti-slavery addresses, left anti-slavery tracts with the people, and returned, grieved at heart, sick in the soul, while reflecting on the oppressions of the poor. One half of the money wrung out of these poor persons goes to the informer, the other half goes—where? Tell it not in Gath, publish-it not at Askelom—to constitute a 'Charity Funn' for the use and benefit of the poor of the county."

Continue of the second state

CONT. Law enterprise to the AUXILIARIES.

Destrological reservation between properties our law John House pay of the following

The Penobscot Co. Missionary Association, auxiliary to the American Missionary Association, held its Twelfth Annual Meeting in the vestry of the First Parish Church in Bangor, Oct. 26, 1858. After a short session spent in devotional exercises, and the reading of the minutes of the previous year, the reports of the Treasurer and the Corresponding Secretary were read and approved. The receipts had been $225.90. The Committee on Nominations reported the following list of officers for the ensuing year, and they were unanimously elected:

ALEXANDER DRUMMOND, President; O. H. INGALL and G. A. THATCHER, Vice-Presidents; John S. Kimball, Recording Secretary; Jos. H. Perkins, Corresponding Secretary; James Allen, Treasurer; Edmund H. Fogg, Auditor; John Conant, Jonathan T. Hardy, and Charles W. Jenkins, Executive Committee.

Rev. Geo. Shepard, D.D., was nominated as preacher for the next anniversary, and Rev. Moses H. Tarbox as substitute.

In the evening the annual sermon was preached by the Rev. David Thurston, from Isaiah 32:8: "But the liberal devise liberal things." The substance of this valuable discourse was published in the American Missionary for January, 1859.

Illinois Home Missionary Association.

The Seventh Annual Meeting of this body was held at Bloomington, Illinois, May 28, 1858.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: Rev. Edward Beecher, D.D., President; Rev. J. Blanchard, Rev. H. Foote, and Rev. W. N. Miles, Vice-Presidents; Rev. W. W. Patton, Corresponding Secretary; Rev. J. E. Roy, Recording Secretary; Galen Eastman, Treasurer; B. Merrill, Assistant Treasurer; P. Carpenter, J. Johnston, T. M. Avery, W. F. Gates, Galen Eastman, Sylvanus Towne, Rev. E. Goodman, Rev. W. W. Patton, Rev. J. E. Roy, Rev. L. Beredict, Rev. W. E. Holyoke, and Rev. F. Bascom, Executive Committee,

The annual report of the Executive Committee was read by the Corresponding Secretary, and by order of the Society published in the Congregational Herald. Owing to a change in the time of holding the annual meeting, the report covered but nine months' labors. The available resources of the Association for that time had been $1 156.66. The particular reports of the missionaries appointed by the Parent Society at the recommendation of this auxiliary, together with some items of interest from the general missionary under its direction, are noticed in other parts of our report. In conclusion, the Committee say they "are happy to report that a number of the missionary churches have been visited during the past winter with refreshings from on high, and have thus been able to accomplish in the conversion of sinners, a portion of the work for which they were organized and for which they receive the aid of the Association."

The American Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists of Ohio and Pennsylvania, Auxiliary to the American Missionary Association.

Rev. Howell Powell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, President; Robert R. Owens, of Newark, Treasurer; Rev. Edward T. Evans, of Newark, Secretary.

Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionary Society of Wisconsin and Illinois.

Rev. ROBERT WILLIAMS, Sparta, Wisconsin, President; Rev. REES EVANS, Cambria, Wisconsin, Secretary; Hugh Elias, Esq., Genesee, Wisconsin, Treasurer.

We have received no report of the two auxiliaries last named. Some notice of them is given in the body of our report. The list of officers is given as last year.

appeal, " He colden were you than College of or regisperiors of perture reals the horis. These ten men men people, and give me onto and, to my tax.

provided that the property of the the second second and the second second to the second second there are the second time.

should not get hear insurant our plant the beautiful in the real website

Manager of the season of the s

Table to the time seems of their beautiful with the seems of the distribution of are the fort of him that bringers good tidings, that shiddeloth reacas that bringsth good things of good, that publisheds salvation that saids unto

Zong the tind subjected to Then the thin that the chapteriol the collier

The sent dying Messich, followed by the they boards, with the bree vision wil the New Armston prepared as a bride adorned for her-fineliged, God himself derive by energy with his colors, her foundations with supplied her windows interested bor gates each moistless borders of plots, suspensement. And all the oblight metalline usuals or the Tribe Tribe I and event shall be the green of the children, is manufactured by the some chald he cute inch of a worse real of the relative to the best for the of the Land, and their suplacements is at the cities the floor state to account

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

lar reports of the missionaries appointed by the Parent Society at the too in beneation of this auxiliary, depotes with some flows of interest, from the moneral missionary under it, firection, are noticed in other naris

I ar report. In conclusion, the Contrained say they " are natury to re-

BY REV. GEO. B. CHEEVER, D.D.,

Moss Arieds to the right avenue of

OF NEW-YORK.

THE GREAT STUMBLING-BLOCK IN THE WAY OF THE MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE.

"For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth." "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up, the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people."—ISAIAU 62: 1, 10.

The introduction and context are full of majesty and glory. From the fifty-first chapter to the sixty-third, the one grand theme is the coming of God's kingdom in righteousness, to be spread, through the agency of an obedient and righteous church, through the whole world. First comes the appeal, "Hearken unto me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek the Lord! Hearken unto me, my people, and give ear unto me, O my nation; for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people. My righteousness is near, and shall be forever; and I have put my words in thy mouth, and have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say unto Zion, Thou art my people."

Then, in the fifty-second chapter, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion, thy God reigneth!" Then the fifty-third, the chapter of the suffering and dying Messiah, followed by the fifty-fourth, with the first vision of the New Jerusalem prepared as a bride adorned for her husband, God himself laying her stones with fair colors, her foundations with sapphires, her windows in agates, her gates carbuncles, and all her borders of pleasant stones. And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children in Righteousness shalt thou be established and FREE FROM OPPRESSION. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord.

Then comes the invitation in the fifty-fifth chapter to the living waters of salvation, and the everlasting covenant of God in the same mercies of David, and the blessed and beautiful promise, "that as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven; and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall my word be, that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Then, in the fifty-sixth, an advance in the revelation of the conditions and instrumentalities: "Thus saith the Lord, Keep ye judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed. Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it, that keepeth the Sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil." In most interesting correspondence with this is the declaration in the fourteenth Psalm that God will not forsake his people, nor cast off his inheritance, for that JUDGMENT shall return unto RIGHT-EOUSNESS, and all the upright in heart shall follow it.

Then, in the fifty-seventh chapter follows the indictment and rebuke of sin: "But he that putteth his trust in the Lord shall possess the land and shall inherit my holy mountain, and shall say, Cast ye up, cast ye UP, prepare the way, TAKE UP THE STUMBLING BLOCK OUT OF THE WAY OF MY PROPLE." Then, in the fifty-eighth, a greater detail as to the stumbling blocks to be removed, and the righteousness established, through the instrumentality of the Sabbath, the Word, and the Spirit of God. "Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily, and thy righteousness shall go before thee, the glory of the Lord shall be thy rereward." "Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord, and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." All this glory shall be thine, if thou deal thy bread to the hungry, give thy shelter to the poor, and covering to the naked, take away from the midst of thee the yoke, draw out thy soul to the hungry, satisfy the afflicted soul, loose the bands of wickedness, undo the heavy burdens, let the oppressed go free, and break every yoke.

Then, in the fifty-ninth, the terrible indictment, showing why, although the Lord's hand is not shortened, nor his ear heavy, yet your iniquities have separated and put his mercy away from you; an indictment that, if the prophet Isaiah were now on earth, he would take into the sanctuary of God, and read and apply to our own church and nation. For our transgressions are multiplied before thee, and our sins testify against us, for our transgressions are with us, and as for our iniquities we know them; in transgressing and lying against the Lord, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, and uttering from the heart words of falsehood. And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street, and equity can not enter." Then, for a defense and conflict against all this wickedness, the righteousness of God, and the standard of it in his word, uplifted by his Spirit. Then, in the sixtieth chapter, the glorious consequence of such an uplifting: "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." Then, in the sixty-first and sixty-second chapters, the Messiah himself, the anointed of God, appearing with this standard, proclaiming the acceptable year of the Lord, and the ground of truth and righteousness on which the world shall acknowledge the commission and authority of the Church. I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, for he hath covered me with the ROBE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS. So the Lord God will cause RIGHTEOUSNESS AND PRAISE to spring forth before all the nations. Then comes the chapter of our text, and a new declaration of the instrumentalities by which God will accomplish all this glory. "For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake will I not rest, until the RIGHTEOUUSNESS thereof shall go forth as BRIGHTNESS, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth. And the Gentiles SHALL SEE THY RIGHTEOUSNESS, and all kings thy glory. Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." The siginal central element of all this outshining sublimity and glory is the manifestation of God's RIGHTEOUSNESS, in the character, teachings and example of his church, as a Missionary church, commissioned for the conquest and redemption of THE WORLD IN RIGHTEOUS-NESS.

We have here the preparation of a way, the removal of the stumbling blocks out of the way; the lifting up of the standard for the people.

The preparation of a way is indicated by the predictions of it: And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots-with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of earth, and righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The Lord is exalted, for he dwelleth on high; he hath filled Zion with JUDGMENT AND RIGHTEOUSNESS. And wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times and strength of salvation. The fear of the Lord is his treasure. And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness. The unclean shall not pass over it; the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. With such delineations the great missionary psalm is in wonderful correspondence. "Give the king thy judgments O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son. He shall judge thy people with RIGHTEOUSNESS, and thy poor with JUDGMENT, the mountains shall bring peace to the people by RIGHTEOUSNESS. He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor." "He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy. He shall redeem their souls from deceit and violence, and precious shall their blood be in his sight."

Such is the glorious nature of God's kingdom, and of the methods by which it is to be established in the earth. The missionary work is a work for the establishment of that kingdom. The gathering of the Christian church, and their union in and for this work, is the preparation of the way of the Lord.

The way of the Lord is an highway of righteousness. This, then, is a plain indication as to the meaning of the second part of the command issued to the Church in prosecuting God's work, to take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people. This is just as essential as the casting up of a way. But the nature of the stumbling-block is as plain from the nature of the work, which, being a work of the most elevated and sacred nature, a work of the purest holiness, the most unmingled benevolence towards man, and piety towards God, forbids any thing of questionable morality, and much more any thing of unquestionable sinfulness and evil, to be tolerated in it, or mixed up with it, or built in among any of its structures. If any such immorality is lying in the way, the very first thing to be done, the thing essential to progress and success, is to have it taken out of the way.

If the members of the Church themselves, or if the churches corporate engaged in this work are sanctioning or maintaining any wickedness in it, any principle or practice subversive of the very object and nature of the work, which is a work of the universal prevalence of righteousness, the righteousness of God, to cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations, that practice must be put away, that principle must be disavowed and cast out, or it is fatal. The church that sustains it, that hides it in her stuff, becomes a corporate Achan in the camp, and if being brought to notice and to trial the accursed thing is not cast out, but it is tolerated, or if, perhaps worse than all, the investigation and trial are not permitted, but the villainy is hushed up, covered up, the denunciation of it as a villainy not being permitted, but such denunciation itself being denounced as a great crime, a sin of false witnessing and unchristian severity against the Church, producing injurious agitation and division; then such pleading for Baal, such hiding of iniquity, will inevitably stop the wheels of the enterprise, or throw it off the track. The heart and purpose of God against such conduct are illustrated in the fourteenth chapter of the prophecy of Ezekiel, both with reference to the individual leaders in the enterprise, and the corporate association. If the Church trespass grievously in such sin, then, though Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, yet should they deliver only their own souls by their own righteousness, saith the Lord God. "Then came certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat before me, and the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of Man, these men have set up their idols in their heart, and put the stumbling-block of their iniquity before their face; should I be inquired of at all by them?" 'I, the Lord will answer according to the multitude of eir idols.'

Now it is plain that any immorality or error, any thing involving in principle or practice that which is opposed to God's righteousness is such a stumbling-block of iniquity to be removed out of the way. Whether it were intemperance, polygamy, idolatry, slavery, or a formal denial of some of those great central truths of Christianity, without which Christianity can not exist, if such an obstacle is in the way, it must be put out of the way. The putting it out of the way is the condition of all further progress.

It so happens that we do meet more than one of these great forms of iniquity, these gigantic stumbling blocks of sin, but one especially, directly in the highway of the missionary enterprise. It is so directly in our way that the elders of the Church set it up in their own hearts, and place it in our way, and maintain that it is not a stumbling block of iniquity, but a living corner-stone of God's providential righteousness, a granite foundation, as it were, more solid and grand than any thing else, for the grooves of the wheels of the cars of the missionary enterprise. Its being in the Church is what makes it a fatal obstacle.

On foreign ground we meet this iniquity and stumbling block in the shape of the African slave-trade. Take, for example, as a palpable illustration, the following paragraph in a communication from a missionary in Africa to the American Board: "A large French ship arrived yesterday, for a cargo of four or five hundred slaves, or, as they are termed, emigrants. I was informed that two other vessels would be here soon to engage in the same traffic. You can imagine what the influence of this will be upon our mission. The rum traffic has recently almost deluged us, and now to have the slave traffic carried on here, as we fear it will be, is truly discouraging."

That the slave-trade is a vast and dreadful obstacle against the missionary enterprise, no men could have doubted; but it is good and proper to produce unquestionable evidence. But are we at home implicated in this traffic, and is the sanction of the Church in any way given to it? Let us see. For our statistics we shall rely upon an unexceptionable and the latest authority, the Cyclopædia of Commerce, published by the Harpers, in New-York, in 1858. I say unexceptionable, with reference especially to this consideration, that whereas floating information from year to year may be questioned, until it has been sifted, that which passes into the form of an encyclopædia, and especially for commercial purposes, is likely to be sound and reliable. It is all the difference between drift-wood and the timbers and spars selected and rafted for ships and dwelling-houses.

It is estimated by these authorities that in the port of New-York alone twelve vessels are fitted out every year for the slave-trade, and that Boston and Baltimore furnish each the same number, making a fleet of thirtysix vessels engaged in this traffic in human beings. Adding some few from other places, the number is set down at forty, owned mostly by Northern men, with a capital invested in the mere ships, of three hundred and twenty-thousand dollars. This, however, is but a small part of the investment. The manning of the vessels, victualing and navigating, the cost of negroes in Africa, say fifteen dollars a head, and six hundred as a cargo to each vessel, amounting to three hundred and sixty thousand dollars, the cost of loss by one hundred deaths in each passage, with port charges and secret money for landing without prosecution, amounting to eight hundred and forty thousand, making some fifteen hundred thousand dollars capital and expenses. On this outlay the profits are so immense as almost to defy belief. Take, for example, one voyage of this fleet, conveying twenty four thousand negroes. Four thousand, or a sixth part of the whole, it is computed, die in the horrors of the middle passage, leaving twenty thousand on arrival, fit for market. For each of these there is received on an average five hundred dollars, making ten million dollars for the whole. Each vessel making two trips a year, the annual value is twenty millions. The expenses and the profits for a single year therefore compare as follows:

| Total of expenses on two voyages, | | 3 | | | $3,000,000 |
|-----------------------------------|---|---|---|---|--------------|
| Total of receipts on same, | , | | , | | 20,000,000 |
| Total of profits. | | | | 4 | $17,000,000 |

This computation is made mainly with reference to Cuba. But it is computed by Mr. Douglas that as many as fifteen thousand negroes were imported into the United States directly within the last year, and the number is constantly increasing. This would amount to a traffic worth seven million five hundred thousand dollars annually. The moment these creatures are landed here, they become a productive property in the natural increase alone, without the cost or the hazard of the foreign piracy, say of one third the first year, and one half the second, and so on, every child born being branded with the brand of slave law and slaveholding piety, Partus sequitur ventrem. But it is the foreign traffic we are now hunting down in these statistics, and we perceive the depths of avarice and cruelty in which it is grounded, the gigantic foundations on which these baliste are advanced against Africa, settled and fixed on her own soil, and the grappling irons thrown out into the country. There is no fear of this kind of missionary providence in the instrumentality of human cupidity and cruelty ever being exhausted, with this colossal temptation for its supply.

Accordingly it is admitted in the statistical view in the Cyclopædia of Commerce, that "the desire of profiting by the sale of negroes has tempted the petty princes to make war on each other for the chance of making captives, and has given a stimulus to man-stealing and other atrocities," and it is the testimony of Dr. Livingstone that all hope of a permanent suppression of the slave-trade must be given up, even by the influence of Christian civilization, if the coast tribes are to be hounded on by the Europeans to hunt down the defenseless inland inhabitants. Dr. Livingstone's testimony concurs with that of others, that the terribly exciting stimulus of gain, ministered by what are called Christian nations engaged in prosecuting this traffic, is the great producing and impelling cause of the slave-trade in Africa; and he avers "that it is no more true that the Africans take delight in hunting, buying, and selling each other, than that the English glory in hanging themselves in November." The testimony of Barth is the same, who says that the very heart of Africa is desolated to supply victims for the foreign slave-trade. The native traders are driven on by the greed of gain set on fire in savage hearts by these stokers, engineers, and firemen of hell in the shape of civilized and Christian merchants and go-betweens. These are the altars, and these the altar fires, kindled by these priests of the great modern Moloch, and these are the fountains of that devotion out of which it is asserted that the holy providence of God is providing a greater and more efficacious missionary agency than all the missionary instrumentalities of the Gospel put together.

Now it is manifest that it is by the maintenance of slavery in this country that we are continually responsible for the slave-trade, with all its iniquities and miseries, both here and in Africa. We become nursing fathers and god-mothers of this iniquity, baptizing it in the name of American justice and humanity, and promising to rear, maintain, and perpetuate it in the fear of God. We take the production and manufacture of the original sin into our own hands, and stimulate and drive it into new and increasing activity. The slavery and the slave-trade, thus defended and maintained, having never been really interrupted, the outbreak of fresh zeal and animosity in its behalf, the landing of the cargoes of the Wanderer and other vessels on our own coasts, and all that has recently taken place, and all the measures of investment, security, and advancement in enlarged capital, and favorable protecting law and moral sentiment and opinion manufactured for the crisis, are only the revival of the trade, side by side with our revivals of religion; but the revival of the slave-trade piety is characterized by this, that it is sure to be found bringing forth the fruits thereof. There is no hypocrisy in it, but it is open in the sincerity of its purpose, and the application of consistent and energetic means to its ends. From the period of the first enactment against the African slave. trade in 1808, the internal slave-trade was prosecuted more vigorously, and the foreign slave-trade went on secretly, the slavery that created and maintained them both all the while annually and frightfully increasing.

The foreign slave-trade has not now been reopened by the cargoes that have been freshly landed, for it has never ceased: but only now, in the name of patriotism and religion, it is openly and daringly thrust upon the country in avowed defiance of justice, humanity, and law, and yet in the very name of Christianity and the Constitution.

When the cargo of the Wanderer was landed, the press at the South proclaimed that it consisted of four hundred and twenty negroes, and that citizens of the city of Augusta were interested in the enterprise, and that those negroes brought up the river were supposed to have been their share of the spoils, distributed on their plantations. "It is gently hinted," the editors then added, "this is the third cargo landed by the same company during the last six months." Then they go on to defend the revival of the slave-trade, on grounds of missionary benevolence, from the consideration of "this cargo of sturdy laborers, delivered from the darkness and barbarism of Africa, to be elevated and christened on our soil." They instance a stout boy of fourteen years old, sold for only two hundred and fifty dollars, and they say: "We point to the price paid for this jolly son of the jungles, and compare it with the exorbitant prices paid for the fancy and less valuable negroes here, and we claim that these results are the beginning of the blessings to flow in upon the South from the fearless advocacy of the revival of the slave-trade by one or two independent presses in this State (Georgia) and South-Carolina. This trade may be called piracy, by a false construction of a foolish law, but the day will come, when the South will make it the right arm of her legitimate commerce."

At what expense to Africa this impious advantage and boast are to be realized in America, these patriots and Christians neither ask nor care. But it is indisputable that slavery and the internal slave-trade, in this country and in Cuba, are the continued parent and support of slavery and the slave-trade, with all the accompanying barbarities and horrors in Africa. As it was in the beginning, so it is now, and so will it ever be, so long as this infinite wickedness is perpetuated in this Christian land. And never on earth, has the picture of Sin, drawn by the poet of the Paradise Lost, with the progeny of the parent returning and feeding on the vitals of their progenitor, been so terribly illustrated and realized. Horrors and sins complicated upon horrors and sins, grafted and regrafted, rooted, growing and rooted again upon the growth, a growth of serpents up-coiling and inveterately convolved.

"Voluminous and vast! a serpent armed With mortal sting! About her middle, round,
A cry of hell-hounds never ceasing barked,
With wide Cerberian mouths full wide, and rung
A hideous peal; yet, when they list, would creep,
If aught disturbed their noise, into her womb,
And kennel there; yet there still barked and howled,
Within, unseen."

In the protection and fostering of the sin of slavery, our very piety and patriotism are becoming a cavern of such hell-bred vices; and what ought to be the most perfect liberty, finds itself, through such odious offspring, with fear and pain distorted.

"These yelling monsters, that with ceaseless cry, Surround me as thou sawest; hourly conceived And hourly born, with sorrow infinite. To me! For when they list, into the womb. That bred them they return, and howl and gnaw, My bowels, their repast; then bursting forth Afresh, with conscious terrors vex me round, That rest or intermission none I find."

It would need a Milton now on earth, to begin to describe the revolving pandemonium of horrors, both in this land and in Africa, produced by the maintenance of slavery and the slave-trade among ourselves.

The slave-trade driven here is like a central typhoon, like a whirlwind, spinning upon itself, and creating a vacuum, into which the storm rushes. So the domestic slave traffic, and the maintenance and practice of slavery here in America, awaken a hurricane of demoniac passion, even in Africa. Then again, the frenzy of this lighted flame of barbarous and savage cupidity leaps and strikes back again across the ocean, rushing to the vacuum in the demand forever kept up by frenzied Christian cupidity and cruelty in Cuba and the United States. Let us cease to practice slavery in this country, and slavery would die out in Africa, for want of the demand, for want of profit. The native pagan kings, princes, and tribeleaders would cease their slave wars in Africa, if American States, Courts, Judges, tribe-leaders, politicians, Christians, and Churches ceased to buy, hold, and sell men as property in America. Wheresoever the carcass is, thither will the eagles be gathered together. The turkey-buzzards and the vultures of this depravity, with a deadly, noisome certainty, scent their prey, and gorge themselves when it is offered; but if it disappears, they will disappear also. The go-betweens, the merchants that pander to the insane greed of gain awakened in those pagan souls, and fit out their slave ships, and make themselves the devil's catspaws for the profit of the planters, would die out, would cease, like a breed of demons, starved back to their original filthiness and sin, if Christians in America would only cease to encourage them. Let the Church in America cast out these demons and this sin from her communion, let the Church stand in the name of Christ and rebuke this iniquity; and forthwith the legion that has possessed our souls, flinging us about among the congregation of the dead, would enter into some chosen herd of swine, and be driven down steep places into the sea, to perish in the waters.

As it was in 1788, when British Christians took this iniquity by the throat, so it is now, with the influence and power of slavery, as encouraged and practiced by a Christian and civilized community, to blast and desolate the uncivilized and heathen, in fostering this very curse. At that time, the evidence before the British Parliament proved that the natives of Africa would be a happy people, if it were not for the existence of the slave-trade. Wars were known to have been made by the Moors upon the negroes, entered upon wholly at the instigation of the white traders, for the purpose of getting slaves, and the witnesses had seen the unhappy captives brought in on such occasions, some of them in a wounded state. Among them were many women and children, and the women were in great affliction. A learned naturalist of Sweden, at that time returned from England to Africa, had seen the king of Barbesin send out his parties on expeditions of the same kind, and he saw them return with slaves. The king had been made intoxicated on purpose by the French agents, or he would never have consented to the measure. In consequence also of the temptations held out by slave-vessels coming on the coast, the natives seized one another in the night, when they found opportunity, and even invited others to their houses, whom they treacherously detained, and sold at these times, so that every enormity was practiced in Africa in consequence of the existence of the trade. And the trade itself existed, and still exists, in consequence of the maintenance and practice of slavery by a professedly Christian people. Slavery must and will create and keep up a slave-trade, as inevitably as a conflagration draws in the wind, as inevitably as hunger makes the lion roar, and exasperates the fierceness of a tiger.

The opinions, sentiments, and declarations in behalf of the foreign slavetrade, as being equally just and righteous with the maintenance of slavery at home, are neither confined, nor new, nor limited. There is neither fear, nor hesitation, nor shame in them, but they are advanced with atrocious energy, whether, as by some, on the grounds of bare expediency, or by others, with a pretense of the sublimest piety. Mr. McRae says: "I am in favor of reopening the trade in slaves with Africa. I see no difference, morally, socially, or politically, in buying a slave in Africa, the original source of our supply, and buying one in the home-markets of our slaveholding States." Mr. Jefferson Davis says that he would not, on any account, "be confounded with those who prate of the inhumanity and sinfulness of the foreign slave-trade. His objection against that trade for the State of Mississippi is solely that it would diminish the value of her domestic slave trade." But the revival of the foreign traffic is a work of distinguished missionary mercy and humanity, for "all those States which can only be developed by slave labor in some of its forms, and which, with a sufficient supply of African slaves, would be made tributary to the great mission of the United States, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, and to establish peace and free trade with all-mankind." Mr. Davis assumes the state of chattelism to be the normal condition of the African, his happiest and most perfect, though at the same time maintaining that slavery is the curse of God upon the race, which curse we are bound religiously to fulfill, and are religiously fulfilling in maintaining them in their normal state, at one and the same time normal and the curse of God; a proposition fighting with itself, which nothing but the anaconda of slaveholding theology could break and mash and slaver with its allcompounding and amalgamating unction, and then swallow for the divine glory. The gigantic Egyptian Sphinx swallowed by an Oriental fire-eater would be nothing to this awful and monstrous feat of pious deglutition. Defending the state of slavery as the normal condition of the African, Mr. Jefferson Davis then "vindicates our institution of African bondage from the assaults which have been made upon it, by proving that the good of society requires that the negro should be kept in his normal condition." It seems then that the curse of God in this normal condition of slavery was laid upon the African not on account of Ham, but for the good of society; not on account of a crime a priori, but for the sake of a universal good a posteriori. The historic ingenuity of these theologians of the normal condition of God's curse, is not a whit less wonderful than their logical moral consistency and acuteness; for they surpass the conjuror, who, after mashing the Cardinal's jeweled watch to powder, conveyed precisely the same watch, unbroken, safe, and sound, into the Pope's pocket. First having transmuted the curse into the normal condition, they then make it rebound back from the head of Canaan, the offending son, who was the guilty one to be visited by it, upon Ham, the innocent father, from him to be shot through the bosom of unknown generations and ages, to be found at length in the pockets of a race, between whom and Canaan not the wildest or most imaginative ethnographer ever traced the smallest possible connection.

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

But these very same men, and their coadjutors, make up still another plea, and notwithstanding that in one breath they affirm the state of slavery to be the happiest, most beneficial, normal state of the Africans, in the next breath declare that it is sheer benevolence that induces them, at great cost and reproach, to rescue them by the slave-trade from the barbarism and wretchedness of their normal condition of chattelism in their own country. Having discovered that the interests of the South require the renewal of the slave-trade, they argue and enforce that consideration, and then, with a double hypocrisy, justify that, by affirming the transfer of them from Africa to America as a work of the divinest and most enlarged piety and love. "We can not hold our own," they argue, "until we increase the slave population, and that can only be done with effective rapidity, by transferring them from the great hive of barbarian slavery in Africa, to the scene of humanized and Christianized slavery in America." They argue "that slavery is morally, religiously, and legally right, and that, if the slave-trade between the States is considered expedient, it is equally just and legal to reopen the African slave traffic." "We are decidedly of opinion that both the honor and interests of these Southern States require that the Federal statutes against the African slave trade should be repealed, and that the treaty complications of our government with other nations, denouncing the traffic, and aiming at its prohibition should be withdrawn from." And here let the grounds on which this repeal is demanded be weighed, for the argument is impregnable, and both the foreign and domestic slave-trade must stand or fall by the same plummet, must stand together by the sanction of religion and the Church, as being the normal action and life of piety, to secure, and maintain, and perpetuate the normal condition of a race for the glory of God, or must fall together as part and parcel of the same vast system of impiety and cruelty.

"It is unquestionable," continues this representative voice of the South, "that all this action of our federal government against the African slave trade, is based upon the idea and assumption that slavery is in itself sinful and criminal. All the ingenuity and sophistry can not resist the stern logic of this conclusion. The morality of the African slave trade can not be separated from that of the institution of slavery. If the African slave-trade is wrong and sinful and infamous, the same is also true not only of our interstate slave-trade, but of our institution of slavery itself. He who receives and enjoys stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, is equally criminal with the thief. If the African slave trade is wicked and criminal now, it was so during all the times when our country was stocked with negroes from Africa. If it was sinful and infamous then to bring slaves from Africa, it was equally so to receive and purchase and hold them, and the vice and infamy of the tenure has been transmitted and perpetuated to the present time, stamping and pervading the whole institution of slavery at the South with crime, and branding every slaveholder in the land with the mark of guilt and dishonor." This is the incontestable logic of truth; and the anger, irritation, shame of the Southern people "under such a degrading stigma upon their most essential political institution," show clearly where they are vulnerable, and where only they can be reached. The opinion of the world and the sentence of Christianity expressed in so palpable and glaring a manner in the statutes condemning the foreign slave-trade as piracy, and foreign slave-traders to be hanged, they can not endure. These statutes are a burning-glass of jurisprudence and of morals, under which their own domestic sin being placed for examination is found to be precisely the same wickedness; the light penetrates through it, and makes it semi-transparent, so that, as with insects in the compound microscope, you can see the blood coursing the veins and beating in the heart; and what you thought, with the naked eye, was a mere particle of innocent moss, or a vegetable, you find to be of the same species with the alligator. You find herds of hippopotami where you thought it was a plantation of domestic fruits and flowers. But, as we said, in the case of domestic slavery and the home traffic in human beings as property, these statutes, suspending the foreign slave-trade amid the scorn and reprobation of the world, and swinging off the slave-trader between heaven and earth upon the gallows, as the vilest of all criminals, do in reality stab the domestic traffic, slaveholder and trader, to the heart. The foreign slave-trader is abhorred; every man rejoices in the curse upon him as a pirate, and by these just statutes, the sound and sight of his bones bleaching and rattling, seem to come to the very senses of humanity, with every breeze across the ocean, at the same time laden with the moans of his victims; and the skeleton in chains, is, even in idea, a rejoicing and a triumph of the universal mind, and a retributive and warning power against every such demon in human shape. This demonstration carries conviction as to the immorality and shame of the domestic traffic also into every heart; it is as a burning glass in the morals of the subject, and the home demon, though unsentenced, unhanged, unarrested, as yet, even by public opinion, and walking at large as a Christian gentleman, nevertheless writhes like a scorpion beneath the fire, under the glare and heat of such an illumination.

This shows us the power of truth, and the way of wisdom and duty in its application. We are bound under the law of God to affix to the very term of slaveholding and the name slaveholder an ineffaceable brand of guilt, shame, and ignominy. We are bound to make the name and character of the slaveholder, as of the foreign pirate, more disgraceful, more despised of men, more the subject of heartfelt opprobrium and reproach, than that of the slave, the victim of such cruelty. We would set a brand upon him more terrible than that which he himself affixes to his chattels, than that which he burns in upon every new-born babe, of whom the infernal law of the crime of slaveholding, with its perpetuity, asserts that partus sequitur ventrem, the birth follows the belly. When a legal maxim concentrating so much of indecency, impiety, and cruelty, as that is vaunted by slaveholders and a slaveholding Church and Christianity as the law of religion, then it is time to direct the whole fire and force of God's word against it; to go to the utmost extreme of reprobation against the crime and the defenders of it, that God's truth and justice will permit. It is time, when such a Bar-jesus presents himself, with such insolent and monstrous defiance of God, and of the common instincts of justice and humanity to address him as Paul did of old, "O full of all subtilty, and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord ?"

In all this, while some maintain slavery as the most perfect form of the social state designed of God, others maintain the missionary line of argument, and the duty of transmitting as many as possible for the glory of God from the unhappy predicament of pagan, to the divinely blest condition of a comfortable Christian chattelism. Deliver them out of the hands of heathen cruelty and injustice, and treat them to the enjoyment of the same iniquity administered by Christians. One might ask, Why not put the same benevolent logic at work in regard to the Chinese, the Patagonians, the South-Sea Islanders. If they are cannibals upon one another, in a crude and savage manner, why not take them and eat them in a Christian way? Accordingly it is proposed to take up the whole wrong into our own business as wholesale Christian monopolists of an article that looks very like an immorality abroad, and to sanction it as part and parcel of our religion; and being so sanctioned, its native ferocity and fury will be softened, its virus of cruelty will smoulder and die out, and by the process of amalgamation with our theology it will at length be transfigured, and fitted to receive the robe of that fine white linen, white and clean, which is the righteousness of saints, and to appear in it for baptism at the sacramental altar, without any seeming or noticeable incongruity. On the principle of splendid sophistry, that vice, in losing all its grossness, loses half its wickedness, the slave-trade, if taken into sacred partnership by the Church in season, may, by sacramental regeneration, become as good as the original elements of our religion.

Besides, this policy will save the credit of that portion of the Church already committed to the support of slavery, and will be as good as that of the Romish Church in baptizing the heresies which can not be cast out, or as that of the railroad, assuming and sanctioning an issue of forged stock, in order not to depreciate the value of the true, or as that of a government entering into fellowship with a powerful band of counterfeiters, and accepting all their false money for the sake of a confirmation and increase of the united wealth. Slaveholding and slavery must not be treated by the Church as inconsistent with piety, but adopted and turned into a Christian habit of life. "We hold," says a circular recently issued by leading Methodists of the Methodist churches in Brooklyn, both laymen and clergymen, "that the policy of our Church is, and ever has been to receive into their communion, both slaveholders and slaves, whenever they have given evidence of conversion, for the sake of a great and ultimate good, namely, the bringing of slaveholding under the restraints of Christian discipline, and the preparing of the way of emancipation in a manner consistent with the best interests of both masters and slaves."

It is to be noted here, that the renunciation of sin is not required as evidence of conversion, but the confidence is undiminished that when a man becomes converted, he will practice the sin upon Christian principles. But how a practice, that even while maintained in a state of unconversion, and in opposition to conscience, was maintained as being for the highest and best good of society, the normal condition for both masters and slaves, is to be renounced when it is made not only profitable, but righteous, by being received into the Church, and brought under the restraints of Christian discipline, neither the logic nor the religion of these gentlemen and theologians permits us to understand.

Here then we find ourselves, on endeavoring to address ourselves with new zeal and energy to the work of human salvation, confronted with this monster. It is maintained that slavery in this country, and the foreign slave traffic as its feeder, being the means of bringing heathen creatures to a Christian land, where some are converted to God, is on the whole a good missionary enterprise and speculation in itself, whereby human cupidity and cruelty are made the means, on a vast scale, of praising God, so that it may be properly continued, defended, and established on these grounds. As a missionary association, the church of God finding this monster seated across the track of the railroad, has some line of action to take in regard to it. We note, in passing, that as to this profession of the salvation brought out of the bowels of this crime, by those who charge themselves with the chartering and steering of human crimes as the holy providence and prerogative of God for his glory, it may be demonstrated, on a careful examination, that for every individual born into the kingdom of God through this ecclesiastical surgery, at least five times as many have been born and reared in adultery and sin, besides the multitudes of white persons, slave-traders, slave-buyers and sellers, slaveholders and their families, brought under the moral discipline and nurture described in such dreadful colors by that unimpeachable witness, Thomas Jefferson; and besides the other various multitudes engaged or complicated in the crime and system of man-stealing in its original forms or accessory relations, who are educated in robbery and cruelty as a legitimate life, and make no pretense whatever of holding men as property from a benevolent missionary motive or purpose, or any regard to the glory of God.

A missionary enterprise and machinery which thus inevitably necessitates so prodigious an amount of acknowledged immorality in the social state consequent upon it, and consigns to perdition the hands engaged in it, so that for the sake of saving one soul through the cupidity and depravity of man it destroys five others, is on the whole a losing concern in respect to God's glory and the good of souls. It is obvious that if all the slaves that have been brought from Africa could be returned thither, and things put back upon the old footing, and one half the labor and expense applied in so cumbrous and roundabout a way by the cupidity and depravity of wicked men harnessed in the name of the prerogative of God, in the traces of slavery, as one of Satan's war chariots impressed into God's missionary service, had been expended in preaching the Gospel in Africa, and drawing forth and devoting the energies of pious hearts to God's own work there, a great many more souls might have been converted, and certainly would, and none lost through diabolic influences or machinery in the work itself. It can not be pretended that the ordinary simple machinery of the missionary enterprise by the Gospel in Africa would have necessitated the ruin of any souls that otherwise might have been saved, or the education in sin of any that otherwise might have been educated in virtue. Whereas, the prosecution of the missionary work through the agency of slavery and slaveholders, and the upholding and sanctioning of slavery in that way, do certainly necessitate the holding of the truth in unrighteousness, and the ruin of many souls that might otherwise have been enlightened and saved. It has cost the establishment of a system of slavery in our land, rife with the elements of mortal poison to our religion, and destruction to our liberties; embracing already four millions, under a law of perpetuity and increase, demonstrated by the testimony of Southern clergymen, churches, and synods to be in a state of heathenism in a Christian land. It has cost the destruction of thousands upon thousands in war, that if spared, and the peaceful work of the Gospel prosecuted among them, might have been enlightened and saved. It has cost the destruction of thousands more by the intemperance and death attendant on the work of kidnapping the wretched victims of this diabolized missionary fever. It has cost the destruction of millions born into a predestinated slavery and sin in this land, who, if they had been born in Africa, and the Gospel there preached, if only one out of every fifty of the slave ships had been freighted with missionaries and Bibles, and one fifteen-hundredth part of the money expended in this piracy for God's glory, had been devoted in Africa for man's good, might have been now a happy community of Christians.

Now it is a most horrible delusion and madness for men in such a way to drive the providence of God in the service of the devil. If Ericsson's propeller being put into a steamship increased the speed, saved the fuel, and made voyages a third more profitable, but did it at the cost of five seamen being ground up each voyage by the engine, you could not persuade men, with all their cupidity, to adopt Ericsson's propeller. The increased momentum and comprehensiveness alleged to have been given to the missionary work by the system of slavery have been attended by a vastly greater increase of circuit and momentum in the kingdom, work, and interest of Satan. So that, where God has been glorified, and the wrath of man caused to praise him in snatching a few wild Africans from ruin, Satan has been still more glorified in causing the piety of men to redound to the enlargement and peopling of his dominions. Moreover, while the conversion of Africans by the missionary agency of slavery has not been the security of the same conversions for their children, but has been attended by the very annihilation of all their own rights over their children and even to their wives, it has been accompanied by an establishment forever of the machinery of iniquity by which the parents were stolen from Africa, into a self-renewing and perpetuating system for the stealing of their children from themselves.

There is, then, the great certainty for Satan of the adoption and confirmation of this system of child-stealing; on the other side, there is only the uncertainty for God, of the possibility that some of the children thus branded at the birth as chattels, and excluded by law from the privilege of reading the Bible, may come to so much knowledge of Christ, in spite of such enforced ignorance, heathenism, and habits of sin, as to save the soul. There is always the certainty for Satan that multitudes will be lost; the assurance that the system of slavery does consign multitudes of masters and slaves together over into his teaching and keeping and power, and that the Church itself is building up the foundations of many generations in sin. A missionary agency, forsooth! It is a sowing of the wind to reap the whirlwind. Ye have sown wickedness and reaped iniquity, and judgment springeth up as hemlock in the furrows of the field. It is a compound scythe, which cuts off more legs than it does blades of grass; a sort of McCormick's Reaper, which, at the same time that it reaps a rood of the wheat harvest, sows an acre of tares. It is as if a man should invent, advertise, and force into use a medicine for the cure of consumption, which in process of the cure plants hereditary cancer; and while in every generation increasing thousands are born with cancer, tortured through life, and destroyed by a miserable death, as the result of this medicine, a Hygienic Society should be established for the puffing, the sale, and the universal use of its ingredients, all their advertise ments vaunting its providential discovery for the glory of God, and reiterating its wonderful efficacy in the cases of consumption cured by it. "The glory of God" shall stop any man's mouth that presumes to complain of the cancer.

But the cancer itself is proclaimed as the climax of health and happiness, the normal condition of the best Christian society. And an inoculation with it is asserted to be not only wisest, but the only successful mode of bringing the African race within the full power of civilization and religion, to the possession and enjoyment of all the blessings of the perfect social state. It is asserted that "we must acknowledge the fulfillment of the foreördination that the enslavement of Africans is to be the chosen agency for humanizing and Christianizing the dark-skinned and dark-minded children of Ham. It has been sufficiently demonstrated that those influences can not be successfully introduced into Africa to any degree, and that the African imported to civilized lands, brought to school as it were, readily yields to them. We can not teach them there, but we can bring them here and teach them." "The African slave-trade, and the humane servitude which succeeds it," (these ingenious sophists of evil argue,) "is in the highest degree beneficial and advantageous." "In all elevating circumstances, in all Christian senses, in all ennobling senses, the African slavetrade has been productive of the grandest results known to ancient or modern history, in the disenthrallment and Christianization of the heathen. The whole civilized earth, and all the missionary enterprises that have flowed out from it, sustained as many of them have been by powerful governments, by armies and by navies, have not, from the commencement down to the present moment, succeeded in converting to Christiananity one twentieth part of the heathen the slave-trade has been instrumental in converting." The argument hence drawn for its continued prosecution is inevitable.

Now it needs no argument to show that such a monstrosity of lying, of selfishness, of crueltry, hypocrisy, and deformity as this, constitutes a mighty stumbling-block in the way of our missionary enterprise with the Gospel. Our foreign missionaries have spoken of it as such, while free from the paralysis of silence on the subject which seizes them when the tractors of a prudential conservatism have been applied to them at home. But the very fact that they can venture to say nothing here, makes their testimony abroad more significant, for they are themselves the living witnesses of the omnipotence of this system, in the power-it possesses to strike them dumb.

Now, then, it can not be denied that the removal of this evil is a part of our legitimate work as a Missionary Association. If we do not go against it, we sanction it. We are in a guilt like that of the church of Pergamos, who, though they had not denied the faith of Christ, yet tolerated among them those who held the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, and them also that held the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate. Like that also of the church of Thyatira, suffering that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach, and to seduce my servants. Not one of those abominations, for the toleration and teaching of which these churches were threatened with destruction, was to be compared with the mass of impieties, cruelties, and horrors of great wickedness consolidated in the sanction of slavery by the Christian Church. I know it has been alleged, in excuse for the silence of missionary boards on this subject, that we are not an anti-slavery society; but this is a very pitiful evasion of a great duty. On the same ground, a missionary association would be justified in admitting drunkards to membership in its missionary churches, and, as a rule of expediency, avoiding the subject of the sin of drunkenness, by the affirmation of not being a temperance society, or an anti-intemperance. On the same ground, the President of the American Board would be justified in taking no notice of any specific violations of morals and religion in gambling, reveling and such like, among the students of Williams College. He might justly allege that the College is not an antigambling or anti-sin society, but an association or corporation for the education of youths in science and literature. But if he should put such principles of a silent and restrictive expediency into practice, no careful parent would ever send his boys to be educated at such an institution, nor would such principles be tolerated any where else, under the pressure of similar responsibilities. There is no business house in London or New-York that would justify the establishment of a faro table among their clerks, on the ground that they were not an anti-gambling firm, but a board of association simply to do business and to make money.

It is an obstacle that meets us right in God's appointed highway. Sometimes a whole army has to set itself to beleaguering and subduing a single fortress. They can not afford to go forward, and leave the fortress in possession of the enemy. It is right, it is proper for a benevolent society to take a stand against this sin. We are not stepping out of our way in denouncing it; we are only removing out of the way of the Lord the stumbling-blocks which good men are striving to anchor there. We are no more going out of our way, or out of our own province, than the general of an army is going out of his way, when he detaches a corps to blow up a fortress of the enemy at a point where he must advance his forces, or to throw a bridge across a stream, or to cut a pathway over a mountain. We can no more be said to be meddling with what does not belong to us, than a railroad corporation can be said to be meddling with what does not belong to the object of the road, because a cow-catcher is attached to the engine. Men might as well declaim against the directors of the road, averring that the cars were set in motion to carry passengers, not to snatch up or clear away the cows, as that a missionary society is not an antislavery society, and therefore can have nothing to do or to say against slavery. Whatever lies in the way, whatever constitutes an obstacle or danger, against that very thing, the Society is not only at liberty to protest, but the protestation and the antagonism are part of its legitimate, righteous, and necessary work. The intervention, in this case, against a great and terrible wickedness, sanctioned even in the churches, is imperative; the sin calls for a protestation like that of Phinehas, in more than words. The iniquity thrust upon the church of God, and maintained as a missionary virtue, is as when Zimri of old, a prince of the house of Israel, took a Midianitish woman, and entered into a tent with her in the sight of Moses and of all the congregation. He would not have dared such an experiment, had he not been confident that the infection of the sin had spread throughout the multitude. Nor could any tell how far it had gone, nor how much farther it might have extended, had not Phinehas risen up in righteous wrath against such impiety and insolence, and entered into the tent, and thrust through the infamous actors and exemplars of such villainy; and so, by that intervention, the plague was staid, although twenty-four thousand men died of it.

A similar intervention in the plague of the present wickedness of the sanction of slavery in the Church of Christ is needed to turn aside the vengeance of the Almighty, and prevent an utter universal debauchery of morals and religion. If ever men were called to stand up for Jesus precisely in the manner that was meant by the dying charge of the young Christian Phinehas of the Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, it is precisely when that sin which he so resolutely opposed, so fearlessly fought against, is advancing with such insolent defiance. The churches that tolerate it, the Christian associations that enter into a compact of silence, are guilty of a great treachery against Christ. They may not now at once experience the consequences of their unfaithfulness, nor comprehend the ruinous power of their own principles and habits. The drunkard does not. It is God's law of gradualism and probation; and meanwhile constant reproof administered, and if rejected and resisted, then constantly increasing sin, even while there is less and less sense of it, but a conscience hardened in iniquity and justifying itself. The Church, under the power of such deadly doctrines, as under a demoniac possession, roams in the congregation of the dead, takes up her residence in tembs deserted even by Pagans. What the Church consecrates as religion, political economy itself adopts as salvation, and the blind leading the blind, both fall into the ditch.

The refusal to apply our strength for the removal of this wickedness is a practical sanction of it; if we keep it in the Church, if we admit it to the communion of the churches, it is the highest sanction of it; not merely a concealment and covering up of the images, but an adoption of them, in the sight of the world, as among our household deities. It is a trusting in oppression and perverseness, and a staying thereon. It is among the ifs that God has emphatically signalized as conditions of his blessing on the missionary, that thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, and if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul, and if thou loose the bands of wickedness, undo the heavy burdens, break every yoke, and let the oppressed go free, then and thus the Lord shall guide thee continually, and thou shalt be like a spring of water, whose waters fail not. Such an artesian well God can safely carry into the wilderness. and upon the banks of the streams issuing from it there should arise even in Africa gardens like Eden, and cities of our God. Such a church, passing through the valley of Baca, maketh for it a well, an artesian well, while the rain also filleth the pools. But if such a well contained a spring of arsenic, an element infectious, poisoning, misery-making, if that element was to be kept and carried forth in the Church's labors, God could not sanction such a church, nor such a missionary enterprise, nor the sinking nor the building of such a well.

The stumbling-block of slavery, and the sanction of it by the Church, being of such a nature, and so directly in the way of the missionary enterprise, that enterprise itself, it should seem, must carry in its own frame the means and the power of its removal. And it does, if it will but employ them. It is the very locomotive and train which has the commission to clear the track, having the right of way, and a compact for going forward. We were not long since journeying on a great thoroughfare from one city to another, when, after a few miles, we were brought up by a freight-train right in the road, a train that had broken down, so that we could not proceed but by getting that train out of the way. We had to go back to the point of our departure, and there dispatch an engine on purpose to push that disabled train to a place where it could be switched off, before we could proceed on our journey. We lost time, we lost connections, we lost trains and conveyances, by sea and by land, and detentions costing we know not what of trouble and expense, were the consequence of that interruption. Now it would have been a mere idiot who could have said that our business was not to meddle with freight-trains, but to go straight upon our work. It was our appropriate business just as much to move that disabled train out of the way, as it was to drive our own locomotive and cars; and especially if a gang of highwaymen had laid a heavy timber across the track to throw us from it, it would have been our duty to remove it, and to bring the offenders to trial and to justice. And just so it is legitimately, appropriately, the business and duty of the great missionary associations of our land to remove slavery out of the highway of the Gospel, for the prosecution of the work of the world's conversion to God.

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

The terrible influence of a great society, especially a religious society, a professedly benevolent association, sanctioning a great sin, is not to be exaggerated. It is like a despotic government bank, deteriorating the circulating medium of the country. You can not get along in Christ's kingdom in this way. It is like the Pasha of Egypt calling in the gold and debasing it, in order to increase his revenues. The effect of such debasement, such clipping of the king's coin, such admission and sanction of counterfeit money, is every where potent, and every where the same, You can not make one gospel for a great sin in America, and another and a different gospel for the same sin in Africa. If slaveholding be admitted in the Christian Church in America, how can it be cast out in Africa? How any where? If it is sinful, it is sinful just to that extent to which God has reprobated it; if contrary to his word, contrary every where; if not contrary, but lawful and right any where, then lawful and right every where; and if sustained and defended at home, then lawful and right to extend it. But be ye clean, ye that bear the vessels of the Lord? Will ve plead for Baal? If Baal be God, follow him. If a man can be a Christian, and hold his fellow-man as property, a chain in the one hand and a whip in the other, taking advantage of the law to oppress him, instead of standing between him and the law to protect him, then, if the word of God sanctions this, proclaim it, confide in it, defend it, serve it, baptize it in Christ, and admit it to full communion. But if it be wrong, if the word of God condemn it, then disclaim it, rebuke it, put away the evil, sanction it not even in appearance, have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather rebuke them.

We have heard men deliberately quote the text, "Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives," as authority for sanctioning the holding of slaves, wherever the Christian popular sovereignty and heart require it, authority whereby the Calebs and Joshuas of this sin may safely engineer it into the promised land, and admit its practice undisturbed and perpetual. On this ground, all the excuse necessary for any sin is that men's hearts be hardened in the practice of it. You say the prejudices of education are to be considered; they are a shield for the conscience, and a plea against the abolition of the sin. According to this, you have but to practice any sin for one generation, and school your children to consider it as necessary, and its guilt is gone. When, in such a case, does the guilt begin, and where does forbearance cease to be a virtue? "I will tell you," said a rude, rough, homely lecturer upon drunkenness, "where moderate drinking passes into intemperance, and is fit to be slain, if you will tell me where pig ends and hog begins." Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil. If a multitude do it, it is only multitudinously wrong. You might as well argue that until it is a multitude, you may follow one, two, or a few, to do evil, as argue that its support by the prejudices of a multitude takes away the guilt. Thou shalt not follow any one to do evil. If a multitude do it, thou shalt not follow the multitude; and for the same reason thou shalt rebuke the multitude. "Did I fear a great multitude," said Job, "when I had God's cause to stand up for, and God's poor, in behalf of the oppressed?" You are never at liberty to make a compromise between God's truth and men's sins, because the sins are in great power, favor and authority. Compromise, in such a case, carries the whole ground for sin and Satan. Compromise for a measuring-line, compromise for the basis of decision, where a moral principle is involved, is like the running of a Virginia fence, that takes the whole breadth of the disputed territory in its zigzags. You could lodge an army, pitch the tents of a regiment, pasture a whole herd of swine, within the triangles.

The inheritance of slave property, and the rights of those who thus come by it, as well as the prejudices long settled in its favor, are also pleaded as a sanction for holding it, and a bar against applying the naked truth of God's word, or the discipline of the Church of Christ, to burn upon it as sin. But the inheritance of slave property is the inheritance of the wrong and cruelty of holding human beings as property, and making that wrong and cruelty your own voluntary act. It is an indorsement and extension of the sin, with great exasperations. It is just as if a forger could transfer or leave by will to his children, a sum of ten or twenty thousand dollars which he robbed from a man, who, with his family, is still living and in poverty by this fraud, the children of the forger all the while knowing it, and yet maintaining their just right and title to the property. It is simply the inheritance of stolen goods. But God's word goes farther still, and makes it the inheritance, the voluntary assumption and continuance of a cruelty and crime set down by him in the same catalogue with that of murder. The argument defending it goes to the destruction of all morals. A sin can not bleach, and become crisp, white, and nutritive, like celery, by covering its stalks with earth; a sin can not, by long possession or transmission, pass into the nature of a right or a virtue. It is just as if a man, by poisoning his neighbor and getting possession of his property, could transmit to his children the right of poisoning their neighbors' children and taking their property. So debauched and stupified is the Christian conscience by the sanction of this sin, that, though admitted to have been wrong in the beginning, yet expediency confirms it by long possession and practice as a necessity and a virtue of forbearance and justice toward those who have received such an inheritance. The wrong is asserted to have become a right, because of the cost and difficulty of undoing the wrong and releasing its victims. The long-continued and accumulating profits of the wrong having passed into a vested system, sanctioned and protected by law, the duty of compensation to the owners of this vested property in human beings is the first thing insisted on, instead of the claims of the enslaved. But if the Church of Christ on such grounds demands the toleration of this wickedness, and the admission of slaveholders into the Church by right of possession, sanctifying the crime by the principle of squatter sovereignty on the premises of God, passing into sacred inviolable title by custom, and exalted to the authority of law, then the common law itself and the conscience of the world demonstrate the conscience of the Church as an unchristian conscience.

Now it is the sacred duty of the Church, when such an enemy thus cometh in like a flood, to lift up the standard of God's word by his Spirit, and to apply the discipline committed by Christ to the Church, with his word, against such wickedness. And here we have the two forms, the two instrumentalities, of such lifting up; first, the testimony of the Church with the word; second, the discipline of the Church by authority of the word.

Here again we have a great point, very much overlooked, and a great duty very greatly neglected, namely, the application of divine authority and truth, in both these forms of testimony and of discipline, to individuals. The testimony and the discipline in God's word are for individual sinners, not systems. The word of God knows no other application than this: "Thou art the man." If it can not find a man on whom to lay the responsibility, the sin can not be grappled with, and may safely be let alone. Some men speak of slavery as the system, the institution, professing themselves profoundly and piously opposed to the system, hating the system, denouncing the system, but resolutely refusing to say one word against slaveholding as in itself a crime, or to direct the Gospel to the condemnation of slaveholders. They denounce the system, but shield and defend from denunciation the men that practice and uphold it. They rebuke the system, as a system, but protect the sinner, as a Christian sinner, in carrying it out. It is wrong as a system, but for each individual sinner it is right. They tell us that if we would direct our logic against the abuses of the system, the abuses of slavery, they could go with us; but they can not go so far as to condemn the individual slaveholder. But what is the system apart from slaveholding? It is nothing; it does not and can not exist. Slavery is the act of slaveholding; its criminality consists and inheres in holding and treating a human being as property, as a chattel, as a slave. The slaveholder is the only person directly guilty of slavery, guilty of holding a man as a chattel, as property, guilty of stealing a man, inasmuch as the holding of him against his own will is the stealing of him, guilty of this great crime against God and man, not because he is cruel to his slave, but because he claims and holds and treats him as property, because he holds him as a slave, and the making a slave of him is the highest cruelty, the parent of all other cruelties and abuses that attend this erime. The whole criminality of slavery inheres in the voluntary act of the slaveholder, holding his slave as property, claiming him as his property against his will. It is the act of slaveholding which is, from the beginning to the end, absolutely and entirely sinful. It is not slaveholding if it is not the holding of a man as a slave. It is not the holding of a slave if it is the holding of a freeman at his consent, and for his advantage and good, for his protection from slaveholders, slave-hunters and slaveholding law. If the person holding him does not claim to own him, does not claim him as property, as a chattel, then the person held is not a slave any more than the person holding him is a slave, and the person holding him is no more a slaveholder than the person held. A slaveholder is one who holds a human being as a slave, a chattel, and the act of slaveholding is the act of holding a man as a slave, which in all cases is an immorality, a crime denounced of God as worthy of death. If it is not the holding of a man as a slave, then it is not slaveholding, and is no more sinful than the employment of a Northern servant for his own good, as well as for his service. Slaveholding therefore being in all cases the holding of a man as a slave, is in all cases sinful, the holding of slaves is in all cases that crime and guilt denounced of God in the act of the individual sinner, as the stealing, selling, holding, stealing, or selling, or holding. In holding a man as a slave, the stealing of him is repeated with every day of such violence, such enforced bondage and chattelism. Therefore the holding of slaves is in all cases such an immorality, in and by itself, and the immorality inheres in holding the human being as a slave. It is the individual act and guilt of the slaveholder, by which slavery is kept up, and without which there could be no slavery, without which all the laws on earth could not institute it, could not give it a moment's sanction or reality. The holding of slaves is the holding of men as property, and if not held as property, they are not slaves, but if held as slaves they are held as property. But we have met with those who defend slavery as right and just, and deny that it is the holding of men as property, but merely the holding of their service, and that when they are bought and sold this is not making merchandise of men as property, as men, but merely as serving men, for their service; and, therefore, it is essential to direct the word of God against the holding of slaves, and the guilt of the crime of slaveholding is the very thing to be demonstrated and denounced, and the word of God, the testimony of the law and the Gospel is to be applied against it, and the fire of God made to burn upon the conscience of the slaveholder, for only in thi way can we reach the sin.

You can never reach an actual sin but through the sinner, and you never can reach a sinner but through the sin, so that here comes in the necessity of the discipline of the Church, as well as the word of God, applied against this iniquity, treating the individual slaveholder as guilty of it, and on account of it to be excluded from the Church. For as things are, the word of God itself will be inefficacious against the sin, so long as the sinner committing it is received and continued in the bosom of the Church; in good and regular standing, notwithstanding that wickedness. The word of God alone might have power without the discipline, if the word could come direct to the heart and conscience of the sinner without the Church intervening to receive into her own bosom, upon the shield of her own fellowship, the shot meant for the sinner. But the Church allowing the sin in admitting the sinner with it into Christian fellowship, arms him with a shield wherewith he is able to quench all the fiery darts of God's word against the wickedness, and erects between the world and the guns and soldiers of God's truth an embankment and ditches that are enough to bury all the shot and swallow up the warriors. As was said of the battle with the Chinese, in which the English perished miserably by hundreds in the ditches, the struggle was against mud, not against Chinamen; so now, in this conflict, the struggle is against mud; the ditches that these apologizing, and sophisticating, and bog-trotting theologians have filled to protect this iniquity from assault are of mud even to the chin, your ammunition is all wetted if you plunge in and attempt to cross, and if you stick there, even the darkness can not cover you, for their blue-lights will mark you, and you are shot down in your helplessness. Moreover, if you do not come against this iniquity as sin, your scaling ladders are too short, just as was the case in that conflict; they can not hold, and you can not reach the top of the wall by them. And just there do those good brethren stick, who stick about the malum in se, who reluctate against declaring the inherent sinfulness of slavery, and employ themselves in the ditch of such refinements and technicalities, analyzing mud, but never attempting one blow against the sin, and at length losing all power and opportunity of attacking it.

The Church herself sanctions the crime, and nullifies the whole word of God against it, in receiving the criminal, unrebuked, unscathed, into fellowship as a Christian. The Church administers a quart of anodyne to the conscience of the sinner, for every drop of rebuke distilled from the word of God against the sin. And so, while the word of God, rightly applied, would burn upon the conscience of the sinner, would prove itself the sword of the Spirit, piercing even to the dividing asunder of all the articulations that bind him to the sin, the Church lays hold of him with her protecting fellowship, administers the ordinances but not the discipline of Christ's house, indorses his Christian character, and drugs his conscience with spiritual chloroform, in sanctifying his life by the evidences of his conversion, instead of judging the genuineness of his conversion, by the evidences of his life. Then the Church and the world together talk about Christian slaveholders, and by the same reason, if theft, murder, and adultery were popular sins, organized by law into institutions, and attended with honor and profit, there would be the indorsement, acknowledgment, and fellowship of Christian thieves, Christian murderers, and Christian adulterers. But the word of God places slaveholding on the same level of iniquity with all these crimes, and if there were but one individual guilty of this crime, beyond question the Church would proceed against him as it does against drunkards and thieves. It is only multitude, custom, and human law that protect him, and enable him to force a passage into the Church. If there were no system of slavery in this country, and any where one church member should buy a man and hold him as a slave, or offer to sell him, if he should advertise him for sale for one thousand dollars, such an enormity would set the whole Church, nay, the whole country on fire. There would be such a storm of indignation, such a passion of outraged humanity, and such a call for retribution, as when the wandering Jew cut up his dead concubine and sent out the pieces to the tribes as witnesses of the crime that in Gibeah the demoniac revelers of Benjamin had committed against him. Such a man could not be kept in the Church, nor admitted into Christian society. But the system once established sanctifies the sin and makes it honorable, and protects the sinner by its popularity even in the Church.

The Church must deal with this wickedness by the word of God, or the world can never be delivered from it. If the Church at command of Jesus and Paul dare not exorcise this devil, the seven sons of Sceva can not, and the world's politicians will not. The Church existing as she does, and acknowledged as a spiritual power, you never can appeal to the conscience of the world against a sin, which the conscience of the Church allows and sanctions. You can not take any appeal against it on the ground of conscience, except as being a sin against God, and a sin so great and glaring, that you are compelled to such an appeal. But if it be a sin, the world must answer, how can you admit it to the Church, in receiving those who practice it to sacramental fellowship in Christ? If it be so admitted to the Church, the world can not regard it as a sin, and the appeal against it must be powerless, the Ch r it having no authority to meddle against any thing that the world do, except on the ground of its being sin, and under that authority of God, that commission with his word, which not only gives the right to rebuke sin under all circumstances, but makes it a duty to reprove and go against it in the name of God. The Church is interfering with that which is none of her business, and her ministers are meddling with that which does not concern them, if they oppose either American slavery, or the foreign slave-trade, or both, unless both are unequivocally, unquestionably, a sin against God.

No appeal of the Church against slavery can possess any power, or ungrasp the clutch of any man-stealer upon his victim, while slaveholders are admitted to the bosom of the Church as Christians. The effect of the appeal would be merely against the Church, and the world would scout at such a piety. It would make the world despise the Church, and it ought to do so. It would convict the Church of hypocrisy and sin. It would exhibit the Church sanctioning and indulging in her own members that which she forbids to others in the name of God. It would show the Church receiving to her own fellowship, and defending on grounds of expediency, that which she denounces to the world as sin. It would produce infidelity, but would persuade no man to give up sin. And such is the gross and shameful inconsistency in any Church professing to regard slavery as wrong, and yet admitting slaveholders, the only persons under heaven who practice the sin, and make merchandise of men, to the Lord's table, in good and regular standing, as Christian merchants in human flesh. If slaveholding be permitted in the Christian Church, neither that crime, nor the system that grows out of it, can be condemned by the Church, nor made to appear sinful in the eye of the world; but if made to appear so by other efforts, influences, and teachings than those of the Church, if made to appear by persons who are not Christians, turning the guns of the word against the Church itself, then Christianity itself suffers, and the Church must become a scoffing and a by-word. The world, in such a case, are shut up either to total blank infidelity, or else to the reception of a false, anti-christian, slaveholding Christianity; either the reception of the word and rejection of the Church, or rejection of the word and reception of the Church.

The very philanthropists of infidelity in such a case take higher and more consistent ground than the Church takes; and if the common conscience of the world, under the law written on their hearts, compels them to regard slaveholding as oppressive and unchristian, while the Christian conscience, debauched and stupified, proclaims it as a virtue, or if wrong at the beginning, yet passed into a necessity and a virtue by long possession and practice, on the principle of wrong becoming right because of the difficulty of undoing the wrong, and the long continued and accumulating profits of the wrong passing into a vested system, sanctioned and protected by law, because also of the wrong with its profits and its means of living passing into an inheritance, and having descended from slaveholders to their families, from men-stealers to their children, from planters to their households as a domestic institution; if the conscience of the Church on these grounds demands its toleration, demands the admission of slaveholders into the Church by right of possession in crime, by the principle of squatter sovereignty on the premises of God passing into sacred satisfying custom, and exalted into law; then the conscience of the world must inevitably oppose and despise the conscience of the Church as an unchristian conscience, and the piety that follows it as a false piety-The dealings and character of the Church become condemned and vile in the sight of the world, on the points of common justice and humanity between man and man.

In the Missionary Herald of the present year there is an account of the death of a celebrated chief among the Mpongwes, and of the reasons why he could not become a Christian, as for years the missionaries indulged the hope, from his interest in religious truths, and his attendance on the Sabbath services that he would. "But after he learned what the Gospel required, what it would cost him to embrace it, his heart rose in opposition to its claims. He had a great name, of which he was proud, thirty or more wives, and fifty or more slaves. To abandon all these earthly honors, and become a meek and humble Christian, was too much for his proud heart." But according to the Gospel taught in some of the churches in this country, and even at missionary stations, he need not have been kept out of the Church, or denied the character of a Christian on account of his slaves; and according to the Gospel taught at some other stations in the world, he need not have troubled himself, or been plagued in his conscience on account of his polygamy. What a misfortune that some teacher of the tenet that slaveholding is not sinful in itself, along with some bishop to the Zulus, stipulating that he might keep his thirty wives, if he would receive also the Gospel, could not have taken him in hand. How entirely superfluous to reject him from the Church, merely because he was at a foreign station, when, if he could have learned the Gospel here in the United States, or at the stations of the Cherokees and Choctaws, he might have been accepted in the ordinary evidence of conversion, without any examination of those particulars in his life, which, not being catalogued in our system of Christian philosophy and expediency as sin per se, the renunciation of them is not at all to be required as a requisite for church membership.

The debauching and destructive power of a great sin like this, endured and sanctioned in the Church, is appalling. In the treachery of the conflict, every thing is carried away : the very truisms of our being are denied or taken captive; the very instincts of truth and freedom are strangled by this serpent in the cradle. It is like a vampyre bat, that sucks the breath and blood out of a sleeping babe. We have to fight for the privilege of not being liars. The very guns of first principles are spiked, and we have to drill them out. We are worse off than the Hebrews, when the Philistines had disarmed the nation, and they had to go to their enemies' quarters, even to come at a grindstone for the sharpening of their tools. They had nothing but files for their very axes, but neither spear nor bow, because there was no smith throughout Israel. It is a great piece of moral courage to say that slavery is not of God; even that, our politicians dare not say; the uttermost they dare affirm is just merely that free labor is more profitable for the whites in the territories, but any purpose for the freedom of the slave, they find it expedient carefully to abjure.

The power of this iniquity in unhinging and disorganizing men's moral sentiments, is like that of the great loadstone mountain, described in the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments," which drew out all the spikes, all the iron, from the sides of the ships that ever passed that way, coming within the sphere of its attraction, so that the ships went incontinently to pieces; or, if the iron held, then the ships were attracted, and dashed upon the black, jagged reefs at the bottom of the mountain. Just so with the fatal power of this prevailing sin. No association not the purest, no church not the most orthodox, can be proof against the attraction, but under the plea of conservatism, yields up its principles, renounces its integrity, as to this sin. The spikes fly from their timbers at the power of this delusion, and the firmest constructed ecclesiastical craft tumbles asunder. And now a theology is constructed on purpose to meet the sin, for a compromise with it; and a political economy is constructed with reference to the same necessity; the theology compounds with the sinner, the economy compounds with the system; between both, the system being sustained by human law, and the sinner sustained by church sanction, the whole concern rides in deep water. Systems of religion and of morals are builded and altered out of respect to the ruling law of the system of slavery, out of an expedient regard to the necessity of admitting that system. If there is no natural harbor deep enough for the safe anchorage of such a leviathan in morals, the commissioners of our religious policy are ready to contract for the construction of a suitable basin by digging and dredging. If there is no proper dock, one can be built ex tempore, and our ingenious sophists with the malum in se have got cables and anchors strong enough to hold the whole system more securely than ever any old seventyfour could be held by the best of Trotman's patents.

In 1850, in a Review emanating from the Theological Seminary at Columbia, South-Carolina, it was affirmed that "the maxim partus sequiter ventrem, the offspring inherits the status of the parent, is a law of nature, religion, reason, and providence; and that no man has any rights but those to which he was born, or which belong to that condition, in which God places him by the hand of Providence. He that is born a slave, therefore. has no right to liberty, and can acquire none, so long as the right of his master to his service stands in the way." In 1857, in an article in the same Review from the pen of one of the Professors of the Seminary, it is affirmed as follows: "The truth undoubtedly is, that slavery in the circumstances is undoubtedly good, and only good; not only not an evil, but the only good there is in the whole affair of negro existence in America, The true and only-title of any man to liberty is inheritance, or legal acquisition. The legal maxim is just and right, partus sequitur ventrem : that is, all men have a right to the status in which they are born, with its rights and privileges; if a slave, only to the rights of a slave." The indorsement of such horrible sentiments by any portion of the visible Church, is perhaps the highest culminating point of this iniquity; and we place it last, to show the responsibility laid upon every association and every individual possessing a knowledge of the truth, to "come to the help of the Lord," against such an enemy.

The conflict against this sin must be maintained in Africa by the missionaries there. But for this to be done effectually, it must be maintained in the same manner by ministers and missionaries in this country, by missionary boards and churches at home. If this be not done here, it will not and can not be done there, and it will be an acknowledgment to all the world that there is one sin with which the Gospel can not grapple, and the Church dare not; one sin which, if it infest and plague the mission, the mission must be withdrawn from it instead of fighting it, the mission must be given up rather than encounter the embarrassment, difficulty, and danger of a battle against this sin. The shame and confusion of such a course are unutterable. It is not to be endured that we should so proclaim to the world that this sin, being a home sin, and we being determined not to do battle against it at home, being prevented by reasons of prudential conservatism from denouncing and exorcising it as a sin against God here, are constrained to avoid meeting it abroad, and therefore can not continue any mission where it prevails. The curse of God must be upon any missionary enterprise conducted on such principles.

But the Word and Spirit of the Living God are omnipotent against this sin, and the Church and the Missionary Association that throws itself on God, and trusting in him advances to this conflict, with the Sword of the Spirit, will be doubly blest and honored of the Saviour. The standard of the Lord is to be lifted, by preaching directly against this sin to the heart and conscience of the individual sinner. We ought not to attempt the world's evangelization unless we are ready for this work, and confident in it. If missionary churches can receive idolaters, whore-mongers, and menstealers to their membership, and the parent Board have no will or authority to prevent it, no power or courage to say, "These must be cut off;" better no missions than such churches, better no gospel than such corruptions.

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

It is to meet a crisis of such danger, it is to resist the Jezebel of such abominations, and to lift up the standard of God's word against them, and defend the name and cross of the Redeemer from the reproach of any complicity with or sanction of such wickedness, that this Society has been called of God into the great missionary field, and honored already abundantly with his blessing. It is a great honor to be permitted thus to take God's word and plant it in the breach, plant it on the wall, where the enemy like a flood seemed conquering; to plant it in the thickest of the fight, and with God's own trumpet summon around it even a few of God's "gap-men."

This Association is known by its missionaries, its stations, and its labors, in various fields; for its field is the world, and its commission from the Saviour is to all the world, to preach the Gospel to every creature. But it is a special honor conferred upon it from him, that it is called to advocate the rights of a class, and proclaim the riches of the Gospel to a race, excluded in our own land, from the freedom of the Gospel, and brauded as having no rights that white men are bound to respect! Africa and the Africans, in Africa and in America, seem committed to the compassion and the energy of such an Association, and with joy and confidence in God, its friends and members, by his grace, will assume the responsibility, and praise his adorable name for laying it upon them.

If the hand of a merciful Divine Providence is visible any where in the missionary enterprise, it is in the raising up of the American Missionary Association, and making it a power in the land, an encouragement to the faint-hearted, a prophet to the nation, permitting none of its words to fail, and so inspiring and endowing it, that as with the prophetic mission of Samuel in a season of similar disastrous corruption in Israel, the hearts of good men and true may be staid upon it, and all men may know that not the ark merely but God himself is in it. There, where conservatism proclaims silence, the trumpet of this prophecy speaks out; there where a prudential expediency says, Withdraw your mission, because of the embarrassment, agitation, and difficulty, this mission, in the name of God, advances; there, where the conflict thickens, and the angels of expediency, with the grace of silence, fold their wings, and hide their banners, this mission unfurls the standard of the gospel of God's righteousness, the standard of the Cross of that CRUCIFIED, who came to save his people from their sins, and not in them. Let the eyes of all good men follow this light, for as a star of hope, a promise of victory, it shines where the greatest battle rages that since the era of the Reformation has been fought between sin and holiness, Satan and Christ. Let men of God come with their treasures and their prayers, let the churches come with wise counselors and leaders, to enter this open door in the face of many adversaries, to seize this grand opportunity in a critical time, an opportunity such as God does not offer once in a century. The whole body of the churches of God in the West and North-west ought to come trooping as one bright phalanx in this effort. We can not do any thing less, as Christians, than put on the armor of righteousness, and smite with the Sword of the Spirit; which is the word of God, against this gigantic sin.

May the Captain of our salvation hasten the trial, and compel his soldiers into it! We would rather be thrown, of all desirable ages to live and labor in for Christ, upon this very age, into the heart of this century, into the center of this sin, to have the honor of pouring the conquering fire of God's word upon it, and witnessing and enjoying the commotion and the conquest. Here, in the very country where, by distortion, concealment, and defiance of God's word, it has taken possession of every citadel. and flouts its impious standard, not only above our Supreme Tribunal of Justice, but over our very churches, commanding silence and submission in God's name, we will go against it with God's word, and in God we will conquer. If the Church and ministry will but throw themselves, with God's word, into this conflict, it will be the resurrection and regeneration of all their spiritual energies, and for the whole earth a joy, a surprise, a deliverance. The destinies of this country for liberty and spiritual glory are at command of the Church, if the Church will move at command of the word, and by the fire of the Spirit. This is the movement, this the fire, this the power, that the world are waiting for, looking and longing after this manifestation of the sons of God, when the creature shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

When the oppressed are set free, and every yoke is broken by the authority of God's word and the inspiration of his Spirit, then will there be seen a reality in religion such as the world never has witnessed; and the Gentiles will come to such a light, and kings to the brightness of such a rising. Infidelity will be conquered. There will be no more doubt as to the plenary inspiration and divine omnipotence of the word of God; no more question as to the efficacy of religion, as the only power capable of subduing, reforming, transfiguring the world; no more doubt that the Gospel, which is capable of such a triumph, can and will subdue all things unto God. We are persuaded there are thousands, whom a traitorous Church and a slaveholding Christianity have seized, bound, and thrown over into the toils of Satan, to be led captive by him at his will, who would rejoice to find their own bondage breaking at the touch of this celestial flame of true piety, as flax before the fire. The masses of thoughtful men that have been thrown down and groveling in the darkness, will be drawn upwards by the very rush of the air from the motion of this radiant chariot of God's incarnate love, and will find themselves winged with light, and spontaneously whirling on wards with grateful hallelujahs in the train of the glory of the Redeemer of imprisoned and oppressed men. This is the close of the great missionary Psalm, and this shall be the blessedness of all nations in the reign of Him whom all nations shall call blessed. This is that righteousness and praise which God will cause to spring forth before all the heathen. This is that light, to the glory of which the Gentiles will gather, and kings to the brightness of its rising. This is that vision that filled the entranced heart of Israel's King and Prophet, and this that name and glory, with which let the whole earth be filled, and the prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended!

sent, and definite of Goal's ward, it has taken presession of every citation.

to found it copious standard, not cally about anone Surrented Scherold had a but over our very churches, communities silende whi calcules of of the mane, we will be action it with fields word, and in Coll win will college. If the Church and minimary will but throw the uned on with india word, july this easilied, it will be the courrection and region glion a securior a profit a description of the progress features that the to with the destrict of the grouper of the spiritual spiritual story are a command of the Church, if the Council will move at proposed of the overed, and but the fire of the Spirit. The little merceberr, this the by, the the power, that the would see waiting for looking and beiging after this mountained it is some which will also creature shall be delicated from the Bonday of corruption into the plantum Borry of the

When the oppressed are set free and entry type is britten byeche with the work that the inspirationing bis figure with their Date the emilia and forced from other alone unigitated valled a new of the continue of the course to such a light, and kings to the brightness of such while the high properties and the wall be no more want in the please inspiration and distancement associated the road of God; to more position as to the officery of religion, as the only power or oblig . if so bunkey, reference transferred the world transferred and that the especialistic outsides the ban are adopted to a done to ald upon it above, hepot) such God. We are persuaded their anothenisted where a trafferens Church and a stareholding Christianity have seized hoond, and shippen ever into the letter of Satur, to be interaped by this at his will after would require to find their carra bendage breuking at the truck of this celledtial flame of true piets; as flax before the first. The masses of thoughtful tion that have been thrown down and greating in the darkings will be Hero, a. M. vov country while by distinguous converse.

LIFE MEMBERS

LIFE MEMBERS.

Dischery Post A. M. Blechelou, N. H. Beldon Moro Hanty, Dischlory N. K. district the Land of the state of the state

Ballard, Day, Gryton, Globy Village, South Borre, Rev. Roory N.,-Wertburger, Marie,

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Ab'e, Rev. Frederick R., Abington, Mass. *Abbot, Moses, Woodville, N. H. Abbott, Dea. Zebadiah, Winchester, Mass. Adair, Mrs. F. B., Osawatomie, Kansas. Adair, Rev. S. L., Osawatomie, Kansas. Abbott, Dea. Zebadiah, Winchester, Mass. Adair, Nes. B. J., Osawatomie, Kansas. Adair, Nes. E. L., Osawatomie, Kansas. Adairs, Alanson, Amber, N. Y. Adams, Calvin, Binghampton, N. Y. Adams, Calvin, Binghampton, N. Y. Adams, Chill, Binghampton, N. Y. Adams, Mrs. Chauncey, Galesburgh, Ill. Adams, Cyruy, West Medway, Mass. Adams, Dr. Daniel, Keene, N. H. Adams, Bor. Berry, New Jewich, N. H. Adams, Henry, Peoria, Ill. Adams, Henry, Peoria, Ill. Adams, Henry, Peoria, Ill. Adams, John Quincy, Oakham, Mass. Adams, John Quincy, Oakham, Mass. Adams, John Quincy, Oakham, Mass. Adams, Stephen, West Medway, Mass. Adams, Stephen, West Medway, Mass. Adams, Stephen, West Medway, Mass. Adams, Rev. Thomas, Thompson, O. Adams, Rev. Thomas, Thompson, O. Adams, William, Medway, Mass. Addison, William, Sparta, Ill. Alken, Mrs. Caroline B., Windham, Vt. Alden, Mrs. Lucy G., Cambridgeport, Mass. Adlen, Den. David A., Lisbon, Conn. Allen, Chauncey H., Ell-worth, O. Allen, George W., South Amberst, Mass. Allen, Prof. George N., Oberlin, O. Allen, George W., South Amberst, Mass. Allen, James, Bangor, Me., Allen, Mrs. Elizabeth, B. Bangor, Me., Allen, Mrs., Elizabeth, B. Bangor, Mrs., Banden, Nrs., Banden, Nrs., Banden, Nrs., Banden, Nrs., Banden, Nrs., Banden, Mrs., Bande Anderson, Thomas D., Baltimore, Md.
Andrews, Alfred, New Britain, Conn.
Andrews, Mrs. Cynthis, Boylston Center, Mass.
Andrews, Mrs. Cynthis, Boylston Center, Mass.
Andrews, Mrs. P. Henrietta, O.
Andrews, Luman A., Henrietta, O.
Andrews, Mrs. Flavilla, Chelsea, Vt.
Angier, Cadvin W., Worcester, Mass.
Angier, Rev L. H., Concord, Mass.
Angier, Rev L. H., Concord, Mass.
Angier, New L. H., Concord, Mass.
Appieton, Nathan D., Alfred, Me.
Armes, Charles Jessup, Norwich Town, Conn.
Armes, Rev. H. P., Norwich Town, Conn.
Armes, Rev. H. P., Norwich Town, Conn.
Armes, Rev. Jodah L. Mason Center, N. H.
Armstrong, Mrs. Philis, South Macon, III.
Armstrong, Mrs. Philis, South Macon, III.
Armold, Charles W., Arcade, N. Y.
Arnold, Gideon, Arcade, N. Y.
Ashiey, Rev. Samuel S., Northborough, Mass.
Atkins, Rev. L. B., Madison, O.
Atwater, Rev. Edward E., Salmon Falls, N. H.
Austin, Alvin, Wheaton, III.
Austin, Lagené, Anguetta, III.
Austin, Rugené, Anguetta, III.
Austin, Rev. D. K., South Norwalk, Conn.
Avery, Rev. John T., Gleveland, O.
Avery, Nev. Charles.
Avery, Rev. John T., Cleveland, O.
Avery, Miss Elizabeth, Haverhill, Mass.
Ayer, Rev. Joseph, East Lyme, Conn.
Ayer, Rev. Charles, L. Central Village, Conn.
Ayer, Rev. Joseph, East Lyme, Conn.
Ayer, Rev. Joseph, East Lyme, Conn.
Ayer, Perley, Oakham, Mass.
Babbit, Mrs. Mary, Madison, N. J.

Ayers, Feriey, URKNAM, Mass.

Babbit, Mrs. Mary, Madison, N. J.

Bacon, Joseph T., Franklin, Mass.

Bacon, Rev. Leonard, D.D., New Haven, Conn.

Bacon, Mrs. Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn.

Bacon, Mrs. Nathaniel, Middletown, Conn.

Baley, John, Georgetown, Mass.

Balley, Dans, Townsend, Yt.

*Balley, Rev. Kish.

Balley, Rev. Kish.

Balley, Rev. N. P., Paineaville, O.

Baln, Mrs. Mary, Marlon, O.

Balch, Calvin, West Nassau, N. Y.

Balch, Henry B., Meadville, Pa

Balch, Dea. Jonathan, Harwinton, Conn.

Balch, Mason, Francistown, N. H.

Baldwin, Rev. Curtis C., North Ridgeville, O.

Baldwin, Rev. Curtis C., North Ridgeville, O.

Baldwin, N. C., M. D., South Britain, Conn.

Ball, A. S., M. D., New York City.

Ball, Capt. Noah, Townsend, Mass.

Ballard, Elisha, Franklin, Mass.

Ballard, Dea. Gayton, Glebe Village, South Bridge, Mass.
Ballard, Mary, Quincy, Ill.
Bancroft, Mrs. Anna M., Granville, O.
Bancroft, Mrs. Betsey, Townsend, Mass.
Bancroft, W. W. M. D., Granville, O.
Banks, David, Stanwich, Conn.
Barber, Rev. Amai D., East Cleveland, O.
Barber, Mrs. Nancy I., East Cleveland, O.
Barber, Chester H., Torringford, Conn.

Barber, Eber M. Barber, Chester H., Torringtord, Conn.

Barber, Joseph S., Meriden, Conn.
Barber, Miss Mary E., Wallingford, Conn.
Barber, Diss Mary E., Wallingford, Conn.
Barber, Oliver, Sherborn, Mass.
Barber, Orrin, Harwinton, Conn. Barbour, H., Lewiston, Me.
Barbour, H., Lewiston, Me.
Bardwell, Alongo, South Hadley Falls, Mass.
Bardwell, Carlos, Holyoke, Mass.
Bardwell, Mrs. Cornella, Oberlin, O. Bardwell, Mrs. Cornelia, Oberlin, O.
Bardwell, Rev. John P., Oberlin, O.
Bardwell, Rev. Horatio, Oxford, Mass.
Barker, Rev. Davis R., Mercer, Pa.
Barpard, Rev. Alonso, St. Josephs, Min. Ter.
Barnard, Rev. Lucius E., Hannibai, N. Y.
Barnett, Richard, Girard, Penn. Barns, Mrs. Eimira, Troy, N. Y. Barns, Mrs. Elmira, Troy, N. Y.
Barnes, Baxter, West Brookfield, Mass.
Barnes, Blakcelee, New York City.
Barnes, Marcus, Keeseville, N. Y.
Barnes, Dea. Sewall, Westminster, Mass.
Barrett, Elizabeth, Springfield, Vt.
Barrows, Frederic P., Hartford, Conn.
Barrows, Henry M., Norton, Mass.
Bartlet, Rev. William T., Wethersfield, Ill.
Bartlett, Rev. E. N., Newton, Iows.
Bartlett, Mrs. Jane, Avon, Conn.
Bartlett, Mrs. Jane, Avon, Conn.
Bartlett, Mrs. Markgraret B., Belpre, O.
Bartlett, Mrs. Markgraret B., Belpre, O. Bartiett, Rev. John. Avon. Conn.
Bartiett, Mrs. Jans, Avon. Conn.
Bartiett, Mrs. Jans, Avon. Conn.
Bartiett, Summer, Brockfield, Mass.
Bass, Elisha, Hanover, Brockfield, Mass.
Bassett, Rev. Archibald, Watton, N. Y.
Bassett, Rev. Archibald, Watton, N. Y.
Bassett, Rev. R. Wilmingston, Vi.
Bassett, Rev. R. Wilmingston, Vi.
Batchalder, C. B., Oberlin, O.
Batcs, Abner, Syraouse, N. Y.
Batchelder, C. B., Oberlin, O.
Batcs, Rev. Henry, Almont, Mich.
Batcs, Rev. Henry, Almont, Mich.
Batcs, Rev. Merrit, Gloversville, N. Y.
Batcs, Miss Naomi, Waltsfield, Y.
Batcherick, Elias, Perry Center, N. Y.
Batch, Rev. Henry, Southampton, Mass.
Baxter, James S. Quincy, Mass.
Baxter, James S. Quincy, Mass.
Beach, Rev. L. B., Andover, O.
Beach, Hon. Moses.
Beach, Mrs. Sarah G., Kingsborongh, N. Y.
Beadle, M. Augusta, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Beadle, M. Augusta, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Beadle, M. Augusta, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Beadle, M. Sesph B., West Bloomseld, N. J.
Bearnan, Mrs. Elias M., Princeton, Mass.
Beardsley, Josiah, Ellsworth, O.
Beardsley, Josiah, Ellsworth, O.
Beardsley, Josiah, Ellsworth, O.
Beatty, Garoline, New Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatty, Joseph, R., West Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatty, Joseph, R. West Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatty, Joseph, R. West Hamburgh, Pa.
Beatty, James, New York City.
Beatty, Robert, New Hamburgh, Pa.
Beecher, Alfred, Oberlin, O. Beatty, Robert, New Hamburgh, Pa.
Beeckwith, Bar zillai, Great Barrington, Mass.
Beecher, Alfred, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mrs. Sarab, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Mev. Charles, Georgetown, Mass.
Beecher, Rev. Henry Ward, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Beecher, Mrs. Matilas, Oberlin, O.
Beecher, Rev. William H., No. Brookfield, Mass.
Beeker, John, Parish, N. Y.
Beeker, J. P., Parish, N. Y.
Beeker, Mrs. Mary, Parish, N. Y.
Beeker, Mrs. Mary, Parish, N. Y.
Beers, B. P., Collimer, O.
Beers, B. P., Collimer, O.
Beers, Lewis, Jr., Stratford, Conn.

Beera, Ray. Henry N., Westborough, Mass, Belcher, Des. A. P., Berkshire, N. Y. Belden, Rev. Henry, Brooklyn, N. Y. Belden, Henry A., Lenox, Mass. Reideu, Mary E., Lenox, Mass. Reideu, Mary E., Lenox, Mass. Reidews, Lyman, Worcester, Mass. Remis, Aaron, Windham, Ya. Bernis, Reuben, Winchendon, Mass. Benedict, Rev. Lewis, Geneva, Ill. Bennett, Rev. Joe eph L., Lockport, N. Y. Benson, Rev. Henry, Fulton, N. Y. Benson, Rev. Henry, Fulton, N. Y. Benson, Rev. Andrew, Richland City, Wis. Benton, Mrs. Ann. Lodd, Mich. Benton, Mrs. Ann. Lodd, Mich. Benton, Mrs. Ann. E., West Milton, N. Y. Benton, Mrs. Ann. E., West Milton, N. Y. Benton, Mrs. Ann. E., West Milton, N. Y. Benton, Mrs. May P., San Francisco, Cal. Berry, D. C., Newark, N. J. Bigelow, Arlemas, Newark, N. J. Bigelow, Arlemas, Newark, N. J. Bigelow, Arlemas, Newark, N. J. Bigelow, Leftward B., Grafton, Mass. Biogham, Dea. Asahel, West Cornwall, Va. Bingham, Errs, Handrey, Conn. Bingham, Henry A., Lisbon, Conn. Bingham, Rev. Joel S., Westfield, Mass. Birge, Allen, Harwington, Conn. Birge, Allea, Harwington, Conn.
Birge, David, Harwington, Conn.
Birge, George H., Torringford, Conn.
Birge, George H., Torringford, Conn.
Birge, Luther, Farmington, Ill.
Birge, Nathashel, Torringford, Conn.
Biscoe, Rev. Thomas C., Grafton, Mass.
Bishop, Clara, Kingston, Penn.
Bishop, Clara, Kingston, Penn.
Bishop, Nathan P., Lisbon, Conn.
Bittinger, Rev. Joseph B. Cleveland, O.
Blachly, Mrs. Ellanbeth, Dane, Wis. Blachly, Mrs. Ellfaboth, Dane, Wis. Blachly, Howard N., Dane, Wis. Blackly, Miller Bell, Dane, Wis. Blackmer, Luther, Shawangunk, N. Y. Blackmer, Mrs. Julia, Shawangunk, N. Y. Blackmer, Luther, Shawangunk, N. Y. Blackmer, Mrs. Julia, Shawangunk, N. Y. Blackmer, Mrs. Julia, Shawangunk, N. Y. Blair, Shepard, Warren, Mass. Blake, Elijah F., Winchester Center, Conn. Blake, Harry, Winchester Center, Conn. Blakeley, Rev. Abraham, Sodus, N. Y. Blakeley, Dan, Pawlet, Vt. Blakeley, Dan, Pawlet, Vt. Blakeley, Dan, Pawlet, Vt. Blakeley, Dan, Pawlet, Conn. Blakeley, Linus, Persyville, Conn. Blakeley, Linus, Persyville, Conn. Blakeley, Linus, Persyville, Conn. Blakeley, Milo, Terryaville, Conn. Blakeley, Milo, Terryaville, Conn. Blanchard, Bev. Jons, D. D., Galesburgh, Ill. Blanchard, Dea. Joshua, Andover, Mass. Blashheld, William, Little York, N. Y. Bliss, Aaron, Brimfield, Mass. Bliss, Miss. Delia, Fot Covington, N. Y. Bliss, George M., Mount Vernon, Ill. Bliss, Levi-A., East Woodstock, Conn. Bliss, Samuel, East Woodstock, Conn. Bliss, Samuel, East Woodstock, Conn. Bliss, Sense C., Morris, Ill. Boardman, Stephen G., Norwich, Vt. Bodwell, Rev. Lewis, Topeka, Kansas. Bodewll, Sherman, Topeka, Kansas. Bodes, Eli, Wellington, O. Bots, Milton, Broad Brook, Conn. Bolt, James A., Lafayette, Po. Bond, James A., Lafayeite, Pa.
Bond, Joseph, Areade, N. Y.
Bonner, Elder John, Yellow Springs, O.
Booth, Edwin, Springfield, Mass.
*Booth, Mrs. Edwin,
Booth, Mrs. Ceorge, Ladlow, Mass.
Booth, Hervey, M., Roxbury, Conn.
Bostwick, Harrison, Olice, N. Y.
*Bostwick, Harrison, Olice, N. Y.
*Bostwick, James Henry.
Bostwick, James Henry.
Bostwick, Mrs. Lay Ann.
Bostwick, Mrs. Many Ann.
Bostwick, Mrs. Many Ann.
Bostwick, Mrs. Nancy, Otisco, N. Y. Bond, James A., Lafayette, Pa.

Bostworth, Geo. W., Milford, N. H. Bosworth, William, Champlain, N. Y. Bothwick, Alexander, Greenville, Conn. Boughton, John F., Oberlin, O. Boughton, John F., Oberlin, O. Boughton, Reuben R., West Nassau, N. Y. Boutell, Dea John, Townsend, Mass. Boutelle, Rev. Thomas, Ashburnham, Mass. Bowen, A. C., Mallet Creek, O. Bowen, A. C., Mallet Creek, U.

*Bowen, Caleb A.

Bowen, Peter, Mallet Creek, O.

Boyd, David, Darlington, Pa.

Boyd, Miss Louisa J., Greigsville, N. Y. Boyes, Robert, Georgetown, Mass. Boynton, Rev. C. B., Cincinnati, O. Boynton, Henry, Mount Vernon, Mass. Boynton, Henry, Mount Vernon, Mass, Boynton, Thomas, Jr., Dracut, Mass, Bradley, Zalmon T., Vandeusenville, Mass, Brace, Rev. Joses K., Brookfield, Mass, Branch, Rev. Edwin, Oakwood, Mich, Brainerd, Adeliza, St., Albans, Vt. Brainerd, Adeliza, St., Albans, Vt. *Brainerd, Mrs. Fidelia, B. *Brainerd, Mrs. Fidelia, B. Brainerd, Dea. Joseph H., St. Albans, Vt. Brainerd, Lawrence, St. Albans, Vt. Brainerd, Lawrence, Jr., St. Albans, Vt. Brainerd, Porter E., St. Albans, Vt. Breed, Prof. David, M.D., Washington, D. C. Breed, Prof. David, M.D., Washington, D. C Bremner, Rev, David, Rockport, Mass. Breneman, Keziah W., Wellsville, O. Breneman, Margaret M., Linton, O. Breneman, Margaret M., Linton, O. Brewer, Miss Emilla F., Stockbridge, Mass. Brewer, Rev. Josiah, Stockbridge, Mass. Brewer, Marshall B., New York, N. Y. Brewer, Mrs. Sally M., Framingham, Mass. *Brewer, Simeon. *Brewer, Simeon.
Brewster, Albert, Le Roy, N. Y.
Brewster, Edward, Eq., Buffalo, N. Y.
Brewster, Emma Hart, Rochester, N. Y.
Brewster, Fenderick W., Brockport, N. Y.
Brewster, Henry A., Rochester, N. Y.
*Brewster, Henry A., Rochester, N. Y.
*Brewster, Hon. Henry.
Brewster, H. Pomeroy, Le Roy, N. Y.
Brewster, H. Pomeroy, Le Roy, N. Y.
Brewster, S. W., Hannibal, N. Y.
Brewster, E. Walden, Hannibal, N. Y. Brewster, James Binney, Hannibal, N. Y. Brewster, Wadsworth, Hannibai, N. Y. Brewster, Rev. William H., Cleveland, O. Brice, Rev. J. G., Winchester, Ind. Bridge, John A., Quincy, Mass. Bridgen, John A., Quincy, Mass. Bridgman, Edward, South Amherst, Mass. Briggs, George M., Broadalbin, N. Y. Brigham, Rev. David, Bridgewater, Mass. Brigham, Rev. David, Bridgewater, Mass. Brigham, Dea. Bimer, Westborough, Mass. Brigham, Dea. Brigham, Otis, Westborough, Mass. Brigham, Otis, Westborough, Mass. Brigham, Otis, Westborough, Mass. Brinkerhoff, Hon. Jacob, Mansfield, O. Bristol, Ira, West Milton, N. Y. Bristol, Rev. Richard C., Metamora, Ill. Brockway, Mrs. Lydia, Nassau, N. Y. Brokaw, David, Oberlin, O. Brooks, Artemas L., Lowell, Mass. Brooks, Mrs. Sarah P., Lowell, Mass. Brooks, Mrs. Sarah P., Lowell, Mass. Brooks, Henry, Plymouth Hollow, Conn. Brooks, Lucia M., Lowell, Mass. Brown, Mrs. A. F. Say Harbor, N. Y. Brooks, Lucia M., Lowell, Mass.
Brown, Mrs. A. F., Sag Harbor, N. Y.
Brown, Charles Milanio, Sag Harbor, N. Y.
Brown, Gharles N., Sag Harbor, N. Y.
Brown, Ghenezer, Rindge, N. H.

Brown, Mrs. Cynthia H.
Brown, Eisabeth, Port Homer, O.

Brown, Mrs. Ellen N. F. Brown, I. Newton, Cherry Fork, O. Brown, James.
Brown, John K., Stoneham, Mass.
Brown, Modena Lovinia, Sag Harbor, N. Y.

Brown, Modela Lovinia, Sag Harbor, M. & Brown, O. M., Utah, O. Brown, Rev. Silas C., Bristol Center, N. Y. Brown, Rev. William B., Newark, N. J. Brown, Mrs. Mary M., Newark, N. J. Brown, Urlah, Dunkirk, N. Y.
Browning, Eliza A., North Stonlagion, Conn.
Brownson, G. W. J., Amsterdam, N. Y.
Brownson, G. W. J., Amsterdam, N. Y.
Brownson, Harry, Milford, Conn.
Bryant, Abljah.
Bryant, Mrs. Lucy Ann, Stoneham, Mass.
Buckin, Rev. S. F., Mariborough, Mass.
Buckin, Rev. S. F., Mariborough, Mass.
Bullard, Nathan, Medway, Mass.
Bullard, Nathan, Medway, Mass.
Bullen, Mrs. C. A., Industry, Mc.
Burges, Rev. Dyer, Constitution, Pa.
Burnap, Hervey, Windham, Vt.
Burnap, Hervey, Windham, Vt.
Burnap, Hervey, Windham, Vt.
Burnan, Dexter S., Milford, N. H.
Burnel, Strong, Davenport, Iowa.
Burns, Daniel, Milford, N. H.
Burt, Sinls, Freetowa, Mass.
Burn Mio, Torringford, Conn.
Burro, M. Grorringford, Conn.
Burro, Miss. Lydia, Abington, Mass.
Burrille, Conn.
Burton, Albert, Mrs. H.
Burton, Daniel F., Pyrnouth, III.
Burton, Daniel F., Norwich, Vt.
Burton, Rancy,
Burton, Rancy, Sander, Vt.
Burton, Rancy, Sander, Vt.
Burton, Rancy, Sander, Vt.
Bush, Des. Lyma, North Brookfield, Mass.
Bushoell, Rev. Charles P., Beloit, Wis.
Bushoell, Rev. George, Worcester, Mass.
Bushoell, Rev. George, Worce

Cable, Rev. Jonathan, Lee, O.
Cable, Mrs. Sarah B., Lee, O.
Cady, Rev. Daniel R., West Cambridgo, Mass.
Cady, Mrs. Teresa, Collamer. O.
Cady, Rev. Daniel R., West Cambridgo, Mass.
Cady, Mrs. Teresa, Collamer. O.
Camp, Benis, Durham, Conn.
Camp, Denis, Durham, Conn.
Camp, Mrs. Anna, Durham, Conn.
Camp, Mrs. Henry, Hartfield, Conn.
Camp, Col. Joseph.
Canp, Col. Joseph.
Camphell, Mrs. Elizabeth, G-desburgh, Ill.
Camphell, Mrs. Elizabeth, G-desburgh, Ill.
Campbell, Mrs. Antoinette L., Felicity, O.
Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth, G-felicity, O.
Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth, G-felicity, O.
Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth, G-felicity, O.
Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Ripley, O.
Cary, Des. Frederick W., Greenville, Conn.
Cary, Otis, Foxborough, Mass.
Carpenter, Mrs. Elizabeth M., Warren, Mass.
Carpenter, Neson, M.D., Warren, Mass.
Carpenter, Mrs. Harriet L., Norwich Town, Conn.
Carpenter, Mrs. Ann T., Chicago, Ill.
Carter, Dea. Levi, Richview, Ill.
Carter, Dea. Levi, Richview, Ill.
Carter, Seth May, Winthrop, Me.
Carver, Algail A., Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Rev. Shubael, Union Valley, N. Y.
Carver, Mrs. Amanda, U

Chapin, Phiness, Vandeuzenville, Mass.
Chapman, Rev. Daniel, Lyndon, Ili.
Chapman, Julius O., Hartford, Conn.
Chapman, Julius O., Hartford, Conn.
Chapman, Theodore W., Belchertown, Mass.
Chase, Rev. Benjamin C., South Atteboro, Mass.
Chase, Hon. Samon P., Columbus, O.
Chase, Dea. Tappan.
Chatfield, Charles J., Painted Post, N. Y.
Chatfield, Charles J., Painted Post, N. Y.
Chatfield, Francis A., Painted Post, N. Y.
Chatfield, Irancis A., Painted Post, N. Y.
Chatfield, Irancis A., Painted Post, N. Y.
Cheever, Rev. Ben. D. D. N. Y.
Cheever, Rev. Geo. B., D. D. N. Y.
Cheever, Rev. Geo. B., D. D. N. Y.
Cheever, Rev. H. T., Jewett City, Conn.
Cheney, John, Resding, Mass.
Cheney, Wallace, Wesuminster, Mass.
Childester, Betaey.
Childester, Betaey.
Childester, Bybli, Canfeld, O.
Child, Miss Julia A., Greigsville, N. Y.
Childs, Mrs. A. W., Cansatora, N. Y.
Childs, Dea. William, East Woodstock, Conn.
Chipman, Samuel, Watfield, V.
Churchill, Dea. Chas., Kast Bridgewater, Mass.
Claffin, John, Worcester, Mass.
Claffin, Mrs. Mary B., Newionville, Mass.
Claffin, Mrs. Mary B., Newionville, Mass.
Claffin, Rev. Luther, Wainwates, Wis.
Clark, Rev. Josiah, East Hampton, Mass.
Clark, Rev. Nelson, Quincy, Mass.
Clark, Rev. Nelson, Quincy, Mass.
Clark, Rev. Visian R., Middletown, Conn.
Clark, Rev. Visian R., Deerfleid, Mass.
Clark, Mora Alma, A. Deerfleid, Mass.
Clark, Mora Alma, A. Deerfleid, Mass.
Clarke, Miss Janet, Fuiton, N. Y.
Clary, Rev. Janet, Postor, Postor, Conn.
Clarke, Miss Janet, Fuiton, N. Y.
Clary, Rev. Janet, J. J. G. Erremont, Mass.
Cleaveland, Rev. Clary, Mrs. Alma A., Dearfield, Mass. Cleaveland, Rev. James B., So. Egremont, Mass. Cleaveland, Mrs. Edzabeth H. J., So. Egremont, Cleaveland, Mrs. Edzabeth H. J., 30. Eigennom Mass.

Cleveland, Prof. Charles D., Philadelphis, Ps.
Cleveland, Mrs. Alison Nisott, Philadelphis, Ps.
Cleveland, Mrs. Alison N., Philadelphis, Ps.
Cleveland, Miss Alison N., Philadelphis, Ps.
Cleveland, Treadwell, Philadelphis, Ps.
Cleveland, Eliza, Philadelphis, Penn.
Cleves, Johns, Kleitra, N. Y.
Clifford, Miss Elizabeth, Exeter, N. H.
Cleas, Gilliart Stanivich, Cupn. Cleves, Joshus, Kimira, N. Y.
Clifford, Miss Elizabeth, Exeter, N. H.
Close, Gilbert, Stanwich, Cunn.
Cuan, Mrs. Jane L., Chelsea, Mass.
Coates, Herlamin F., Davenport, Iowa.
Coate, Herlamin F., Davenport, Iowa.
Cobb, Rav. H. Syractes, N. Y.
Cobb, Rev. Stephen, Marcellax, D. Y.
Cobb, Rev. Stephen, Marcellax, D. T.
Cochran, Rev. Samuel D., Ann Arbor, Mich.
Cochran, Rev. W., Brodhead, Wis.
Cochran, Rev. W., Brodhead, Wis.
Cochran, Rev. W., Brodhead, Wis.
Cochran, Mrs. Caroline A., Brodhead, Wis.
Coc, John, Beacon Falls, Conn.
Coc., Orfn, Obserin, O.
Coffin, George S., Boston, Mass.
Coffin, George S., Boston, Mass.
Coffin, Levi H., Ludlow, Vt.
Coffin, Mrs. Matilda H., Ludlow, Vt.
Coffin, Mrs. Matilda H., Ludlow, Vt.
Coffin, Silas, Rindge, N. H.
Cott, William H., Greenville, Conn.
Coker, John F., Gedrgetown, Mass.
Collie, Rev. Joseph, Delavan, Wis.
Collies, Frederic, Quiency, Ill.
Colton, Emily H., Galesburgh, Ill.
Colton, Emily H., Galesburgh, Ill.
Cotton, Rev. Wills S., Wethersdeld, Conn.
Comings, Andrew, East Berkshire, Vt.
Comings, Benjamin, Greensborough, Vt.

Comings, William, A., East Berkshire, Vt. Comstock, Dea. Christopher R., Hartford, Conn. Comstock, Mrs. Rebeccs, Williamstown, N. Y. Conatock, Miss Fanny A., Le Roy, Y. Conant, Peter D., Harvard, Mass. tonant, Dea. William, Mount Vermon, N. H. Conklin, Mrs. Abnirs, Freeport, Mc. Conklin, Rev. Charles, Le Roy, N. Y. Cook, Dea. Benjamis, Great Faila, N. H. Cook, Mrs. Belgainte, Great Faila, N. H. Cook, Mrs. Elizabeth A., Half-Day, Ill. Cook, Mrs. Elizabeth A., Half-Day, Ill. Cook, Mrs. Emily H., Burlington, Y. Cook, Dea. Leac, Hanover, Mass. Cook, C. Rev. Philos G., Ludiowville, N. Y. Cook, Rev. Nelson, Half-Day, Ill. Cooper, Harris M., Oswego, N. Y. Cooper, Obadish A., Oswego, N. Y. Cooper, Obadish Rev. Leac, D. Hancook, N. Y. Soowin, Mrs. Roxanns B. Cuttinos, Ray, N. P. Plymonth, Ill. Copeland, Miss Lucinda, Hanwer, Mass.
Cornforth, Mrs. L. C., Clarinda, Lowa.
Cornwell, Rev. Isaac D., Hancock, N. Y.
Corwin, Mrs. Roxana B.
Cottrine, Rev. N. P., Plymouth, III.
Cowdery, Mrs. Ernelius, Hartland, John.
Cowdery, Mose. Hartland, Conn.
Cowles, Mart. G. Welley, Mose.
Cowles, Mart. G. Mose.
Cowles, Mart. G. Mose.
Cowles, Walter C., Buffalo, N. Y.
Cowles, Ew. Janey, Marthy, Farmington, Conn.
Cowles, Walter C., Buffalo, N. Y.
Coy, Berjaint, Livnoita, N. Y.
Craig, Rev. Jawie, Hamburg, Germany.
Crane, Hiram. Embira, N. Y.
Craig, Rev. Jawie, Hamburg, Germany.
Crane, Hartland, Embira, N. Y.
Craig, Herv. Jawie, Hamburg, Germany.
Crane, Hartland, Mr. H.
Crawford, Mrs. M. S., Sparia, III.
Croby, Freedorick, Mifford, N. H.
Croby, Freedorick, Mifford, N. H.
Croby, Joseph, Mifford, N. H.
Croby, Technam, Mifford, N. H.
Croby, Joseph, Mifford

Dale, Mrs. Joanns, Albany, N. Y.
Dalzell, David, South Egremont, Mass.
Damer, Mary, Emmettsburg, Md.
Damen, Thomas, Westminster, Mass.
Damond, Rev. Eljah, Grafton, Mass.
Dans, Rev. Gideon, Oberlin, O.
Dans, Mrs. Hannah C., Oberlin, O.
Dans, Mrs. Hannah C., Oberlin, O.
Danforth, Levi B., Grass Lake, Mich,
Danforth, Timothy, Milford, N. H.

Daniels, Albert H., Oxford, Mass. Daniels, George F., Oxford, Mass. Daniels, Mrs. Lorissa, Overlin, O. Daniels, Mrs. Lorissa, Overlin, O.
Daniels, William P., Worcester, Mass.
Darling, Joshus H., Wareaw, N. Y.
Darriow, Bela, Oilsoo, N. Y.
Darriow, Dela, Oilsoo, N. Y.
Darriow, Prof. James, Oberlin, Ohlo.
Davis, Charles, Wurcester, Mass.
Davis, Charles, Wurcester, Mass.
Davis, Mrs. Barbai, J., Ashby, Mass.
Davis, Womens C., West Winsted, Conn.
Davis, William W., Buxbere, Mass.
Davis Woodbury, Ess. Baffast Mrs.
Davis Woodbury, Ess. Baffast Mrs. Davis, Woldiam W., Bixboro', Mass.
Davis, Woodbury, E-q., Belfast, Me.
Dayton, Mrs. Henrietts M., Harpersville N. Y.
Dean, George E., Mount Vernon, N. H.
Denn, Silas, Stoneham, Mass.
De Berard, Mrs. Hopsabeth, Racine, Wis.
De Groff, Jacob, Pugghkeepsle, N. Y.
Deming, Caroline, Farinington, Conn. Deming, Mrs Catharine, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Catharins, Farmington, Deming, Channey, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Frederick, Farmington, Conn. Deming, Frederick, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, John, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, Samuel, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, Samuel, Farmington, Conn.
Deming, Charles S., Lyndon, Ili.
De Sellettn, Isaac N., Part Humer, O.
De Sellettn, Jacob N., New Richmond, O.
De Sellettn, Margaret J., Pot Humer, O.
De Sellettn, Margaret J., Pot Humer, O.
De Sellettn, Howard Chase, Port Humer, O.
De Sellettn, Howard Chase, Port Humer, O.
De Sellettn, Howard Chase, Port Humer, O.
De Sellettn, Lower, O.
De Sellettn, T., Luck, Lee, O.
De Witt, Ew. Luck, Lee, O.
Dickey, Mrs. Bachel, Mangdield, O.
Dickey, Mrs. Bachel, Mangdield, O.
Dickey, Mrs. Beaner, Bloominghurg, O.
Dickinson, Capitale Enos, South Amberst, M. Dickey, Mrs. Rachel, Mangafield, O.

*Dickey, Mrs. Eleanor, Bloominghurg, O.
Dickinson, Captalu Knos, South Amherst, Mass.
Dickinson, Captalu Knos, South Amherst, Mass.
Dickinson, Mrs. Leis, South Amherst, Mass.
Dickinson, Mrs. Abigali, Hudson, O.
Dickinson, Maria A., Randolph, O.
Dickinson, Rovey M., Foxtborough, Mass.
Dickinson, Rovey M., Hudson, O.

Dickinson, Rovey M., Hudson, O.

Dickinson, Rovey M., Hudson, O.

Dickinson, Mrs. Sarah, W. Fairfield, Iowa.
Douge, Rev. John, Harvard, Mass.
Donder, Levis W., Graffon, Mass.
Donnell, Samuel, Sand Creek, Ind.
Douglass, Henry, Aurors, Ill.
Douglass, Rev. J., Rutland, N. Y.
Dove, John, Andover, Mass.
Dow, Daniel, College Springs, Iowa.
Down, Charles M., Salmon Falk, N. H.
Downs, Rev. Henry, Norridgewock, Me.
Downs, Dea Timothy-F., Fitchburgt, Mass.
Dowse, Benjamin, Sherborn, Mass.
Dowse, Benjamin, Sherborn, Mass.
Dowse, Benjamin, Sherborn, Mass.
Dowse, Rev. A. J., Oswego, Ill.
Drennan, John P., Mansfield, O.
Dresser, Rav. Amos, Orwell, O.
Dresser, Rav. Amos, Orwel

Duncan, Wm., Jr., North Brookfield, Mass. Dunbam, Rev. Ivasc, Duxbury, Mass. Dunn, Rev. R. C., Toulon, Ill. Dunning, Rev. Homer N., Gloversville, N. Y. Durand, William, To-tragford, Conn. Dutcher, Dea L. L., St. Albans, Vt. Dyer, Benjamin Providence, R. L. Dyer, Benjamin Providence, R. L.

Eager, Mrs. Mary, Woburn, Mass.
Eager, Dwight F., Woburn, Mass.
Eager, Mrs. Sally, South Lancaster, Mass.
Earloy, David W., Aberdeen, O.,
Eastman, Chryles, South Hailey, Mass.
Eastman, Jushus C., Hampstead, N. H.
Eaton, Miss Elizabeth, Cambridge, Mass.
Eaton, Dr. J. S., Bristol, N. H. Eaton, Br. J. S., Bristol, N. H. Eaton, Rebecca. Eaton, Miss Susan, Framingham, Mass, Ebaugh, Rev. John S., New York City. Eddy, Rev. Zacharlah, Birmingham. Con Eddy, Rev. Zacharlah, Birmi-gham. Gonn, Edwards, Rev. Henry L. S. Abington, Mass, Edwards, Rev. Joseph, Greenwich Station, O. Edwards, Rev. Joseph, Greenwich Station, O. Edwards, Sev. Joseph, Centralis, III. Edwards, Wartin L., Hudson, O. Edwards, S. W., Templ., N. H. Egleston, Rev. Nathaniel H., Madison, O. Edilott, Issac, Ann Arbor, Mich. Elliot, Mrs. Sarah H., Ann Arbor, Mich. Elliot, Mrs. Saran II., Ann Arbor, Mrs. Elliott, Moody, Danvers, Mass.
Ellis, Francis B., Warren Mass.
Ellis, William, New Britain, Conn.
Ellis, William P., Ashburnham, Mass. Ellis, William P., Ashburnham, Mass.
Ellison, John, Man-hester, O.
Elly, Joseph H., Lowell, Mass.
Ellison, William, Man-hester, O.
Elv, Joseph H., Lowell, Mass.
Emery, Rev. Samuel Hopkins, Taunton, Mass.
Emerson, Rev. Samuel Hopkins, Taunton, Mass.
Emerson, Rev. Nanh, Hollis, N. H.
Emerson, Rev. O., Jr., Wolf Creek, Iowa.
Emmerson, William, Westbornugh, Mass.
Emmisson, William, Westbornugh, Mass.
Emplis, Rev. Marcus W., Orleans Four Corners, Y.
Erskine, Rev. John, North Kortright, N. Y.
Esten, George W., Boonton, N. J.
Evans, Thomas W., Epley, O.
Everson, Dea. Ephraim, Andover, Mass.
Everson, Mrs. Rabels G., Andover, Mass.
Everson, Wrs. Rabels G., Andover, Mass.
Everson, Wrs. Rabels G., Andover, Mass.
Everson, William H., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Fairchild, George T., Brownhelm, O. Fairchild, Grandison, Brownbelm, O. Fairchild, Rev. James H., Oberlin, O. Feirchild, Grandison, Brownheim, O. Fairchild, Rev. James H., Oberlin. O. Fairchild, Mrs. Nancy H., Brownhelm, O. Fairchild, Mrs. Emily F., Olivet, Mich. Fairchild, Mrs. Emily F., Olivet, Mich. Fairchild, Rev. Minur W., Olivet, Mich. Farnban, Rev. Luclen, Newark, III. Farington, Oliver, Brewer, Mc. Faulkner, Cyrus, Millbury, Mass. Faxon, Mrs. M. M., Chleago, III. Fee, Rev. John G., Bersa, K.Y. Fellows, Mrs. Emeline A., Racine, Wis. Fellows, Mrs. Emeline A., Racine, Wis. Fellows, Rev. J. Hus. H., Racine, Wis. Fellows, Rev. J. Hus. H., Racine, Wis. Fellows, Rev. J. Hus. H., Racine, Wis. Fellows, Rev. J. P., South Bridgeton, Mc. Fleid, Rev. J. P., South Bridgeton, Mc. Fleid, Rev. Geo. W., Boston, Mass. Fleid, Horato N., Farrington, III. Fleid, Rev. Levi A., Mariborough, Mass. Fleid, Horato N., Farrington, III. Fleid, Rev. H. W., Whitehall, N. Y. Finney, Mrs. Elizabeth, A., Oberlin, O., Fleb, Henry Hudson, Fail River, Mass. Fleber, Mrs. C. Gale E., Lawrence, Mass. Fleber, Mrs. H., Mcdway, Mass. Fleber, Mary H., Lawrence, Mass. Fleber, Moss. Francistown, N. H., Fleber, Rev. George E., Mason Village, N. H., Fleber, Rev. George E., Mason Village, Fisk, William, Cleaveland, O. Fisk, Willam, Clesweland, O.

Fiske, Rev. F. A., Ashburnham, Mass.
Fitch, Charles S., Walton, N. Y.
Fitch, James M., Oberlin, O.
Fitch, James M., Oberlin, O.
Fitch, John A., Hopkinton, Mass.
*Fitch, Dea. Joseph D.
Fitts, Charles H., Hockville, Mass.
Fitch, Dea. Joseph D.
Fitts, Charles H., New York City.
Flagg, Newton, Quincy, Ill.
Fletcher, Francis H., New York City.
Fletcher, Rev. James, Danvers, Mass.
Fletcher, Hon. R., Proctorsville, Vt.
Fobes, Jabez, Lindenville, O.
Folsom, Rev. Geo. De Forest, Springfield, Mass. Fobes, Jabez, Linchaville, O.
Fobes, Jabez, Linchaville, O.
Fobes, Jabez, Linchaville, O.
Folist, Mrs. Jane O., Croton, O.
Folist, Mrs. Jane O., Croton, O.
Folis, Mrs. Louisa L. Burlington, Wis.
Foot, Dea. Adram, Wees Cornwall V.
Fortlee, E. T., Westhorough, Mass.
Foro, Samuel, Medway, Mass.
Ford, Mrs. Clarissa W., East Cleveland, O.
Ford, Cyrus, East Cleveland, O.
Ford, Clarissa W., East Cleveland, O.
Ford, Bibridge G., North Abington, Mass,
Ford, Mrs. East Cleveland, O.
Ford, Dea. James, N. Abington, Mass,
Ford, Mrs. Rhods, Hanover, Mass,
Ford, Mrs. Sarah A., East Cleveland, O.
Fords, Ford, Mrs. Sarah A., East Cleveland, O.
Foster, Rev. Aaron, East Cleveland, O.
Foster, Rev. Aaron, East Claremont, Mass,
Foster, Aaron H., Corning, N. Y.
Foster, Rev. Andrew Bast Claremont, Mass,
Foster, Mrs. Blanch, Wilson, Kansas,
Foster, Mrs. Blanch, Wilson, Kansas,
Foster, Mrs. Blanch, Wilson, Mrs.
Foster, Mrs. Duruthy A., East Claremont, Mass,
Foster, Dr. Henry, Clifton Springs, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Lorothy A., East Claremont, Mass,
Foster, Dr. Henry, Clifton Springs, N. Y.
Foster, Mrs. Hannah J., Templeton, Mass,
Foster, J. Hannah J., Templeton, Mass,
Foster, J. Hannah J., Templeton, Mass,
Foster, Mrs. Lydia C., Onargo, Ill.
Foster, Mrs. Lydia C., Onargo, Ill.
Foster, Rev. Lemnel, Onargo, Ill.
Foster, Rev. Roswell, West Hampton, Mass,
Foster, Rev. S. H., Lishon Center, Mass,
Foster, Samuel, Wotcester, Mass,
Foster, Samuel, Wotcester, Mass,
Foster, Samuel, Wotcester, Mass,
Foster, Samuel, Wotcester, Mass,
Foster, Rev. S. H., Lishon Center, N. Y. Foster, Mass. R. Georgieter, Mass. Foster, Ramuel, Wotcoster, Mass. Foster, Rev. S. H., Lishen Center, N. Y. Foster, Mrs. Susan M., Woburn, Mass. Foster, Tammason. *Fowler, Rov. Bancroft.
Fowler, John Newton, East Wilson, N. Y.
Fowler, N. H. Livupla, N. Y.
Fowler, Mrs. Philisss, Lenox, N. Y.
Fowler, Remas M., Mib., Washington, Conn.
Fowler, Dea. Samuel P., Danvers Port, Mass.
Franklin, George, Lyme, N. II.
Freeman, Rev. Joseph, Hanover, Mass.
Freeman, Mrs. Sansan B., Parma, O.
Freeman, Dea. Silas, Champion, N. J.
Freench, C. B., Granville, Ill.
French, Rev. Daniel L., Nashua, N. H.
French, Rev. Daniel L., Nashua, N. H.
French, Rev. Daniel L., Sashua, N. H.
Friench, Rev. Benjamin. *Fowler, Rev. Bancroft Frisble, Almira, Brownheim, O. Frisble, Mrs. Lols, Brownheim, O. Frisble, Mrs. Lols, Brownheim, O. Frisble, I. Tyler, Otlsco, N. Y. Frost, Rev. Lewis P. Arcade, N. Y. Fuller, E. B., West M. dway, Mass. Fuller, R. F., Wayland, Misss.

Gage, Dea, Alfred, Haverhill, Mass, Gage, Rev. William, Concord, O. Gallip, Mrs, Vleta, Stbogsville, O. Gambie, David, Emmetsburg, Md. Gant, Joseph, B., Philadelphis, Pa., Garland, Mrs. Clarksa L., Umriestdewn, N. H., Garland, Rev. Joseph, Chaelestown, N. H., Garner, Robert, White Lake, Mich. Garner, Thomas, Davishurgh, Mich. Garner, Thomas, Davishurgh, Mich. Garrison, Gumallet, Yellow Springs, O., Gaston, G. B. Tabor, Iowa.

Gates, Lacy, Townsend, Mass,
Gates, Lacy, C., Hardland, Conn.,
Gates, Samuel, Hariland, Conn.,
Gates, Samuel, Hariland, Conn.,
Gates, Des. Warren, Augusta, N. Y.
Gay, Willam, Farmington, Conn.
Gaylord, Miss. Arternesia, Sodna, N. Y.
Gaylord, Miss. Arternesia, Sodna, N. Y.
Gaylord, Miss. Arternesia, Sodna, N. Y.
Gaylord, Giles L., Torringford, Conn.
Gezzani, Joseph P., M.D., Plittsburgh, Pa.
Gear, Rev. Heunsn, Wayne, O.
Genmel, Rev. Geo., Quasqueton, Iown.
Ghorniley, Thomas, Huntsville, O.
Ghornly, William L., Greenfield, O.
Ghornly, William L., Greenfield, O.
Ghornly, Thomas, Huntsville, O.
Ghornly, Thomas, Huntsville, O.
Ghornly, Thomas, Huntsville, O.
Gibert, Thomas, North Brookfield, Mass,
Gibson, Rev. John, Tanaklort, O.
Gibert, Thomas, North Brookfield, Mass,
Gilman, Rev. J. E., Franklin, Mass,
Gilman, Rev. J. E., Franklin, Mass,
Gilman, Rev. K. W., Bangor, Me.
Gilmer, Rev. John, Tranquillity, O.
Glimer, Rev. John, Tranquillity, O.
Glimer, Rev. John, Tranquillity, O.
Goldard, Benjamin, Ed., Worerster, Mass.
Goddard, Benjamin, Ed., Worten, Mass,
Goddard, Benjamin, Ed., Worten, Mass,
Goddard, Bank, W. Winchendon, Mass,
Goddard, Benjamin, Ed., Worten, Mass,
Goddard, Benjamin, Ed., Worten, Mass,
Goddard, Bengamin, Ed., Worten, Mass,
Goddard, Ben, William, Exeter, Mass,
Goddard, Ruth, M. Worcester, Mass,
Goddard, Ruth, M. Worten, Mass,
Goddel, Calvin E., Wolten, Mass,
Goddel, Calvin E., Wolten, Mass,
Goddel, Calvin E., Wolten, Mass,
Goddel, William E., Harwington, Conn.
Goodman, Ruthos, Worth Amheret, Mass,
Goddel, William S., Harwington, Conn.
Goodman, Mrs. Amells F., Cheninati, O.
Goodman, Mrs. Amells F., Cheninati, O.
Goodman, Mrs. Amells F., Cheninati, O.
Goodman, Mrs. Sarsh, & R., Mero-r, P.
Gordon, Mrs. Sarsh, & R., Mero-r, P.
Gordon, Mrs. Mrs. Martet W.
Goddman, Wiss Sarsh, West Hartford, Conn.
Goodman, Mrs. Sarsh, & R., Mero-r, P.
Gordon, Mrs. Sarsh, & R., Mero-r, P.
Gordon, Mrs. Sarsh, & R., Mero-r, P.
Gordon, Mrs. Mass, Greenwood, Calvin S., Gardiner, Mass, Greenwood, Calvin S., Gardiner, Mass,
Greenw

Grinnell, Rev. Josiah B., Grinnell, Iowa. Griswold, Dea. Abram, Dryden, N. Y. Grosvenor, Rev. L. Ponfret, Conn. Grosvenor, Rev. L. Ponfret, Conn. Guiliver, Geo. R., Providence, Ill. Guiliver, John Thisdeliphia, Pa. Guiliver, John Th., North Brookfield, Mass, Guiliver, Rev. John P., N. zwich, Conn. Gunn, Luther D., Granville, Ill.

Hadlock, Levi J., Bangor, Ms.
Hadlock, Nathan, Bangor, Ms.
Hager, Benjamin S., Boxboro, Mass.
Hale, Harry, Chelsea, Vt.
Hale, Roy, John G., Grass Valley, Cal.
Hale, Mrs, Lucinda, Chelsea, Vt.
Hale, Mrs, Lucinda, Chelsea, Vt.
Hale, Simeon, Westersfield, Conn.
Hall, Ephraim, Wolcott, Conn.
Hall, Exp. Herman B., Jamaica Misston,
Hall, Mrs. Sophypnia B., Jamaica Misston, Hall, Bev. Heman B., Jamatoa Mission. Hall, J. B. Hall, J. B. Aumsica Mission. Wall, J. B. Hall, Dea. Moses, West Brookfield, Mass. Hall, Dea. Moses, West Bloomfield, N. Y. Hall, Roxanna, Gaston, Iowa. Hall, Stephen, Ashtabula, O. Halsey, Calvin C., M.D., Montrose, Penn. Hall, Francis Storre, Esst Wilson, N. Y. Halsey, Carles Storre, Esst Wilson, N. Y. Halsey, Rev. H., East Wilson, N. Y. Halsey, Rev. H., East Wilson, N. Y. Ham, Mrs. Elizabeth, Hanis Grove, Ill. Hamilton, Miss Oynthia M., Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss Matida, Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Miss Matida, Champlain, N. Y. Hamilton, Triugle, Oberlin, O. "Hammond, Dea. S. I. M. "Hammond, Mrs. Betaev C., Dorchester, Mass. Hanforl, Mrs. Benice, Walton, N. Y. Hank, Rev. B. W., Lowell, Mass. Hanna, Mrs. Mary, Mercer, Pa. "Hanna, Robert, Hanson, Dea. George, Globe Village, Mass. Happond, Shuma, Acton, Mass. Ilanson, Dea, George, Globe Village, Mas Happond, Slimm, Acton, Mass. Harding, V., Washington, Penn. Hardwick, Benjamin G., Quiney, Mass. Hardwick, Benjamin G., Quiney, Mass. Hardwick, Pranklin, Quiney, Mass. Hardwick, Dea, Thomas, Quiney, Mass. Hardwick, Dea, Thomas, Quiney, Mass. Hardwick, Dea, Thomas, Quiney, Mass. Hardy, Newman B., Georgetown, Mass. Hardy, William G., Boston, Mass. Harlow, Nathaniel, Bangor, Me. Hardy, William G., Boston, Mass. Harlow, Nathaniel, Bangor, Mc. Harmon, George S., Rupert, Vt. Harmon, George S., Rupert, Vt. Harmon, George S., Rupert, Vt. Harmon, Harman, Miram, Georgeown, Mass. Hartman, Hiram, Georgeown, Mass. Hartman, Harman, Dracat. Mass. Harper, Rev. Almer, Salvila, Iowa, Harriman, Hiram, Georgee own, Mass.
Harria, James, Draceta, Mass.
Harria, Samuel, Danvers, Mass.
Harris, Somuel, Danvers, Mass.
Harris, Willium J., West Bloomfield, N. J.
Harrison, Albert W., West Bloomfield, N. J.
Harr, Miss Catharine, Guilford, Conn.
Hart, Miss Harriet L., Geilford, Conn.
Hart, Norman, New Britain, Conn.
Hart, Norman, New Britain, Conn.
Hart, William, Guilford, Conn.
Hart, William, Guilford, Conn.
Hartyey, Rev. W. N., Milford, Conn.
Hartyey, Rev. W. N., Milford, Conn.
Harkell, Mass. Elizabeth, Harvard, Mass.
Haskell, Jacob, Pitchburg, Mass.
Haskell, Jacob, Pitchburg, Mass.
Haskell, Jacob, Pitchburg, Mass.
Haskels, Mass. Almira K., Union Village, N. Y.
Hatch, Rev. Almira K., Union City, Mich.
Hatch, Rev. Almira K., Union City, Mich.
Hatch, Rev. Almira K., Union City, Mich.
Hathaway, N. V. G. W., Bloomfield, Me.
Hawes, Otto, Brown's Corners, Me.
Hawes, Chis, Brown's Corners, Me.
Hawes, Miss. Brown's Corners, Me.
Hawes, Miss. Brown's Corners, Me.
Hawes, Miss. Brown's Corners, Me.
Hawey, Almira K., Brown's Corners, Me.
Hawey, Almon, Farmington, Conn.
Hawley, Henry D., Farmington, Conn.
Hawley, Lydit M., Farmington, Conn.
Hawley, John, Summors, Pa.

Hawley, Miss Mary H., Baltimore, Md.
Hawley, Mrs. Phebe H., New Mifford, Penn.
Hawley, Seth, Mare u., N. Y.
Hayden, Josala, Hollis, N. H.
Hayes, Rev. Stephen H., South Weymouth, Mass.
Hayford, Mrs. Mathad, Champlain, N. Y.
Haylor, David, Oberlin, O.
Haynes, Miss Marths E., Townsend, Mass.
Haynes, Walter, Townsend, Mass.
Haypard, Mrs. Ann. Rouse's Point, N. Y.
Hayward, Mrs. Ann. Rouse's Point, N. Y.
Hayward, Den. Stevens, Acton Center, Mass.
Hayward, Den. Stevens, Acton Center, Mass.
Hayward, Den. Stevens, Acton Center, Mass.
Hayward, Lor. J. A., Lisbon, Conn.
Hazen, Rev. J. A., Lisbon, C Hendee, New Leorge W. Mindou, N. Y. Hendee, Stephen, West Bloomfield, N. Y. Hendee, Stephen, West Bloomfield, N. Y. Hendre, X. Miss Harriet Z. Dover, O. Herrick, Mrs. Cyntnia. West Bloomfield, N. Y. Hendrey, Miss Harriet, Rev. S. L. Grinnell, Iowa. Heywood, Samuel R., Worcester, Mass. Hickock, Marilla, Greenville, N. Y. Hidden, Rev. E. N., Derry, N. H. Hill, C. M., Newark, N. J. Hill, C. M., Newark, N. J. Hill, David W., Westminster, Mass. Hill, Edward M., North Canaan, Ct. Hill, Mrs. Eunlee P., Kanona, N. Y. Hill, Mrs. Eunlee P., Kanona, N. Y. Hill, Mrs. Bullee, M. G. Hill, Greenwick, Me. Hill, Mrs. St., French Village, Mo. Hills, Ezeklath, Pekin, N. Y. Hills, Mrs. Lurra G. B., Oberlin, O. Hills, Natianlei, Danvers, Mass. Hills, Mrs. Laura G. B., Oberlin, O. Hills, Natifaulel, Danvers, Ma-s. Hills, Natifaulel, Danvers, Ma-s. Hills, Herman, Washington, Conn. Hinstale, Dea. Jacob, Wellington, O. Hinstill, Stephen C. Morris, III. Hitchcock, David, Worcester, Mass. Hitchcock, David, North East, Penn. Hitchcock, Erwin VanNess, Pittsford, Vt. Hitchcock, Mrs. E. W., Oberlin, O. Hitchcock, Henry Chapman, Oberlin, O. Hitchcock, James Bostwick, Orisco, N. Y. Hitchcock, John C., Otlsco, N. Y. Hitchcock, John C., Olisco, N. Y.
Hitchcock, Dea, Leonard, Rochester, N. Y.
Hitchcock, Delver, Austin, Minnesota,
Hitchcock, Reuben, Palnesville, O.
Hitchcock, Mrs. Sarah M., Palnesville, O.
Hibbert, Miss Mary C., Meriden, Conn.
Hodee, Mrs. Mary E., Janesville, Wis.
Hodes, Rev. James, Harrison, Ill.
Holbrook, Lewis, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Mrs. Alfred, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Mrs. Alfred, Grafton, Mass.
Holden, Francis P., North Ablugton, Mass.
Holden, Francis P., North Ablugton, Mass. Holden, Francis P., North Abington, Mass. Holden, John, Quiney, Mass. Holden, Mrs. Sarah H.. Woburn, Mass. Hollister, Da Sherman P., Washington, Conn. Hollister, Truman, Washington, Conn. Holman, Elijah. Holman, Geo, W., Beloit, Wis. Holman, Mrs. Deila E., Belott, Wis.
Holman, Nelson F., Chiesgo, Ill.
Holman, Nelson F., Chiesgo, Ill.
Holman, Mrs. Eanles. Reyalston, Mass.
Holman, Seth N., Royalston, Mass.
Holman, Seth N., Royalston, Mass.
Holman, Mrs. Sarah P., Royalston, Mass.
Holmes, Abraham, So. Ablington, Mass.
Holmes, Abraham, So. Ablington, Mass.
Holmes, Daniel, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Daniel, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Rev. Israel C., Maple Grove, Wis.
Holmes, Rev. James, Auburn, N. H.
Holmas, John, Bellbrook, O.
Holmes, Hannah, Ballbrook, O.

Holmes, Mrs. Sarah Ann, Beilbrook, O. Holmes, Mrs. Mary, Beilbrook, O. Holmes, Nancy, Beilbrook, O. Holmes, Polly, Beilbrook, O. Holmes, William Beilbrook, O. Holmes, William Beilbrook, O. Holmes, W. William, Beckford, Ill. Holte, Ezra, Mifford, N. H. Holten, Des. Francis, Beilevue, O. Holtslander, Mrs. Jane, Oberlin, O. Holtslander, Mrs. Jane, Sernylle, Ill. Hopkins, George W., Sand Creek, Ind. Hopkins, George W., Sand Creek, Ind. Hopkins, Safford, East Georgis, V. Horton, Mrs. Lydia E., Ballston, N. Y. Hosford, Prof. Oramel, Olivet, Mich. Mesford, Mrs. Asby, Olivet, Mich. Hosford, Mrs. Abby, Olivet, Mich. Hosford, Mrs. Arby, Olivet, Mich. Hoskinson, Thomas J., Pittsburg, Pa. Hosmer, Amos H., Mason, N. H. Hosmer, Samuel, Action, Mass. Hosmer, Silas, Acton, Mass. Hosmer, Silas, Acton, Mass. Houghton, Cephas, Harvard, Mass. Houghton, Mrs. Sarah, Harvard, Mass. Houghton, John Cephas, Harvard, Mass. Howard, Mrs. Orinda, Fort Covington, N. Y. Howe, Ann Sophia, Cambridge, Mass. Howe, Charles M., Marlhorough, Mass. Howe, Charles M., Marlhorough, Mass. Howe, Charles M., Marlhorough, Mass. Howe, Charles M., Mariborough, Mass. Howe, Curtis, Granville, Obio, Howe, Dea. Frederic, Danvers, Mass. Howe, Dea. Frederic, Danvers, Mass. Howe, Nehemiah, Greenwich, Cenn. Howe, Rufus, Cambridge, Mass. Hoyt, Sophia, Mount Aubure, Mass. Hoyt, James P. Coventry, N. Y. Hoyt, Mrs. Rebecca A., Stanwich, Conn. Hubbard, Meridian, N. Y. Hoyt, Mrs. Rebecca A., Stanwich, Conn. Hubbard, Jenpison H., Clinton, Conn. Hubbard, Franklin B., Mercer, Pa. Hubbard, Rev. W. G., Dryden, N. Y. *Hudson, Mrs. Hannah. *Hudson, Mrs. Hannah. Hudson, Dr. Wm. N., Granville, O. Hudson, Dr. Win. N., Granville, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Lemira L., Granville, Ohio.
*Hudson, Prof. Timothy B.
Hudson, Mrs. Betsey B., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, Wm. N., 2d, Ob-rlin, O.
Hudson, Miss Francis C., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, James P., Oberlin, O.
Hudson, Dr. Lorenso D., Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harriet L. Hampden, O.
Hudson, Mrs. Harriet L. Hampden, O. Hudson, Mrs. Harriet L. Hampden, O. Hudson, Miss Mary, Hampden, O. Hudson, Christopher C. Oberlin, O. Hudson, Mrs. Ann Jennetta, Oberlin, O. Hudson, Dr. J. Q. A., Middleport, O. Hudson, Mrs. Joanna W., Middleport, O. Hudson, Mrs. Lucy Maria, Middleport, O. Hudson, Mrs. Lucy Maria, Middleport, O. Hudson, Charles Ellis, Middleport, O. Hudson, Laura Jans, Middleport, O. Hudson, Charles Ellis, Middleport, O. Hudson, Charles Mills, Middleport, O. Hudson, Caylon, Cincinnati, O. Hudson, Mrs. Caroline B., Cincinnati, O. Hudson, Mrs. Caroline B., Cincinnati, O. Hudson, Mrs. Caroline B., Cincinnati, O. Hudson, Helen Graff, Cincinnati, O. Hughson, Rev. S. S., Rushville, N. Y. Hulbert, Edward L., Deer River, N. Y. Hulburd, Hiram, Stockholm, N. Y. Hull, Rev. Joseph D., Farmington, Conn. Hull, Rev. Joseph D., Parmington, Conn. Humphrey, Daniel G., Torringford, Conn, Humphrey, Rev. John P., Winchester, N. H. Humphrey, Rev. Z. M., Chlengo, III. Humphrey, Rev. Luthert Windham, O. *Hunt, Mrs. Ablyal, R. E. Hunt, Rev. N. S., Bozrah, Conn. Hunt, Rev. N. S., Bozrah, Conn.
Hunt, Rev. Samuel, Franvlin, Mass.
Hunt, Samuel, Ava, N. Y.
Hunt, Sereno D., North Bridgewater, Mass.
Hunter, Mrs. Harriet P., Quiney, Ill.
Huntington, A. H., St. Albans, Y.
Huntington, Dea. Eleazar, Lebanon, Conn.
Huntington, Emily, Norwich, Conn.
Huntington, Theodore G., North Hadley, Mass.

Hurlbut, Mrs. Lucy R., Litchfield, O.
Hurlbut, Thomas K., Danville, Iowa.
Hurst, Joseh, Dover, O.
*Hurst, Miss Sarah Elisabeth.
Hurst, Thomas H., Dover, O.
Hurst, Thomas H., Dover, O.
Hutchins, Isaac, West Killingly, Conn.
Hutchins, Robert G., West Killingly, Conn.
Hutchinson, John B., Milford, N. H.
Hutchinson, John B., Milford, N. H.
Hyde, Mrs. Eleaner W., Corning, N. Y.
Hyde, Florence E., Topeka, Kansas.
Hyde, Lewis A., Normich Town, Conn.

Ide, Daniel M., Claremont, N. H.
Ide, Elizabeth A., Sherburne, Vt.
Ide, Mrs. J. A. B., Claremont, N. H.
elde, Mrs. J. A. B., Claremont, N. H.
elde, Mrs. Sarah.
Ide, Mrs. Maob, D. D., West Medway, Mass.
Ide, Mrs. Mary E., West Medway, Mass.
Ide, Laura A., Taunton, Mass.
Ide, Laura A., Taunton, Mass.
Ide, Nathan, North Dighton, Mass.
Ingralls, Dea. J. F., Mehluen, Mass.
Ingralls, Dea. J. F., Mehluen, Mass.
Ingralls, Dev. Alvan, Rochester, N. Y.
Ingersoll, Jošeph, Stanwich, Conn.
Ives, Arthur C., Brocklyn, N. Y.
Ives, Julius, Jr., Brocklyn, N. Y.

Jacks, Aaron, Methuen, Mass, Jackson, Mrs Charlotte R., Prattsburg, N. Y. Jackson, Hon, William, Jackson, Mrs. William, Newton, Mass. Jackson, Mrs. William, Newton, Mass. Jacobs, Clark, Brooklyn, N. Y. Janes, Mrs. Harriet H., Racine, Wis. Juy, Hon, Willium, Bedford, N. Y. Jenkins, Charles W., Bangor, Me. Jenkins, George R., Mount Pleasant, O. Jenkins, Rev. John, Philadelphia, Penn. Jenkins, Rev. J. L.
Jenks, John Henry, North Brookfield, Mass.
Jennings, Charles, Warren, Mass.
Jerome, Robert T., Lafargeville, N. Y.
Jewett, Mrs. Har lette E., Boston, Mass. Jewett, Harriette S., Roston, Mass. Jewett, John P., Boston, Mass. Jewett, Nathan, Milford, N. H. Jewett, Mrs. S. A., Dayton, O. Johnson, Homer, M.D. Oberlin, O. Johnson, Mrs. Ann A., Oberlin, O.
Johnson, Rev. Edwin, Jacksonville, Ill.
Johnson, Mrs. Hannah, Gloversville, N. Y. Johnson, John. Paterson, N. J. Johnson, John, Paterson, N. J. Johnson, Joseph, Woburn, Mass. Johnson, Reuben B. Jericho, Ill. Johnson, T. Henry, La Harpe, Ill. Johnson, William H., Klabwaukee, Ill. Johnson, Rev. I. B., Bell Center, O. Jones, Rev. Charles, Battle Creek, Mich. Jones, Mrs. Calsina, Battle Creek, Mich. Jones, Mrs. Clarence, Herwinton, Conn. Jones, Jonas, Tabor, Iows. Jones, Hev. J. H., Whitewater, O. Jones, Phebe, West Randolph, Vt. Jones, Rev. Warren G., Hartford, Conn. Jones, Rev. Willard, Northfield, Mass. Jube, John P, Newark, N. J.
Judd, Rev. Henderson, Bloomingdale, Ill.
Judson, Alanson, Gloversville, N. Y.
Judson, Elisha, Kingsborough, N. Y.
Judson, Elisha B., Raymond, Wis. Judson, Gurdon, Raymond, Wis. Judson, Mrs. Hannah, Baymond, Wis. Judson, Mrs. Luthens P., Raymond, Wis. Judson, Luclus, Raymond, Wis. Judson, N. P., Wampaca, Wis. Judson, Svivanus, De Royter, N. Y. Judson, Sylvester, Hagaman's Mills, N. Y.

Karnar, Stephen Newman, Egremont, Mass. Kedsle, Rev. A. S., Union City, Mich. Kedsle, George L., Yellow Springs, O. *Keeny, Talcott, Cynthians, Ind. Keep, Rev. John, Oberlin, O. Keep, Mrs. Lydia H., Oberlin, O. Keep, Mrs. Mary Ann, Poland, O. Keep, Rev. T. J., Mallet Creek, O. Keep, Wm. J., Poland, O Kellogg, Aaron, Laona, N. Y. Kellogg, James B. F., Champlain, N. Y. Kellogg, Lorenso, Champiain, N. Y. Kellogg, Mrs. Lucy W., New Hartford, N. Y. Kelsey, Dea. Noah, Milford, Conn. Kelsoy, Dea. Noah, Milford, Oonn.
Kelton, George, Gardiner, Mass.
Kendail, Edward, Westminster, Mass.
Kendail, George, Westminster, Mass.
Kendail, Rev. S. C., Milford, N. H.
Kendrick, John, Haverhill, Mass.
Kennedy, Rev. J. B., Geneva, Ill.
Kephart, Rev. William G., Pine Grove, O.
Keys, Sophia W., Burlington, Iowa.
Keys, Rev. Richard G., Painted Post, N. S.
Kozza, Recipture W. West Reveleton, N. S. Keyes, Benjamin F., West Boylston, Mass. Keyes, Julius, Olivet, Mich. Keyes, Rev, N. A., Princeton, Ill. *Keyes, Thomas. Keyes, Thomas N., West Boyl-ton, Mass. Kidder, Rev. C., Warsaw, N. Y. *Kimball, Alpheus.
Kimball, Mrs. Sarah, Weburn, Mass.
Kimball, John W., Fitchburg, Mass.
King, Absalom, Georgetown, O.
King, Evander, Otisco, N. Y. Aing, Evander, Otisco, N. Y. King, Sereno F. Syracuse, N. Y. King, Rev. Victor M., Oherry Fork, O. King, Mrs. Adeline O., North Benton, O. Kingsbury, Benjamin W., Newton Center, Mass. Kingsbury, John L., Francistown, N. H. Kingsbury, Samuel, North East, Pa. Kingsley, Miss Elvira, Fletcher, Vt. Kingsley, Lucy Sevigne, North Cambridge, Vt. Kinney, Rev. Ezra D., Darien, Coun. Kinsey, Miss A. T., Mount Pleasant, O. Kinsley, John, 2d, North Cambridge, Vt. Kitchell, Bev. Harvey D., Detroit, Mich. Kitchell, Rev. Harvey D., Detroit, Mich Knapp, A. H., Newton, Mass. Knapp, Rev. Jared O., Hatfield, Mass. Knight, Allen, Danvers, Mass. Knight, Henry C., Detroit, Mich. Knight, Henry C., Detroit, Mich.
Knight, Rev. Horace B., Syracuse, N. Y.
Knight, Dea. Robert, Millord, N. H.
Knight, Horatio G., Esst Hampton, Mass.
Knight, John, North Brookfield, Mass.
Knight, John, North Brookfield, Mass.
Knight, Rev. Richard, So. Haddey Falls, Mass.
Knight, Mrs. Sarah B., Medway, Mass.

Knight, Mrs. Sarah B., Medway, Mass. Knowles, William, Knowlesville, N. Y. Knowlton, Mrs. Amanda, Utica, N. Y. Knowlton, Pomeroy, Worcester, Mass. Kuhn, Jonas S., Galesburgh, Ill.

Ladd, Silas, Painesville, O.
Lambrite, Mrs. Juleita, Davenport, Iówa,
Lamson, Mrs. H. O., West Brookfield, Mass.
Lancaster, Miss Mercy, Winthrop, Me.
Langdon, Jervis, Elmira, N. Y.
Langworthy, Rev. Issae P., New York Gity.
Lambear, Rev. O. T., Exeter, N. H.
Lawrence, Rev. Amos E., South Britain, Conn.
Lawrence, Mrs. Hanna : B., South Britain, Conn.
Lawrence, George K., Poughkeepsle, N. Y.
Lawrence, Henry, Gardner, Mass.
Lawrence, Henry, Gardner, Mass.
Lawrence, Rev. R. F., Claremont, N. H.
Leach, Mrs. Lydia, Erlington, N. Y.
Leachyd, John A., North Danvers, Mass.
Leavitt, Rev. Johna, D. D., New York City,
Leavitt, Rev. Joshua, D. D., New York City,
Leavitt, William, Washington, Conn.
Lee, John K., W.D., New York
Lee, Sarah M., Norwich, Conn.
Lee, Dea, William, Libbon, Conn.
Lee, Moyne, Mrs. Mass.
Leonard, Rev. M. R., Washington, Pa.
Leonard, Rev. A. L., Burlington, Pa.
Leonard, Rev. A. L., Burlington, Iowa,
Leonard, Rev. Francis, Knoxville, Ill.
Leonard, Rev. S. O., Andover, Mass.
Lewis, Dr., Abel, Huntington, Ind.

Lewis, Rev. John S., Lee, O. Lewis, Adaline, Lee, O. *Lewis, Ichabod. *Lewis, Ichabod. Lewis, Rofus, Hartford, Conn. Lewis, Rev. Wm. S., Granville, O. Lewis, Elisa C., Granville, O. Light, Elisa C., Granville, O. Light, Joseph, Worcester, Mass. Litchfield, Jairus, Leominster, Mass. Little, Rev. E. G., Ashburnham, Mass. Little, Rev. E. G., Ashburnham, Mass. Little, Rev. George B., West Newton, Mass. Little, Miss Josephine, New York City. Livermore, S. D., West Brookfield, Mass. Lockhart, Rev. J. H., Russelvville, O. Locke, Benjamin W., Brownheim, O. Locke, John, Brownheim, O. Long, Capt. Ozias, Oonn.
Longley, Rev. Moses M., Washington, Mass.
Lombard, Rev. Olis, Southfield, Mass.
Loomis, Rev. A. G., Bethichelm, Conn. Loomis, Rev. A. G., Bethlehelm, Conn.
Loomis, Oren H., Kewanee, Ill.
Loomis, Rev. Wm. F., Shelburne Falls, Mass.
Loomis, Walcot R., Hartford, Conn.
Lord, Rev. Edward, Fulton, N. Y.
Lord, Mrs. Mary Jane, Fulton, Y. N.
Lord, Rev. T. N., Auburn, Me.
Lord, Mrs. Daniel W., Kennebunkport, Me.
Lord, Rev. F. R. Olivet, Mich. Lord, Mrs. Daniel W., Kennebunkport, Me. Eord, Rev. F. E., Olivet, Mich. Lord, Mrs. Sarah T., Olivet, Mich. Love, Rev. William De sox, Migraukie, Wis. Lore, Mrs. Mattlda, Milwinkie, Wis. Lovell, David, Oakham, Mass. Lovell, Mrs. Julia O H., Oakham, Mass. Lovell, Joseph G., West Boylston, Mass. Loveloy, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cambridgeport, Mass. Loveloy, Rev. Joseph C., Cambridgeport, Mass. Loveloy, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cambridgeport, Mass. Lovejoy, John, Lowell, Mass. Lovejoy, William, Milford, N. H. Lovering, John A. Georg-town, Mass. Luce, Miss Rebecca E., Wes-ford, Mass. Lumbard, Dea. Washburn, Worcester, Mass. Lum, Rev. Samuel Y., Lawrence, Kansas. Lumsden, Rev. William, Ripley, O. Lyman, Mrs. Achsah C. B., Strongsville, O. Lyman, Eljah, Strongsville, O.
Lyman, Eljah, Strongsville, O.
Lyman, Rev. Ephraim, Washington, Conn.
Lyman, William, Middlefteld, Conn.
Lyman, William, Middlefteld, Conn.
Lyman, Mrs. Catharine E., Middlefteld, Conn. Lyman, Mrs. Alma, Middlefield, Conn. Lyon, Dea. Asa, East Woodstock, Conn. Lyon, Edwin B., East Woodstock, Conn.

Macdill, Rev. David, Eckmanville, O. Mahan, Barbara B., Linton, O. Mahan, John L., Linton, O. Mahan, Dhoh L., Linton, O. Mahan, Dr. Thomas S., Iowa City, Iowa. Mality, Stephen E. Syraense, N. Y. Manley, Emmons, Marion, N. Y. Mann, Albert, West Medway, Mass. Mann, James, Pereman M., Grafton, Mass. March, Rev. Daniel, Woourn, Mass. March, Rev. Daniel, Woourn, Mass. March, Rev. Edwards, Canton, Ill. Marsh, Mrs. Lucy, Quincy, Mass. Marsh, Ml. Dea. C. G., S.-Imon Falls, N. Y. Marvin, Rev. Charles S., Harpersfield, N. Y. Marvin, Rev. Charles S., Harpersfield, N. Y. Marvin, Thomas, Walton, N. Y. Marvin, Thomas, Walton, N. Y. Mason, Edward B., Milwaukie, Wis. Mason, Edward B., Milwaukie, Wis. Mason, Helen A., Milwaukie, Wis. Mason, Helen A., Milwaukie, Wis. Mattheon, Ira, Mount Vernon, O.

Maxwell, Rev. George, Mansheld, O.
Maxwell, Mrs. Martha, Mansheld, O.
Maxwell, Mrs. Martha, Mansheld, O.
May, Hon. Seth, Winthrop, Me.
Maynard, Moses, South Deerfield, Mass.
Maynard, Win, G., Worcester, Mass.
McClanahan, Rev. A. W., Duesuir, O.
McCleland, J. S., Mouth Jackson, Pa.
McColland, J. S., Mouth Jackson, Pa.
McCollelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McCollom, Rev. James T., Bradford, Mass.
McClelland, Mrs. Martha, Westfield, Pa.
McCollow, Rev. James T., Bradford, Mass.
McConnell, John, Darlington, Pa.
McCoy, Kenneth, West Alexander, Pa
McCoracken, Rev. S. W., Morning Sun, O.
McCreary, Mrs. Jane, Chilicothe, O.
McCreary, Mrs. Jane, Chilicothe, O.
McGrariand, Levens, Birockfield, Mass.
McFarland, Levens, Birockfield, Mass.
McFarland, Samuel, Washington, Pa.
McGibeny, James, Mount Vernon, O.
McKenzy, James, Grafton, Mass.
McKinstry, Rev. John A., Harwinton, Cenn,
McMaster, Thomas A.
McPherson, Ed. James, Ripley, O.
McPherson, Ed. James, Ripley, O.
McPherson, Dea. Alexander, Laymond, Wis.
Meacham, Dea. Simon, Pulaski, N. Y.
Mead, John, Walton, N. Y.
Mead, Den, Jonas M., East Jaffrey, N. H.
Melville, Mrs. Betsey, Jaffrey, N. H.
Melville, Mrs. Betsey, Jaffrey, N. H.
Melville, Mrs. Betsey, Jaffrey, N. H.
Merriam, Dea. Amos, Lowell, Mass.
Merriam, Garoline D., Hobart, N. Y.
Merriam, Garoline D., Hobart, N. Y.
Merriam, Mes, Sophia M., Harpersfield, N. Y.
Merriam, Mes, Sophia M., Harpersfield, N. Y.
Merriam, Med, Westminster, Mass.
Merriam, William M., Harpersfield, N. Y.
Merrick, Mrs. Betulah, Monson, Mass.
Merrick, Mrs. Loye, A., Strongsville, O.
Merrill, Mrs. Anoson, Mass.
Merrick, Mrs. Loyen, A., Strongsville, O.
Merrick, Mrs. Loyen, A., Strongsville, O.
Merrill, Mrs. Anoson, Mass. Merrick, Samuel O., Chicopee, Mass. *Merrill, Mrs. Anna. *Merrill, Benjamin. Merrill, Den Jamin.

Merrill, Dev. David N., Great Burrington, M.

Merrill, Dr. Jessee, Hopkinton, Mass.

Merrill, J. W., Oberlin, O.

Merrill, Mrs. P. G., Williamsburg, Mc.

Merrill, Dea. Sylvanus, Georgetown, Mass.

Merrilman, Maurice H., Genesee, Ill.

Metcall, John, Zanesville, O.

Miles, Rev. James B., Charlestown, Mass.

Miles, Pa. Johas M. Worcesier, Mass.

Miles, Rev. Mjlo N., Lawn Ridge, Ill.

Miles, Thomas M., Marlborough, Mass.

Miller, Rev. Daniel R., Lisbon, Ill.

Miller, Rev. Jacob G., Harwinton, Conn.

Miller, Henry, Torringford, Conn.

Miller, Samuel N., So, Hadley, Mass.

Miller, Samuel N., So, Hadley, Mass.

Miller, John L., Neenah, Wis.

Miner, Rev. Ovid, Hoyleton, Id.

Miner, Rev. Ovid, Hoyleton, Id. Merrill, Rev. David N., Great Barrington, Mass. Millerd, John L., Neenah, Wis.
Miner, Rev. Ovid, Hoyleton, IB.
Miner, Mrs. Lucy C., Oberlin, O.
Minnough, William R., Ripley, O.
Minott, Mrs. J. N., Westminster, Mass.
Mitchell, Rev. B., Mount Pleasant, O.
Mitchell, Miss Eliza, Oberlin, O.
Mofatt, Addison, Madison, O.
Mofatt, Mrs. Sarah B., Madion, O. Monroe, Prof. James, Oberlin, O. Montague, Dea. J. S., Brookfield, Mass. Montgomery, John P., Haverhill, Mass. Mondy, Hovey, South Hadley, Mass. Moore, Benjamin C., Grafton, Mass.

Moore, Mrs. Caroline M., Champlain, N. Y.
Moore, Mrs. Harriet Storer, Concord, N. H.
Moore, Mrs. Mary A. E., Greenfield, O.
Moore, Nas. Mary A. E., Greenfield, O.
Moore, Rev. D. M., Greenfield, O.
Moore, Rev. D. M., Greenfield, O.
Moore, Rev. Humphrey, D. D., Milford, N. H.
Moore, Rev. Humphrey, D. D., Milford, N. H.
Moore, Rev. William H., Newtown, Conn.
Morgan, Porf. John, D. D, Oberlin, O.
Morgan, Rev. H. H., Hannibai, N. Y.
Morley, Mrs. Ann G., Williamstown, Mass.
Morrill, Benjamin W., Banger, Me.
Morse, Alel, East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, Rev. Alfred, Maumee City, O.
Morse, Mrs. Caroline B., Union City, Mich.
Morse, H. B., Natick, Mass.
Morse, Mrs. Lucy A., Dover, N. H.
Morse, Nathan E., East Woodstock, Conn.
Morse, O. D., Great Falls, N. H.
Morse, Varker, Sen., Metamora, Ill.
Morton, Martha, South Deerfield, Mass.
Morton, Orson E., South Deerfield, Mass.
Morton, Nathaniel, Stoughton, Mass.
Morton, Orson E., South Deerfield, Mass.
Mosoley, Augustus G., Union City, Mich.
Moseley, Coorge T., Union City, Mich.
Moseley, Col. Thomas, Union City, Mich.
Mowry, William H.
*Mowry, William H.
*Mowry, Mrs. Angelina G.
*Mudge, Samuel W., Rome, N. Y.
Murson, Juistus, Paris Hill, N. Y. Muttahai, Marquesan Islands. Muzzy, Nathan; Worcester, Mass.

Mussy, Nathan, Worcestev, Mass.
Nash, John B., South Hadley, Mass.
Neal, Thomas, Ripley, O.
Neal, Mrs. Saran, Ripley, O.
Neal, Mrs. Saran, Ripley, O.
Neal, Mrs. Saran, Ripley, O.
Nedham, Dwight, Galesburgh, Ill.
Nellis, Barnard, Ashtabula, O.
Nelson, Thomas L., Elyria, O.
Nelson, Thomas L., Elyria, O.
Nellicon, Reorge W., West Haven, Conn.
Nettleton, Mrs. Charlotte L., West Haven, Conn.
Nettleton, Lyman, Washington, Conn.
Nettleton, Lyman, Washington, Conn.
Nevla, Rev. Edward H.
Newell, Miss Mary B., Chilton, Wis.
Newton, D. F., New York.
Newton, Dea. Gaylord, Durham, Conn.
Nevton, Miss Martha, Albany, N. Y.
Newton, Otis, Westborough, Mass.
Nichols, Mrs. Mary Ann, Boston, Mass.
Nichols, Mrs. Mary Ann, Boston, Mass.
Nichols, Oney, Belvidere, Ill.
Norris, Mrs. Ellian M., Hyannis, Mass.
North, John H., Torringford, Conn.
North, Omri, New Britain, Conn.
Northup, A. T., Otego, N. Y.
Nowell, Mrs., Bangor, Me.
Noyes, Hiram N., Georgetown, Mass.
Noyes, Dea. Luke B., South Abington, Mass.
Ober. Mrs. Ann M., Honkinton, Mass.

Ober, Mrs. Ann M., Hopkinton, Mass.
Ober, Mrs. Ann M., Hopkinton, Mass.
Odlin, Woodbridge, Eactor, N. H
Officer, Rev. Morris, Springfield, O.
Olds, Rev. Abner D., Jefferson, O.
Olds, Mrs. Ann H., Jefferson, O.
Olds, Mrs. Ann H., Jefferson, O.
Olmsted, Mrs. Amella, Hartford, Conn.
Olmsted, Lynde, Hartford, Cenn.
Orcutt, Oran, North Abington, Mass.
Orvis, Rev. W. B., Middleport, O.
Osborne, James W., South Abington, Mass.
Osborn, Selden, Dover, O.
Ospood, Rev. Sp. D.D., Springfield, Mass.
Otis, Ephraim R., Greenville, Conn.
Otis, Mrs. Hannah, Kanons, N. Y.
Otis, James A., Kanona, N. Y.
Oughton, Mrs. Maria A. Spanishtown, Jamaica.
Owen, David, Newark, N. J.

Packard, Mrs. Elizabeth, Chatham Center, O Page, Rev. Benjamin S. J., North Haven, Conn.

Paine, Mrs. Charlotte M., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Mrs. Charlotte M., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, John A., M.D., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Mrs. John A., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, John A., Jr., Clinton, N. Y. Paine, Horace M., M.D., Clinton, N. Y. Faine, John A., Jr., Chiaton, N. Y.
Paine, Horace M., M.D., Clinton, N. Y.
Paine, Rev. Rodney, Honeoye, N. Y.
Paine, Mrs. Mary A. M., East Woodstock, Conn.
Faine, Samuel C., M.D., Oxford, Mass.
Paine, William W. Eransville, Wis.
Painter, Alexis, West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Alexis, West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Sydney, West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Henry W., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Henry W., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Thomas A., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Julia M., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Thomas A., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Thomas A., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Louis L., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Louis L., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Louis L., West Haven, Conn.
Painter, Coerge A., Greenwich, Conn.
Paimer, George A., Greenwich, Conn.
Paimer, Rev. Ray, D.D., Albany, N. Y.
Palmer, William B., Augusta, Mich.
Parker, Mrs. Catharine, Andover, Mass.
Parker, Elijah, Lockport, N. Y. Parker, Elijah, Lockport, N. Y. Parker, Mrs. Eliza R. Parker, I. B., Mitchell, Iowa. Parker, John, Grahville, O. — Parker, L. F., Grinnell, Iowa. Parker, Rev. Leonard S., Haverhill, Mass. Parker, Julius, New Britain, Conn. Parker, Loca, Reading, Mass. Parker, Rev. Lucius H., Galesburgh, Ill. Parker, Loea, Reading, Mass,
Parker, Rev. Lucius H., Galesburgh, Ill.
Parker, Mrs. Rhoda, Lockport, N. Y.
Parker, Rev. Wooster, Belfast, Me.
Parmele, Mrs. Anna, Clinton, N. Y.
Parmele, Curtis Stles, Clinton, N. Y.
Parmele, Curtis St., T., Clinton, N. Y.
Parmele, Curtis S. Jr., Clinton, N. Y.
Parsons, Alvin Beach, Delayan, Wis.
Parsons, Ghanneey, Dover, N. H.
Parsons, Helen, Gloversville, N. Y.
Parsons, Helen, Gloversville, N. Y.
Parsons, Rev. W. L., Mattapoisett, Mass.
Partridge, Captain Clark, Medway, Mass.
Partridge, John, Faxton, Mass.
Partridge, John, Faxton, Mass.
Partridge, John, Faxton, Mass.
Partridge, Seth, West Medway, Mass.
Patch, Timothy B., Marlborough, Mass.
Patchin, Rw. Elisabeth P., Lodi, Mich.
Patchin, Rev. John. Lodi, Mich.
Patchin, Rev. John. Lodi, Mich. Patchin, Str. Likacein F. Lott, Mich. Patchin, Rev. John. Lodi, Mich. Pattengill. Rev. John. Lodi, Mich. Pattengill. Rev. John. S., Waiton, N. Y. Patton, Caroline, Chicago, Ill. Patton, Chorace Bushnell, Chicago, Ill. Patton, Normand Smith, Chicago, Ill. Patton, Robert Weston, Chicago, Ill. Patton, William Ladlow, Chicago, Ill. Patton, William Ladlow, Chicago, Ill. Patton, Mrs. Mary B., Chicago, Ill. Patton, Mrs. Mary B., Chicago, Ill. Patton, Mrs. Mary B., Chicago, Ill. Paul, Mrs. Henry, Newton Center, Mass. Payne, Sarah, Quincy, Ill. Peabody, Humphrey, Milford, N. H. Pease, Rev. A. G., Norwich, Vt. Pease, Emery, Somers, Conn. Pease, Rev. Glies, Boston, Mass. Pesse, Hiram, Oberlin, O. Pease, Hiram, Oberlin, O. Pease, J. Byron, Paynesville, Min. Pease, Peter P., Oberlin, O. Peck, Abigail G., East Bloomfield, N. Y. Peck, Dea. Charles, Jewett, N. Y. Peck, Mrs. Esther M., Oberlin, O. Peck, Mrs. Esther M., Oberlin, O.
*Peck, Everard.
*Peck, Mrs. Marths Farley.
Peck, Mrs. Alice B., Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Rev. Henry E., Oberlin, O.
Peck, P. P., Sandusky City, O.
Peck, William Farley, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Edward Willard, Rochester, N. Y.
Peck, Lesse, Boston, Mass.
Peck, Mrs. Evellina H., Boston, Mass. Peck, Mrs. Evenna H., Boston, Mass. Peck, Watrous, West Bloomfield, N. Y. Peck, Jasper C., West Bloomfield, N. Y. Peck, Mrs. Mary F., West Bloomfield, N. Y. Peckham, Horace L, Harvard, Mass.

Peckham, Rev. Samuel H., Leominster, Mass.
Peckham, Mrs. Sarah C., Leominster, Mass.
Pect, Rev. Stephen D., New Leondon, Wis.
Pentled, Rev. Samuel, Como, III.
Perkins, Mrs. Charissa Ann, Paterson, N. J.
Perkins, Mrs. Charissa Ann, Paterson, N. Y.
*Perkins, Rev. George W.
Perkins, Rev. George W.
Perkins, Mrs. Mary E., North Brookfield, Mass.
Perkins, Mrs. William, Cincinnati, O.
Perkins, Mrs. William, Cincinnati, O.
Perry, Edwin A., Danvers, Mass.
Perry, James M., Danvers, Mass.
Pettingill, John A., Bunker Hill, III.
Pettengill, Moses, Peoria, III. rettengui, Moses, Feoria, III. Pettenguil, Mrs. Lucy, Peoria, III. Peterson, Washington, South Abington, Mass. Pettijohn, Rev. Lewis, Cedarville, O. Phelps, E. S., Princeton, III. Phelps, Res. Lucy T., Ellsworth, Me. Phelps, Rev. Wiathrop H., Monterey, Mass. Phillips, Charles, West Haven, Conn. Phillips, Mrs. Charles, West Haven, Conn. Phillips, Ebenezer, Williamsburgh, Mass. Phillips, Rev. John C., Methuen, Mass. Phillips, Mrs. Harriet W., Methuen, Mass. Phillips, Luther, Worcester, Mass.
Phillips, Dea. Rufus B., Fitzwilli im, N. H. Pickett, Rev. Asron, Sandisfield, Mass. Pierce, Mrs. Anna B., Amboy, Ill. Pierce, Rev. Charles H., Neponset, Ill. Perce, Ecckick, Casswille, N. Y.
Pierce, George, Norwich, Conn.
Pierce, Mrs. Moses, Norwich, Conn.
Pierce, Rev. Wilard, N. Abington, Mass.
Pitte, Cyrus, Moline, H.
Pitte, Mrs. Margaret B., Moline, H.
Pixley, Albert, Detroit, Mich.
Pixley, Ira, East Boomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, Ira, East Boomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, John H., East Bloomfield, N. Y.
Pixley, Janac C., Hickwille, Mich.
Pixley, Lebbeus M., Great Barrington, Mass.
Pixth, Daniel G., Washington, Conn.
Pixth, Rev. Henry D., Chesterfield, Ill.
Plumb, Edward B., Clay, Iowa.
Plumb, Mrs. Betsey, Clay, Iowa.
Plumb, Mrs. Caroline, Oberlin, O.
Plumb, Mrs. Caroline, Oberlin, O.
Plumb, Mrs. Caroline, Oberlin, O.
Plumer, Samuel, Georgetown, Mass. Pierce, Ezekiel, Cassville, N. Y. Plumer, Samuel, Georgetown, Mass. Poage, Rev. James S., Pa. Poage, Mrs. Susan L., Pa. Poage, Mrs. Susan L. Pa.
Pomeroy, Alanson, Strongaville, O.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Keziah, Strongaville, O.
Pomeroy, Ann E., Sunderland, Mass.
Pomeroy, Argalus, Southampton, Mass.
Pomeroy, David, South Amberst, Mass.
Pomeroy, Mrs. Martha, Warren, Mass.
Pomeroy, Thomas, Florence, Mass.
Pond, Burton, Torringford, Conn.
Pond, Lucy, Newark, N. J.
Pool, Lore, Generally, U. Pool, John, Granville, Ill.
Poor, William O., Belfast, Me.
Pope, Mrs. O pha C., Strongsville, O.
Pope, Philander, Strongsville, O.
Porter, Rev. Charles G., Bangor, Me. Porter, Rev. Unaries G., Daugor, a.c. Porter, Elizur, Danville, Iowa. Porter, Mrs. Maria M., Danville, Iowa. Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Camden, N. Y. Porter, Mrs. Hannah, Quincy, Mass. Porter, Mrs. Hannan, quincy, Mass. Porter, John, Dover, G. Porter, Miss Mary, Camden, N. Y. Porter, Rev. Samuel, Bradford, Pa. Porter, Samuel D., Rochester, N. Y. Potter, Ebenezer, Fitzwilliam, N. H. Potter, Mrs. Susannah, Fitzwilliam, N. H. Potter, Rev. John D , Central Village, Conn. Potter, Rev. John D., Central Village, Conn. Potter, Luther H., Plymouth Hollow, Conn. Powell, Rev. A. V. H., Middlefield, Conn. Powell, Mrs. N. B., Middlefield, Conn. Powers, Miss Chloc, West Cornwall, Vt. Pratt, Miss Betaey M. P., Dryden, N. Y. Pratt, Rev. Edward H., East Woodstock, Conn. Pratt, Mrs. L. S., Grafton, Mass. Pratt, Mrs. L. E., Grafton, Mass.

Pratt, Rev. Parsons S. Dorset, Vt.
Pratt, Samuel A., Worcester, Mass.
Pratt, Mrs. Sarah, Quincy, Mass.
Pratt, Dea. William, Quincy, Mass.
Prentice, Samuel, Greenville, Conn.
Prentics, Mrs. Sophia B., Greenville, Conn.
Prentiss, Hervey N., Windham, Vt.
Prentiss, Thomas, Waitefield, Vt.
Prescott, Dea. Thomas J., Ruperf, Vt.
Prescott, Thomas, Waitefield, Vt.
Preston, Mrs. Catherine, Pittsburg, Pa.
Priest, Rev. Josiah A., Homer, N. Y.
Prindle, Rev. Cytus, Leoni, Mish.
Prindle, Rev. Lytuan, Waitefield, Vt.
Putnam, Col. Josee, Danvers, Mass.
Putnam, Rev. John M., Dunbarton, N. H.
Putnam, Levi, Wilton, N. H.
Putnam, Rev. Wufus, A., Pembroke, N. H.

Ramsay, Charles, West Hartford, Conn. Ramsdell, Mrs. Elizabeth, Warren, Mass. Rand, Rev. Asa, Ashburnham, Mass. Rand, Rev. Asa, Ashburnham, Mass.
Rand, Rev. Asa, Ashburnham, Mass.
Rand, Isaac, Keehe, N. H.
Randall, William H., Albany, N. Yi
Rankin, Rev. A. L., Salem, Ill.
*Rankin, Rev. J. E., St. Albans, Vt.
Rankin, Rev. J. E., Willington, Vt.
Ranslow, Rev. George W., Milton, Vt.
Ranslow, Rev. George W., Milton, Vt.
Rapp, James, Utica, O.
Rapp, Mrs. Mary Ann, Utica, O.
Ray, Mrs. Jane H., Lenox, O.
Redding, Samuel F. Grafton, Mass.
Reed, Dario, Olivet, Mich.
Reed, Mrs. Sally M., Olivet, Mich.
Reed, Samuel, Sauth Abington, Mass.
Reed, Dea. Thomas, South Anherst, Mass.
Reed, Dea. Thomas, Stongsville, O. Reed, Thomas, Strongsville, G. Reed, Timothy, Waitsfield, Vt. Reeves, James H., Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Mrs. Cordella Ann, Newark, N. Y. Reeves, George Thompson, Newark, N. Y. Reeves, James D., Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Miss Martha C., Newark, N. Y Reeves, Mary E, Newark, N. Y. Reeves, Raymond M. P., Newark, N. Y. Reynolds, Rev. William T., Klantone, N. Y. Rice, Rev. Enos H., Jamesport, N. Y. Rice, Mary A., Kingston, Pa. Rice, James P., Kingston, Pa. *Rich, Rev. Ezekiel. Richards, Miss Elisabeth M., Albany, N. Y. Richards, Miss Elisabeth M., Albany, N. Y. Richards, Charlen, Bristol, Comt. Richards, Dea. Perin N., Sauderland, Mass. Richards, Ward, East Bridgewater, Mass. Richards, Ward, East Bridgewater, Mass. Richardson, Asa, Gardner, Mass. Richardson, Asa, Gardner, Mass. Richardson, Rev. A. M., Austinburg, O. Richardson, Daniel, Wodurn, Mass. Richardson, Daniel, Wodurn, Mass. Richardson, Elisha, Franklin, Mass. Richardson, Elisha, Franklin, Mass. Richardson, Miss. Heppibah, Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Mrs. Mary B., Medway, Mass. Richardson, Mrs. Mary E. D., Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Den. Stephen W., Medway, Mass. Richardson, Den. Stephen, Woburn, Mass. Richardson, Sally, Stoneham, Mass. Rider, Martin E. Richards, Miss Elizabeth M., Albany, N. T. Rider, Martin E. Rider, Samuel, East Bridgewater, Mass. Rider, Samuel, East Bridgewater, Mas Bitchie, Rev. Andrew, Greenfield, O. Ritter, Thomas, M.D., New-York City. Ritter, Delia M., New-York City. Ritter, Julia E., New-York City. Ritter, Isabella G., New-York City. Ritter, Maria, New-York City. Ritter, Anna, New-York City. Roberts, Rev. George.
Roberts, Nelson, Burrville, Conn.
Robertson, Miss Annie C., Paterson, N. J.
Robertson, Mrs Lemira J., Horicon, Wis.

Robbins, Rev. S. W., East Haddam, Conn. Robinson, Calvin, Willimantic, Conn. Robinson, Elw. Robinson, Elw. Robinson, Rev. Reuben T., Winchester, Mass. Robinson, Mrs. Clara C., Winchester, Mass. Robinson, Mrs. Clara C., Winchester, Mass. Robinson, Mrs. Sophia S., Brookline, Mass. Robinson, William A., North East, Pa. Rockwood, Charles, Natick, Mass. Rockwell, William A., North East, Pa. Rockwood, Charles, Natick, Mass. Rockwell, William A., Waterbury, Conn. Rodgers, Deacon Clayton T. Strongaville, O. Rogers, P. Amelis, Augusta, N. Y. Rockwell, Thomas B., Munsville, N. Y. Rogers, Decius. Rogers, P. Colus, Rogers, P. Colus, Rogers, Rev. Stephen, Wolcott, Conn. Rogers, William B., Southampton, Mass. Rollins, Mrs. S. B., Great Falls, N. H. Rood, Harvey L., Burville, Conn. Rot, Elsa, Homer, N. Y. Rot, Rev. James P., Walton, N. Y. Roto, Rev. James P., Walton, N. Y. Roto, Rev. James P., Walton, N. Y. Ropes, Rev. William L., Wrentham, Mass. Ross, John, Hartford, Conn. Rowe, Mrs. Prances, Stead, Neison, O. Rowe, Mrs. Phobe L., Stonebam, Mass. Roy, John, Lyndon, Ill. Roy, Rev. J. E., Chicago, Ill. Rudd, Rev. Robert, Knoxville, Ill. Rudo, Ros. Mrs. L. M., West Gilboa, N. Y. Russell, Mrs. Catey W., Perry Centre, N. Y. Russell, George W., Worcester, Mass. Rus, Eljah R., Oberlin, G.

Sabin, Dea. William G., Saxton's River, Vt. Sabine, William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y. Sabine, William, Onondaga Valley, N. Y. Sabine, Miss Era., Onondaga Valley, Vt. Saford, Mrs. Charlotte, Gambridge, Vt. Saford, Mrs. Charlotte, Gambridge, Vt. Saford, Mrs. Aura B., Cambridge, Vt. Saford, Myron W., Cornersville, Tenn. Saford, Myron W., Cornersville, Tenn. Salbeury, Alexander, Ripley, O. Sallsbury, Alexander, Ripley, O. Sallsbury, Alexander, Ripley, O. Sallsbury, Alexander, Ripley, O. Sallsbury, Alexander, Ripley, O. Sanderson, Mrs. Risa., Galesburgh, III. Sands, Rev. W. D. Warverley, III. Sandord, Rev. W. D. Warverley, III. Sanford, Rev. David, Medway, Mass. Sanford, Rev. W. H. Baylston, Mass. Sanford, Rev. W. H. Baylston, Mass. Sargent, Senjamin H., Providence, III. Savage, Elias, Danvers, Mass. Savage, Wm. J., Champisin, N. Y. Sawin, Dea. J. D., Gardner, Mass. Savager, Rev. John. Sawyer, Rev. Lutus M., Winthrop, Me. Saxton, Nelson, Vergennes, Vt. Schennerhorn, Mrs. Maria, Brunswick, N. Y. Schennerhorn, Mrs. Miss., Carantville, Mass. Scaleld, Adeia C., Clarkson, N. Y. Schennerhorn, Mrs. Maria, Brunswick, N. Schen, Schen, Mrs. Maria, H., Charlotte, Vt. Schen, Mrs. Maria, H., Charlotte, Vt. Schen, Mrs. Mrs. H., Charlotte, Vt. Schen, Mrs. Mrs. H., Charlotte, Vt. Schen, Schen, J. Schen, J. Schen, J. Sc

Seward, Rev. E. D., Lake Mills, Wis. Seymour, Sarah H., Seneca Falls, N. Y. Shafer, Rev. Archibald S., Gaines, N. Y. Shafer, Mrs. Elmira, Gaines, N. Y. Shafer, William R., Townsend, Vt. Sharp, Rev. Andrew, Collamer, O. Sharp, Rev. Andrew, Collamer, O. Shatuck, Rev. C. S., Union Village, N. Y. Shaw, Ebenezer, North Abington, Mass. Shaw, Josiah, North Abington, Mass. Shaw, Josiah, North Abington, Mass. Sheen, William G., Quincy, Mass. Shedd, Mrs. Susan F., Boston, Mass. Sheldon, Mrs. Harriet H., Westborough, Mass. Sheldon, Rev. Luther W., Townsend, Mass. Sheldon, Warren, Danvers, Mass. Sheldon, Dr. William F., West Bl-omfield, N. Y. Shepard, Rev. Prof. George, Bangor, Me. Shepherd, Rev. Isaao N., Marion, G. Shepherd, John B., Delayan, Wis. Shepherd, John B., Delayan, Wis. Sheppard, Charles G., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, Mrs. Jane B., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, Miss Jane, Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, John S., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, Morris F., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sheppard, Morris F., Penn Yan, N. Y. Sherman, Asahel, Wayland, M. Ss. Sherman, Ira, Bridgeport, Conn. Shipherd, Mrs. Elizabeth, Cleveland, O. Shipherd, Rev. Fayette, Oberlin, O. Shipherd, Mrs. Catherine, Mrs. Catherine, Mrs. Catherine, Mrs. Catherine, Mrs. Cat Shipherd, Mrs. Catharine, Oberlin, O. Shipherd, Miss Catharine E., Oberlin O.
Shipherd, Jacob R., Watertown, N. Y.
Shipherd, Jacio B., Watertown, N. Y.
Shipherd, Mary E., Oberlin, O.
Shipherd, Mary E., Oberlin, O.
Short, N. H., Bergen, N. Y.
Shumway, Loriston, Oxford, Msss.
Sibley, Darius Boyden, Milibury, Mass.
Sibley, Darius Boyden, Milibury, Mass.
Sibles, George E., Wankesha, Wla.
Sill, Dea. Enoch, Moreau, N. Y.
Simmons, Mrs. Rev. C., N. Wrentham, Mass.
Skelton, Mrs. Almira, Woburn, Mass.
Skelton, Mrs. Almira, Woburn, Mass.
Skerry, Mrs. Mary T., North Brookfield, Mass.
Skinner, Jason, Harwia on, Conn. Shipherd, Miss Catharine E., Oberlin O. Skinner, Jason, Harwin on, Conn.
Skinde, Hon, William.
Slade, Hon, William.
Slade, Hon, William.
Slade, Hon, William.
Slade, Hon, William.
Smalley, Rev. Elam, D. D.
Smalley, George R., Quiney, Mass.
Smalr, Rev. James P., Xenia, O.
Smalth, Miss Agnes F., Andover, Mass.
Smith, Rev. Edward P., Pepperell. Mass.
Smith, Rev. Ellis Jane, Spring Garden, Ill.
Smith, Ann Ellis Brainard, St. Albans, VE.
Smith, Rev. Ellphalet Y., South Hadley, Mass.
Smith, Benjamin, Unionville, O.
Smith, Beny, Carlos, Tallinadge, O.
Smith, Rev. Carlos, Tallinadge, O.
Smith, Rev. Carlos, Tallinadge, O.
Smith, Charles T., Delsvan, Wis.
Smith, Charles T., Delsvan, Wis.
Smith, Rev. Prof. D. Tellott, Bangor, Me.
Smith, Leward, Syracusev, N, Y. Sunth, Rev. Prof. D. Telloott, Bangor, Mc. Smith, Edward, Syracusev, N. Y. Smith, Erwin S., Mason Village, N. H. Smith, Mrs. Maria E., Mason Village, N. H. Smith, George, Andover, Mass. Smith, Hon. Gerrit, Petr-brorough, N. Y. Smith, G. Morgan, So. Hadley, Mass. Smith, Miss Helen G., Andover, Mass. Smith, Hes. Hervey, West Hampton, Mass. Smith, Hram, Worcester, Mass. Smith, Hram, Worcester, Mass. Smith, Hram, Worcester, Mass. Smith, Hram M., Oberlin, O.
Smith, Den, James, Andover, Mass,
Smith, Jefferson, Prattsburgh, N. Y.
Smith, Josse, Gloversville, N. Y.
Smith, John, Andover, Mass,
Smith, Bev, Joseph, Lovell, Me.
Smith, Bev, Joseph, Lovell, Me.
Smith, Rev, Joseph, Lovell, Me.
Smith, Mrs, Lucias, New Philadelphia, O.
Smith, Lyman Montague, East Hampton, Mass,
Smith, Mary Ann, Gloversville, N. Y.
Smith, Mary Ca, Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Lyman Montague, East Hampton, Mass,
Smith, Mary Ca, Stanwich, Conn.
Smith, Rev. Moses, Andover, Mass,
Smith, Orange, Middletown, N. Y.
Smith, Bull, H., Java, N. Y.
Smith, Samuel, Mansfield, O.
Smith, Mass Sarah, Stanwich, Conn. Smith, Miss Sarah, Stanwich, Conn. Smith, Mrs. S., Painted Post, N. Y.

Smith, Stephen, Mason Village, N. H.
Smith, Willis, New Haven, Conn.
Smith, Mrs. Willis, New Haven, Conn.
Snow, A. J., Medway, Mass.
Snow, Rev. Porter H., Whately, Mass.
Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brookfield, Mass.
Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brookfield, Mass.
Snow, Mrs. Deborah M., North Brookfield, Mass. Snow, Sandor, Mac, Masa.
Solander, Choney, Brimfield, Masa.
Solander, Eliza Ann, Brimfield, Masa.
Solander, Eliza Ann, Brimfield, Masa.
Soule, Dea, James, South Abington, Mass.
Soule, Dea, John, East Bridgewater, Masa.
Soule, Rev. J. B. L., Raymond, Wisconsin.
Soule, Mrs. Carrie, Raymond, Wisc.
Souther, Rev. Samuel, Worcester, Mass.
Southworth, Mrs. Augusta L., Mount Vernon, N. H.
Southworth, Mrs. P., Mount Vernon, N. H.
Southworth, Chester B., Mount Vernon, N. H.
Southworth, Chester B., Mount Vernon, N. H.
Southworth, Francis, Holden, Me.
Southworth, Francis, Holden, Me.
Southworth, Mrs. P., Wethernfield, Conn.
Sparks, Mrs. Elizabeth, South Onondaga, N. Y.
Spaulding, Harriet N., Towneend, Mass.
Spaulding, Leonard, M. D., Milbury, Mass.
Spaulding, Bev. Samuel Jr, Newburyport, Mass.
Spaes, Francis. Snow Spencer Spees, Francis.
Spencer, David B., Ojibue Mission.
*Spencer, Rev. Levi.
Spooner, Albert, Oakham, Mass. Spooner, Dea Andrew, Oakham, Mass. Spooner, Benjamin T., North East, Penn. Spragge, Mrs. C. M., Vermontville, Mich. Sprague, Lee, Worcester, Mass. Spring, Elkanah, Brimfield, Mass. Spring, Luther, New York, N. Y. Stackpole, Joseph, Chicopee, Mass. Stacy, Mrs. Eliza, Concord, Mass. Standish, Thomas F., Lisbon, Conn. Standish, Thomas F., Lisbon, Conn. Stanley, Augustus, New Britain, Conn. Stanley, H. P. Cinton, Iowa. Stanley, Ir. Jr. New Britain, Conn. Stanley, James, New Britain, Conn. Stanley, Noah W., New Britain, Conn. Stanley, Noah W., New Britain, Conn. Stanton, Mrs. Sarah. West Dennis, Mass. Stanton, Mrs. Sarah, West Dennis, Mass, Starks, Amanda, Chateaugay, N. Y. Stead, Rev. Benjamin F., Astoria, N. Y. Steara, G. H., Flichburg, Mess. Steerns, Hannah L., Charlestown, Mass. Stebbins, Mrs. D. S., West Brookfield, Mass Stebbins, Henry W., Strongsville, O. Stebbins, Mrs. Gratia, Strongsville, O. Stebbins, Mrs. Gratia, Strongsville, O. Stebbins, Moses, So. Deerfield, Mass. Stebl., James, Chillicothe, O. Stebbins, Mrs. Gratia, Brooker, St. Stebbins, Mrs. G. Chillicothe, O. Stebbins, Mrs. G. Steel, James G., Chillimothe, O. Steel, James G., Chillicothe, O.
Steel, James C., South Salem, O.
Steel, Mrs. Jane, t. Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Mrs. Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Thomas H., Elizabethown, N. J.
Steel, Hebecca Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Hebecca Jane, Chillicothe, O.
Steel, Thomas H., Elizabethown, N. J.
Steel, Mrs. Rachel, Bloomingburg, O.
Steele, Rev. George M., Warren, Mass.
Steeling, Sylvanus, Bridgeport, Conn.
Sterry, Rev. De Witt Clinton, Lake City, Min.
Stetson, Miss Elizabeth B., Marlborouch, Mass
Stetson, Dea Jacob, South Amberst Mass. Stetson, Des. Jacob, South Amberst Mass. Stetson, Des. Jotham, Medford, Mass. Stetson, William, Marlborough, Mass. Stetson, William, Jr., Marlborough, Mass. Stevens, Rev. Asahel A., Peoria, Ill. Stevens, Miss Philenia, Stoneham, Mass. Stewart, Mrs. Harriet, Hoyleton, Ill. Stowart, Mrs. Jane, Bloonlingburgh, O. Stowart, Co. James, Bloomlingburgh, O. Stewart, Rev. Robert E., Bellbrook, O. Stillman, George, Wethersfield, Conn. Stillman, Levi, Wethersfield, Conn. Stilmon, Levi, Wethersfield, Conn. Stilmon, Rev. George, W., Forestville, Iowa. Studiard, Josiah. Hanover, Mass. Stondard, Josiah. Hanover, Mass. Stone, Benj. F., Harvard, Mass. Stone, Beng. N., Harvard, Mass. Stone, Rev. James P., Greenshort, Vt. Stone, Hon. Washington, Oakham, M. ss. Stone, Rev. W. B., West Brookfield, Mass. Storrs, Rev. R. S., D.D. Brooklyn, N. Y. Stowell, Rev. Abijah, Thomaston, Ma. Stewart, Mrs. Jane, Bloomingburgh, O.

Stránahan, Mrs. Anna, Litchfield, O. Street, Rev. Owen, Lowell, Mass, Streeter, Rev. S. W., Westerville, O. Strieby, Rev. Mighael E., Syraense, N. Y. Strong, Bullen F., Syraense, N. Y. Strong, Deas. Abner, Bellevne, O. Strong, Butler N., Xenia, O. Strong, Daniel, Wethersheld, Conn. Strong, Mrs. Elizabeth E., Edinburgh, O. Strong, Mrs. Elizabeth E., Edinburgh, O. Strong, Mrs. Elizabeth E., Edinburgh, O. Strong, Mrs. Strongh, New Joseph, Sturges, Maria S., Washington, Iowa. Strunges, Mrs. Mrs. Mary M., Mansfield, O. Sturges, Rev. A. A., Micronesia.
Sming, Rev. Warten, Horner, O. Syks, Mrs. O. W. T., East Berkshtre, Vt. Syrmes, William, Great Falls, N. H.

Taft, Ira, Kingaville, O.
Taft, Lewis, Ft zwiiliam, N. H.
Talcott, Mra. Betsey, North East, Penn.
Talcott, Edwin, North Coventry, Conn.
Talcott, Henry, West Hartford, Conn.
Tanner, Elmund P., Canfield, O.
Tapley, Mrs. Eliza, Danvers, Mass. Tapley, Co. Nathan, Danvers, Mass.
Tapley, Co. Nathan, Danvers, Mass.
Tappan, Mr. Sarah J., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Taylor, John Chelses, Mass.
Taylor, Mrs. Hannah T., Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Mrs. Luctida B., Francistown, N. H.
Taylor, Rev. Luttrop, Bloomington, Ill.
Taylor, Nathan, Pittsfield, O.
Taylor, Johan, Harvard, Mass. Taylor, Zophar, Harvard, Mass.
Taylor, Mrs. O. W., Marlborough, Mass.
*Teff, Rev. J. Cutler.
Terry, Mrs. Electa, Plymouth, Ill.
Terry, Mrs. Harflet, Terrysville, Conn.
Terry, Rev. Jamss P., South Aleymouth, Mass.
Terry, Rev. Parshall, Thompson, O.
Thalhimer, Heary B., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Thatcher, George A., Bangor, Mo.
Thomas, Rev. O. A., Middietown, Wis.
Thomas, Rev. O. A., Middietown, Wis.
Thomas, Rev. O. A., Middietown, Wis. Thome, Rev. James A., Ohio City, O. Thome, Mrs. Ann A., Ohio City, O. Thompson, Adna, Ransom Center, Mich. Thompson, Arba U., Swainsville, N. Y. Thompson, Rev. Aar on Manchester, O. Thompson, Charity, Jersey, O. Thompson, Rev. Elizabeth, Southbore', Mass. Thompson, Mrs. Elizabeth, Sourthboro', Mass.
Thompson, Rev. George, Oberlin, O.
Thompson, Mrs. Martha C., Oherlin, O.
Thompson, Rev. J. C., Washington, Pa.
Thompson, Rev. J. Churit, N. Y.
Thompson, Rev. John Wilmut, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Rev. La under, West Amesbury, Mass.
Thompson, Mrs. Anna A., West Amesbury, Mass.
Thompson, Lewis, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Lawis, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Lawis, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Lawis, Constantia, O.
Thompson, Lawis, Constantia, O. Thompson, Luther G., Farmington, Conn, Thompson, Rev. Loren, Januales Mission. Thompson, Mrs. Placbe T., Middleffield, O. Thompson, Theofore T., Kaox Corners, N. Y. Thompson, William, Jersey, O. Thorp, Cuttle, Blughamton, N. Y. Thrall, Rev. Samuel R., Tremont, Ill. Thrasher, Mary Ann, Stafford, Conn. Thurston, Brown, Portland, Ms. Thurston, Levi S. West Brookfald Mes. Thurston, Brown, Pyrtland, Me.
Thurston, Lev! S., West Brookfield, Mass.
Thurston, Rev David, Litchfield Corners, Me.
Thurston, M. S. Prudence, Brown's Corner, Me.
Thurston, Kev. Stephen, Sear-port, Me.
Titcomb, John, Farmington, Me.
Tobin, John, Newark, N. J.
Todd, Gav, David, Buda, III.
Todd, James, Quindiro, Kansas,
Todd, Rev. John, Gaston, Iowa.
*Todd, Dava Samuel. *Todd, Dea Samuel. *Todd, Des. Samuel.
Todd, Mrs. Martha A., Gaaton, Iowa.
Todd, Rev. William, Fort Riley, Ksnass.
Tolman, Wrs. Join, Dorchester, Mass.
Tolman, Wm. C., Hanuver, Mass.
Tomblen, Lucius, West Brookfield, Mass.
Tompkins, John B., Parls Hill, N. Y.

Toops, Rebecca A., O., Torrey, Rev. Charles W., East Cleveland, O., Torrey, Rev. David, Delhi, N. Y., Torrey, Miss Elizabeth L., Weymonth, Mass, Torrey, Mrs. Mehishele, Chatham Center, O. Torrey, Zibs, Ablington, Mass.
Torrey, Mrs. Ziba, Ablington, Mass.
Townsend, Rev. Ebenezer G., Elbridge, N. Y. *Tracy, Jossan.
Trask, Rev. George, Pitolburgh, Mass.
Trask, Israel, Beverly, Mass.
Trucker, Rev. Joshus T., Holliston, Mass.
Trucker, Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass.
Tucker, Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass.
Tucker, Lyman, North Brookfield, Mass.
Turner, Rev. Joshus T., Holliston, Mass.
Turner, Rev. Edwin B., Mor is, Ill.
Turner, Capt. Gurdon, Bridgewater, N. Y.
Turner, Rev. Joshus T., West Meriden, Conn.
Tutte, Mrs. Betsey II. West Meriden, Conn.
Tutte, Miss Harriet W., West Meriden, Conn.
Tutte, Lyman, Camden, N. Y.
Tattle, Tomas, Clinton Corners, Wis.
Twing, Philander F., Tolland, Mass.
Tyler, Caleb G., Georgetown, Msss.
Tyler, Rev. Charles M., Nattek, Mass.

Inderwood, Rev. Almon, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Mrs. Bitzabeth S., Newark, N. J.
Underwood, H. Beman, Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Henrietta P., Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Huita S., Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Ruita S., Newark, N. J.
Underwood, Bus, Sydney, Harwich, Mass.
Upham, Dea, Joel W., Worcester, Mass.
Upham, Dea, Joel W., Worcester, Mass.
Upham, Zenas H., Windham, Vt.
Upoon, Dea, Lent M., Camden, N. Y.
Upoon, Miss Surah Ann. Oberlin, O.
Ustick, William A., Bloomingburgh, O.

Van Alstine, Rav. N., West Sand Lake, N. Y. Vandike, Rev. S. A., Winchester, O. Van Dern, Freiberfer, Roch ster, N. Y. Van Honten, Rev. Henry, Hawley, Penn. Van Valkenburg, Mrs. Lydis, South Egremont Mass. Van Valkenburgh, Mrs. Mary E., Malden Bridge, N. Y. Van Wager, Rev. James M., Wakeman, O. Van Wagner, Mrs. Harriet N., Wakeman, O. Van Wagner, Mrs. Harriet N., Wakeman, O.

Van Wagner, Rev. James M., Wakeman, O. Van Wagner, Mrs. Harriet N., Wakenan, O. Van Wagner, Mrs. Harriet N., Wakenan, O. Vanding, Rev. Chavles B., Jamslea Misslon. Viali, Mrs. Elizabeth F., Delavan, III, Viola Heinry, Oberli, C., Uaurheis, Mrs. L. W., Vassar, Mich. Vosc, Peter E., Dennyville, Me.

Wade, Nicholas K, Pittsburgh, Penn, Wales, Eev. H. H., Winfield, N. Y. Wakefield, Rev. William, Harmer, O. Wakeman, Rev. Joel, Almond, N. Y. Wakeman, Rev. Joel, Almond, N. Y. Wallace, Rev. James, Huntsville, O. Wales, Samuel, Sen., Wind am, O. Waldo, Rev. L. F., Buda, Ill. Waldo, Mrs. Lucy E., Buda, Ill. Waldo, Mrs. Lucy E., Buda, Ill. Walker, Hon. Amass, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Rev. Cathachen, Mansfield, O. Walker, Freeman, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, John S., Roekville, Mass. Walker, Freeman, North Brookfield, Mass. Walker, Few. James B, Sandusky Olty, O. Walker, Mrs. R. H., Sandusky Olty, O. Walker, Mrs. R. H., Sandusky Olty, O. Walker, Mrs. R. H., Sandusky Olty, O. Walker, Nan. Biomfield, Me. Wallace, Mrs. Sally F., Francistown, N. H. & Walf, M. Wallace, Mrs. Sally F., Francistown, N. H. & Ward, Rov. Horatio G. Ward, Rev. Horatio G. Ward, Rev. Jonathan, Birmingham, O. Ward, Rev. Josath J., Knowlesville, N. Y. Ward, Langdon Storer, Boston, Mass.

Ward, Milo Woodruff, Geneseo, Ill. ward, Milo woodrun, Geneseo, Ill.
Ward, Rev. Samuel R.
Warner, Churles A., Chicago, Ill.
Warner, Evander S., Chicago, Ill.
Warner, Jane M., Hadley, So. Egremont, Mass.
Warner, Julia A., Chicago, Ill.
Warner, Sheldon, Pitcher, N. Y. Warner, Mrs. Luey C., Pitcher, N. Y.
Warner, Mrs. Luey C., Pitcher, N. Y.
Warner, Rev. H. G., Jerleho, Ill.
Warner, Seth, East Hampton, Mass.
Warreo, Mrs. Almira, Grafton, Mass.
Warreo, Mrs. Horatio, Westborough, Mass.
Warren, Rev. Israel P., Plymouth Hollow, Conn.
Warren, Rev. Waters, Three Oaks, Mich.
Washburn, Dea. Ichabod, Worcester, Mass. Washburn, Dea. Ichabod, Worcester, Mass Waterbury, Lewis, Polo, Ill. Waterman, Mrs. Almeda, Annaville, N. Y. Waterman, Daniel, Taberg, N. Y. Waters, Rev. John, Galesburgh, Ill. Waters, Rry. Waithy, Galesburgh, Ill. Waters, Lucy Burbank, Millbury, Mass. Waters, Charles Millbury, Mass. Waters, Tyler, Millbury, Mass. Watson, Mrs. Elizabeth H., Woburn, Mass. Watson, Harvey, Torringford, Conn. Watson, Milo, Harwinton, Conn. Watson, Milo, Harwinton, Conn.
Way, Miss Caroline L., West Meriden, Conn.
Way, Rev. Palmer M., Kirkwood, N. Y.
Way, Mrs. A. Amelia, Kirkwood, N. Y.
Weaver, Philip, Bangor, Me.
Webb, Walter, West Meriden, Conn.
Webb, Rev. W. D., Henry, Ill.
Weber, Lawrence, Springville, N. Y.
Webster, Rev. J. C., Hopkinton, Mass.
Webster, Rev. J. C., Hopkinton, Mass. Webster, Mrs. Susan A., North Brookfield, Mass. Webster, Miss Susan S., Freeport, Mass. Webster, William, Sennet, N. Y. Weed, Ebenezer, Darien, Conn. Wellington, Rev. H., St. Johnsbury Center, Vt. Wellington, Mrs. H. L., St. Johnsbury Center, Vt. Wells, Dea. Daniel, Bloomfield, Mc. *Wells, Rev. Elias. Wells, Mrs. Mary S., Mansfield, O. Wells, Mrs. Mary S., Mansheld, O.
Wells, Susannah, Gloversville, N. Y.
Welsh, Mrs. Mary, Strongsville, O.
Welsh, Rev. Rawson, B., Oswego, N. Y.
Werf, Rev. David, Allegan, Mich.
West, Rev. J. W., Georgetown, O.
West, Mrs. Phebe M. L., Georgetown, O. West, Jesse, Tabor, Iowa. West, Mrs. Sarah Ann, Decatur, O. West, William, Collamer, O. Wheeler, Elanson H., Charlotte, Vt. Wheeler, Lanson H., Charlotte, Yt.
Wheeler, Charles, Mexico, N. Y.
Wheeler, Eric C., Milford, N. H.
Wheelock. Mrs. L. P., Cambridge, Vt.
Wheelock, Rev. Rufus A., Champion, N. Y.
Whipple, Mrs. Elizabeth R., Branswick, O. Whipple, Rev. George, Jersey City, N. J. Whipple, Rev. Henry E., Hillsdale, Mich. Whipple, Rev. J. N., Brunswick, O. Whipple, Samuel L., Jacksonville, Ill. Whipple, Samuel L., Jacksonville, Ill. Whitcomb, Mrs. Harriet L., Stoneham, Mass. Whitcomb, Reuben, Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Reuben, Jr., Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Mrs. Mercy, Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Mrs. Abby F, Harvard, Mass. Whitcomb, Rev. W. C., Stoneham, Mass. Whitcomb, Rev. W. C., Stoneham, Mass. White Mrs. Betsey. West. Whiteomb, Rev. W. O., Stoneham, Mass. White, Mrs. Betsey, Woburn, Mass. White, Charles, Worcester, Mass. White, Charles S., Woburn, Mass. White, George H., Shelburne Falls, Mass. White, Rev. Isaac C., North Abington, Mass, White, Rev. James C. (Ceveland, O. White, Rev. James C. Cleveland, O. White, Bea. John, Acton, Mass. White, Rev. John, Mendi Mission, Africa. White, Rev. Orrin W., Strongsville, O. White, Mrs. Paulina L., Strongsville, O. White, Samuel C., New York, N. Y. White, Thomas A., Bangor, Me.
White, Thomas A., Bangor, Me.
White, William Augustus, New Road, N. Y.
Whitford, Mrs. Bethiah, Woburn, Mass.
Whitford, Hiram, Woburn, Mass.
Whitham, Mrs. Elizabeth, West Alexander, Pa.

Whitham, George D., West Alexander, Pa Whitham, Rev. Joseph R., West Alexander, Pa. Whitham, Rev. J. D., Holmesville, O. Whitmore, Mrs. Cynthia A., Chester Factories,

Mass.

Whitmore, Rev. Zolya, Chester Factories, Mass.
Whiting, Daniel N., Brookfield, Mass.
Whitney, Abjeatl G., Strongsville, O.
Whitney, Frederic, Westminster, Mass.
Whitney, Harrison G., Westminster, Mass.
Whitney, James D., Sandusky City, O.
Whitney, Dea. Jubil, Strongsville, O.
Whiton, Chauncey, Westford, Conn.
Whiton, Mars. Mary Elizabeth, Boston, Mass.
Whiton, James Morrie, Jr., Boston, Mass.
Whiton, James Morrie, Jr., Boston, Mass.
Whiton, James M. *Whiton, James M. Wieting, Rev. Philip, Hyndesville, N. Y. Wieting, Mrs. Philip, Hynnesville, N. Y. Wilcox, Elias, Bakersville, Conn. Wilcox, Elias, Bakersville, Conn.
Wilcox, Joel, Cold Spring, Mass.
Wilcox, Mrs. M. M., Fulton, N. Y.
Wilcox, Melissa R., Erie, Pa.
Wilcox, Rev. Philo B., East Bridgewater, Mass.
Wilcox, William J., Cincinnati, O.
Wilder, Lucinda E., Hanover, Mass.
Wilder, Miss Lydia G., Gardner, Mass.
Wilder, Rev. M. Hale, Saltin, Mass. Wilder, Rev. M. Hale, Salem, Mass.
Willard, Clerence, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Rev. Henry, Zombrota, Minnesota,
Willard, Hon, John D., Troy, N. Y.
Willard, Mrs. Laura, Troy, N. Y.
Willard, John P., Wethersfield, Ill.
Willcox, Rev. Wm., H. Reading, Mass.
Williams, Albert E, Harlado, N. Y.
Williams, Austin F., Farmington, Com.,
Williams, Pheneger, South Ausbert, Mess. williams, Austin F., Farmington, Conn., Williams, Ebenezer, South Amberst, Mass. Williams, Ellen, East Hartford, Corn. Williams, Ellen, Williams, Ellen, Williams, Elsha, Williams, Enos D., South Amberst, Mass. Williams, Mrs. Harriet W., Portland, Oregon. Williams, Miss Jeannette C., Farmington, Conn. Williams, Anna Marla, Farmington, Conn. Williams, Anna Marla, Farmington, Conn. Williams, Miss Catharine D., Farmington, Conn. Williams, George Austin, East Hartford, Conn. Williams, George, Springville, N. Y. Williams, Rev. J. M., Farmington, Ill. Williams, Owen Jones, Cambria Mills, Wis. Williams, Rev. Wolcott B., Charlotte, Mich. Williams, Michael, West Bloomfield, N. Y. Williston, Mrs. Cecilia, Northampton, Mass. Wills ton, Mrs. Cecilia, Northampton, Mass. Wills, Mrs. Charlotte L., Washington, Pa. Wilson, Alexander, Francistown, N. H. Wilson, Elias A., Francistown, N. H. Wilson, Dias A., Francistown, N. H. Wilson, Dea. Francis, South Hadley Falls, Mass. Wilson, Rev. Hiram, St. Catherine, C. W. Wilson, James, Wakeman, O. Wilson, John, Knowlesville, N. Y. Wilson, Mrs. J. Adeline, Ironton, O. Wilson, Mrs. J. Adeline, Fronton, O. Wilson, Levi B., Youngstown, O. Wilson, Martin, Kalamazoo, Mich. Wilson, Dea. Samuel, Harwinton, Conn. Wilson, Rev. Samuel, D.D., Xenia, O. Wilson, James, Francistown, N. H. Wilson, Rev. J. G. Wilson, Mrs. Mary B. Wilson, John, Dover, O. Wilson, John, Dover, O. Wilson, Kobert, McKay, O. Wilson, Rev. Robert W., Bloomingburg, O. Wilson, Samuel, Danvers, Mass. Wilsole, Abraham, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Winchester, Melana T., Austinburg, O. Winn, Francis, Grafton, Mass. Winslow, Rev. Horace, Great Barrington, Mass. Winter, Laura E., Shutesbury, Mass. Winter, Laura E., Snucesbury, Mass. Wiswell, Rev. Luther, Windham, Me. Witherby, Rufus L., Grafton, M*ss. Witherby, Dea Thomas H., Millbury, Mass. Withington, Mrs. Harriet S., Brookline, Mass. Withington, Mrs. Harriet S., Brookline, Mass Witter, Rev. Dexter, Beaton, O. Witter, Dea, John, Lisbon, Conn. Wolcott, Joseph H., Farmington, O. Wolcott, Rev. Samuel, Chicago, Ili-Wolcott, Rev. Seth T., Jamaica Mission. Wolcott, Mrs. Mary J. C., Jamaica Mission.

Wood, Dea. Aaron, Westminster, Mass. Wood, Rev. Abel, Meriden, N. H. Wood, Abijah, Westborough, Mass. Wood, Mrs. Hannah, Westborough, Mass. Wood, Mrs. Hannah, Westborough, Mass. Wood, Mrs. Ann, Quincy, Il. Wood, Peraklin, Monsteello, Min. Wood, Franklin, Monsteello, Min. Wood, Franklin, Monsteello, Min. Wood, Sames B., Westminster, Mass. Wood, Franklin, Monssend, V. Wood, West John, Dawnsend, V. Wood, Wood, P. Westborn, P. Parklin, W. Y. Wood, Warren C., Brasher Falls, N. Y. Wood, William W., Brasher Falls, N. Y. Wood, William W., Brasher Falls, N. Y. Wooddruf, Clinton, Kilbourn City, Wils. Woodruf, Edward Payson, Strykersville, N. Y. Woodward, Josiah Legz, Millbury, Mass. Woodward, Josiah Legz, Millbury, Mass. Woodward, Josiah Legz, Millbury, Mass. Woodward, Mrs. Mary, Cazenovis, N. Y. Woodwarth, Rev. J. B. Westford, V. Woodward, Josiah Legz, Millbury, Mass. Woodward, Mrs. Mary, Cazenovis, N. Y. Woodwarth, Rev. W. W., Mansfield, O. Worcester, Leonard, Lowell, Mass.

Work, Alanson, Hartford, Conn.
Worth, Rev. Daniel, New Salem, N. C.
Wright, Mrs. Ann W., Westheld, Pa.
Wright, Rev. Charles, Rockton, Ill.
Wright, Rev. Edward, West Haven, Conn.
Wright, Ins. F. P., Waint Hills, O.
Wright, Ira B., South Hadley, Mass.
Wright, John M., Canton, Ill.
Wright, Passer, S. G., Gaiva, Ill.
Wright, Rev. S. G., Gaiva, Ill.
Wright, Wait, Homer, O.
Wright, William R., North Brookfield, Mass.
Wright, William R., North Brookfield, Mass.
Wright, William W., Oberlin, O.
Wyatt, Mrs. Hannab E., Dover, N. H.
Wylle, Rev. Samuel, Sparts, Ill.
*Wylle, Rev. Samuel, Sparts, Ill.

Yale, Dea. Wm., Charlotte, Vt., Young, George L., Chelsea, Mass., Young, Mrs. L. L., Vinton, Iowa. Zug, Ephraim, Mechaniceburg, Pa., Zug, Samuel, Detroit, Mich.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT

F THE

American Missionary Association,

AND THE

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING,

HELD A

SYRACUSE, N. Y., OCTOBER 10 and 11, 1860,

TOGETHER WITH A

List of Life Members.

NEW-YORK:

PUBLISHED BY THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.
Office, 48 Beekman Street.

1860.

American Missionary Association.

Tide Members.

in the state of th

A Company of the Comp

JOHN A. GRAY,
PRINTER, STEREOTYPER, AND BINDER.
Corner of Frankfort and Jacob Streets.
FIRE-PROOF BUILDINGS.

And seed came and S T T W M porter is given upda too ab borrow and in earth. The seedence, and reach all nations bupilsing them in the manus of the Pather, and of the Son, and of the Holy Whole: beneath, shound to beserve

The Association met at 74 o'clock R.M. The descripted evertises were conducted by Ray, Mr. (iven, of the Sandwick Minister, Mr. Hey. Mr. Hey. The Ray, Problems, Mr. Hey. O'criffe, Ohio, preached the Annual Sermon, from the text as level in Matthew 28: 18-20.

or the case of the self-the control of the control

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING.

devotional exercity theres, the Mass raking the level of the menting. At the clock the Product teck the whole, and open I

THE Fourteenth Annual Meeting of the Association was convened in the Plymouth Church, Syracuse, at 3 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, October 10.

The meeting was called to order by Lewis Tappan. The President, Rev. David Thurston, of Maine, not being present, Rev. David Root, of Ct., was chosen President pro tem.

The exercises were opened by reading part of the fifty-eighth chapter of Isaiab, "Cry aloud, and spare not," and prayer, by the President.

Rev. J. E. Roy, of Illinois, was appointed Secretary pro tem., by whom the minutes of the last meeting, held at Chicago, Ill., were read.

Mr. Lewis Tappan, Treasurer of the Association, read his Annual Report with the Auditor's Certificate, which was accepted and laid on the table for consideration.

Rev. George Whipple, Secretary for the Foreign Department, read the Report of the Executive Committee for that department, which was accepted, and laid on the table,

The congregation then sang two verses of the Missionary Hymn, commencing "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," after which

Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, Corresponding Secretary for the Home Department, read a Report, giving a detailed account of the Home Work of the Association. Received and laid on the table for consideration.

A Business Committee was appointed, consisting of Rev. Messrs. Brown, of New-Jersey; Strieby, of New-York; Rogers, of Kentucky; Roy, of Illinois; and Whipple, of New-York.

Adjourned, to meet at half-past seven o'clock P.M.

The Association met at 71 o'clock P.M. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. Green, of the Sandwich Islands: Rev. Mr. Roy, and the acting President. 'The Rev. Professor Morgan, of Oberlin, Ohio, preached the Annual Sermon, from the text as found in Matthew 28: 18-20.

"And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

THURSDAY MORNING.

The Association met at 8 o'clock, and an hour was occupied with devotional exercises, Rev. J. Brewer, of Mass., taking the lead of the meeting. At 9 o'clock the President took the chair, and opened the regular session of the business meeting with prayer. The minutes of Wednesday's session were read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Lewis Tappan, it was resolved that the thanks of the Association be presented to Professor Morgan, for his discourse preached before the Association last evening, and that a copy of it be requested for publication.

On motion the President was requested to appoint a Committee of three, to nominate officers for the ensuing year. He appointed Rev. J. Morgan, of Ohio, Rev. J. Brewer, of Mass, and Mr. Cooper, of Oswego, N. Y. Mr. Burton, of the Mendi Mission, was appointed Assistant Secretary.

The Business Committee reported in part, by resolutions which were placed on the docket. One item presented by this Committee, related to the circulation of the American Missionary Paper and Magazine. After some discussion, Rev. M. E. Strieby moved that one of the Secretaries of the Association be requested to prepare an article for the American Missionary, requesting pastors of churches favorable to our cause, to secure clubs of subscribers to the paper, at the rate of twenty-five cents per year. Carried.

The first resolution reported by the Business Committee was then taken up. It is as follows:

Resolved. That the results and prospects of our mission in Africa are such as should awaken the deepest interest in its behalf, and that the outlay upon that field, though now relatively large, ought rather to be increased than diminished.

Rev. Mr. Strieby stated that a large number of Wesleyan brethren, many of whom were members of the Association, had just come into the house from their General Conference at Fulton, and moved that they be all invited to participate in the proceedings of the meeting. The motion was adopted.

The Secretary for the Foreign Department stated some facts connected with the progress of the Mendi Mission. He was followed by Mr. Burton of that Mission, who spoke very encouragingly of the prospects of the African mission, and the practicability of educating African vouths in Africa.

The discussion was continued by Mr. Tappan, Professor Morgan, and Rev. Mr. Brace, of Utica, N. Y., in favor of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

The second resolution of the Business Committee was then considered, as follows:

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with our brethren who by violence have been criven out from the States of Kentucky and North-Carolina, and the history of those events are so remarkable as to call for the detailed recital which has been given them in the Home Secretary's Report.

Rev. Daniel Worth stated some facts in relation to the prosperous condition of the work in North-Carolina previous to his arrest and imprisonment.

He was followed by Rev. Mr. Crooks, of Cleveland, and others. Mr. Crooks formerly labored in that field, and suffered persecution there. The resolution was laid over to hear from Mr. Rogers, of Kentucky, in relation to it, in the evening.

The following resolution from the Committee was then unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That this Association fully indorse the action of the Executive Committee in organizing the Western Agency, and that we anticipate that through the efficient labors of its Secretary, Rev. J. E. Roy, a large and effectual door of usefulness will be opened to our Association in that region.

Rev. Mr. Roy read some resolutions passed recently at the Presbyterian and Congregational Convention of Wisconsin, commending the American Missionary Association to the churches within their bounds; and made some remarks showing the encouragements with which he met in his field.

and the strong that promises I have been a second to the s AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Communion of the Lord's Supper was administered, Rev. J. Brewer and Rev. J. McEldowney officiating.

The President then called the Association to order for business. The Committee on Nomination of Officers for the ensuing year, made the following Report, which was unanimously adopted: . .

Jall bavone bas nother in President.

REV. DAVID THURSTON, Maine.

The Sterviney for the Portion Dress towns of stord word facts on howoffer are all more Vice Presidents, assuming out drive better

Hon. F. D. Parish, Ohio, J. P. Williston, Esq., Mass., Prof. C. D. CLEVELAND, Pa., ARTHUR TAPPAN, Esq., Ct.,

Rev. JONATHAN BLANCHARD, Ill., JACOB BUTLER, Esq., Iowa, E. D. Holron, Esq., Wisconsin. Heve Mr. Braco, of Pulce, N. Y., in tayor of the resolution."

Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Department. Rev. George Whipple, New-York.

> Corresponding Secretary for the Home Department. Rev. S. S. Joceyln, New-York.

Recording Secretary. Rev. HENRY BELDEN, New-York.

Treasurer.

LEWIS TAPPAN, Esq., New-York. resident and the court of the little and the little

Executive Committee.

THOMAS RITTER, New-York, HENRY BELDEN, New-York, J. O. BENNETT, New-York, D. M. GRAHAM, New-York, SAMUEL WILDE, New-York,

WILLIAM E. WHITING, New-York, GEORGE H. WHITE, New-York, HENRY H. GARNET, New-York, JOSIAH BREWER, Mass., WILLIAM B. BROWN, New-Jersey, ALONZO S. BALL, New-York, T. C. FANNING, New-York. inc. 10. Ear read tome south that spanned recognize at the Presby-

J. O. Bennett and Anthony Lane, of New-York, were appointed an Auditing Committee for the coming year.

Remarks were heard briefly from Rev. J. P. Bardwell, formerly a missionary among the Ojibwa Indians, in regard to the subject of missions among that people.

The remainder of the resolutions of the Business Committee were then taken up in order, and acted upon as follows: The Communica of the Berlin Subject was non-infatered, Rev. J.

Resolved, That the officers of the Association be requested to prosecute their petition to the Congress of the United States, and to do what they can in other ways, to secure the complete suppression of the African Slave-trade. colling Committee on Londonian of Officers for the ensuing year,

Adopted viole following library which was apprinted allowing bardon and above

Resolved. That the officers of the Association be requested, during the coming year, to bring before the Churches the desirableness of their adopting missionaries in the Home and Foreign field, communicating directly with them, and pledging to give them a support, through the agency of this Association.

. On motion, the recent of the Mercian and Home Secretari

The resolution was adopted.

Resolved, That the prospects of the Jamaica Mission are highly encouraging, and that our work in that Island should be vigorously prosecuted, both for the elevation and sanctification of that people, and for its indirect influence upon the cause of human freedom in our own country.

The resolution was adopted.

Resolved, That we are called upon to express our gratitude to God for what has been accomplished by our missionaries and the missionaries of other Boards, in the work of christianizing the people of the Sandwich Islands.

This resolution, after a brief interchange of sentiment, was laid over to hear from Rev. Mr. Green, in the evening.

Rev. J. L. Johnson, a colored minister in Canada, was here introduced, and spoke of the work among the colored people of Canada. Books had been obtained in sufficient numbers to supply thirty-two Sabbath-schools - one hundred schools are necessary. He and his people need aid. The case was referred to a committee composed of the Secretaries and the Treasurer, for consideration.

Rev. J. C. Richardson, of Kentucky, was heard briefly in relation to his labors in that State.

The Secretary for the Home Department read a letter from Rev. John G. Fee, of Kentucky, who had expected to attend this meeting, but was detained by sickness.

The letter of Mr. Fee was referred to the Secretaries to be published in the American Missionary.

Rev. J. A. R. Rogers read an extract from a letter by Rev. Mr. Candee, of Kentucky, as to the hopeful prospects of the missions in that State.

Rev. Mr. Hinman, under appointment for the Mendi Mission, made some remarks as to his feelings and motives in going out upon that work.

The consideration of the resolutions was resumed.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to investigate and report at the next annual meeting, as to the propriety and possibility of sending families into different pa is of the unevangelized world, in the expectation that by their own labors, they will support themselves, while by their words and lives, they may do much to elevate and enristianize the people.

The resolution was adopted; and Rev. Messrs. William B. Brown, E. H. Fairchild, and Geo. Whipple were appointed such committee.

Rev. Mr. Bell, of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, made a statement in reference to his recent dismissal from a Protestant Methodist Church on account of anti-slavery preaching.

On motion, the reports of the Foreign and Home Secretaries and of the Treasurer were adopted, and referred to the Executive Committee for publication.

The Recording Secretary then read the minutes of the day's proceedings, and they were approved. A recess till seven o'clock was voted.

THURSDAY EVENING.

After devotional services, addresses were made by the Treasurer, Mr. Lewis Tappan; the Western District Secretary, Rev. J. E. Roy; Rev. Mr. Green, of the Sandwich Islands; Mr. Burton, from Africa; Rev. J. A. R. Rogers, from Kentucky; Rev. W. B. Brown, of Newark, N. J.; and the Secretaries, Jocelyn and Whipple.

On motion, the two resolutions in relation to the Sandwich Islands Mission, and misions in the Southern States, were adopted.

On motion of Mr. Brown, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Association he presented to the committee of arrangements in this city; to the trustees of the Plymouth Church; to the people of Syracuse for their hospitality in entertaining the members of the Association; to the choir for their acceptable services; and also to the editors of this city who have so faithfully reported the doings of our meetings.

The Association then resolved to adjourn sine die. After singing and prayer, the benediction was pronounced by the President.

| BECEIPTS. For the Fiscal year eading 18th September, 1860. September, echrowledged in the American Mission. September, echrowledged in the American Mission. March. March | | $19,875
14,006
6,770
852
272
688
189 | 5,090
904
108
1180
1177 | 5,244
1,661
150
0 | 1,086 8
29.4
29.4
83 |
|---|---------------|---|---|---|--|
| RECEIPTS. And year ending 18th September, 1869. Annowledged in the American Messionary for Nov., $1979 80 Burn, 8007 46 Jun., 8007 46 Ju | EXPENDITURES. | r Home Mislons, including colportage, Mandi Mission Jimulos Miston Olinos and Otawa Miston Olinos Bandos Mission Sandwich I stands Mission Sandwich I stands Mission Sand Mission Sand Mission Sand Mission Publications American Missionary, (31,000 conter pre month stands | Office the care of Farminous P.; Annual Report, Magazines, etc., Destiges and Freight, tationery, Fuel, etc., Destings and Freight, tationery, Fuel, etc., Discount on Bank Notes, Collecting Agents, and Collecting Agents, Agents, Adhunal, and Anniversery Meetings, Including | Speaker Corresponding Secretaries, Treasure, Clerk, etc. Missionaries and Colporter. Exise from Siave States, Loss by First in Binder's either or Debts due to Association, contracted the present fixed year, Less due from Association, contracted the present fixed year, Less due from Association, contracted the present fixed year, Si304 by | Paid by Association on Loans, etc., due at the commencement of the present fiscal year? Less received of debts due Association at the commencement of the present fiscal year. Balance, being cash on hand 18th September, 1869. |
| RECI | ==== | 2 | 5111111 | 3223 | 4 |
| RECI | - | | | 8851
158
159 | 9 |
| RECI | Tifrica | 979 80
807 46
648 75
648 75
191 65
172 41 | The second second | Street, Street, | |
| For the plant of t | | 228822882 | 1 1 2 1 2 1 2 1 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 | A O. A | |

中心以下。在2017年20年,我也是在2000年的

In presenting their Fourteenth Annual Report, the Executive Committee, while gratefully acknowledging the goodness of God in the preservation of the lives and health of the officers and committee of the Association, and of so large a portion of its missionaries and its members, are called upon to recognize his afflictive dispensation in the death of three of the female members of its Foreign missions, two of its Home missionaries, three wives of Home missionaries, and sixteen life members.

Mrs. Green, of the Sandwich Islands, died Oct. 5th, 1859, after more than thirty years of missionary labors, nearly one half of which was in connection with the A. M. A. Mrs. Hotchkiss deceased at Rochester, Canada West, Nov. 27, after nine years' labor in behalf of the fugitives in Canada. Mrs. Miles died March 16, at the very commencement of her missionary life, having been less than three months in Africa. Rev. H. M. Nichols was drowned in Minnesota, July 5; and Rev. Noah Emerson died July 9. All these died in faith, and are now doubtless glorifying their Master in a wider sphere than they occupied on earth.

During the year 288 life members have been added to the Association, making the aggregate number at its close 2800.

Nine missionaries and assistant missionaries have joined their missions for the first time, and one has returned to it after a temporary absence. One newly appointed missionary, Rev. H. H. Hinman, is now waiting an opportunity to embark for Africa; and one female missionary is about to return to the Mendi Mission, from Scotland. Two missionary families have relinquished their connection with the Jamaica Mission; and one family, Mr. and Mrs. Burton, of the Mendi Mission, are now in this country on account of Mrs. Burton's ill-health.

The number of Foreign missions (including the Coptic Mission) is seven, and the number of stations and out-stations is twenty-eight, besides eight out-preaching places, where the Gospel is preached statedly.

The number of laborers connected with the Foreign missions, including one about to sail and those recently returned, has been fiftynine.

The Committee have to report the performance of the duty with which they were charged, in the following resolution, passed at the last Annual Meeting of the Association:

Resolved, That we view with unmingled horror the reopening of the foreign slave-trade, its justification by influential men in the councils of the nation, and the unfaithfulness or incapacity of the General Administration in securing the conviction and punishment of the violators of the laws of the land against this piracy; and as this trade is the greatest obstruction to our mission in Western Africa, the Executive Committee cause the memorial to Congress on the subject of enforcing the laws against piracy, herewith presented, to be transmitted to both Houses of the National Legislature, and endeavor to secure their support to the prayer of the memorialists.

Copies of the memorial, signed by the President and Secretaries of the Association, were placed in the hands of Hon. W. P. Fessenden, member of the United States Senate, from Maine, and the Hon. Owen Lovejoy, member of the House of Representatives, from Illinois. Mr. Fessenden presented the memorial to the Senate January 25th, and it was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed. It is No. 8 of Miscellaneous Documents, of the Senate, 36th Congress, 1st Session, and bears the following title:

"Memorial of the American Missionary Association, praying the rigorous enforcement of the laws for the suppression of the African slave-trade, and the enactment of such additional laws as may be necessary to put an end to that traffic."

Mr. Lovejoy soon after presented the memorial in the House of Representatives, where it was similarly referred. Neither of the houses has taken any action thereon. In the mean time, this horrid traffic has greatly increased, hardly a week passing without some new instance of it being made public. The subject will not be lost sight of by the Committee.

MENDI MISSION, WEST-AFRICA.

GOOD HOPE: Missionartes.—Rev. J. H. Dodge, Mr. D. W. Burton, Mrs. Dodge, Mrs. Burton Miss Sanau G. Mointosil.*

Native Assistants.-John Johnson, Licentiate; John R. Mason, Teacher

AVERY: Missionaries, Rev. C. F. Winship. Assistant-Mrs. Cooper.

Boom Falls: Missimaries.—Rev. J. S. Brooks, Rev. G. P. Clartin, Richard Miles, M. s. Miles, † Mrs. Clartin, Mrs. Mair.‡

Native Assistants. -W. B. TUCKER, Licentiate; two native teachers.

SALEM HILL. A new station, being opened under the care of Rev. J. S. Brooks. One nat ve tracher. VICTORIA. An out-station, under the care of Rev. N. Jowett, native.

delognified to relificant paw

Under appointment, Rev. H. H. HINNAN, Hall villed bear moved of the state of † Deceased

^{*} Since this Report was prepared, we have heard of the marriage Rev. Mr. Winship, of Victoria, to Miss McIntosh, of the Good Hope Station.

[‡] Mrs. Mair has been absert Juring the year.

Rev. George P. Claffin, from the Theological Seminary at Bangor, Rev. John H. Dodge, from that at Andover, Mass., and Mr. Richard Miles, from Oberlin, with their wives, sailed from Bangor, Maine, on the 17th November last, for the Mendi Mission, and reached the Good Hope Station, Sherbro Island, January 5th, at the hour of the weekly prayer-meeting. The little church was gathered in the chapel for praise and prayer; and almost the first sound which saluted the ears of the missionary company, newly arrived on heathen ground, was the voice of devotion going up from those who had recently been converted to Christ. It was to them like a water-spring in the desert, the work of God in a dark land.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

Rev. Charles F. Winship, from the Union Theological Seminary, New-York, had expected to sail with the above company, but was providentially detained. He sailed from New-York, January 3d, accompanied by Mrs. Cooper, and the African boy Barnabas Root, for the Mendi Mission. They landed at Freetown, Sierra Leone, February 8th, and reached the Mission at Good Hope February 28th.

The expenditures for the outfits and passages of so large a company of missionaries and others from this country to Africa, (nine in all,) and the erection of suitable missionary buildings for their accommodation and comfort in such a climate as that to which they were to be subjected, have been necessarily large. Adding to this the usual salaries of the missionaries, and the appropriations for the Mission schools, the aggregate is about fourteen thousand dollars. A large reinforcement, however, seemed to be a necessity, and the Executive Committee could not hesitate to avail themselves of the opportunity to send the number of laborers providentially furnished, and so much demanded.

It was not permitted to Mrs. Miles to perform much missionary labor in Africa. She died at Mo Tappan, Boom Falls Station, after a short illness, March 16th, in the 26th year of her age, and about two and a half months after her arrival at the Mission. The immediate occasion of her death was dysentery, preceded by fever. She was the daughter of Mr. David Waters, of Oberlin, Ohio, and was married to Mr. Miles—then under appointment as a missionary—in the fall of 1858. Her health was then such that the Executive Committee declined sending her to Africa, and Mr. Miles sailed without her. During the subsequent year her health seemed to improve. She was quite confident that her constitution was better than the Committee supposed. She had long been preparing for the missionary work in Africa, and, believing assuredly that God was calling her to it, she was unwilling to relinquish the idea of engaging in it. The Executive Committee finally submitted the matter to the decision of Mr. and Mrs. Miles, and their friends, who decided in favor of her going. In her last moments, her husband says: "She had no regrets, she rejoiced that she had come to Africa. Her only wish for life was that she might do good there," Her last message for him was: "Do all you can for Africa and meet me in heaven."

Good Hope Station.

Since the arrival of Mr. Dodge in Africa, the Mission Church at the Good Hope station has been under his care. Although he has suffered from several attacks of fever he has been able to preach, in English, almost every Sabbath since he joined the Mission, besides performing other missionary labor. He is much engaged in the study of the Sherbro language, as a preliminary to more direct labors among the natives.

The formation of the Church at Good Hope was reported last-year. At its close, it numbered eighteen members. In April Mr. Dodge wrote that two new members had been added to it at the previous communion. Of its condition he said: "So far as I am able to ascertain by observation and inquiry, the members of the Church are adorning their profession. Our Sabbath congregations have increased since I came here, and all seem to give good attention to the word preached. Our Sabbath-school is gradually increasing in numbers. We now have between sixty and seventy."

At the communion season in May, six more persons were added to the Church. Two by letter from the Kissy-Road Church, Sierra Leone, and four on profession of their faith; these were members of the Mission-school. Mr. Dodge says: "All these were hopefully converted more than a year ago, while brother White was here. I could but think with what peculiar satisfaction he would have welcomed these lambs to the bosom of the Church which Jesus has purchased with his own blood. In this case the Scripture has indeed been fulfilled: 'Other men have labored and ye have entered into their labors.' We will rejoice together giving all glory to our common Lord."

As an evidence of the openness of the country to the missionaries of the Cross, we quote the following from Mr. Dodge, written after a tour into the country, and preaching through an interpreter in some of the native towns:

"At Gangama, I had an attentive audience of nearly two hundred, gathered in five minutes from the time King Sissiwuru made the request for them to assemble. It was to me a time of no small interest; standing, as I did, on ground never before trodden by the foot of white man, with the evening stars looking calmly down, and surrounded by many of the dark-minded sons and daughters of Africa, with their king sitting at my feet, while I preached to them the Gospel of peace and salvation through a crucified Saviour. Sissiwuru expressed a desire that a missionary would come and settle down among them and establish a school."

Mr. Burton had, some time before, written:

"There is now a great field open before our Mission. The time to extend our operations seems fully come. The people are ready to receive missionaries and teachers in all parts of the country. Last week I visited Mongray, a large barricaded town on Jong River, where the people have been trying to make war for a year past, and was received with much kindness. The remark, 'We are glad to have the missionaries come to our town at any time, for we know they can't bring any bad here,' assured me that they were sincere."

The Mission school at Good Hope has been continued through the year, under the instruction of Miss McIntosh. Its condition is highly encouraging. It numbers twenty-five scholars.

The children of this school are wholly under the care of the Mission; some of them have been connected with it five or six years. They have been taken from twenty or more heathen families, and placed under religious training which it is sought to make in all respects, like that of a well-regulated Christian family in this country. Their proficiency in ordinary studies has been all that could be reasonably expected, and their acquaintance with the Bible and its precious truths, is such as well might put to shame thousands brought up in a Christian land with the advantages of Sabbath-school and sanctuary privileges. "A brighter, or more interesting class of children," says Mr. White, "is scarcely ever seen than those who compose our Mission-schools. In aptness to learn, intelligence and natural ability, they equal any children I have ever seen." Quite a number of them afford evidence of being true Christians, and it is the expectation of the Mission that they will carry forward the work of evangelization in Africa which has been begun by the missionaries. Some of them are already making themselves useful at the Mission. Among the intelligent and active assistants in carrying forward direct missionary work, are those who were among the earliest pupils of its schools.

It is estimated that thirty dollars a year will sustain and educate a scholar at the mission. There are probably hundreds of the friends of missions who could contribute this amount annually, and thus carry forward this work.

Of the importance of mission-schools of a high order in Africa, nothing need be said. For the spread of the Gospel in that country, we must ultimately depend very much, under God, on the efforts of native missionary laborers. The climate is too trying to foreigners, to warrant the hope of being able through them, long to meet the rapidly increasing demand for Christian missionaries. To the natives of Africa, converted to God through the agency of Foreign Missionaries and educated by them, or at the schools they have established, we must eventually look for the supply of the greater part of the many Christian ministers and teachers soon to be demanded.

The out-school at the Good Hope station has been placed under the charge of Mr. John R. Mason, a native teacher from Sierra Leone, who has been examined and approved by the Mission. This school now numbers over thirty scholars, and is reported to be in a flourishing condition.

vide and the Victoria, and all mult side and man

This is an out-station of Good Hope, on the Sherbro Island. A suitable plot of land has been procured, and a native house built upon it. This out-station is placed under the immediate care of Rev. Geo. N. Jowett, a native preacher, whose ordination at the Mission was reported last year. He has a small school under his charge.

Avery Station.

A site for a new station has been selected on the Bagroo river, on the main land, about thirty-four miles from Good Hope. It is described as high, apparently salubrious, with a plenty of good water, and stone for building, and well located as a center from which to reach a large number of African towns and villages. The plot of land contains one hundred and sixty acres, (including a good site and water power for a mill,) on the west bank of the Mahno river. The missionaries call it the Avery Station, in remembrance of the liberality of the late Rev. Charles Avery, towards the children of Africa.

The deed describes the land as given to the Agent of the Association, "for the establishment of a Christian mission to be used by the agent, or agents, of said American Missionary Association, so long as it may be required," and guarantees that "the occupancy of the said plot of land by the agent, or agents, of the Association shall be absolutely and forever free of any, and all charges whatever."

In transmitting a copy of the deed, Mr. Burton said: "I have secured the very spot that Mr. Mills and Mr. Burgess selected forty years ago, on which to locate the colony from America. Many of the old people recollect them, and relate many incidents respecting them."

The Executive Committee approved of the purchase, and authorized the erection of a mission-house, as recommended by the mission, 24×30 ft., to be used temporarily for a dwelling-house for the mission family, and afterwards for a school. Rev. Mr. Winship was placed in charge of the work, soon after his arrival in Africa. During his temporary absence from the mission on the night of the 9th of July, a war-party attacked and took the neighboring town of Mahno. The people of the Avery Station anticipating the probability of an attack upon it, fled. The war-party took possession of the station, destroyed or carried off property to the amount of several hundred dollars, belonging partly to the Mission, and partly to the native workmen engaged on the building. The more powerful chiefs of the country demanded of the attacking party that they should leave all their plunder, and retire at once to their own territory. They accordingly retired, but the property taken from the station was not recovered. It is thought that the Mission will suffer no further detriment from this than the loss of the property taken. The attack has served to develop a deeper interest in behalf of the Mission, on the part of the more powerful chiefs of the country, who stand ready to rebuke every interference with its operations.

INDIAN UNDEREN HAMME.

Boom Falls Station, Mo-Tappan.

At the date of our last report, Mr. Brooks was the only white missionary at this station. He was assisted, however, by several natives, some of whom had been received from the mission churches of Sierra Leone. The religious exercises and general labors of the Mission at that time are thus enumerated. At the station, on the Sabbath, there was a morning prayer-meeting, preaching at eleven A.M., a Sabbathschool in the afternoon, and a lecture in the evening. Prayer-meetings were held Monday, Thursday and Friday evenings; Tuesday evening an inquiry-meeting; and a female prayer-meeting Monday and Friday of each week, Regular Sabbath services, generally preaching, were held in eight different places. A school was taught during the week at the station, and three small out-schools, under the care of native teachers, in as many different towns. Mr. Brooks and three of his native assistants, were constantly engaged in itinerating missionary labor, each in turn leaving the Mission Monday morning, and returning Saturday evening, having spent the intervening time in visiting native towns, preaching to such congregations as could be gathered, generally two or three in one day in the larger villages, and sometimes to collections of from four hundred to six hundred people. On the itinerant's return, he makes a full report to the church of his week's labor. The prayer-meeting of Monday evening made the itinerant and his labors a special subject of prayer. In these towns Mr. Brooks says they always get hearers and often a crowd.

During one quarter, fifty-five native towns were visited, nine of them four times each, thirteen twice each, and thirty-three once each. More than two hundred and fifty congregations had been addressed. In these towns, some of them numbering, with the suburbs, fifteen hundred houses, no Gospel message had ever been delivered except by our missionaries. The ultimate results of these labors can not yet be told. The immediate effects have been, in some of the places, an earnest entreaty of the people that a missionary might come and live among them, they promising to keep the Sabbath, and offering to build a house for the mission. In every place the missionaries have been well received, lodged, and entertained; and sometimes the cry is heard, "What shall we do to please God?" "How shall we pray to God and serve him?" "What shall we do to be saved?"

At two of these towns sites were given for schools, to be taught by a native teacher from the Mission. The church at Mo Tappan voted to employ Charles Tucker as a teacher, and send him to one of them. At another a Sabbath-school was opened with 39 scholars, and a day-school of 28 scholars. No wonder the Mission cry out for more laborers to enter this open field.

The church at Mo Tappan, that numbered 14 at our last report, numbered 24 the first of January, six having been baptized and added to it at the last preceding communion. At that time, Mr. Brooks said: "The Mission, I am free to say in the most unqualified sense, was never in a more promising condition. I assure you that the work is progressing. We can say, in truth: 'The Lord hath helped us.' Yet the work is too great for us; we have more than we can do; more than our hoped and looked-for help will be able to do; more than twenty men could do in health and with a will to work. The work is in a state to break forth on every side."

In relation to the general condition of the country along the Boom river, as affected by the Mission, he wrote:

"I shall not attempt a review of the past. It would be too great a task. A few facts only I will state. The whole trade of this river has been developed within the last ten years; it is now worth more than $40,000 a year. The coast or slave-trade to the north, has been stopped. Natives, in their own canoes, carry their produce to market, which only four years ago was bartered away for half its value; the credit for this change is due to the Mission. The industry of the people has increased ten-fold through that influence. The value of labor has proportionally increased. The taste of the people, in respect to clothing, houses, etc., etc., has greatly increased.

Mr. Miles returned to the station in January. Mrs. Miles then joined it for the first time, and Mr. and Mrs. Claffin soon after. The sickness of Mr. Miles, the subsequent death of Mrs. Miles, the necessity of repairs and increase of buildings to accommodate the newcomers, and the removal of Mr. Brooks to prepare mission-buildings at Salem Hill, have prevented any increase of direct missionary labor, and retarded operations outside of the station. We trust, however, that this is only temporary, and that when the necessary accommodations are secured, favorable results will be increased.

Mr. Claffin has been instructed to give his first attention to the language, that he may communicate directly with the people in their own tangue. He will, therefore, we hope, forbear all labor through an interpreter, which would retard his progress. On this account less speedy results from his connection with the Mission may be looked for; yet we can not but think there will be an ultimate gain.

William Brooks Tucker has been examined by the Mendi Mission Association, (of ministers and delegates from the churches,) and recommended as a preacher of the Gospel.

d ent

THOR

Salem Hill.

This new station on the Boom river is located in a very desirable region of country, and gives access to a population not easily reached from any other station. It was authorized by the Executive Committee two or three years ago, in response to the expressed desire of the chief and people. Very little has been done there before this year, owing to the want of a sufficient number of missionary laborers. Since the arrival of Mr. Claffin and Mr. Miles at Mo Tappan, Mr. Brooks has spent much of his time at Salem Hill preparing the necessary buildings for the use of the Mission. A small school has been commenced there.

A very important advantage resulting from the opening of new stations among the different tribes and interests of the country, is the prevention of war. Every new station is a guarantee of peace, and a chief has been known to submit to heavy penalties rather than go to war, lest he should thereby hinder the establishing of a mission within his territory.

In order to ascertain whether other places in Western Africa among its native population may not possess a climate more favorable to the health of Americans, with a population equally prepared for missionary labor, and in order to prepare the way for further operations in Africa, the Executive Committee have made an engagement with Rev. E. P. Rogers, an educated colored minister, who is, and has been for many years, pastor of a church in Newark, to explore the country about Yoruba, and obtain and furnish to the committee information on all questions relative to the climate of the country, the number and character of its population, the nature of its governments, and the readiness of the people to receive Christian instructors. As Mr. Rogers goes out partly with a view to obtain like information for the African Civilization Society, the expenditure from our treasury will be but $200. He is expected to remain a year in that country, and to communicate the results of his observations to the committee in season to enable them to reply to him before his return.

Little need be added to what has been said in former reports in behalf of missionary operations in Africa. Providentially the whole country is open to the missionary of the cross, and he may go every where preaching the everlasting Gospel, and calling upon men to break off their sins by righteousness, and accept of salvation through the atoning sacrifice of Christ. God has blessed his servants in their labors, many of the people have been converted to God, the missionary is welcomed and entertained, and for reasons such as the heathen can appreciate many of them are crying out for the establishment of missions within their reach. It is true that missionary operations have been carried on there at a great sacrifice of life; but hundreds of worldly men engaged in commerce are willing to risk such sacrifice for purposes of gain; why then should Christians hesitate to go forth in obedience to a divine command, to perform a work made ready of God to their hands, the results of which are life, eternal life, to those for whom they labor?

JAMAICA MISSION.

ISLAND OF JAMAICA, W. I.

| The state of the s |
|--|
| BRAINERDMissionaries, Rev. H. B. Hall, Mrs. Hall. Teachers, Mr. Thaddeus Hoppin, Joseph S. Fisher, Mrs. Hoppin, Mrs. Fisher. |
| ELIOT Missionaries, Rev. L. THOMPSON, Mrs. THOMPSON. Teacher, Miss VEASIE. |
| CHESTERFIELD Missionaries, Rev. Charles B. Venning, Mrs. Venning. Teacher, Miss Sarah
M. Treat. |
| PROVIDENCE Missionary, Rev. C. C. STARBUCK. |
| OBERLIN Missionaries, Rev. T. B. PERFIELD, Mrs. PERFIELD. Teacher, Miss TREAT, & part of the year; afterwards, Miss Norria. |
| RICHMOND Missionaries, Rev. S. T. WOLCOTT, Mrs. WOLCOTT. Teachers, Mr. F. J. Doug-LASS, Mrs. DOUGLASS. |
| BRANDON HILL Teachers, Mr. S. B. Wilson, Mrs. Wilson, SEA VIEW(Out-Station of Ellot.) Teacher, Miss Lucy Woodcock. |
| ROCK RIVER(Out-Station.) Mr. Martin Harris. |

| STATIONS. | Number in Congregation. | Number received into the Church on profession. | Number received by letter. | Number deceased. | Number cut off, | Present number of members. | Contribution by the people, for Mission purposes, besides that for Schools, | Number in Sabbath-School, |
|---------------|-------------------------|---|----------------------------|------------------|-----------------|----------------------------|---|---------------------------|
| Brainerd | 350 | 13 | 10 | 1 | 5 | 149 | vint-tiput | 100 |
| Eliot, | 200 | 3 | 1 | 2 | 3 | 70 | $110.12 | 126* |
| Chesterfield, | 200 | 7 | 2 | 0 | 2 | 69 | 90.30 | 80 |
| Providence, | 75 | 3 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 38 | 60.75 | 45 |
| Oberlin, | 75 | 0 | 0 | 3 | 1 | 36 | 80.64 | 80 |
| Brandon Hill, | 100 | 3 | 2 | | 1 | 42 | 10.32 | 70 |
| Richmond, † | Herian | 1 . 1 | 1. | 114 | | | 10, 40, 11 | 1 |

| the delication and the base de | Male Pupils. | Female Pupils. | Whole number of Scholars. | Contributed for the Schools. |
|--|--------------|----------------|------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| Brainerd, (Mt. Patience,) | 30 | . 35 | 65 | $13.57 |
| Good Hope, (Out-Station,) | 34 | 36 | 70 | |
| Eliot, | 21 | 26 | 47 | 35.40 |
| Oberlin, | 24 | 25 | 47 | 22.92 |
| Chesterfield, | 39 | 29 | 68 | 43.47 |
| Brandon Hill | 22 | 22 | 44 | 26.40 |
| Sea View, (Out-Station,) | 19 | 17 | 36 | 6.39 |
| Rock River, (Out-Station,) | 57 | 14 | 71 | 27.06 |

^{*} Forty in Bible-class. † Church connections are with Elion. † Pupils work four hours a day for their board and tuition.

annin.

The church at Brainerd, which contained one hundred and fortytwo members at the date of our last report, has received an addition of thirteen since. The first Sunday in January, four were received on profession of faith. The first Sunday in March, nine more were received, others having been examined were to be received at the communion season in May, before which Mr. Hall, the pastor of the church, left the island.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

The school at Brainerd was under the charge of Mr. Hoppin till the first of April last. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, formerly of the Ojibue Mission, joined the Jamaica Mission in May, and the school at Brainerd was placed under his care.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall, and Mr. and Mrs. Hoppin, all connected with this station, applied to the Executive Committee for permission to relinquish their connection with the Mission and return to this country. This was granted, and they arrived in New-York in May. Mr. Hall had been connected with the Mission for ten years, and returned with somewhat impaired health. He will seek a field of labor in our Western country. Mr. Hoppin had been connected with the Mission for a less time, but felt that his health demanded a change. The church at Brainerd is yet without a pastor. Preaching is supplied to it by missionaries from other stations. An ordained missionary, having some experience in pastoral service, is greatly needed for this station.

Eliot.

The return of Mr. Thompson to his station at Eliot, after an absence of a year and a half, during which the church was destitute of a pastor, and the station was without a resident missionary, was reported last year, while he was yet on his return-passage. He reached Jamaica October 30th, and spent the first Sunday of November with his charge. Three of his church had died during his absence, and eight had been suspended from communion. In February, Mr. Thompson wrote that one of the excommunicated had died, all the rest seemed penitent, and sought a restoration to church privileges. He thought the discipline exercised towards them had been salutary, both upon them and the church. The latest intelligence from this station indicated the presence of the Spirit of the Lord among the people; some of the members of the congregation gave evidence of a recent conversion to God.

The school at Eliot is now under the charge of Miss Veasie. Mrs. Thompson taught it from January till some time in June. The average attendance has been about twenty-five. The Sabbath-school numbers one hundred and twenty-six. It is under the charge of Mr. Douglass. Mrs. Thompson has also a Bible-class of forty scholars.

restricted with the control of the state of which and the control of the relation

The school at this out-station was reopened in May, after a long suspension, and is under the care of Miss Woodcock. It numbers thirty-five scholars. There is also there a Sabbath-school, the attendance on which varies, ranging from sixty-five to eighty-five in number.

ROCK RIVER SCHOOL has been suspended a part of the year on account of the misconduct of a native teacher. Another teacher was employed, and the operations of the school were recommenced about the first of June. The average number of scholars in attendance is forty-three. Mr. Thompson says there is much need of religious instruction in that neighborhood.

Chesterfield

The general condition of this station, under the care of Mr. Venning, has been throughout the year encouraging. Soon after its commencement, referring to the trials alluded to in our last report, Mr. Venning wrote that in the church, and outside of it, matters were putting on a more favorable aspect, and he rejoiced in the prospect of a more pure and permanent prosperity, as the result of God's blessing on their trials. Two of its members, however, the church had to cut off as obstinate.

In February, he wrote that the Sabbath congregation was increasing: rendering evident the necessity of enlarging their accommodations. This can be done only by building a new house, for which they would need aid from the Association.

The church at Chesterfield now numbers sixty-nine members; of whom nine have been received during the year; seven on profession of their faith, and two by letter. In his last communication, dated August 1st, Mr. Venning says:

"There is evidently an improved tone of religious feeling in the church generally. Meetings are well attended; there is a more unanimous and active opposition to evil, and a little better zeal in the support of good things. . . Our inquiry class is increasing in numbers. Several of those who attend have lately expressed their determination to be the Lord's. Some of them, we trust, are sincere, but we hope with trembling. Our Sabbath-school is having a good influence on the community."

The amount contributed by the church at Chesterfield for the support of the institutions of the Gospel and of education is $133.77, besides which they have contributed five pounds, or $24, to the Association for the support of our Mendi Mission. Mr. Venning says, that considering the ability of the people: "There is room for their doing much better than this. In order, however, to form reasonable expectations of them, we must take into account their ignorance, their uneconomical and improvident habits, (formed in slavery,) the difficulties with which they have to contend in rising from the degraded position of slaves to that of freemen in civilized life, and the reaction, on the side of coveteousness and worldliness, naturally resulting from their passing from a state in which they were not allowed to call any thing their own, to one in which they have become possessed of houses, lands, etc." Care should be taken lest we judge too severely those who are passing through such a transition.

The school at Chesterfield, now numbering sixty-eight scholars, with an average attendance of about fifty, is under the care of Miss S. M. Treat, who has assumed the charge of it during the last half of the year. It is represented as being in a good condition. Heretofore Mr. Venning has had charge of the school, in connection with his labors as pastor of the churches at Chesterfield and Brandon Hill, a burden quite too great for one man. With the present arrangement, of a teacher at each of these places, he is at liberty to devote himself to pastoral labors, and the stations are in a more favorable condition for future success, than ever before. We trust the people will be made to feel that new privileges carry with them new responsibilities.

Brandon Hill.

The church at this station is under the care of Mr. Venning, of Chesterfield. Five members have been added to it during the year, and one excommunicated. It now numbers forty-two members.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson arrived at the Mission in October, and took up their residence at Brandon Hill November 23d, 1859. Up to that time no educational advantages had been enjoyed by the people at this station. Mr. Wilson commenced a school with twelve scholars, which gradually increased to twenty-five. It now has on its list forty-four; an equal number of males and females. The average attendance is about thirty. Like all persons who have never enjoyed the advantages of education themselves, the parents do not feel as strong a desire for the education of their children as the missionaries wish. Some, however, do manifest a continued interest in it, and their children are always at school.

Mr. Wilson has at various times reported favorably concerning the general attendance on the exercises of the Sabbath, and an increasing interest in them. The Wednesday and Saturday morning prayer-meetings have also been well attended. "The people," he says, "are trying to do something for themselves, to shake off the degradations accumulated during successive generations of slavery, and to regain that manhood, independence, and dignity which oppression had so long smothered or crushed; trying to gain that intelligence which had been so utterly denied them. I do not say that all are thus striving, but there are many who are even making great sacrifices to obtain these blessings." "Just such men," he adds, "have been chained down to the low and groveling, by the institution of slavery, and made like the beasts of the field, notwithstanding all their high and noble aspirations. Such must be the effect of this institution every where."

Oberlin.

This station is under the care of Rev. T. B. Penfield. In February Mr. Penfield was much encouraged by the increase of his congregations. For nearly two months the attendance had been very steady and much more numerous than before. The increase in the size and interest of his Sabbath-school he regarded as cause of thankfulness. During the last half-hour of the school, he gave what he called a children's sermon. A large part of the adult congregation were generally present, thus furnishing him with the largest audience of the Sabbath. The general tone of his communications was very encouraging.

A communication received from the Mission, of a later date, states, that these favorable indications were not lasting. The congregations soon dwindled down to their former condition, consisting almost wholly of the members of the church. There are a number of intelligent Christians in that church whose characters have been formed under the training of the Mission, but the present condition of the station is not such as greatly to encourage the missionary.

Providence.

The church at this station has received an addition of three members on profession of their faith, and one by letter from another church. Two who had been previously cut off have been restored, thus making an increase of six members. The church now numbers thirty-eight.

In his annual statement Mr. Starbuck says:

"The spiritual condition of the Providence church is, comparatively speaking, quite satisfactory. There appears to be a good degree of union among themselves, an affectionate confidence in their pastor, and an apparent appreciation of his teachings and exhortations, which are no small encouragement to hopeful labor. The young people have been, during the last year, increasingly attentive to God's Word, and two young men have proposed themselves as candidates for admission to the church."

There is no mission-school at Providence, the educational wants of the children being provided for by a neighboring school. Of the importance of good schools for the people of Jamaica, Mr. Starbuck thus speaks:

"Whatever may be true in other places, I am convinced that it is the sheerest folly to think of upholding missionary operations here, without giving an active support in one way or another, to religiously-conducted schools. The Government ought to care for this, and, very meagerly it does so; but what it leaves undone must be supplied by Christian zeal, here and abroad, except so far as the people can be persuaded to do it themselves; and they do not now value education sufficiently to lay any very heavy tax upon themselves in support of it. However, the small fee which we regularly exact in our schools, will prepare them in time for doing more."

Richmond Station.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglass joined the Mission and commenced their labors at this station just previous to the close of the last fiscal year. The school at Richmond had been closed nearly a year for want of a teacher. Mrs. Douglas has suffered much from hemorrhage of the lungs, and consequently been able to do less in the school than she had hoped.

It will be remembered that this is an industrial school—the pupils working four hours per day in return for board, lodging, and tuition. There are also connected with the school several friendless or orphan children, of too tender an age to provide wholly for their own support. These are to be provided for by the friends of the enterprise and the kindness of the missionaries.

The school was reopened in September with eight pupils. It soon increased to twenty-five, which was the average number up to the Christmas holidays. Since the first of January the average attendance has been about thirty. Although the number has been small, the degrees of advancement have been so various that it was impossible for one person to do them all justice. Miss Veasie, after her arrival in January, spent two hours a day in the school with the younger scholars, until her removal to take charge of the school at Oberlin.

A portion of every day is occupied with religious instruction and devotional exercises. "The aim," says Mr. Douglass, "is to bring all religious instruction to bear as far as possible upon the conversion of the soul, and to look for this as a result to be expected." At the reopening of the school only one of its members professed piety. In March, Mr. Douglass wrote, that though laboring under great disadvantages the school was gradually increasing, and would soon reach the limit of their present accommodations. The whole number on the list, including day-scholars, is seventy.

The religious interest among the pupils had considerably increased; three gave good evidence of sincere purpose of following Christ. Others were thoughtful, and showed indications of the work of the Spirit in their hearts.

Rev. Mr. Wolcott, who has charge of the Richmond station, wrote in May:

In June, Mr. Wolcott wrote:

"From what we observe in our neighborhood, and from what we hear from other parts, I do think we may say the day dawneth. There are some unmistakable signs of improvement. Very much that is lamentable and reproachable still remains, but no candid, thorough observer can speak of Jamaica now otherwise than hopeful. If the year 1860 passes as it has commenced, it will be distinguished for a very general movement of the people in the right direction. There may be no general and marked 'reviral of religion,' so called, though we would fain hope for one, but there will be a higher order of religious development. Education is being more highly prized and sought; and beyond all question, the spirit of enterprise and industry is greatly increased and much more general. The people are cultivating for themselves much more largely, are supplying themselves with more and better material, are living better, and every thing is tending to a higher civilization."

A just estimate of the progress of the people of Jamaica, for whom our missionaries labor, requires that we should remember that nearly all the adults had their training under a system, according to the laws of which they were regarded, held, and treated as things, chattels, beasts of burden, the mere property of others. Under the working of this system, in the very same islands where the free blacks were steadily increasing in numbers, the slaves were dying off at a rate which was described at the time as appalling. The population returns showed the terrible fact, that in eleven of the eighteen colonies—the only eleven that reported—the slaves had decreased no less than 60,219 in about twelve years.

Now the social state of these negroes, according to the authorities from which the above is taken, the Edinburgh Review and the (English) Missionary Herald, is all that the most enthusiastic advocate of emancipation could have foretold.

In six years after emancipation 7340 of the freed people had become freeholders in the Island of Jamaica, having purchased freeholds by their accumulation and industry. And it should be borne in mind that the policy of the great mass of the property-holders in that Island was to keep the people in the condition of day-laborers, by refusing to sell land, except in such quantities as to put it almost entirely out of the reach of the emancipated people.

The article above quoted from the Missionary Herald says:

[&]quot;Our school is steadily increasing in numbers. Our influence is extending far beyond the limits of our own mission. If our present forces can be continued in life and health, we have every reason to anticipate a school commanding public confidence and support. The Executive Government (of the Island) has made a grant of sixty pounds sterling to Richmond, which we apply on our buildings. We wish to devise liberal things, that by liberal things we may stand!"

[&]quot;The main conclusions which are enforced on us by our investigation are these: The one, that slavery and monopoly were bearing the West-Indies to ruin; the other, that under free labor and free trade they are rising to wealth. Under slavery and monopoly, the laboring class was miserable, and was perishing miserably. . . . It is plain that, but for the measure of emancipation, England's colonies would have sunk to irretrievable destruction.

[&]quot;And beside all this—and most gratifying and important—we can advert to higher benefits; and in the diffusion of the Gospel, the growth of Christian churches, the increase of a pious and intelligent native ministry, we see the reward of faithful toil; for these are the fruit of missionary effort. While giving, as is most justly due, all honor and glory to God, we can not forget that he makes his servants co-workers together with him; and therein do we rejoice, yea, and we will rejoice."

The pecuniary prosperity of the Islands generally is on the increase. The exports and imports of the West-Indies in the four years ending 1857 exceeded those of the preceding four years by more than $22,000,000. That Jamaica has shared least in this outward prosperity has been laid as a reproach to her laboring people, and they are accused of being worthless and too lazy to work.

The most reliable testimony, however, shows that Jamaica never had a sufficient supply of laborers for the most profitable working of large estates. Just in proportion as the freed people themselves become freeholders, just in that proportion would the labor-supply for the estates diminish; the people being too well off to be compelled to work for the insufficient wages offered by the planter, prefer to work on their own property as independent farmers.

Mr. Starbuck writes that he had had a conversation with an intelligent correspondent of the New-York Times, after he had visited Barbadoes and many other of the West-India Islands and made extensive research also in Jamaica.

"He assured me" said Mr. Starbuck, "that the aspect of the black people of Jamaica struck him more favorably than in any other island he had seen. There was none of that crouching servility, that in the smaller islands still testified to an unhealthy predominance of the planter's influence. The very circumstance that makes the estates go down here, namely, that the people are so few as to find it more profitable to till their own land than to work on the estates, is that doubtless which has raised them in the scale of humanity, and given them the self-respecting aspect with which Mr. Sewall was pleased. I believe that those who judge emancipation by its effects on human beings rather than on sugar estates, will think as this gentleman, who is far from being an abolitionist, appears to do, that Jamaica at its worst, is better than Barbadoes at its best. Still, Jamaica would have room for an incalculably greater number of laborers, without beginning to press upon the few that are already here."

Comparison is made with Barbadoes, because by the confession of all it is in a high state of commercial prosperity, so much so that not an intelligent planter can be found on the Island, that would return to the old regime of slavery.

Some extracts have been published in the American Missionary, from the communications of the correspondent of the Times, forming a perfect vindication of the people of Jamaica, from the slanderous charges that have been brought against them, and proving that the emancipated people and their descendants in Jamaica, do work as diligently as those of Barbadoes, but for themselves, on their own free-holds, instead of for the planter on his estate.

Wisdom is justified of her children. In Jamaica, as elsewhere, God has demonstrated that it is safe, even for man's pecuniary interest, to obey God, and refrain from injustice.

and the same amount the left to could be a left

OJIBUE AND OTTAWA MISSION.

GRAND TRAVERSE BAY, MICHIGAN.

Missionary.—REV. GLORGE N. SMITH.

The reception of this Mission under the care of the Association, was reported last year. Mr. Smith is stationed at Northport, where the mission church is located, and where he spends every other Sabbath. Each alternate Sabbath he preaches at an Indian village called Onumuneseville. He has a third preaching place, at what he calls the Head of the Harbor.

At Northport one of his Sabbath services is in English to the whites. The population of this place is about three hundred, with about as many more in the immediate vicinity, and is continually increasing by immigration. The number of Indian residents at Northport is diminishing. The new treaty made with them secures to each family a title to eighty acres of land, and many of them, including some of the members of the mission church, have selected lands on the south side of the Little Traverse, thus transferring their connection from the congregation at Northport to that of Onumuneseville.

There is another settlement about eighteen to twenty-four miles south-west from Northport, on the lake coast, the people of which regard themselves as under the general superintendence of this Mission, where something ought to be done; most of them never having had Christian instruction.

On every other Sabbath at Northport, Mr. Smith, after superintending a Sabbath-school, and teaching a Bible-class at nine o'clock A.M., preaches to a white congregation at half-past ten. At half-past one in the afternoon, he preaches to the Indians, and at six o'clock in the evening, at the Head of the Harbor. There are no special marks of seriousness at Northport, but an increasing regard for the means of grace, and good proof that the settlement is destined to stand on the side of truth.

The alternate Sabbath, after attending the Sabbath-school and Bible-class at Northport, he goes to Onumuneseville and preaches to the Indians. They come together again at two P.M., and after singing and prayer as usual, instead of having a sermon, a chapter is read (a part of the older Indians looking over in the Ojibue Testaments) and explained, and the different parts applied as may seem necessary.

The Government has built a school-house at Onumuneseville this summer, in which the services of the Sabbath are held. Of the Indians of this village, Mr. Smith says: "I think that in relation to their appreciation and improvement of the advantages of education, their industry, their morality, their regard to religion, and their regular and orderly conduct, they will compare favorably with our better white settlements."

Like all the other aborigines of our country, these Indians are suffering from their contact with the whites. On the opening of navigation this spring, Mr. Smith says: "Floods of intoxicating liquors of various kinds poured in upon them. A good many, both whites and Indians, drink." The example of Government there, is in this thing and many are decoyed and led out of the way. "Still," Mr. Smith says, "most of our church-members maintain their integrity, though some have fallen."

The annual payments of the Indians, are among the severest ordeals through which they have to pass. The temptations to the use of intoxicating liquors are at this time almost irresistible. The snares set to entrap females into deeds of licentiousness are represented as being devised with diabolical ingenuity. At the last annual payment, however, the Government Agent exerted a decided influence against these evils, in which he was seconded by a good proportion of the white citizens of Northport, and with good results.

The communications received from this Mission during the year, have been, on the whole, favorable, though but one hopeful conversion and one addition to the church on profession of faith have been reported. The attendance on the services of the sanctuary has been good, and the congregation solemn and attentive. The ordinances of the Gospel are becoming much more intelligently appreciated.

"Throughout the entire community, both Indians and whites," Mr. Smith says, "there is a marked tendency to a more settled and firm moral and religious condition of society. Still very much remains to be done. Our Wednesday meetings are developing the capacity of the Indians to speak on religious subjects, and pray in public. Some of them take an active part in almost every meeting; very earnest prayers are offered, and very appropriate and edifying remarks are made."

The present number of the church-members is fifty-two, of whom a few are whites. Of this number thirteen have removed to other localities, though they are still connected with the church, and occasionally there. One is studying in Ohio for the purpose of laboring among his people. The native congregation at Onumuneseville averages thirty-five, at Northport twenty-five. The white congregation at Northport averages seventy, and at the "Head of the Harbor," thirty. The Sabbath-school and Bible-class at Onumuneseville, (Indians,) number forty; at Northport, (whites,) thirty, and at the Head of the Harbor, (whites,) twenty-five.

Mr. Smith says:

"The character of the immigrants coming into our region the year past, has been better than years previous and the number is quite large. The Sabbath is better observed than formerly, but not as well as it is greatly to be desired. My congregation are almost wholly anti-slavery, and I always remember the slave in my prayers and public ministration. I feel assured that there is a growing interest in behalf of the slave throughout my whole field. Among the Indians a decided sympathy is manifested for him, and when I unfold to them his wrongs, how husbands and wives, parents and children, and brothers and sisters, are sold asunder, never more to meet on earth, it seems to them scarcely possible that men can be guilty of such deeds of oppression. I dare not let them know that a great portion of the American Church is implicated in it; they could not reconcile the fact with their views of Christian obligation."

Another missionary is needed there to supply some of the places mentioned by Mr. Smith.

CANADA MISSION.

to your could algorith out submanificable stoods the average. In Missionaries.—REV. DAVID HOTCHKISS, Rochester, Canada West; Rev. L. C. CHAMBERS, Dresden, Canada West.

Mr. Hotchkiss continues to labor among the colored people in Canada, who have fled from slavery in the United States. He has received into the churches under his care, ten members on profession of their faith, and one by letter from another church. Several members have, however, been cut off from these churches, some on account of lewdness and some for intemperance, so that the aggregate number of communicants in these churches is now the same as last year, though apportioned differently. Their church covenants require total abstinence from intoxicating drinks.

The church at Little River has now sixteen members, that on the Puce River twenty-two, and at Pike Creek there are six members. The last communications from Mr. Hotchkiss indicated the presence of the Holy Spirit and a revival of the work of the Lord.

This Mission has suffered from the death of Mrs. Hotchkiss within the year. She had been obliged to relinquish the charge of her school, just before the commencement of the year now reported, but she lived, and was able to take charge of her family, till November 27th, when she died sitting in her chair, without a struggle or a groan. She was in the fifty-seventh year of her age, and had labored nine years in behalf of the fugitives in Canada, to whom she gave her strength and her life. She passed almost without an interval from active labors to her eternal rest.

Rev. L. C. Chambers, the colored brother, whose appointment was reported at our last Annual Meeting, has continued at Dresden, during the year, though his labors have been mostly among the more destitute villages near there. He has recently removed to Ingersoll, and taken charge of a church there of forty-five members, to which he has preached regularly for some months. He has also, for some time past, preached in London each alternate Sabbath, to a church of sixty-five members. He reports an addition of twenty-eight members to these churches since the commencement of his labors with them.

Very erroneous impressions exist in relation to the character and condition of the colored people of Canada, fugitives from slavery in the United States. Evil reports have been raised against them, having their origin mainly among those who would gladly have seen them retained in slavery, and who, though quick to discover and expose all that is evil among them, are unwilling to do any thing for their temporal or spiritual welfare. It is not denied that there are among them those that are indolent, degraded and vicious; what community can be found that does not contain many of these classes?

Even a brief consideration of the evil influences to which they have been subjected, and under which they have had their life-training, will enable the candid observer to account for some of the evils that exist among them. A more careful scrutiny will reveal the fact that some at least of the more prominent vices to which they are addicted, are precisely those that have been encouraged and strengthened by the authority and example of those whom they have been accustomed to look up to as their masters, or such as are the natural, almost necessary, outgrowth of the wrongs they have endured.

These are causes which, rightly considered, instead of leading us to neglect them, should impel the Christians of the United States to earnest, prayerful, liberal missionary labors for their temporal improvement, their conversion, and their spiritual welfare.

But the fugitives in Canada are not what their enemies represent them to be. Very many of them are moral, enterprising, industrious and thriving, showing that the liberty they have assumed is rightly used. Missionary labor, the little that has been expended on them, has accomplished all that under the circumstances could reasonably be expected, and is an encouragement to increased efforts to supply them with educational and religious advantages. Good schools, and a faithful ministry, ought to be liberally sustained among the fugitives in Canada.

SANDWICH ISLANDS MISSION.

The report of our mission in the Sandwich Islands is for the year ending February, 1860.

The Mission has suffered a great affliction in the removal of Mrs. Green, who died October 5, 1859, after more than thirty years of missionary life. For her, "to live was Christ, and to die was gain." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. . . Yea saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." Concerning this affliction, Mr. Green says:

In giving the statistics of the Mission churches, Mr. Green says:

"During the year 1859, new arrangements were made at our station, and the most thorough revision of the state of the church was had. I found that, through deaths and removals, our numbers were somewhat diminished, though there had been additions every year. The decrease, however, was nothing like that of some of the churches at the Islands."

Instead of reporting the stations as formerly, he has given the churches, and the Pastor and Helpers connected with each, as follows:

| - The state of the | |
|--|--|
| FIRST CHURCH, (MAKAWAO PROPER,) | Rev. J. S. Green, Pastor. J. P. Green, Licentiate, Mary E. Green, Teacher. |
| HAMAKUAPOKO, KUIAHA, Preaching Stations. KULA. Preaching Stations. | MALIIHE Native Helpers. KEKUA. Native Helpers. KALAWE. |
| SECOND CHURCH, | J. S. Green, Pastor.
J. P. Green, Licentiate. |
| HALEHAKU, | KAHAULE, Native Helpers. |
| | ne Church, (two stone houses, five miles apart,) alJ. S. Green, Pastor. J. P. Green, Licentiste. |
| KAHIKINUL Preaching Station, | POHAKU, Native Teachers. |
| Members.—1. Makawao,
2. Huelo,
8. Keokea, | 415 9 424 |
| Total, | |

Among the discouragements of the year, Mr. Green mentions the removal by death of some of the good people of his church; the exclusion of some members from the communion, the increase of a worldly spirit on the part of some, and the neglect of the means of grace by many, both in and out of the church. This neglect he ascribes to the influence of foreigners, who not only themselves neglect the worship of God, but also, by ridicule, deter those who are disposed to attend. The same influence is encouraging intemperance and other vices which are causing the decrease of the people.

The following are extracts from his report:

"With the increase of foreigners there is a great increase of licentionaness, a vice which more than any other hardens the heart, sears the conscience, and well nigh blights all hope of the return of the soul to God. This is the sin of all others at the Islands that scathes the moral sense of those addicted to it, so that the voice of God in his most terrible providences is scarcely heeded at all. Our poor people die speedily from the effects of it."

"There are some Romanists, and some Mormons in my field, always ready to tempt and flatter those who have been disciplined in our churches, and gather into their net those who have all along refused to seek God. I do not think they make progress other than by these means."

Labors, Encouragements, Progress.

"There has been an increase of industry among my people. Thirty thousand bushels of wheat, or one third more than in any previous year, they have raised, while the amount of other work has been much the same as usual. Had we a better market [&]quot;Earnestly do I desire that the example of holy living, and the labors of love of the dear departed one may not be forgotten by any of us, either of her own family, or her people, whose highest interests were so much on her heart, and for whose endless happiness she so often plead at the mercy-seat. Her prayers will still be answered, I trust, in the conversion to God of many souls."

there would be a constant increase of wheat, cats, and com, and thus habits of industry would be greatly strengthened. The demand for these grains is less than the means of supply. Some improvement has been made in their buildings, and in the increase of domestic comforts. Slowly but constantly the people are going ahead in the march of improvement. . . . In relation to schools parents are waking to a sense of the importance of having better school-houses and better teachers, and of having their children taught. Our district has sustained a large school of children of both sexes, taught by my own children, and taught in the English language. The school is now taught by the Rev. Claudius B. Andrews. More may be done, God sparing us, in the way of preparing Hawaiian females for useful stations."

my own children, and taught in the English language. The school is now taught by the Rev. Claudius B. Andrews. More may be done, God sparing us, in the way of preparing Hawaiian females for useful stations."

"The labors of the year ending February, 1860, have been much as in years past. At the rising of the sun on the Sabbath morning. I have met a small but wakeful congregation, with whom I have spent an hour and a half or two hours, in reading the word of God, answering such questions as they proposed, and giving such instruction as I deemed necessary. At 11 AM. I have preached in English, at my own house, to as many as desired to hear me. Sometimes there are but ten or twelve besides my own family; at others there are as many as thirty.

At 1 o'clock P.M. I go to the meeting-house, where the children are reciting in Sabbath-school, and the adults reading the Bible. After the school, I conduct the exercises of the afternoon, by reading, praying, singing, and preaching the blessed Gospel of Jesus Christ. Thus we spend our Sabbaths, and can say of each of them:

"Day of all the days the best, Emblem of eternal rest."

"We still observe the concert for the heathen, on the first Monday of the month, and for the slave, the last Monday. Wednesday is an important day with us, a kind of half-way house between the two Sabbaths. I teach many things on that day, answer influence, settle misunderstandings, and thus prevent many litigations. . . . Saturday evaning we have had a church prayer-meeting."

evening we have had a church prayer-meeting."

"In closing, let me say that I have much much occasion to bless God, our Heavenly Father for his great goodness to me and the people of my charge in sustaining us during the last sever teen years while we have sojourned together as pastor and people; in enabling me and mine to hold on to the Lord, though scantily supported; in blessing the people in their secular concerns, no less than in their spiritual, so that the experiment of sustaining their religious institutions has been an eminently successful one. At the end of seventeen years, since I cast myself on the Church at Makawao for support, during which time the people have built four stone meeting houses, paid for their land, and in a good degree sustained their pastor, they are worth five hundred per cent more than they were when I went to reside with them. Instead of starving, as it was predicted I should, on leaving the service of the A.B.C.F.M., rather than be sustained by funds which I could not but feel were tainted with the price of blood, I can truly say with the apostle, 'I have all things, and abound,' and my people have found God faithful to the declaration of his word, 'He that watereth thall be watered also himself,' I bless him who has enabled me to go forward in his strength, making the trial of his faithfulness, I bless him for sustaining grace, and for the victory which he has pro nised through our Lord Jesus Christ, to whom be glory now and ever.

The expenditure for this Mission this year has been $272.40.

Mr. Green who came to this country with the approval of the Committee, in May, after an absence of thirty-two years spent in missionary labor, expects to return to the Islands, with his daughter, after about a year's absence. He has already done much by his labors on the Sabbath, to deepen the interest already felt in behalf of the Hawaiian people, and expects to spend the winter preaching and lecturing whenever an opportunity is afforded him, in behalf of the Missionary cause, with a desire to increase contributions, and prayer, for its support.

and the other with the from the han have made on . Her we a letter market

SIAM MISSION.

BANGKOK, SIAM.

Missionaries.-Rev. D. B. BRADLEY, M.D., and Mrs. BRADLEY.

The hope expressed last year, that the blessing of God and the influences of the Holy Spirit were about to be given to the labors of missionaries in Bangkok, has in some degree been realized. The spirit of God appears to have wrought effectually upon the hearts of a few, both Siamese and Chinese, who have, in the judgment of the missionaries of the several missions, so far witnessed a good profession of their faith in Christ, that they have been received into the mission churches.

In this blessing our Mission has been permitted to share. Four promising Siamese young men have been admitted to the communion and membership of the church, and there were a few others for whom there was hope that they were not far from the kingdom of God.

A united meeting of all the missionaries in Bangkok was held in August, 1859, at which it was resolved to observe the second week in January as a season of special prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon all mankind. It was resolved also, in view of the obstacles in their way in Siam, the amount of preparatory labor bestowed upon that field, and the recent indications of God's willingness to pour out his Spirit upon that people, to ask the prayers of the Church in behalf of Siam during, and after, the concert is January.

The special season thus recommended was observed by the Christians in Bangkok in concert, and with favorable results. Sometimes during the meetings there were twenty or more Siamese publicly requesting the prayers of God's people. A few who had previouly professed conversion engaged with the missionaries in this meeting.

On the first Sabbath of February, the four young men already spoken of were received into the church of our Mission. Dr. Bradley says of them:

"They are in many respects peculiarly interesting young meo. The oldest is under thirty-five years of age, and the youngest about twenty-two. They are quite prepossessing in their personal appearance, good readers of the Siam se language, sustained a good examination before the church, and made a noble confession of their faith in Emanuel, at a union of our Presbyterian and Congregational churches, at our communion. All of them but one have families, and intend to bring their little ones to the Lord in baptism. We have cheering hope that the wives of two of them have been converted.".... "There are several others of whom we have the same hope."

The Baptist church received seven new members the same day.

As in former years, Dr. Bradley has taken several journeys, or preaching tours, for the purpose of proclaiming the Gospel in other parts of the kingdom. These have been taken sometimes in connection with other missionaries, and sometimes only with his own family. The missionaries have in all these cases been kindly received, and permitted without hindrance to preach Christ, and apply the doctrines of the Bible even in direct antagonism to the teaching of the Boodhist priests and their sacred books. They think they have seen indications of favorable results from these labors.

In one of these tours, taken in company with Rev. Mr. Telford, they visited several Laos villages, in one of which a young man had died a short time before, who professed to be a believer in Jesus, having learned of Him through the missionaries in Bangkok.

Concerning these people, Dr. Bradley said:

"We were greatly interested on learning from the chief man of the village that his people are no Buddhists; but, contrariwise, believe that God is, and that he exists as an Almighty, Eternal and Omulscient Spirit, dwelling in his glory on high, but also filling immensity. They appear to subscribe to the ten commandments with one heart and voice. Polygamy, in their estimation, is a great sin, and few of them are found living in it. A few of their some are drawn away by the seductions of their Siamese neighbors, and become Buddhists. We visited five villages of this tribe, from one to two miles apart, containing on an average probably not less than 500 persons in each. We were informed that there are many more villages of them farther along, and that there are 1200 able-bodied men of them all, who are called out to spend every other month in serving the King of Siam in erecting his pelace."

Mrs. Bradley has continued her labors as usual, often going from house to house, visiting the people, and making known to them the great salvation.

Upon the printing-press of the Mission there have been printed during the year:

| Sacred Songs, in Siamese, 1500 copies, | pages, | 695,500 |
|--|--------|---------|
| God revealed in Creation and Providence, 1000 copies, | | 18,000 |
| Law and Gospel, 2000 copies, | | 10 000 |
| J. Caswell's Exhortation, (in verse,) 1000 copies, | . 46 | 12,000 |
| God in Christ, as Seen in His Miracles, 1000 copies, | | 26 000 |
| Catechism on Prayer, (J. Caswell,) 5000 copies, | | 180,000 |
| Companion, a Siamo-English book, (J. Caswell,) 500 copies, | | 35,000 |
| | | |

A portion of these were taken by the other missions in Bangkok.

Besides these, printing had been done for the Siamese and for the English resident at Bangkok, making an aggregate of about 250,000 pages, for which payment was made to the Mission. This work is done by Siamese workmen, Dr. Bradley, or his son Cornelius, superintending. By this use of the printing-office, and the rent of mission buildings not needed at present by the Mission, the Mission has not only not been obliged to draw on our treasury, but has also a considerable amount on hand towards the expenses of the current year.

There is still need of another ordained missionary and a printer at our Siamese Mission. The way seems to be preparing for the work of the Lord in Siam, and Dr. Bradley ought not to be left there alone. The Executive Committee earnestly hope that they may be enabled to send help to that Mission the coming year.

COPTIC MISSION.

No action has been taken by the Executive Committee during the year with a view to the renewal of missionary labors among the Copts in Egypt. The indications of divine providence have not seemed to call for it. The men and the means at their disposal have all been needed and employed elsewhere, and the Committee have not felt at liberty to call for special contributions for that field. Without deciding that they will not at some future time recommence that work, the Committee consider it their duty to say they see no immediate prospect of it.

PUBLICATIONS.

The monthly issues of the American Missionary in paper form have averaged 21,000; and of the same in magazine form, 4500. The aggregate number of copies of the two during the year has been 306,000.

The Executive Committee have sought through these papers, not only to diffuse information in relation to our own missions, but also to impress and diffuse correct principles on the subject of missions, and the proper mode of conducting missionary operations. They have sought to make the paper an efficient instrumentality in increasing the missionary spirit, in securing larger and regular contributions for the support of missions, and in labors in behalf of the enslaved. They regard their expenditures in this direction as so much money used in direct furtherance of the missionary cause. The paper has been sent free to all donors to the funds of the Association who express a wish to receive it. The price of the Magazine is fifty cents a year.

The Committee have also issued, in tract form, a small edition of an editorial article, entitled, "The Conflict between Christianity and Slavery," taken from the paper. A small edition of a primer in the Sherbo language has been published for the use of the Mission. The primer was prepared by Mr. White. The American Tract Society, New-York, kindly granted the use of the wood-cuts of its Tract Primer for illustration.

or The reports of studylish by the most ware born in the land August. In some in stances the augicus of members in two or noise characterists given together.

For "Selections from the Reports of Time Messengers," see page 67.

The history of the Home field, the past year, is, in some respects, peculiar. The facts relating to our Missions therein, though painful in regard to portions of the field, are, on the whole, cheering. They reveal the wonder-working providence and grace of God, and give assurance, to those who view them with the eye of faith, of certain victory.

The death-of two Home Missionaries, and of the wives of two others, has been already mentioned. While such afflictive events call for self-examination, and spiritual improvement, they indicate to the faithful that the day is rapidly approaching when, having completed their work on earth, they will receive the reward laid up for them in heaven. Consoled by this consideration, we are also cheered by the reflection that the Church of God continues while its true-hearted members pass away, and that institutions like ours, based upon her glorious foundations, and aiding her great mission of love and salvation, may hope for permanency, and ever-increasing numbers, grace, and usefulness.

GENERAL TABLE,

Showing in parallel columns,

- 1. An alphabetical list of missionaries.
- 2. The names of churches and missionary districts aided.
- 3. Dates of commissions, or time of commencing labor.
- 4. Months of labor performed since the last report.
- 5. Hopeful conversions.
- 6. Additions to the churches, on examinatior.
- 7. Additions to the churches, by letter.
- 8. Number of chutch members.
- 9. Amount of aid pledged for a year's service.
- 10. Number of church members pledged to total abstinence
- 11. Amount of contributions to benevolent objects.
- 12. Number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars.
- 13. Other particulars.

EXPLANATIONS.

The reports of statistics by the missionaries are to the 1st of August. In some instances the number of members in two or more churches is given together.

For "Selections from the Reports of Home Missionaries," see page 67.

HOME MISSIONS.-SCHEDULE.

No. of S. School and BibleClass Scholars. Benevolent Object Contributions to 25 52 52 58 52 54 55 No. of Members. Additions by Let-Additions on Ex-Iopeful Conver-sions. CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY DISTRICTS.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

| MISSIONARIES. | CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | DATE OF
COMMIS-
SION, | Months of Labor
Reported. | Hopeful Conver-
sions. | Additions on Ex- | Additions by Let- | No. of Members. | Dollars of Aid
Pledged. | Abstinence. | Contributions to
Benevolent Object | No. of S. School an
Bible Class Scholari | Control Con |
|--|---|---|--|---|------------------|-------------------|--|---|-------------|---|---|--|
| Bannel Dilley C. B. Donaldson. S. A. Dwinnell C. H. Eaton. O. Emerson, Jr. | Cedron Cong. Ch. of Chili, Wareaw, Ill.
Cong. Ch., Lewell, Wis.
Cong. Chs., Reedsburgh and Irontown, Wis.
Congregation, Livonia, Mich.
Missionary at Large, Cong. Ch., Wolf Creek,
Iow. | Oct. 17, 1859
Jan. 1, 1860
Nov. 1, 1858 | 10
12
8 | 6 | 4 | 2 | 83
21
50
21 | 100
150
200
75
275 | | 1 17 | 100 | Revival. Left. Church weakened by immigration. Church organized at Irontown. Labored but part of the time at Livonia. Left. Preaches to feeble churches, makes collections. Promoted the organization of three churches. |
| Jacob Emrick
T. W. Evans | | 100 4 100 | 1 | 46 | 28 | 8 | 74
58 | 200 | | 85 00
61 90 | 1 | Itinerates much in Indiana. Revivals. Church organized. |
| J. G. Fee. L. R. Fifield C. C. Foot. J. W. For. H. H. Garnet. Geo. Genmel. J. R. Gibson Chas Granger. A. C. Hand. J. G. Hanson. C. F. Hawley. S. D. Helms. H. H. Hinman. T. H. Holmes. L. C. Holmes. Erra Howland. G. B. Hubbard. | Mesionary at large. Ch at Berea, Ky. Statistics of the Ch. given by J. A. R. Rogers. Cong. Ch., Ocdar Palls, Iowa. Whitelake Centre, Livonia, Detroit, Mich. 1st Cong. Ch., Ocdar Palls, Iowa. Whitelake Centre, Livonia, Detroit, Mich. 1st Cong. Ch. of Le Roy, N. Y. Shiloh Presb. Ch., New York City, N. Y. Cong. Ch. Adams, Avon & Brandon, Iowa. Free Presb. Ch., Prankfort & North Fork, Ohio. 1st Cong. Ch. of Paxten, Ill. Wes. M. Cha., Springville, Wheatland, Cooley Valley, Franklin and Viroqua, Wis. Rinerates in parts of So. Ohio, Cincinnati, Ohio. Evangelist, and has Wes. M. Ch., Elk Run, Iowa. Cong. Ch., Lima and Riyria, Iowa. Free Ch. of Sunbury, Ill. Trinity Cong. Ch., Abbion, Ill. Cong. Ch., Maple Grove, Wis. Missionary at large in So. Illinois, Du Quoin, Ill. 1st Cong. Ch., Oregon, East Toledo, Ohio. New-England Ch. at Aurora, Ill. Weish Cal. M. Ch., St. Clair, Pa. Female Missionary, Evansville, Ind Weish Cal. M. Ch., St. Clair, Pa. | July 15, 1859 June 15, 1860 April 14, 1859 Peb 15, 1879 Bept 18, 1889 June 1, 1880 | 12
4 6 6 12
12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 1 | 30
12
1
5
1
8
6
12 | 4 6 | 8 4 4 1 8 4 4 4 4 | 17
50
50
15
96
15
50
18
16
24
48
42
19
50
36
52 | 95
150
150
200
200
200
100
400
125
100
250
140 | | 250 00
10 00
150 00
4 00
1 50
10 00
136 00
23 00
5 00 | 150
70
160
195
63
25
80
99
60
80
70
20 | |

| . 12 | | | | | | | | | | |
|--|--|---|--------------------------------------|----------------------|---------------------------|------------------------|--|---|---|--|
| | Cong. Chs., New Corydon, Limberlost and Adam
Co., Decatur, Ind. | Feb. 1, 186 | 12 | 11 | 8 | 1 | I | 200 4 | 18 00 1 | 10 Field extensive in Jay and Adams counties. |
| | ist Cong. Ch. of Allegan, Mich. Welsh Cal. M. Chs., Scranton and Pittston, Pa Cong. Ch., Augusta, Mich. Itinerated in three counties. McKee, Ky. | May 5, 1866
July 27, 1856 | 12 | 15 | 12 | 9 | 56 | 75
100
150
450 | 10 00
58 00 | For statistics see Rev. D. Wirt's report (his predenance) |
| as, Kilbourn S. La Due ohn Lowry V. W. Lyle McChesney McElheny | Cong. Ch. of Sandwich, III Cong. Ch., Wattkegan, III 1st Wes. M. Ch., Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Wes. M. Ch., Troy, Miami Co., Ohio. Cong. Ch. of Babcock's Grove, III Free Presb. Chs., Clarkson, Ohio, and Buffalo Indiana and Djamondville, Pa. | Aug. 10, 1856
Nov. 1, 1856
June 1, 1856
Jan. 1, 1856
Jan. 1, 1856
May 1, 1856 | 12
9 12
7
5
4 | 8,
8, 8,
9, | 1
7
4
2
8 | 3
7
2
4
1 | 68
83
17 40
81
87 | 150 "
100 " 150 " 150 "
200 " | 52 22 1
21 00 5
16 00 8 | Revival. |
| has. Miles | lat Cong. and Presb. Chs., Waterloo, Iowa | Nov. 22, 1859
Nov. 15, 1859 | 8 4 | 6 | 4 | 7 | 88
28 | 200 all
50 "
100 " | 15 00 € | 5 Important field. 5 Commission expired. Labored with others in a revival. Left. See statistics of the church by C H. Peirce. |
| ohn Parry | Plymouth Cong. Ch., Minneapolis, Minn 1st Cong. (Welsh) Ch., Big Rock, Ill | May 18, 1860 | 10 | 16
8
10 | 12 | 26 | 78
25
84 | 200 "
150 "
100 " | 46 00 4 | Ch. edifice burned by incendiaries. Revival. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols and son drowned July 5. Encouraging field. |
| O. Pettibone ewis Pettibone H. Peirce D. Piatt er. Porter | Cong. Cha., McLean and Atlanta, Ill. Plymouth Cong. Ch., Burlington, Wis. Wes. M. Cha., Sardinia, Buford, Hurlies, Ohio. Cong. Ch., Knoxville, Ill. tst Cong. Ch., Ch., Cheterfield, Ill. Edwards Cong. Ch., Chicago, Ill. Cong. Ch., Bradford, Pa. Missionary at large, Salem, Ill. | Oct. 15, 1859
Sept. 1, 1859
May 17, 1860
Jan. 15, 1860
Mar. 1, 1860
Aug. 1, 1859
June 1, 1860 | 9
12 12
6 12 12
12 | 75
7
1 | 517
7
2 12
14 | 8
7
1
2
20 | 56
75
81
41
47
88
88 | 200 "
150 " 75 "
250 " 150 " 200 "
150 87 | 28 00 8
50 00 12
85 00
6 00 5
69 48 8
88 00 18 | Aided pastors in three other places in revivals. Preaches one fourth of the time to a colored congregation. Important but difficult field. Important and encouraging field. Preaches at many other points. Revival. Idurates on railroad lines and in Southern Illinois. |
| AL ALEXANDER DO | Cong. Chs., Salem and Collins, Ill | 11.10 | | 8 | 8 | | 42 | 225 all | 5 00 18 | Organized three churches. Church organized at Balem. Ch. edifice erected at Collins. Revival. |
| A. R. Rogers | Cha. of Berea and Silver Croek, Ky | Dec. 1, 1859 | 12 | • | 1 | 8 | 67
16 | 450 "
125 " | 14 75 8 | Itinerated in Whitley and other counties. Revival. Expelled by mob. Presenting the cause of Southern missions in New England and elsewhere. |
| W. Smith
R. Snow
B. L. Soule | Free Cong. Ch., Lake Mills, Wis. Cong. Ch., Benton, Eaton Rapids, Mich. Cong. Ch., Rochester, Wis. Cong. Ch., Raymond, Wis. | April 1, 1860
Mar. 1, 1860
June 20, 1860
Jan. 1, 1859 | 12 9 | | 1 | | 75
18
27
45 | 100
50 4
150 4
150 4 | 2 00 2
1 75 10 | No report. Encouraging field. Commission expired. Now at Elkhorn. No report. |
| H. Thompson | Cong. Cha", Shell Rock and Mason City, Iowa
Five Meth. Chs. in Logan & near Counties, Ohio.
Cong. Ch., Ringwood and McHenry, Ili
Free Fresb Chs., Mercer and Harrisville, Pa
Itinerated in North Carolina, | Oct. 1, 1859
May 1, 1859
April 1, 1860 | 6
12
12 | | 10
48
8
5 | 1 1 9 | 88
85
85
78 | 200 "
150
150 " 80 "
150 | 8 00 50 | Revival; also at Lime Creek. |
| P. Weed | Female Missionary and Teacher, Oberlin, Ohio. | 35 10 1050 | | | 100 | | 0 | 150 | | field, Ind. Taught school colored persons. Commission expired. | of discovering place and trade company of the property of the area portrolled and

It will be seen that the muchan of and That the ade

| | ď |
|-------------|----|
| - 10 | : |
| 15 | į |
| 9 | Š |
| | 3 |
| | ŧ |
| .= | ŧ |
| | • |
| - 6 | 1 |
| - 7 | 5 |
| 7 | ſ. |
| • | • |
| 1 | |
| - 1 | |
| ٠, | |
| -0 | ٠ |
| B | 1 |
| | Ĭ |
| TT. | 1 |
| - | Ĭ |
| - |) |
| - | |
| HED | 1 |
| | c |
| 12 | ī |
| - | |
| - | 1 |
| | |
| - | • |
| 0 8 | ı. |
| 0 | 2 |
| | |
| ı | |
| г | |
| | ٠ |
| | |
| | ٠ |
| U. | |
| U) | |
| | |
| Z | |
| Z | |
| Z | |
| NO | |
| NOIS | |
| NOIS | |
| NOIS | |
| NOISS | |
| NOISS | |
| NOISSI | |
| NOISSI | |
| NOISS | |
| NOISSI | |
| NOISSI | |
| MISSIM | |
| MISSIM | |
| MISSIM | |
| E MISSION | |
| E MISSION | |
| E MISSION | |
| ME MISSION | |
| ME MISSION | |
| ME MISSION | |
| OME MISSION | |
| OME MISSION | |
| OME MISSION | |
| ME MISSION | |
| OME MISSION | |
| OME MISSION | |
| OME MISSION | |
| OME MISSION | |

| MISSIONARIES | CHURCHES AND MISSIONARY
DISTRICTS. | DATE OF
COMMIS-
SION. | Months of Labor
Reported.
Hopeful Conver-
sions. | Additions on Ex- | amination.
Additions by Let-
ter. | No. of Members. | Dollars of Aid
Pledged.
Pledged to Total
Abstinence. | Contribution to | Benevolent Object
No. of S. School an
Bible Class Schelar | OTHER PARTICULARS. |
|--|--|--|---|------------------|---|-----------------|--|-----------------|---|---|
| West. Wheeler. Whitmore. Williams. Williams. | Pree Presb. Cha., Strait Creek & Huntington, Ohio Oct. 1, 1839 Estoored at Evanariel and in the vrienity, Ind. Nov. 28, 1839 114 Cong. Cha., Morrison and Olyde, Ill. 115 Cong. Ch., Troy, Welsheld, Ohio. Oct. 1, 1839 Welsh Cal. M. Che, Miwantse, Wint. April 1, 1839 Welsh Cal. M. Che, Miwantse, Wint. Bethel, Banger, Wis. Bethel, Banger, Wis. Jan. 1, 1830 | Oct. 1, 1859
Nov. 28, 1859
Oct. 1, 1858
Oct. 1, 1850
Ipril 1, 1860
une 1, 1859
an. 7, 1860 | 52 00 52 4 5 52
50 00 52 00 | W 66 H | 8 4 58 1 | E 8412 8 | 00011000
11000
10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000 10000
100 | 8 888 8 | 00 00 160
00 160
00 183
0 114
0 0 184 | 407 B |
| William | EVERGERIAL, Hopewell On, Cyntanania, Ind. | 4 | 2 | 1 | | 16 | 300 | 2 | 8 | Itherates principally in Posey county. Difficult but important field, |
| L. Worrell | Cong. Char. Allegan and Leanont, Mich. Cong. Cha. Avon and Prairie City, III. Nine West. Meth. Chs. in N. C. | Nov. 1, 1859
Nov. 1, 1859
Dec. 12, 1859
Oct. 15, 1859 | - 22 | e 12 | Moo | 8888 | $ 120
$0120
$0120 | 83 | 50 30
21 106 | Mo. report.
Labored at Lamont since 15th June.
Church edidee building at Avon.
Preached in several counties. Revival. Imprisoned |
| L. D. Wyekoff | Free Ch. of Bruce, Ill Aug. 1, 1859 12 1 1 | ug. 1, 1859 | 12 1 | 1 | - | 89 | 100 | 85 00 | 90 | $3000 bonds paid for his deliverance. Now in Indiana, |

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

The Association and its Auxiliaries have employed, during the year, in the Home field, 112 Missionaries, and 4 colporters. They were located as follows: In States east of Ohio, 15; in Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan, 35; in Illinois, 23; in Wisconsin and Minnesota, 14; in Iowa, 10; in Kansas, 4; in Missouri, 1; in Kentucky, 8; in North Carolina, 2. One colporter has been employed in Kentucky; in Indiana, 1; and in Illinois, 2.

Most of the missionaries are pastors; some of them minister to several churches; others have extensive districts, in which they preach, engage in revivals of religion, and promote the Anti-Slavery cause, the Temperance Reformation, and moral reforms generally.

The statistical results, so far as ascertained from the reports of the missionaries and colporters, are as follows:

The whole number of churches is now 145.

The additions to the churches, during the year, on profession of faith, 534; and by letters from other churches, 302.

The whole number of church members under the care of our missionaries, is 5223.

The number of hopeful conversions during the past year, is 685.

Twenty-five revivals of religion have been reported in the Home field.

The members of the churches are generally pledged to total abstinence from intoxicating drinks; and are friends and supporters of the Anti-Slavery cause.

The number of Sabbath-school and Bible-class scholars connected with the missionary churches and out stations is 6801.

The contributions to benevolent objects reported by the missionaries, excepting contributions to local objects, is $1990.34.

From these statistics something of the nature and importance of the work is seen. The mere statement of the number of our missionaries and colporters in the several States and sections in which they are located shows the wide extent of the field of our operations.

The unprecedented occurrences in those portions of the Slave States in which some of our missionaries and colporters have been laboring, require that unusual prominence should be given, in this report, to their labors, sacrifices, and prospects,

It will be seen that the number of our Home missionaries is larger than heretofore, and consequently the expense of this department has been increased. The indications of providence rendered this desirable, if not imperative. The West has, during the year, suffered from remarkable and prolonged pecuniary embarrassments, owing chiefly to short crops. So great has been the pressure that some of the churches, once aided by us, and which had become self-supporting, have been compelled to renew their applications for aid. They have been driven to make great sacrifices to meet their obligations, and but for the timely appropriations of the Association much suffering would have been endured by the missionaries' families. The people have, also, been crippled in their local and benevolent enterprises. The abundant harvests throughout the country, while they call for devout thankfulness to the Lord of the harvest, will, it is believed, secure the necessary relief.

FREE STATES.

Our work in the Free States is, with slight exceptions, in the West. We have two classes of missionaries; those having in charge a church or churches, as pastors or stated supply, often with out-stations for preaching in the vicinity. The greater part of their salary, in most cases, is paid by their people, who make application to us for such additional sums as are regarded by them and the minister, necessary for his support. The great majority of our missionaries are of this description. The second class are missionaries at large, or evangelists. Some of them have large districts among a scattered population least favored with the institutions of the Gospel. These brethren are highly prized by the churches and by the ministers in their general fields of labor, working with them at times in special meetings, and seasons of religious interest, and promoting all true reforms.

The object of the Association, in the labors of its missionaries, is not only the preaching the Gospel with a view to lead men to repentance and saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, but also to secure purity, give strength to the Church, and enlist it in more devoted efforts for the conversion of sinners, and the salvation of the world. Whatever legitimately promotes these ends—Sabbath-schools, general education, temperance, purity—are encouraged by our missionaries, while ignorance, error, irreligion, intemperance, licentiousness, profanity, Sabbath-breaking, and whatever destroys individual character, public integrity, justice, benevolence, humanity, and piety, are earnestly opposed by them. They urge the love of God and man set forth in the law and Gospel as essential to salvation, enforcing all the claims of Christianity as taught and practiced by its divine Author.

No one can form too high an estimate of the vital power of such Christianity when there is the cooperation of a true church with the ministrations of the faithful servant of Christ on the Sabbath, and at other times, in the instruction of young, in meetings for social prayer and praise, in family piety, and all the benevolent and elevating influences of true religion. Who can calculate the blessed influence exerted by our hundred missionaries in their immediate localities, and upon the Church and nation? What tongue can declare the glory and preciousness of one revival of pure and undefiled religion? How great then the blessings that have been secured for time and eternity by the gracious visitations of the Spirit in the twenty-five revivals in connection with the labors of our missionaries during the past year. By this great fact, and by the conversions which have occurred in many places where no general revival has existed, we are greatly cheered and encouraged. When we reflect on what society would have been without these labors, we are made to feel the value of our missions, and the work connected with them.

In view of the fact that a population of all nations and characters is pressing into the new States, it is a question of great importance what foundations shall be laid. How great are our obligations to plant the institutions of the Gospel in every accessible place, among a people who are yet to decide the destiny of the country. So far as men and means are furnished, we are endeavoring to meet this obligably the labors of our missionaries in those States.

With reference to this great work, we turn for a moment to the consideration of a question which is coming to us from the Pacific and other States; whether we are employing a full proportion of itinerating missionaries. Those who have been almost exclusively conversant with the more uniform methods of working at the East by the ministry as settled pastors, may, at first sight, be disinclined to give this subject its relative importance. We ask for no general itinerating system to take the place of the pastorate, as it would be an evil. Some of our Methodist brethren are becoming persuaded of this, but the history of that denomination shows the vast advantage of the pioneer work in carrying the Gospel, with its attendant blessings, to the first inhabitants of the new settlements. And, so far as our general experience is concerned in the employment of this class of missionaries, the reasons are obvious to us why the number should be relatively increased. The work is arduous, and requires much self-denial. They are separated most of the time from their families, and are called to endure unusual hardness, neartoe allerones stations estation returned

For a flow years past, with our missionaries and colporaters, we have endeavered to dispet the darkness of these sections by the ILLINOIS HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION AND WESTERN AGENCY.

There has been no material change in our operations at the West, except so far as relates to the dissolution of the Illinois Home Missionary Association, preparatory to instituting a Western Agency by the Parent Association, with a Secretary at Chicago.

The importance of this auxiliary, and the cooperation of the brethren, ministers, and laymen formerly connected with it, made us at first reluctant to unite with them in deciding that a change in our mode of operation was desirable; but the vote passed at the close of its proceedings assures us of the continued friendship and influence of these brethren.

COLLECTIONS FOR HOME MISSIONS.

Some questions arising from the peculiar relations of Congregationalists and the N. S. Presbyterians, and the grounds of their difficulties in regard to their mutual support of the American Home Missionary Society, seemed for a time to threaten embarrassment at the West, in the action of churches friendly to us, some of whom had in years past been fostered by us in their feebleness. But the course taken by these bodies more recently has practically relieved us from such embarrassments. The fact, however, that we are not a denominational Society should have prevented any question in regard to the freedom of persons and churches, of either of the denominations concerned, in aiding in the support of our Home Missions. Arrangements restricting the freedom of churches and denominations in the support of Christian missions, in a certain state of things, may seem to the parties to answer a fair purpose, but when subjected to a thorough analysis, they are found to be as impolitic as they are earthly.

BORDER MISSIONS.

At present this field comprises the lower parts of the North-western States and Kansas. The States of Indiana and Illinois, bordering on the South by Kentucky, and the latter on the west by Missouri, are in their borders largely composed of a population from Slave States, and have generally the ignorance, negro hatred, and pro-slavery feeling of those States. In these sections, called Egypt, the slave-power commands such forces as generally control the vote of those States in favor of men upholding human bondage. The moral and religious character of these sections generally corresponds.

For a few years past, with our missionaries and colporters, we have endeavored to dispel the darkness of these sections by the preaching of the Gospel in its application to all sin, giving suitable attention to slavery and caste, and the evils growing out of them. In general the politicians and ministers of that region have opposed our missionaries.

Our colporters have done much good by the sale and distribution of religious books and tracts, including such as bear directly upon slavery, caste, intemperance, and other immoralities. It is encouraging to notice the good providence that is arousing the people even in these dark sections of the land to look at the slavery question in aspects new to them, and to the moral and religious questions involved.

In these portions of the country we have had during the year nine missionaries and three colporters. In lower Indiana two of the missionaries were there only during the winter months, as they were appointed for Kentucky, but being prevented from going by the outbreak in that State, they performed a good work in Indiana. In much of the central and southern parts of these border States the pro-slavery spirit has received a check; and those of our missionaries who have in some sections met with opposition and abuse, now witness an improvement and increased readiness to hear the Gospel, which has been, to some extent, the power of God unto the salvation of souls, and the sanctification of believers.

The labors of Rev. William Holmes in Southern Illinois, and Rev. A. L. Rankin in many counties along the great lines of railroads in that State, as missionaries at large, and Rev. Levin Wilson in the county of Posey, and other counties of Indiana in the South-western section, have been of essential service. They are reaching ministers who have sympathy with Christian reforms, and find that some heartily coöperate with them. This is especially true of Illinois. The reports recently given in our publication of the labors of these brethren show not only the need of establishing churches and aiding pastors in many places, but especially the present great need of more itinerating preachers in all that region. These brethren have prepared the way for the organization of four churches already established, while others are soon to be formed.

We have attempted but little on the southern border of Iowa. Much more needs to be done. Emigrants are continually passing from this State into Missouri. They should be instructed in the true principles of religion and freedom, and thus be prepared to aid in forming the character and institutions of that State.

We have desired to do more than we have been able toold among the colored aspidation of the country. Something has been done the may year by our colored messignation and by others with escouraging

List to a principle that I have a fire any dealer restreet, that they proceeding of the Groups in the application to all cit, giving suitable

Our work in Kansas has not been enlarged, though there is much need of it, both for the Territory itself and its influence on slavery near its borders. The life of Kansas has been from the first one of struggle. Its wonderful triumph all now see. Our missionaries, beside laboring for the salvation of souls, establishing churches and Sabbath and other schools, were among the leaders in the moral conflict with the slave-power, and contributed their share toward the favorable results.

Much more is needed to be done. Kansas must be fortified by true religion, and her institutions established on the firm basis of humanity and of civil and religious freedom. In some of the districts religion and sound morality are sadly neglected. The seeds of infidelity are being scattered, and Sabbath desecration and other kindred evils, fatal to virtue and prosperity, are openly promoted. More missionaries are needed, some to traverse these districts, preach the Gospel in its application to prevailing sins, and gather together and form into churches the scattered flock of Christ; others to minister to the feeble churches already formed, strengthen their hands and direct their energies toward the great end for which the Christian Church was instituted—the honor of God, and the conversion and sanctification of mankind.

The calamity of the drought, so general in Kansas, and which will be increased until next year's harvest, will throw back for a time their progress, notwithstanding the apparent success of some of their citizens in the gold regions at the West. In most instances the pecuniary embarrassments have prevented the completion of church edifices. Some losses have been sustained by death and the removal of members of the churches, but on the whole there is progress. Great efforts must still be made to strengthen the cause of Christ, of humanity, education, and all things pertaining to the spiritual, moral, and civil advantage of the people.

Kensas, providentially, is to have power, from her origin, her position, and her bearing upon all around her. May she be made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob! Let his servants aid and cheer her in her youth, and she will repay a thousand fold in her majority.

MISSIONS AMONG THE PEOPLE OF COLOR.

We have desired to do more than we have been able to do among the colored population of the country. Something has been done the past year by our colored missionaries, and by others, with encouraging results. We have had four colored brethren under commission; one in New-York City, who is a pastor, attending also to missionary work. Another has been employed as a missionary agent among the colored population, principally in New-England. From their reports much interesting information relative to the moral and religious state of this class has been gathered, showing the great need of efforts by the people themselves for self-improvement, and of aid from others in their behalf. Encouraging facts have also been gained. One of these reports the revival of God's work in several places in Ohio, where he labored, in which forty souls were hopefully converted.

At Evansville, Indiana, a female missionary is teaching a colored school, and doing missionary work among the colored population and others with favorable results.

SLAVE STATES.

An important matter for consideration in this report, in its relation to the persecution of our missionaries in Kentucky, and its bearings upon freedom of speech, and the enforcement of the precepts of Christianity, is the difference of opinion avowed there on the question of obedience to wicked laws, such as plainly violate the laws of God.

In the progress of his work, Mr. Fee had felt it to be his duty to state publicly that A LAW CONFESSEDLY CONTRARY TO THE LAW OF NATURE AND OF REVELATION OUGHT NOT TO BE ENFORCED BY HUMAN COURTS. This, he said, was the opinion of men of God, in Old and New Testament times, as recorded in the Bible. The Fugitive Slave Bill, in particular, he said he could not obey. It was contrary to God's law, that higher law which is above all human laws and constitutions. He would not offer violent resistance to it, but would refuse to obey its requirements and endure its penalties.

These statements were widely misrepresented, and Mr. Fee was denounced as holding and promulgating revolutionary sentiments, subversive of the government of the State. Notwithstanding his continued denial of this charge, the denunciations were frequently repeated, both before and after the commencement of the violence done to our missionaries. Coming as they did from a source from which better things were expected, and falling upon minds already excited, their influence in inflaming mob-violence was manifest. To these denunciations, more than to any other cause, may be attributed the development of a spirit which first found vent in the persecution of Christian missionaries, men of peace, who declined defending themselves by the use of deadly weapons. Such a spirit, if suffered to prevail, will be fatal to freedom of speech, to freedom of religious opinion, and to the existence and integrity of government. The principle that Mr. Fee has contended for must be sustained at all hazards. It is the principle that actuated the apostles and martyrs, that influenced our fathers, and which was inculcated by the Lord Jesus Christ. Surely, it is enough that Christians, after full protests, when they can not conscientiously obey unrighteous laws, should be willing to submit to their penalties. If politicians or ecclesiastics require more than this, they transcend their limits, and war against God.

It is just here that the issue is to be made in Church and State. The Christian abolitionist must claim the right of meeting his responsibility to God first. The higher law must have his chief regard, and where human laws oppose it, those laws must be set at naught. It is only necessary, therefore, to exhibit the unmitigated iniquity of slavery enactments, to show that every man is bound not only not to aid in the execution of them, but to oppose them by all peaceful and appropriate means. One of the most alarming signs of the times is the demand of unquestioned obedience to every requisition made under the forms of law, irrespective of the rights or the wrongs involved. As a Missionary Society we are bound to oppose such claims. In the case before us, the duty is emphatic, to sustain our missionaries in the maintainance of correct sentiments, while they give great prominence to those eternal truths for which they are persecuted. With this view we look upon the support of a religion here, and in the slaveholding States, that will stand against slavery and the impious claims of its laws, as of vital importance. It may cost much, but less than the just penalty of treason to God and humanity.

At our last annual meeting the reports presented from our missions in the slave States were of a very encouraging character, and for a season all interests were promising. The school at Berea, Kentucky, and the general improvements there were attracting attention, and a number of families from Ohio and elsewhere were drawn to the place for residence, with a desire to help on the cause of righteousness and freedom.

In Whitley county our missionary, who was about leaving for the winter, was offered a fine site for the establishment of an academy, and he pledged himself to send the people a missionary teacher, with whom there had been correspondence. A large number of young men and women were anxious for instruction. He had preached freely in three other counties, and in one place a revival had taken place, in which some of his former pupils were hopefully converted. In Jackson, Laurel, and Estel counties, our missionaries, Rev. George Candee and Rev. William Kendrick, were extending their labors with increased favor, and magistrates gave assurance that abolitionists should have equal right of speech and protection with other citizens.

At this time Rev. John G. Fee was in New-England, securing funds for the Literary Institution at Berea, and presenting with great interest the condition of the South, its claims upon us for aid in the missionary work, and our duty in regard to slavery. Rev. J. A. R. Rogers and others were at Berea prosecuting their work with ardor, and the several churches in different parts of the State were free from molestation.

This state of things continued until after the affair of John Brown, and the tragic scenes that followed. With the exception of an occasional missile from some slaveholder-or pro-slavery politician or newspaper, no one was moved to violence.*

In some counties in North-Carolina the anti-slavery churches, under the care of our missionary, Rev. Daniel Worth, and his associate, Rev. Alfred Vestal, were enjoying the gracious presence of the Spirit, and sinners were converted to God. Another missionary had been appointed, but he had not entered upon his labors, when the storm of persecution burst forth.

In Kentucky the politicians and slaveholders of Madison county, in which Berea is situated, influenced by the weekly charges of the pro-slavery democratic paper, were seized with the wildest fanatical excitement. Before any violent demonstrations were made upon Berea, a self-constituted Committee in Laurel county seized two of our missionaries, Rev. George Candee and Rev. William Kendrick, who had been preaching there, and our colporter, Robert Jones, sheared the hair and beards of the missionaries, and after tarring their heads and faces, let them go. In December, meetings were held at Richmond, Madison county, "to consider the propriety of removing John G. Fee and J. A. R. Rogers and others, associated at Berea." Reasons to be considered at the second of these meetings were printed in the Lexington Observer and widely circulated. They came to the notice of Mr. Fee, who was at Pittsburgh, Pa., about to return to Berea. He prepared a circular for distribution in the county of Madison. which was forwarded, but not permitted to be circulated. He fully refuted the charge made against him and his associates of having treasonable designs, and explained the remarks concerning John Brown made by him in Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's church, at Brooklyn, N. Y. These remarks had been perverted by the press, and were used against Mr. Fee at the first meeting of the mob. He stated his principles and aims as in accordance with true law, both human and divine, and declared that while seeking by the application of the Gospel the abolition of slavery as a sin against God and at war with the best interests of all, he had always held himself in readiness to be tried by law on any charge which might be brought against him.

^{*} The Rev. George MacNell editor of the North-Carolina Prechylerian, it is said, called upon the solicitor of the Fourth Circuit to institute proceedings against Rev. Daniel Worth, whose preaching against slavery, and whose reports, published in the American Mussionary, were specially obnications to this pro-slavery champion.

The second meeting was held in the court-house at Richmond. The paper that had been circulated for signatures through the county was read. It was signed by seven hundred persons, and expressed the sense of the community that the abolitionists should be driven out. The Mountain Democratic Messenger, published at Richmond, stated that the court-house was filled, and that some of the oldest and most respectable citizens were present. During the meeting, the circular of Mr. Fee was read; also a letter of Mr. Rogers, confirmatory of the statements and sentiments in the circular, and earnestly inviting those who had an unfavorable opinion of their work to visit Berea, and learn its character. After these documents had been read, a long address was adopted, in which there was much said about the right to self-preservation, and the dangers to slave-holding communities from abolitionism. The following resolutions were also passed:

"Resolved, 1. That the Committee which has been appointed by this meeting do, within ten days from this time, wait upon John G. Fee, J. A. R. Rogers, and all others that the Committee may think inlimical sail dangerous to our institutions, our interests, and our public safety and tranquillity, and inform them that they must quit this county and State; and that they must be without the limits of this county within ten days after the time of receiving said notice; and that said Committee are directed by this meeting to take such steps as they may deem right and proper in removing the said Fee, Rogers, etc., from the county, if they are found within its limits after the time specified has run out.

"2. That the said Committee meet in this place on Wednesday, the 21st instant, at 10 o'clock A.M., to consult as to the manner of their proceedings in carrying out these resolutions."

On Friday, the 23d of December, as described by Rev. Mr. Rogers, the Committee, consisting of sixty-two mounted men, comprising much of the wealth and influence of Madison county, appeared at Berea, drawn up in war-like array. "They called at the residence of Bros. Boughton, Hanson, Smith, Griffin, and myself, and ordered us and Brother Davis visiting at our house, as also Bros. Hayes, Parker, and all Northerners of Brother Fee's principles, to leave the State within ten days."

This was on the 23d December. He told them that he had not intentionally violated any law of the Commonwealth, and that, if he had unconsciously done so, he would be most happy to be tried according to law. He was informed that they did not know that he had violated any law, but that his principles were incompatible with the public peace, and that he must go. The charge against him was Abolitionism—the penalty, expulsion from the State.

No harsh or personally disrespectful language was used. He was even told, with much courtesy of word and manner, that he was esteemed as a gentleman, but his presence was offensive on account of his principles. They laid it down as an axiom, that such sentiments as he entertained were not to be tolerated by a slaveholding people—that Abolition doctrines and slaveholding were not to be permitted together—that one or other must go under, and that they were resolved he and his friends must go.

They warned him peaceably, but any amount of force necessary to carry out the objects of the Richmond meeting would be unhesitatingly employed. They appeared now in peace, but if he did not heed the warning they would reappear for war. The Committee represented the wealth and respectability of Madison county, and was sustained for the most part by public sentiment. There were, however, quite a number of slaveholders residing in the vicinity who were opposed to the proceedings of the higher law pro-slavery zealots.

On the next day, the following persons, J. A. R. Rogers, J. G. Hanson, I. D. Reed, Jas. S. Davis, John F. Boughton, Swinglehurst Life, John Smith, E. T. Hayes, Chas. E. Griffin, A. G. W. Parker, W. H. Torry, at Berea, (Rev. J. G. Fee being in Ohio,) by their Committee, Messrs Reed and Hayes, presented a petition to Governor Magoffin, at Lexington, for his protection, as being law-abiding citizens, subject to gross misrepresentation; and making a statement of the transactions of the day before, and the notice of the Committee of sixty-two to leave the county and State or suffer violent removal. Governor Magoffin received the bearers of the petition, (Reed and Hayes) courteously, and advised them, for the sake of preserving the peace of the State, to leave it. He said the public mind was deeply moved by the events in Virginia, and that until the excitement subsided, their presence in the State would be dangerous, and he could not engage to protect them from their fellow-citizens who had resolved that they must go. He promised them security while taking their departure, and that their property should be protected.

Rev. Mr. Boughton's account of the departure, given at a public meeting at Cincinnati, says: "Last Sabbath was an interesting and solemn day at Berea. Assembled in the school-house and church, addresses were made by those who were to be driven from their homes, and by others, and afterward with many tears, and much regret, a parting took place. A few days after, the people in whose midst the now exiles had labored entertained them at a dinner. On Thursday followed the exodus. In the rain, the mud, and the cold, they set out for this region. The exiles in all this were hopeful and happy, the poor ones left behind tearful and mourning. Those who expelled this colony were not the fiery fanatics, or the rowdy class, but the wealthy and the strong, who had long studied upon it, but who, ignorant of the designs of the Mission, said it was unsafe to allow its existence in their midst. During the first excitement there was no delay in the continuation of the work, nor any wavering in the prosecution of the details of business. All believed it safe to remain until the determination to force an exile, or to exterminate by death, became apparent; then but two alternatives remained, flight or fight. Friends were around who would have resisted even unto death; but the colonists believed that they should carry on their labor in love and in peace, and they preferred exile, with the silent preaching their absence would furnish, to the shedding of blood."

An interesting account was given in the Cincinnati Commercial, of December 31st, of the arrival of the exiles, and in the Gazette of January 3d, of a public meeting in which the missionaries gave an account of the expulsion. We annex a brief extract:

"Citizens of Kentucky Expelled for Entertaining Free Sentiments. Thirty-six Exiles in Cincinnati-Governor Magoffin Refuses to Protect Them.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial, Dec. 31.]

"Thirty-six persons arrived in this city from Kentucky yesterday, having been warned to leave the State, for the crime of holding slavery to be a sin. They are from Berea and vicinity, Madison county, Kentucky, where they were living industrious, sober and peaceful lives. Most of these persons are stopping at the Donnison House, though a portion have been received at private houses.

"They are inoffensive persons, men of peace, and would not have been driven from any community in the world except one oppressed and benighted by the slave system. They were neighbors, friends and co workers of the Rev. John G. Fee, whose reputation as an earnest and quiet opponent of slavery is well known to the country. Among the exiles are Rev. J. A. R. Rogers, principal of a flourishing school at Beren, and his family; J. D. Reed and family, John S. Hanson and family. Mr. Hanson is a native of Kentucky, and a bard-working, thrifty man. He had recently erected a steam saw-mill, and owns five hundred acres of land in Madison county, Ky. The Rev. J. F. Boughton; E. T. Hayes and S. Life, carpenters; A. G. W. Parker, a native of South-Carolina; W. H. Torrey, a native of Tennessee; John Smith, a native of Ohio, farmer, the heal bloom is a native of Carolina; W. H. Torrey, a native of Tennessee; John Smith, a native of Ohio, farmer, who has lived in Kentucky some years. Mr. Smith is described by Mr. Fee, as a graybaired father, a man of prayer, indeed of eminent piety and usofulness. And there are others whose names we have not procured. More than half of the exiles are natives of Southern States, and several are native Kentuckians. The only offense charged against any of them is that of entertaining abolition sentiments."

It was hoped that the spirit of persecution would not prevail in Bracken county, which is near Ohio, and the adjoining counties, where Mr. Fee had first established churches, and which was the region of his birthplace. In January, he, with others, went to Bracken county, and took up their residence, his family having first gone there from Berea. But a storm was preparing. On the 25th of January Mr. Fee wrote:

"I am enduring a great trial. I am again to be driven out by a more overwhelming force than there was in Madison county. Last Monday it was supposed there were from eight hundred to a thousand people at the county-seat. With almost unanimous rush, the mass gathered from the two counties, (I am near the Mason county line,) and resolved to drive me out. Some ten or twelve days are given us to leave. A committee of fifty men are appointed to come and warn us to go. We have sought council of the Lord and of friends. There can be no human protection. I am to be driven out from one of the best communities in the State.

"A few days since I went to Germantown to talk with the leading influential citizens. I desired to meet them face to face, to talk over the positions I assume, and the evils of mob violence. Bro. Humlong, a man of true excellence, went with me... We called, and talked freely with many. A physician of commanding position in society, speaking of the people at Bethesda—the friends of the church—said: 'I wish to heaven all Kentucky was as that neighborhood. The people,' said he, 'are industrious, quiet, upright citizens,' and then repeated his wish. Now from this scene of thrift I must be driven; from relatives, from the dear brothers and sisters in the church, and friends around; also, from the plan or prospect of building up churches in Kentucky; and, still harder, from the prospect of carrying to the people of Kentucky the only Gospel that can save. I can understand now why the Saviour wept over Jerusalem as he saw that people about to push the cup of salvation from them. Oh! how I wish I could be with you to tell the anguish of my heart for others, and to plan for the future. The giving up of property, home, and all earthly considerations is not so painful as the idea of giving up these churches and the privilege of laboring directly with and for the people of Kentucky. How shall I go away and give up this work? I can not give it up, though I must change my place of labor for a time. For years I have had unceasing care and toil to get things so established here that I could have a prospect of their standing. Other brethren have toiled for the like object. We hoped to have rest of spirit and to rejoice in that rapid growth which we expected to see when we should have lived down much of the opposition, and seen confidence secured. The rest has not yet come. The viper that now stings has been nurtured into strength, where ?-in the bosom of the denominations around us! Church and State have warmed into life that which is now poisoning their vitals and ruthlessly destroying all law and order.

"The abomination of desolation is working. Can, oh! can this nation be roused to the work of exterminating this monster-Slavery? It can be done, by means peaceful and legitimate, if Christians and philanthropists will only at once do their duty in Church and State.

"Brothers Hanson, Griffin, Mallett, Holman, and Robinson, are ordered to leave here. Brother Davis (Rev. J. S. Davis of Cabin Creek, Lewis county) is also driven out. A tremendous meeting for that purpose preceded the one held here."

The Cincinnati Enquirer, of January 31st, gave an account of the meetings in Mason and Bracken counties, referred to by Mr. Fee, and of the expulsion:

"At the meeting in Mason county, January 21, a resolution was passed approving of the action of the mob in Madison county, in driving out Mr. Fee and his fellow-laborers. The second and third resolutions are as follows:

"'2. That no Abolitionist has a right to establish himself in the slaveholding community, and disseminate opinions and principles destructive of its tranquillity and safety.
"'3. That forbearance ought nor will not by us be extended to those persons who come here with intent to, and who do actually interfere with our rights of property or domestic institutions. Our own peace, and the good of the slaves, alike demand their expulsion.

"The sixth resolution declared:

"'6. That the Rev. James S. Davis (a co-worker with the Rev. John G. Fee, and one of those expelled from Madison) is, as we understand, now a resident on Cabin Creek, in Lewis county, Ky., and has, as we are informed, recently received for circulation a large number of Helper's Compendium of the Impending Crisis of the South, a book, in the estimation of this meeting, dangerous in its spirit and tendencies. Be it therefore further resolved, That his presence and residence among us are highly objectionable, and that he be and is hereby advised and requested to remove from Kentucky.' And a committee was appointed to require him to leave in seven days, 'or suffer the consequences of non-compliance.

"MEETING IN BRACKEN COUNTY.

"At this meeting, held January 23, the following resolutions were passed: "'Whereas, John Gregg Fee and John G. Hanson, lately expelled from Madison county, Kentucky, are now in Bracken county, preparing to make it their home. And whereas, that both Fee and Hanson are enemies to the State, dangerous to the security of our lives and property, we, the citizens of Kentucky, deem it our duty to protect our lives and property from enemies at home as well as abroad, do now solemnly declare the said John G. Fee and John G. Hanson must, by the 4th of February next, leave this county and State.

"11. That we carnestly entreat them to do so without delay, but in the event of their failure to do so by that time, they shall do so, even should it require physical force to "2. That J. B. Mallett, a school-teacher in District No. 27, and Wyatt Robinson. and - Holman, must leave this county and State at the same time; and in the event of their failing or refusing, they shall be expelled by force; and that for the purpose of carrying out these resolves, a committee of fifty of our citizens be appointed to notify the said Hanson, Fee, Mallett, Robinson, and Holman of the action of this meeting, and said committee be also empowered to give notice to any other persons of like character to leave the State, and report the same to the meeting to be held in Germantown on the 6th day of February next."

"The third resolution named the committee of fifty brave men, appointed to give notice to some half-dozen peaceable men to leave the State. The fourth resolution was:

"'4. That we deprecate the use of a church, known as the Free Church, by Abolition preachers; and we now solemnly declare that we will resist, by all possible means, the occupying said church by such incendiary persons."

The following is slightly abridged from the Enquirer:

"CITIZENS NOTIPIED TO LEAVE,

"In accordance with the resolutions adopted at the Bracken county meeting, a committee representing the organized mob, proceeded, on Thursday, the 25th inst., to the work assigned them, and notified Fee, Hanson, Mallett, Holman, Robinson, Grigson. and Griffin, that they must be without the State on or by the 4th of February next.

"They assumed an astonishing amount of pomposity. Such was the power assumed by them, that they passed through the tell-gate, and informed the keeper that 'this company paid no toll.

"They first met in Germantown, and proceeded in a body to the residence of Mr.

John Humlong, and called for J. B. Mallett.

"He came out within a few steps of the company, when the chairman, Dr. Bradford, called out in a stern voice, as follows: 'Walk this way, Mr. Mallett; don't have any fears, we don't intend to hurt you.' Mr. Mallett replied: 'No, he expected not; he was in the company of gentlemen, he supposed.' Dr. Bradford read the resolutions, and asked: 'Do you intend to leave?' Mr. Mallett replied that he had said he intended to

"Mr. Mallett asked the privilege of making a few remarks, but was told that the mob had no time to listen. Mr. Humlong asked, and was also deuled this privilege. However, he made the inquiry, what was this for? They replied, for teaching incendiary and insurrectional sentiments. Mr. H. said the teaching had always been that of

"They then proceeded to J. G. Hanson's, and in the same pompous manner notified his son to leave.

"He endeavored to get a hearing, but to no purpose. In this mob were some of his relations.

"They next called at Mr. Vincent Hamilton's, father-in-law of J. G. Fee. Mr. Fee told them he had intended to leave, yet he recogized no right to require him to leave. He asked the mob to pause a moment, but the chairman ordered them to proceed. As one of the mob passed, Mr. Fee extended his hand, and said:

"'Do you approve of this action?"
"'Yes, I do,' was the reply.
"'Well,' said Mr. Fee, 'we took yows together in the same church. I expected different things of you.'

"Mr. Fee said that in that mob were his schoolmates, parents of schoolmates, and "From this they proceeded to the residence of John G. Gregg, where Mr. Holman was stopping, in feeble fleath, ordering him peremptorily to be without the State by the 4th of February next. respond to a well-point have to other in this boarder of the state of the property of the latter of the property of the

"CHARACTER OF THE EXPELLED.

"J. G. Fee is a minister, and well known as being an earnest man, and esteemed by all who love and admire an honest man. J. G. Hanson is a citizen of Berea, from whence he had been driven, and was visiting at his father's. He had never been charged of a crime, unless it was his honesty! C. E. Griffin is also a Berean, and is noted for his quiet peaceable character. Mr. Griffin is a quiet, unpretending laborer, and has always been noted for his amiable disposition. He is a poor man, and this blow is felt severely by him and his family. He is driven from the land of his nativity, the scenes of his childhood, and all his friends.

"G. R. Holman has formerly been employed as a school-teacher, but has not been engaged in teaching this winter on account of poor health. He is a native of Ohio. J. B. Mallett has taught Locust Academy school for nearly three years. The school has the reputation of being one of the best in the country.

"Notwithstanding the school closed most abruptly, he received a certificate of respect, signed by the patrons of the institution.

"DEPARTURE OF THE EXILES.

"The exiles left Germantown on Saturday morning. Eighteen, including women and children, made up the company of the expelled, and some of these persons arrived in this city last night. Legal advice was taken, prior to their leaving home, as to the best course to be pursued. It was found that they could only remain by resisting the mob, and this was not deemed advisable. It was therefore decided to withdraw "The names of those who arrived here last night are as follows: C. R. Griffin and lady; the Rev. John G. Fee; J. G. Hanson; G. R. Holman; J. B. Mallett; and Oliver

Rev. Jas. S. Davis and family left Cabin Creek, Lewis county, for Ohio, so that all the missionaries in Kentucky, but Rev. George Candee, at McKee, in Jackson county, had departed from the State. Rev. William Kendrick having some time before left Jackson county for Ohio. He has since been preaching there and in Indiana. Robert Jones, a colporter, had suspended his labors.

Soon after the arrival of the first exiles in Cincinnati, they issued an appeal to the people of the United States, setting forth their wrongs at the hands of the people of Kentucky, the history of Berea, and of their operations there as missionaries, with full justification of themselves, and with important thoughts in regard to slavery, the duty of the Church and the nation in relation thereto; and pleading on behalf of the right of free speech now denied in the slave States, and also for the millions of slaves at the South, which was published extensively.

The Executive Committee of our Association, in the February number of the American Missionary, made an appeal for funds on behalf of the Kentucky exiles and Rev. Daniel Worth, imprisoned in North-Carolina; and after the expulsion from Bracken and Lewis counties, in the March paper, a further appeal was made with a reference to the missionaries then scattered abroad in the free States preaching the word, giving a narration of their persecutions, and endeavoring to promote the interests of the missions in the slave States.

The continued persecutions of Mr. Hanson, who was the greatest sufferer, pecuniarily, by the destruction of his mill and other property, were fully reported in the American Missionary for June. In his case the mob displayed more violence than in any other. They determined to hang him, offered a reward of one hundred dollars for his person, and in their search for him grossly insulted unprotected women, threatened their lives and the life of a sick and helpless man, with pistols pointed at their breasts, and attacked a small party of citizens, who rallied to defend the persons and lives of their neighbors, at whom they fired some twenty shots.

REV. DANIEL WORTH.

In the mean time the excitement in North-Carolina had risen to such a pitch, that one of our missionaries in that State, Rev. Daniel Worth, was soon in perilous circumstances. He wrote from New-Salem, Randolph county, December 21, 1859:

"The prospect is, that we shall have times of trial here before long. Since the unfortunate affair at Harper's Ferry, the country is in a tremendous ferment. Threatenings reach me from various quarters, and I should not be surprised if met by a mob at my next appointment. I do not expect to leave my work except compelled by brute force. I know arrangements are making to meet me with a mob at my next appointment.—Sabbath the 25th: I am calm, peaceful, confiding in my God. In patience I possess my soul. I do not suffer a moment's anxiety, and have not lost a moment's sleep. Pray for us that we may have grace according to our day. An attempt was made about six weeks ago to indict me before the Grand Jury of Guilford Superior Court, but,failed. We are in the hands of our God, who will order all things right."

The New-York Herald, of December 30th, contained a letter from its Greensborough (N. C.) correspondent, giving an account of the preliminary examination of Mr. Worth, who had been arrested. It says:

"The examination was held in the court-house, which was crowded. Over a dozen witnesses were examined, and it was conclusively proved that Worth had on many and various occasions uttered such sentiments in the pulpit against slavery as the State of North-Carolina declared to be unlawful to be uttered. It was also proved by a witness that he had purchased from Worth a copy of Helper's Impending Crisis.

"Robert P. Dick, Esq., was glad that this case had come up in old Guilford county, a county that had the reputation of being an abolition county, that the result-of this examination might now go forth as a vindication from the foul aspersion cast upon it.

examination might now go forth as a vindication from the foul aspersion cast upon it.

"In his 'defense,' the prisoner attempted to argue the evil of slavery, and to try and convince the Court that he was right in preaching sgainst it. He was twice requested by the Court to stick to the point at issue; that they were not there to listen to a discussion on slavery, but to hear what he had to say in reply to the charges brought against him of violating the laws of North-Carolina.

"The prisoner then spoke as to his course having been consistent with his calling as a preacher and as a man; that when he heard there was a warrant for his arrest, he had started for this place to surrender himself; . . . that he did not indores all the sentiments contained in Helper's work; that he had formerly been a magistrate in this county; that he had been living in Indiana many years, and came back to North-Carolina about two years since, and had been engaged in preaching in several counties since; he was not conscious of having violated the laws of the State."

In his description of Mr. Worth, the Herald's correspondent says:

"The Rev. Daniel Worth is a large, portly man, with a fine head, an intellectual and expressive countenance, and a large commanding eye. He looks enough like Burton, the comedian, to be his twin brother. . He is fluent in speech, and the general style and manner of his speaking are calculated to win attention. He did not appear to be at all embarrassed or frightened at his position, but, on the contrary, expressed his ideas and opinions with boldness and fearlessness. He complained to the Court of the unfitness of the jail for a prison, it being extremely cold weather and no fire in the building; he had passed one night there, and was fully competent to express an opinion on the subject."

Mr. Worth wrote from Greensborough Jail, Guilford county, Dec. 26th. tbus:

"I have been three days incarcerated in this jail on charge of a breach of the criminal law of this State, in preaching and selling incendiary books, Helper's Impending Crisis, etc. The excitement on my preliminary trial was great. I plead my own case, but three lawyers were against me. My bonds were fixed at $10,000, a very modest sum in which to bind a preacher! My securities will file my bonds this afternoon, when I shell again have temporary liberty. My trial will come on in April; and though conscious of no offense against any just law, and not even against the laws of North-Carolina, in consequence of the great prejudice added to the tremendous excitement, I can hardly hope to escape. The punishment, if convicted, is pillory, whipping, and imprisonment.

"Yesterday, the anniversary of the Saviour's advent, I spent in my prison, in reading my Bible, and in prayer. I seemed to hear my Saviour's voice asking: 'Art thou ready to suffer for my sake? Canst thou enter into dungeons for thy Saviour's love, and suffer shame for my sake?' When I came to the point, and could say, 'Yes, Lord, I am willing to suffer thy righteous will in all things,' he poured his love into my soul so boundlessly, that I shouted aloud for joy. And let me say, that I fully believe if I am sentenced to confinement, or other punishment, God will glorify his name by my suffering for him, as much as though I was at liberty and working in his vine-yard. Oh! let me have the prayers of my dear Christian brethren every where, that my faith fail not; and that I may in patience possess my soul. Yours in the love of that Saviour who suffered shame for us."

The following extracts from a letter of Mr. Worth, dated Greensborough Prison, January 23, 1860, are in answer to inquiries sent him from the Missionary Rooms. He says:

"The Christian sympathy is a precious oil to my soul, and so likewise the fact that so many Christian hearts are lifted to God for me. May grace divine sustain me, and bear me triumphantly over the waves of affliction. I deeply feel in this hour of peril, the necessity of a closer union of spirit with Him who 'sticketh closer than a brother.' May the brotherhood of faith avery where make interesting without coasing in my heald.

the brotherhood of faith, every where, make intercession without ceasing, in my behalf.

"I will answer your inquiries as well as I can. I am indicted in two counties, and there will be two counts in each indictment, one for words spoken, the other for circulsting books. If convicted on the first count, the penalty is thirty-nine lashes, and imprisonment for one year. If convicted on the second count, the penalty is imprisonment not less than one year, whipping and pillory, at the discretion of the Court. In both cases the second offense is death. The deplorable affair at Harper's Ferry, has raised such an excitement, that a fair hearing seems almost impossible. My letters going out and coming in are all examined, and I am forbidden to write for the press, unless, perhaps, to merely state the facts of my condition, or matters of business. My bonds were fixed at $15,000, which I could have given; but learning that I should be subject to another arrest, it was thought best to remain in prison. Apprehensions of danger from Lynch law were felt. I have considerable sympathy in various neighborhoods in the two counties, but it is mainly among the poor who have comparatively small influence."

In relation to his labors, he says:

"Up to the time of my arrest, the churches on my field of labor, seemed to enjoy good religious life and power. Union of heart and spirit abounded, and considerable revival feeling was exhibited at several points. I can not refer to my papers, not having them in possession, but I think something over thirty made profession, and were received into church through the past quarter. I suppose my colleagues are at the work, but can not say, as my intercourse with them has been entirely suspended through the past month. Oh! may the great Shepherd of the sheep keep safely all his humble, trusting ones! And if, in his good Providence, we are not to meet again in an earthly fold, may we be so unspeakably happy as to reach that glorious land, where there is 'one fold and one Shepherd."

At a later date, we learned that another of our missionaries in North-Carolina, Rev. Alfred Vestal, had been forced to leave his work, by the spirit of violence which had recently broken out there. He is now preaching in Indiana. A Christian sister in North-Carolina wrote, that the immediate cause of his leaving, was his having learned that warrants for his arrest, on charges similar to those of Mr. Worth, were issued, both in Randolph and Guilford counties.

Mr. Worth addressed to a friend the following letter:

"In Prison, Greensborough, N. C., February 29, 1860. "DEAR BROTHER: You are a man I never saw, and yet we are familiarly acquainted; to whom I never spoke, and yet I have conversed with you for hours; separated by leagues of intervening land and water, yet present together; two separate and distinctly organized bodies, and yet but one spirit! These may be paradoxical assertions to some, but not to you. How art thou, my brother? 'Is thine heart right as my heart is with thy heart?' If it be, give me thine hand.'

"As to me, I am joyful amidst my tribulations, though still 'grinding in the prison-house.' Oh! how noh and precious are the promises of God! How abounding! I find two where I used to see but one. And how adapted to my case, my poverty, my necessity. My soul is deeply humbled within me. Oh! what a stoop of mercy was that which descended from heaven, to pluck such a brand from the burning.

'Long my imprisoned spirit lay
Fast bound in sin and nature's night;
Thine eye diffused a quickening ray,
I woke, the dungeon flamed with light!'

"I have often sung, but never till now with such a blessed experience:

Prisons would palaces prove,
If Jesus would dwell with me there.

"Is not the fullness of this blessing an answer to the many ten thousand preyers constantly going up to God in my behalf? Let them continue to ascend. Formerly constantly going up to God in my behalf? Let them continue to ascend. Formerly Peter was kept in prison; but 'prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.' So let it be in the case of your unworthy brother. God will send down his angel. In the mean time, let epistles of charity, brimful of love and consolation, be showered upon me from all the dear brethren and sisters in every quarter. Some have already come to hand; among them, yours, dear brother, which was most acceptable. Some of these writers are called Quakers, Congregationalists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Wesleyans; but I care little for these names. All I want to know is, are they grafted into the Living Vine?

"Will you tell the dear brother who ministers in the Church of the Puritans, that I would like to have an epistle from him? If I rightly recollect, he was once cast into prison for 'standing up for Jesus,' and saying: 'Woe to him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips.'

"Farewell, dear brother, we are soon to meet.

"YOUR BROTHER IN BONDS."

Our beloved brother and faithful missionary was tried in Randolph county, North-Carolina, March 30th. One whole day and nearly one whole night were consumed by the trial. He was charged with the "crime" of circulating Helper's Impending Crisis. Two or three young lawyers, who wished to distinguish themselves, volunteered to assist the prosecution, and made strenuous efforts to obtain a conviction. Two of the ablest attorneys in that part of the State were employed by the friends of Mr. Worth, at an expense of five hundred dollars, to defend him. They exerted themselves powerfully. The Judge appears to have conducted with much impartiality: The jury, composed half of slaveholders, and half of non-slaveholders, (though not designedly.) were out from four o'clock until midnight, when they rendered a verdict of GULLTY. The Judge did not sentence Mr. Worth to the extent of the law. The sentence was a year's imprisonment. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Worth was remanded to jail. The jailer placed him in a better room than the one he at first occupied. The last one looked into the street, so that friends could converse with him outside the building. He was to be tried in two other counties on a similar charge.

There lies before us a pamphlet entitled An Address to the People of North-Carolina, on the Evils of Slavery, that was printed in that State, and in the same county where Mr. Worth was imprisoned, in the year 1830, by the Board of Managers of the "Manumission Society of North-Carolina," which a newspaper now published in that State has recently declared to be ten times worse on the subject of slavery than Helper's Crisis.

The following propositions are maintained with great ability and force in this publication:

"I. Our slave system is radically evil.

II. Our system of slavery is founded in injustice and cruelty.

III. Absolute slavery is a fruitful source of pride, idleness and tyranny.

IV. Absolute slavery increases depravity in the human heart, and nourishes a train of dark and brutal passions and lusts, disgraceful to human nature and destructive of the general welfare.

V. Slavery, absolute and unconditional, is no less contrary to the Christian religion than to the dictates of justice and humanity."

Helper's Crisis does not, like the Address, discuss the moral aspects of slavery, but only economical bearings, yet the Address was printed and circulated in the State in 1836, while the Crisis is proscribed, its author made an outlaw, and citizens of North-Carolina (Mr. Worth is a native citizen of North-Carollna) who circulate it, are tried and convicted as felons in 1860.

Mr. Worth, having appealed to the highest legal tribunal in the State, was released from prison on giving three bonds, in the sum of one thousand dollars each. He procured bail among his old friends and relatives, and proceeded to the North. On the 7th May he attended a large meeting of citizens in New-York, convened to hear a narration of his sufferings. A committee was appointed to receive subscriptions. They made an appeal to the public. Mr. Worth lectured in various places in New-England, and elsewhere; and in the course of the summer a little over three thousand dollars was raised. of which the Wesleyans, a denomination to which Mr. Worth belongs, contributed about a third. Thus this beloved brother has been, through the good providence of God, delivered from the persecutions of the enemies of freedom and a pure Gospel,

MISSOURI,

We have had but one missionary in this State, Rev. S. Blanchard, located at Oregon, Holt county, in the north-west section of the State. Two others have been recently commissioned.

The reports of our missionary have been encouraging, notwithstanding some opposition. An attempt to indict him for selling Helper's Impending Crisis was made, but it was withdrawn, and he has not been molested. At one of his preaching appointments the house was closed against him, and some threats of tar and feathers were made, but no violence followed. "In one neighborhood," he says, "the people manifest increased interest, and the congregation has doubled. Anti-slavery tracts are asked for."

He has lectured in several places on temperance, on Sabbath-schools and Bible-class instruction, and in one place a Sabbath-school has been formed. He has written several articles, which have been printed in the St. Joseph Democrat, showing the Bible to be against slavery. In one instance he labored with a minister of the Society of United Brethren in Christ in a revival, and ten souls were hopefully converted. That denomination is anti-slavery in its discipline. He has been favored with a quantity of tracts for distribution from the Boston Tract Society, through the Secretary of the Western Agency, Chicago. In his annual report he states that the standard of morality among the people generally is low. The foreign population is mostly German. Slavery, Sabbath-breaking, intemperance, ignorance, prejudice, and sectarianism, are there, as in other places, the great hindrances to the success of the Gospel.

In view of the relations of Missouri to the whole West, its geographical position and prospective wealth, its population and power, the friends of freedom will earnestly desire the speedy abolition of slavery. There is no other slave State at this time on which so many influences for freedom are operating as on Missouri. Its existence as a slave State, with free States on three sides of it, is an anomaly. Its pro-slavery chivalry has been signally discomfitted in its fruitless attempt to subdue Kansas. The large German population of Missouri is favorable to emancipation. The commercial influence of St. Louis is working also in its favor. Feeling the influence of these things, and the general progress of anti-slavery sentiments, the slaveholders are anticipating the era of freedom, by disposing of their slaves to those who take them down the river to more southern plantations. This is one of the sad events that often occur in anticipation of general emancipation, and it proves that emancipation is at hand. The abolition of slavery in Missouri must exert great influence upon all the slave States and Territories, in favor of freedom, especially Arkansas, the Indian Territories, and Texas. Every thing, therefore, that can be done by the friends of religion and liberty to secure this object, without the sale of the slaves into bondage elsewhere, should now be done.

In closing this portion of the Report, the Committee would express their sympathy for our persecuted and exiled missionaries who have been accounted worthy to suffer for the name of Christ. We have been happy to witness their cheerfulness, faith, and love, and their earnest desire to return to their fields of labor. From recent encouraging circumstances at various points, we trust the way will early be opened to them. It was no strange thing that happened to them and their churches. It is a law of providence that good and evil shall conflict. The grandest truths are made to shine by the opposition arrayed against them, and by the suffering of their advocates. The love of God in human redemption was maligned and resisted; wicked men crucified the Lord of glory, and by his blood we have salvation.

The martyrdom of Stephen scattered the disciples to spread the Gospel far and wide; the persecutions of our fathers occasioned the founding of this vast empire; the burning of chapels, and outrages upon missionaries in the British West-Indies, brought about the emancipation of their 800,000 bondmen; and the persecutions at the South will open the eyes of the people, hasten the overthrow of slavery, and the establishment of righteousness.

God works for the redemption of man, controlling and triumphing over all opposing forces. We should work with Him for the same great end, opposing and subverting, by the Gospel of Christ, slavery, caste, intemperance, war, and all sinful practices. Let us, then, relying upon his guidance and strength, go forward with Christian courage and faith, and labor for the regeneration of this whole country, with its teeming millions, free and bond, in a spirit of true consecration.

Court to the transfer of the court of con minimum to be on an its other desire in that the contra

Chamble of recognication is, the intermedian of the Australians, Africa the manufacture and the last the first property of the first and advantage of the relorated we have provided to second to the commentation west on the commentation west on the comment of the commentation of t a quadrocate at special be use brouge of the fraction board, and that we re and the last of th

Latin Marriades and Treas Deer rains a range range and the TOBACCO AND STRONG DRINK.

The April number of the American Missionary contained the following resolutions, passed by the Executive Committee:

Whereas, in the judgment of this Executive Committee, the habitual use of tobacco, either by chewing, smoking or snuffing is a practice in which no person, and especially no Christian minister, should indulge; therefore,

Resolved, That in the exercise of the trust committed to them, this Committee will not appoint as a Missionary, officer or agent of the Association any person who thus

Whereas, in the past history of this Association, the Executive Committee have not commissioned any Missionary known to be in the practice of using intoxicating drinks,

Resolved. That this Committee will continue to act in accordance with this usage of the Association. A logical of the logical and the logical and

The following remarks, published with the resolutions, sufficiently explain the reason for passing them:

"The action of the Executive Committee relative to the use of tobacco has not been caused by any use of it among our missionaries, that is known to us, but by the injury which its use inflicts upon society, and upon the health of individuals.

"Its injurious effects upon the spiritual condition of ministers who use it, the delecterious influence of that example, especially upon the young, and its general evil tendencies, lead the Committee to regard it as their duty, as far as they can, to protect, from it, their missions, and those whom they may influence. They are confident that there are good men and true, who religiously abstain from the use of this deleterious substance, who wish to engage in missionary labors at home or abroad; and they presubstance, who was to engage in missionary across at the employment of such men, who will not by indulgence in an evil habit, counteract their own teachings of the duty of consecration of soul and body to God.

"The resolution relative to the usage of the Association against the use of intoxicating drinks, needs no comments. Its importance is generally acknowledged. We have reason to believe that all our missionaries cordially approve of these principles."

AUXILIARIES. WESTERN AGENCY.

The Illinois Home Missionary Association held its Eighth Annual Meeting at Aurora, Ill., Thursday, May 24th. After the usual routine business, the report of the Executive Committee was read. Nineteen missionaries had been under commission in that State, besides one general missionary during the year. The report of the Executive Committee recommended the discontinuance of the Auxiliary. After full discussion the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That the simplification of the Home Missionary work makes it desirable to discontinue this Association, which is hereby done on condition that its whole work shall be undertaken by the Parent Society.

"2, That our adherence to the distinctive principles of Christian reform which have distinguished this Association and the Parent Association remains firm and unchangeable: that we believe their maintenance by the churches of Christ, and by benevolent Societies, to be essential to the triumph of the Redeemer's cause, and that we renewedly commend the Parent Society to the churches for support in its Foreign and Home work.

"3, That we recommend to the Parent Association to establish an agency with a District Secretary at Chicago, to cultivate the western field in behalf of the entire operations of the Association, Home and Foreign, and with such an agency, if established, we hereby pledge our hearty cooperation.

"It was also voted that the records and papers of the Association be delivered up to the Parent Association to be preserved by the District Secretary; and that any bequests made to this Society be transferred to the treasury of the Parent Society."

Previous correspondence had been had with the Executive Committee of this Association in relation to the recommendation. The following reasons were assigned for it. Situated as the members of the Executive Committee were, that Association could do little more than receive and indorse the applications for aid to Home Missionaries, and forward them to the Parent Association by whom all commissions were issued. This could as well be done, and with less expense of time, by the committees of the several local ecclesiastical associations, and a District Secretary.

It was urged too, that the Auxiliary was only a Home Missionary organization, and that more vigorous means should be put in operation to secure aid from the West in behalf of our Foreign Missions. A District Secretary for the West, it was thought would secure this object.

The Executive Committee took the matter into careful consideration, and at their meeting in July, resolved to establish an agency of the Association for the West, and they tendered the appointment of Secretary to Rev. J. E. Roy, then pastor of the Plymouth Church, Chicago, and for a number of years a member of the Executive Committee of that Auxiliary. Mr. Roy accepted of the appointment, resigned his pastoral charge, and entered upon the duties of the office the first of August. Mr. Galen Eastman has consented to give his services as Treasurer of the Agency.

The Executive Committee regarded the arrangement as tending to increase the spirit of missions, extend the influence of the Association and enlarge its receipts. Thus far the working of the plan shows that it meets the approval of the friends of the Association at the West, and gives promise of being efficient in securing increased contributions and labors for the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom throughout all the earth. anthrough and palerment and aller such and the contract of I adeasement a classication of the control of the bound of the party of the The Penobscot County Missionary Association, of Maine, continues its labors in behalf of the missionary work of this Association. At its last annual meeting, (1859,) it reported the collection of $310, which had been paid into our treasury. Its annual sermon was preached by Rev. Prof. Shepard, of Bangor. Its officers are: ALEXANDER DRUMMOND, President; J. H. PERKINS, Corresponding Secretary; J. S. Kimball, Recording Secretary; J. Allen, Treasurer. The following is from the report of this auxiliary :

"To the friends of freedom in this land, and all lands, this Association presents strong and peculiar claims. Its missionaries labor for the removal of slavery as of any other sin, and do not receive to their churches nor invite to the communion-table those who practice the sin of slaveholding. This is the great sin of our nation, and it meets us every where, at home and abroad. Between the freedom which the Bible proclaims, and slavery, there is 'an irrrepressible conflict,' and in that conflict our pulpits, and churches, and missionary organizations, should speak for right, calmly and temperately, yet earnestly and faithfully."

CONCLUSION.

Your Committee deem it not improper at this time to express their continued unwavering confidence in the distinctive principles of the Association, and the plans of action laid down at its organization, namely, the duty of an uncompromising warfare against all sin, whether popular or unpopular, authorized by human enactment, or forbidden of men, making themselves, and requiring its missionaries to make no distinction in favor of any of them, in their teachings, their examples, their terms of membership, or the administration of church discipline.

The manner in which this principle has been controverted in its application to one iniquity, the peculiar claims made in behalf of a certain class of slaveholders, and the discussion that has arisen in regard to them, viewed in connection with the peculiar developments of the spirit and workings of slavery during the past year, have, if possible, intensified the feeling that slaveholding-and by slaveholding they mean just what it is defined to be by the statutes which create or sustain it, just what it is seen to be in practice, the holding of human beings as chattels, transferable as other property at the will and interest of the owner-is a sin, to be regarded and treated as any other sin, by bringing against it the rebukes of God's law, by Christian labor for its immediate and entire extinction, and by excluding from the Christian Church, and from any control of Christian benevolence, all that are engaged in it. They are satisfied that any letting down of this principle to ease the conscience, or improve the position, of any one unhappily involved in slaveholding, is an injury to the person in whose behalf the plea is made, an injustice to the slave, and a dishonor done to the cause of God.

In accordance with this principle, the Executive Committee have endeavored to discharge the trust reposed in them, as well in the conduct of its publications, as in the selection of its fields of labor, and the instruction of its missionaries and agents. In vindicating the principle and practice of the Association, and in condemning a contrary practice where it exists, they have endeavored to avoid judging the motives of any man or body of men; but the largest Christian charity can not bind the disciple of Christ to the evil tendency of a wrong course of action, and should not prevent his pointing out the injury which such wrong action does to the cause of God, and the interests of humanity. Nay, rather, Christian charity, love, in its highest development, requires the rebuke of every act, proceeding from whatsoever motive, that necessarily produces evil to any man, much more when it depresses a whole race of men, preventing them from rising to the condition God designed for them, and imperiling their eternal salvation; and most of all, is this required when the injury is done in the name of Christianity.

These principles are of equal application to all forms of sin, to every violation of the law of God, whether of the first or second table. The American Missionary Association does not regard slaveholding as the only sin against which the Christian missionary has to contend; nor does it seek to measure its enormity by comparing it with other transgressions of God's law; but they find it, here in our own land and elsewhere, an instance and evidence of man's rebellion against God, from which it is the more hard to dislodge him, because of the strong appeal it makes to his selfishness, his pride, and every unholy passion; and because the sin thus deeply entrenched in the natural heart, has been authorized and guarded by human legislation, and approved and sanctioned by a portion of the professed Church of Christ. How can such an iniquity, so fortified and guarded, so dangerous to the souls of millions, both of masters and slaves, be overcome, except by God's blessing upon his own appointed instrumentality, the preaching of his word in its direct application to the sin itself? And how can this blessing be secured, if the wrong-doer is received into the Christian Church to have his iniquity palliated and apologized for?

But we who are laboring against this giant iniquity need to be jealously watchful over our own hearts, lest the greatness of its enormity should lead us to forget that however vast its importance, it is only a part of man's great iniquity in his rebellion against God, and that true repentance of this sin, or of any sin, implies repentance and renunciation of all sin. Our God is a jealous God, and if while laboring for the interests of his kingdom, we give any minor object the place due only to the ultimate object of all Christian missionary labor, the honor of God and the glory of his name in the conversion of men from all their sins, if we regard the abandonment of any sin as the means of obtaining that salvation which comes to us only through faith in Christ as our atoning sacrifice and Saviour, we may well fear that our labors will fail to meet that divine blessing which alone can make them efficient for the accomplishment of our work.

In concluding their Report your Committee are reminded that since the organization of this Association more than one third of a generation of people, not less than four hundred millions of our race, have passed from earth to the scenes of the judgment. How large a portion of these have been without any knowledge of salvation through a crucified Redeemer, how few of them have been converted to God! How utterly inadequate to the wants of the world, how disproportioned to the greatness of the work left by Christ for his people to do, have been their offerings, their labors, and their prayers!

While we find great cause for thanksgiving for what God has done through this Association for the evangelizing of the world, we are oppressed with a sense of the feebleness of the effort compared with what ought to have been done, and what yet remains to be done, and which must soon be done, or other hundreds of millions of those for whom Christ died will go down to their graves, and to the judgment, unwarned of their danger, with no knowledge of a Saviour, and with no hope of eternal life.

God has called upon his Church to be co-workers with him in the work of the world's conversion, and to carry to every part of it the knowledge of the Gospel. He has, so far as we can see, made their agency indispensable, having given us no intimation of any way in which the work may be accomplished without it. To our American Zion he has given talent enough, and wealth enough, if consecrated to the work, to carry it forward, with his blessing, with ten-fold more energy than has ever yet been given to it. There are hundreds, if not thousands, of Christian churches in our country which might each sustain a missionary in the field, if all the members would make the same self-denial and consecration to the work that they look for in their ministers and missionaries. The prayers of the Church can not come up acceptably before God that he would send forth laborers into his harvest, and bless their labors to the conversion of the world, until there is, on the part of parents, a consecration of their sons and daughters to the work, and, on the part of Christians generally, a readiness to labor personally in it, or

The missionary enterprise, the work of the world's conversion, is not one of man's devising, but of God's. It is by his express command we engage in it, a command as binding as any one of the decalogue; to it he has promised his blessing. He has given those who enter into it the assurance: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." It is not therefore in derogation of the divine honor, nor claiming too much for the labors of his servants, to say the work will go forward with success, just in proportion to the spirit of consecration, and the energy, with which they prosecute it. How fearful a responsibility, then, rests upon those who do this work laggardly, or decline to cooperate in it. How cheering the assurance of success, how glorious the promise to those who engage in it with all their hearts, the love of Christ constraining them.

give of their substance to it, in some measure corresponding to its magnitude, and according to the ability with which God has blessed them.

APPENDIX

SELECTIONS FROM CORRESPONDENCE AND REPORTS OF FOREIGN AND HOME MISSIONARIES.

HISTORY OF THE STATION AT MAKAWAO, SANDWICH ISLANDS.

"In making my report of the dealings of God with me and mine during the year closing February, 1860—of the labors, success, and trials incident to a missionary life in a foreign land, my thoughts go back to the day of my arrival, seventeen years ago, at Makawao. Fifteen years I had already labored at Lahaina Hilo, and Wailuku, in connection with the A.B.C.F.M., when for reasons satisfactory to my own mind I sought and obtained a dismission from the service of that body. Immediately I bade adieu to the loved ones, my associates and people, and to the scenes of a station which had become dear to me, and where I had witnessed striking changes by the blessing of God on labors bestowed by myself and associates; to the comfortable house, out houses, and study, on which I had wrought not a little with my own hands; to the commodious house of God, and the school-house which I had aided in erecting; to the Seminary buildings which I had superintended from the foundation to the top-stone, and within whose walls I had taught several classes of Hawaiian girls, and which schools I hoped to see continued a nich blessing to the race. Bidding adieu to these, and to the church which I had gathered and watched and instructed, I turned my face to the comparative wilderness of Makawao. True, as I journeyed to the east, I felt that so far as Maui was concerned, it might be said of me as of our progenitor going forth from the garden:

'The land was all before him where to choose, And Providence his guide.'

"Still, I seemed to myself more like him who when called to go out from his country and his kindred, went out not knowing whither he went. Would that I had possessed more of his faith. I may not conceal that a feeling of sadness came over me as I left the station where I had hoped to spend my days and find my resting-place, especially as I saw my patient and excellent wife, already worn with the toil of fifteen years, in a hand-cart, no better carriage being at that time in our field, drawn by several half-clad natives who had come down from Makawao to help us thither, with our children, who alternately rode with their mother or walked behind her carriage. When in these circumstances I reflected on the sacricfies she was making in leaving her comfortable home, and the society of her missionary sister at Wailuku, the field, also, which she had aided me in cultivating, and recollected that she was accompanying me to a new and uncultivated district, where we had no house, and no means of our own to procure one, no associate, no foreign female in fact within fifteen miles; a district where we must begin all new among a rude and ignorant though kind people, whose buildings among all classes; when I reflected on these things, as we made our way towards our anticipated home, I was obliged to fall back on first principles, constrained virtually to say; 'Do I not from love to Thee and thy suffering poor, gracious Master, take this course, plunge into a wilderness of trial, and lead with me a care-worn and delicate companion, and dependent children? Help me to venture all in thy cause, to cling to thee, trusting that all things shall work together for our good.' I am happy to say that my dear wife entered upon the new sphere of labor not only uncomplainingly, but with great cheerfulness. And though for a season, we had scarcely a place of our own to lay our heads, and though some of our missionary brethren were quite free in censuring our course, and confidently predicting that we should starve outright, yet I believe th

"On reaching Makawao, we at once entered upon the labors of the station, teaching, and preaching the Gospel-laboring for the temporal and eternal interests of all around us. In the mean time, I gathered the people at the center of the district, gave them a full account of my circumstances and plans, and said that as they had given me an invitation to become their pastor and teacher, I should now cast myself, under God, upon them, and look to them for the means of supporting myself and family, so that I could devote my time and strength to the labors of the ministry. I assured them that my own means of sustenance would not be sweat did I know that while they furnished my table, they and their children were hungrand therefore exhorted them to wake up to more industrious habits, and I pointed out a plan in the carrying out of which they might sustain their teacher, and labor for the cause of God in other directions. I said, for illustration, 'I shall look to you, brethren at Kula, for my wheat,' (an article which I had introduced among them a few years before,) 'so that in plant ng or sowing this grain you must think of your pastor, who is sowing to you spiritual things. Also, in planting the Irish potato, a vegetable which is mostly produced in your district, you will plant with an eye on your teacher's wants. To you of Hamakua, I shall look for our kalo, and you can easily increase the amount of this kind of food. On my Makawao friends I shall depend for our sweet potatoes, bananas, corn. etc. Be wakeful and diligent, and we shall all have enough, and to spare,' As the Kula people had no instrument to cut their wheat but a case-knife, I sought out and obtained a few sickles, and taught them to use this cheap instrument, and as they were then rubbing out their wheat on lava stones, and blowing off the chaff with their mouth, I wrote home for a small threshing-machine, and fanning-mill, and told the people to go ahead and raise wheat for the market. In the mean time, the people siding me, I erected a small house, partly of grass, and partly of sunburnt brick. They also built and thatched a good-sized meeting house and a small school-house; I gathered the scattered materials, and constituted a Congregational church-held a series of meetings at the station, visited every schooldistrict, examined schools, and preached the Gospel from place to place, listened to the requests of candidates for church membership, and admitted, from time to time, such as we hoped had passed from death to life. How many of them will see God, the day

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

"The people at that time owned not an acre of land, and held their little tenements at the pleasure of their chiefs and head-men. Hable to be dispossessed at any moment; still they began at once to furnish me a comfortable support; wheat, potatoes, Irish and sweet, kalo, bananas, core, squashes, melens, and fruits, such as the country afforded; wood, also, besides aiding me in such work as I needed about my house, carrying my mail to Lahaina, and doing other chores. They began soon to contribute something in the way of money, as they saw that our wardrobe needed replenishing. All they seemed to do cheerfully, as I desired no salary, but asked only to be sustained, that I might preach to them the precious Gospel of Christ. Thus we held on about three years, when, in answer to prayer, the circumstances of the people most unexpectedly were changed for the better.

"We date from 1846 a new era in the state of the common people. Early in that the King, Kamehameha III., accompanied by several of his chiefs, and Dr. Judd, formerly of the mission, but at that time connected with the government visited Makawao. Mr. Judd staid with me during the night, much of which we spellt in conversa-tion respecting the state and prospects of the people, and in devising means to improve their condition. We saw and deeply felt, that little could be hoped for their permanent improvement till they should be allowed to own lands. Would the King consent to sell any of his own, beginning at Makawao? Dr. Judd thought it possible. At any rate, he would see him early in the morning, and propose the plan of selling. He did so, and to our surprise and gratification, the King consented to sell on condition that I would act as his agent in disposing of the lands, collecting moneys, and keeping the accounts. To this I joyfully assented. In furnishing me with written instructions, the King allowed me to give each resident of Makawao who owned a house, one acre of land on which his dwelling stood, and to sell him as much as he could pay for, in a year or two, at one dollar per acre. Thus one obstacle to Hawaiian improvement, so far as the King was concerned, was removed, and the way opened for the indefinite progress of the race. I called the people of the district together to gladden their hearts by telling them of the King's generosity, and to urgo them to come forward at once and secure each a few acres of land. But I was surprised to see that they had no confidence in the proposal of their King. The news was too good to be true. It required all my powers of persuasion to convince them that their chief would allow any of them to become bona-fide owners of the soil. Indeed, I had to become a kind of surety for his Hawaiian Majesty, that I might set the ball in motion, confident that this being done, the trouble would be ended. In this I was not disappointed. One and another ventured to make the experiment, bought ten, twenty, and forty scres of land-paid for them, and when at length, I presented each of them his deed, signed by the King, and having his seal, all doubt ceased, and all quickly selected their little farms, for which they paid and received their patent. All the district was soon sold, surveyed, and divided up among the residents of Makawao ere any parts were sold to foreigners.

Now for the results of the labors performed at Makawao. In 1843, no common Hawaiian owned a single acre of land; now most of our people are landholders. And such has been the change on all the Islands of the group. In imitation of our example, multitudes from Hawaii to Kauai have bought and secured lands as they have been able. In 1843, there was little industry among my people. Having no lands, no security that the house which they built, or the produce of the land about it, would not be snatched from them, they had no motive to toil, no inducement to repair the one or till the other. Now, the same classes are commendably industrious, are cultivating their lands, building better houses, and obtaining other comforts which no man, no chiefs even, can take from them without a due process of law. In 1843, there were no fields in Makawao waving with wheat; and in Kula even, where I had introduced that grain, there were only small putches here and there in the valleys; no cattle, carts, plows, sickles, cradles, rakes, pitchforks, nor cutters. Now such fields are seen year after year, having been prepared by the plow and oxen, are cut by the sickle, the cradle, and in some instances by the cutting-machine. Their wheat is gathered by the rake, thrown upon the cart, of which there are many among us, by the fork, threshed by an imported machine, and cleaned by a fanning-mill from New-England. Our wheat is carried to the seashore where vessels lie to receive it for the Honolulu market; or it is drawn to Wailuku, where there are flouring-mills already in operation. Irish potatoes are carted to Kalepolepo, whence they are taken to Lahaina, and sold to whalers and to residents. Wood, for fuel, is also carted to this place, and purchased for Lahaina and Honolulu. Hence the increase of money among our people of clothing, and of comforts of various kinds. Where there was a single dollar in 1843, there are now probably ten or twenty, or even more, and the comforts and conveniences of our people have increased at least a hundred per cent.

"Such, and so great, are the changes which since 1843 have been effected by the blessing of God at Makawao, and through our example perhaps, at other places on the islands, touching the physical condition of the people.

"Other changes pertaining to the intellectual and moral state of the Hawaiian race, have been wrought. Of these let me now speak briefly.

"In 1843, the school-houses through the whole district were in a dilapidated state. Being built of grass, without doors or windows, they were exposed to the intrusion of goats and swine, and were nearly unfit for the purpose designed, a place for communicating and receiving instruction. Schools, too, were of a low character, teachers possessed few qualifications for their work, and having small wages, they were unfaithful in a high degree. Parents had scarcely awoke to a sense of the importance of securing instruction for their children, and, of course, cared little for their attendance at school; while children, with few exceptions, disliked the school-house, and spent most of their time in play or mischief. True, we had in my field from 1843 to 1846, many more schools and pupils than we now number, most of the pupils attending examinations quarterly, but the greater part were only nominally scholars, seldom attending school, and of course little better for being numbered as learners, and attending our examinations. They needed a new impulse.

Now, the system of schools is greatly improved. We have better houses, better teachers, and though fewer yet better scholars. Of late years, the government has taken the management of schools into its own hands. It has a Board of Education, of which Rev. R. Armstrong is President, 'A tax of two dollars per year is laid upon all tax payers, and this raises a sum large enough to maintain the schools on the entire group; I mean the common schools; seminaries, high-schools, and the Royal school are sustained by other means. Un each district, there is a Treasurer, appointed by the Board of Education, whose duty it is to receive the moneys belonging to his field, which he pays to the teachers on each examination-day, each one pres nting an order from the Superintendent. Though much remains to be done ere our school, are all that we desire to see them, still that they are in an improved state, and that good is being done by them, there can be no doubt.

"In 1843, our houses for public worship were of a very inferior kind. At Makawao proper, a small grass school-house, neglected, dirty, and ready to fall, was our only place to meet on the Sabbath. At Keokea and Kalepolepo, the houses were much the same. At Huelo, the house was larger and better, but being purely native, it was frail, and needed frequent repairs. None of these buildings had floors, none had doors which could be shut and locked, and there was scarcely any glass in either of them. While we were thankful for these, poor though they were, and while we joyfully worshiped in those humble structures. Him who seeketh such to worship him as 'worship in spirit and in truth,' we desired and sought, as we were able, more substantial and comfortable houses for the honor of our God.

"And these we have at length obtained. We now number four substantial stone meeting houses, and one of my leading men at Keokea is overseeing the building of a fifth at Kahikinui, a district just without our borders, but one where the people desire to unite with us. Y The four houses are nearly completed, floored and seated, and afford accommodation to all who desire to worship God on his holy day. And I am happy to say that the people built these houses with their own hands and means, and they owe little or nothing for material or work. In these structures are taught their Sabbath-schools, their Bible classes, and here they worship God, many of them, I trust, in spirit and in truth, and receive the blessing of Him whose favor is life.

In 1843, there were one hundred and sixty-four members of the church residing in this district from Keckea to Huelo. Since that time eight hundred and fifty-eight individuals have been added to use from the world. Many a prayerless district has been so affected by the work of the Lord as to remind me of the stanza of the great and good Watts:

The world beheld the glorious change, And did thy hand confess; My tongue broke out in unknown strains, And sang surprising grace.

"To God alone be the praise.

J. S. GREEN."

KENTUCKY.

Rev. John G. Fee states that he had been able to do but little this year in Kentucky for the building up of churches or the conversion of souls, having in the fall of 1859 been much occupied at the North collecting funds for the Literary Institution at Berea. Since the expulsion of the missionaries from the State he has labored in different parts of Southern Ohio and in Indiana.

Letter from Rev. J. G. Fee to the Annual Meeting:

[Mr. Fee expected to be present, but was prevented by sickness; he therefore sent this letter. After the letter was read, it was ordered to be printed in the American Missionary.

"Recent observations and our late expulsion from Kentucky, do not, in any wise, cause me to doubt the wisdom of the radical position of the American Missionary

"Nay, I am only the more convinced, that an open, direct, and explicit testimony against sin, and, in church relations, a refusal to fellowship such as are engaged in it, is the only wise, efficient, and Heaven-approved policy.

The opposite policy of conservatism has not only been a failure, so far as the great sin of the land (slavery) is concerned, but has even intensided the evil.

"Tile old Boards have claimed that, if they can only go quietly along and spread the Gospel, that will silently kill slavery. Popular sins, entrenched behind law, and pano-plied with a popular religion, are not sapped that way. The issue being made, the silence of conservative Boards and their missionaries is always construed into consent.

"I know this is true. Pro-slavery men have often said to me, (calling conservative ministers by name) 'If these good men thought slavery wrong, they would doubtless say so, say so publicly, and enumerate slavery with other publicly denounced sins; for, 'said these men, 'it is the business of ministers to preach against wrong—warn the people, and exhort to the right.' Silence is construed into consent. Conservation has not only prolonged the life of slavery, but has widened its area, and intensified its bitterness and cruelty.

"The silence of conservatism is a declaration that the rebuke of slavery is no part of the work of preaching the Gospel, and that those men who do teach that slavery is inconsistent with the Gospel, and should not be fellowshiped in Christian churches are fanatics, innovators, disturbers of the peace of Zion, as d dangerous to society. The moboerats go to the work of expurgating society, by casting out men who bear testimony against an iniquity that can not endure the concentrated light of God's word, clothed with a kind of religious sanctity-conservatism has licensed them to do so.

"The Reign of Terror in the South has been fostered by the silent policy of conservative ministers and Boards. The driving of farmers, mechanics, missionaries, and teachers from Kentucky, the hanging of innocent men in Texas, together with all the blood at Harper's Ferry, lie at the door of conservatism. Had John Brown seen the great mass of ministers and benevolent societies bearing a faithful testimony against this iniquity, he never would have felt himself called to the perilous work he undertook. He would have had confidence in the power of truth, and could he have seen it applied with religious fidelity, he would have had an assurance of its final triumph.

'Had the Home Missionary Society, in its early efforts in the South; had the American Tract Society, and other Societies, been faithful in bearing a constant and explicit testimony against the iniquity, stripping it of all decent morality, decent men would have driven it out, instead of the reckless now driving out those who bear testimony against it. Under such general teaching, public sentiment would have been very different from what it now is; public sentiment governs.

"It may be said, had these Boards at first borne a faithful, explicit, and consistent testimony against the iniquity, they, too, would have been driven out: we answer, the Hercules of slavery was then a babe, and could have been easily strangled while in the cradle. But it would be better that the South should be without a ministry, than that it should have a ministry to deceive the people as to the true nature of the Gospel, and of that which is essential to salvation, love, without which all else is sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. Better without a ministry, than with one which shall nourish these Druses, merciless and cruel as those of Syris.

"But we are not without hope, even buoyant hope. Seed has already been sown that will germinate and bring forth good fruit. The world will yet see it. God has promised that those who go forth weeping, bearing precious seed-unadulterated truth -shall doubtless come again bringing their sheaves with them. Even now, our wan-dering in exile will do a hundred-fold more to show the turpitude of slavery, and rouse the people, North and South, to a holy purpose to remove it than our quiet presence could have done, especially if we had been connected with conservative Boards. John did more for the truth of God, and the good of man, as an exile in Patmos, than he could have done to have remained quiet, even if he had been at the court of Rome. John returned, and we expect to, and the walls of Jerusalem will go up faster

"We need the efforts of Associations like yours, for the North as well as the South. Many I know are hoping that political action will do the work. Mere political action will not, can not. Public sentiment must be changed first. The mere politician will not do this The work must be done by those imbued with the spirit of Christ, whether in the Church or out of it—the spirit that forgets self, forgets position, that will become poor for the riches of others, sink into the depths for the sake of elevating others. This Christian influence preceded the great work of emancipation in ancient Rome, in the British possessions, and has, thus far, in our own country.

"As I have been traveling in some of the free States, I have invariably found the political type answering exactly to the religious. If, in any locality, ministers and societies were conservative-quiet on the subject of slavery-there politicians were the same. They wanted it distinctly understood that they were not Abolitionists—that they had nothing to do with slavery—they wanted no allusion even to non-extension, unless it was to have 'free territory for FREE WHITE MEN.' They were as selfish as a set of opium-smoking, ease-loving Turks.

"But if I went into a community where ministers and churches held up the truth of God specifically against all sine, where the people were taught that the groans of the slave were the groans of Christ in the person of his poor, and that what they did for the poor slave they did for Christ, there I found the people ready not only to hear the 'moral question,' but ready to vote for men of sound moral principle, for men not only ready to shut in slavery, but to do all they righteously could for its entire extinctionthe redemption of the last bondman.

"True Christian sentiment must precede right political action. The Church is to be the light of the world, the salt of the earth. God has so declared it.

"May the friends of a pure and faithfully applied Gospel, work with redoubled zeal, and give with a munificent hand.

"P. S .- The way is now opening in Kentucky for the return of the exiler, and soon I believe many places will be open for the preaching of a pure and free Gospel. There are places where this is now being done, and others where it could be. Rejictions generally follow gross outrages.

From Rev. George Candee, McKee, Jackson county:

"The past year has been one of peril to our little bark. Still we have survived the stern of persecution, and are now in quite as promising a condition as before the mob outrages. The mission field in the mountains is much larger and more promising than ever before. Prejudice is fast subsiding. Congregations, with one exception, have nearly doubled at our regular preaching-places; and in other neighborhoods larger congregations than we have ever had in Kentucky are inviting me to come and preach. There is a determination to resist mob violence at all my regular appointments and where I am invited to preach. We esteem it great success to have gained the privilegs of speaking to the people, even in a few places. The moral and religious influence of our labors, and that of the lives of a few faithful disciples, can only be seen in eternity. The good effect of our little light will be all the greater because of the dense darkness around. Its importance in this field can be appreciated by those abroad only by viewing the many evils to be cured by the healing power of the Gospel. One to get this view, needs to come here and mingle familiarly with all classes for several months. I can give but a faint glimpse.

"Slavery, if not the sole parent, is the nourisbing source of much corruption among the people in the mountains. Licentiousness is very common. Drunkenness and Sabbath breaking prevail (with but few exceptions) even among church-members. All classes drink their dram. Drunken pow-wows are almost as frequent as public court days. Murder and manslaughter are very common.

"It is thought that many in this county will sell their votes. They have been led into it by slaveholding candidates. Good schools are the best remedy for this evil. A high-school or college at McKee would do immense good. We need the prayers of God's people every where, that we may have patience and hope in our labors, and that the truth may have power to save."

From the same :

" McKEs, Jackson County, October 4, 1860.

"I have preached regularly at McKee and at South Fork (Blanton Church) every alternate week, with few exceptions; one Sabbath at Pond Creek in Jackson county; one at Clear Creek, in Rock Castle county; three Sabbaths at Ross Creek, and one at Station Camp, in Estil county. I staid two nights at Berea, and preached there once. At McKee we now have a very interesting little Sabbath-school, conducted by Miss Pratt. Our congregations here are usually small. Our prayer-meetings are small. We hope for better things here by and by. Our meetings at South-Fork are usually intoresting, and have averaged, through the last quarter, about 45 or 50 in attendance. Two have united with the church. There is at present a very interesting prospect among outsiders. The field in Estil county is very promising.

"I preached last Sabbath at Ross Creek on the subject of Bible servitude; and though it rained from very early in the morning until noon, there were about fifty who came through the rain and wet weeds and grass. The meeting was expected to be in the grove, and it was supposed that there would have been over two hundred sympa-thizing hearers. Some threats were reported as having been made by mob men, as a consequence of which there was the utmost vigilance exercised by our friends. Our way to and from the place of meeting was guarded for five miles.

"There is a Baptist church in Estil county, a majority of whose members are in favor of adopting the non fellowship principles in relation to slaveholding. There are also six or eight other persons who wish to have a church established on the same principle. These propose consulting the church on the matter, and if they will adopt this principle, and take down unscriptural bars to communion, they will all 'join them,' and procure such preaching as they all desire. I think this will be done.

"As soon as I went to Beres, several families said I must preach. I did so, and nearly all who knew of the meeting were out to hear me. I have more hope now for the return of the exiles than ever before. Pray for us, and labor and hope on. Slavery is trembling—the door for the Gospel is opening."

From Rev. William Kendrick:

"McKEE, Jackson County, Ky., December 13, 1859. "Since my last things in this region have taken quite a change, consequent on the Harper's Ferry difficulty. Many erroneously suppose that we were in connection with John Brown, and intend to drive us all out, or make threats to that effect. Brother Candee. Brother Jones, and myself went to Laurel, but were prevented from continuing our meeting longer than Saturday night. On Saturday, at eleven o'clock, five men came after the appointments had been given out for Saturday night and Sabbath, and said they were a committee sent to request us to leave, and not preach any more.

"We expected to attend a meeting of Rev. Mr. Doke's (a Presbyterian) in the morning on Sabbath, but were prevented by a mob, which overtook us before we arrived at the meeting house, and took us half a mile, and there asked us questions, and then took us five or eix miles further, and sheared our hair and beard, and put tar on our heads and faces, and left us. Only one of our friends went all the way with us. On our return we found there were no ressonable grounds for hoping to do good by staying, so we came on towards home. Brother Candee preached in Clay, on his way, and I went to Station Camp, at which place there seems to be a good interest. Some have joined the church there, and we are expecting several more soon, who give good evidence of being converted.

"The excitement is so great here on the slavery question, that our labors at present are very much circumscribed. The probability is that all the brothren at Berea will be driven out. They intend to kill Mr. Fee, if he comes to Kentucky."

From Rev. James S. Davis of Ky. Pittsfield, O., Aug. 14, 1860.

"In January, 1860, I was compelled to leave my charge at Glenville, Lewis Co., Ky. Before that, I had visited, in the fall and winter of 1859, an interesting field in Nicholas and Fleming counties. A few tracts, taken providentially and distributed by a friend, awakened inquiry, and produced a desire for a more extensive knowledge of the doctrines and practice of a church which insists that the 'second' commandment, 'is like unto' that first and great commandment, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God,' etc.

"In the north-eastern part of Lewis county, I found several anti-slavery friends, and presched at two different times. Let us hope that laborers, raised up in God's good providence, will cultivate and reap those fields.

"Since January, I have preached in Southern and Northern Ohio, having assisted Rev. Jacob Emrick in a protracted meeting at Jacksonsburg, Butler Co.; in Illinois at thirty-seven places, traversing the State from north to south; in Iowa, at eleven places."

From Rev. J. A. R. Rogers of Ky. Stockbridge, Mass., Aug. 17, 1860.

"The results of our last few months' labor in and about Berea, were cheering at the time, and do not now appear less hopeful in reference to their connection with the great work of more fully evangelizing Eastern Kentucky. These are times when > 'God moves in a mysterious way. His wonders to perform :'

but the philosophy and results of persecution have been so fully developed in the history of God's kingdom, that violent opposition to Christians can now scarcely be called 'mysterious.' Without exception, the attempts to stop the progress of the truth by violence, have in the end, aided instead of hindering its spread. Already is the reflex influence of driving your missionaries from their work in Kentucky apparent. Its influence upon my own mind has been greatly to increase my interest in and desire for the Christian welfare of the peop e of Kentucky.

"During the last months of our sejourn in that State, the Lord seemed to be preparing the way for his own ultimate triumph. The Sabbath-school was twice as large as ever before, and was exerting a powerful influence upon the minds of the young people. The Sabbath congregation was smaller rather than larger, but a sifting process seemed to be in progress separating real from nominal Christians. At no previous time had the external prosperity been so great.—I have alluded to a sifting process in the church. This seemed to me absolutely essential to the successful prosecution of our work. Though remarkably sustained by Christ in the times of trial, so that we were not only delivered from fear, but filled with yearning love for our enemies, I now see plainly that all of us needed to be sifted, to come into a deeper sympathy with Christ, and understand more of his fullness, in order to be prepared to lay the foundation for that glorious work which we believe is to be wrought in that, in many respects, noble Commonwealth. Our temporary removal from our loved field I think will conduce to "My own confidence in the favorable issue of missionary effort in Kentucky is continually increasing. It is founded on Christ's love and purpose to bless all, the natural traits and capacities of the 'mountain men,' their growing desire for faithful ministers, the interest and prayers in their behalf on the part of multitudes of Christians, and the fact that God is raising up individuals with a special love for this portion of our countrymen and for the work of their evangelization. That the day may be hastened when the Holy Spirit, which in demonstration of his power brought thousands of the sons of Kentucky, in the great revival of 1800, to bow at the foot of the Cross and thus staid the threatening tide of wickedness, may work mightily, 'rending the heavens' and coming down for the salvation of men and the glory of Christ Jesus our Lord, is my earnest

From Rev. J. C. Richardson, of Kentucky. Perry Center, N. Y.

"Just before I left our field of labor in Kentucky, the prospects seemed more encouraging than ever before. . . A postmaster said to me: 'You go to places where they do not hold slaves, have meetings, and give away tracts. It is just about as bad to get the non-slaveholders excited against slavery as it is the slaves, for they have the majority, and can vote us down.' Afterwards, this man complained of our 'Abolition school,' and said: 'Even if we did not teach abolition, our scholars, having regard for us as teachers, would be more likely to believe in our principles, and a school with such teachers,' he assured me, 'would not be allowed in the county.'

"The result of our labors was in accordance with our faith, and even beyond our expectations. Last fall, before I left, I found it an easy matter to obtain forty signatures for a school, to be supplied for the winter by a teacher from Oberlin; hoping to establish a permanent Academy in the county, as was our original intention. Six of the scholars who attended our school the previous year had subsequently been very successful as teachers. This influence has done much to encourage the plan of having a school established which should furnish proper instruction to teachers; as a class, in that region, they are too often very deficient in suitable qualifications.

"Some Christians were dissatisfied with the pro-slavery position of the churches to which they belong, and some youth and others had been hopefully converted through God's blessing upon our humble efforts. We hoped to gather these classes into a church of Christ, but God's ways are not as our ways. He has permitted an event at Harper's Ferry which has resulted in the expulsion of co-laborers in other portions of the State, and has prevented our return, the establishment of the church and the school. . . Very encouraging intelligence comes to us from different parts of Kentucky. The way is evidently preparing for a return of the exiles, and a greater enlargement of Zion in that

From Rev. J. F. Boughton of Kentucky, now in Ohio:

"The impression made upon my hearers in lecturing, since our expulsion from Kentucky, is that it was 'truly a missionary field.' There is a general impression that we shall yet meet with much success in that State. I have felt that the people in the free States need to be stirred up with respect to the duty of evangelizing the slave States. The number and condition of the non-slaveholders of the South are but little known at the North.

"Having for many years felt and professed a willingness to do any thing and go any where that God should require, this question was often before me : Can I cheerfully consent to endure the hardships, suffer the privations, and patiently meet the discouragements, in-separably connected with the faithful discharge of Christian duty in a slave State? I re-solved not to decide the question until I had seen the brethern in Madison county, Kentucky—interior, as we call it. On my strival at Berea, I found our brethren hard at work, and cheerfully enduring many privations, and withal so hopeful in regard to the success of the colony and the school, that I did not hesitate to east in my lot with these dence that our labor while there, and now our very absence, instead of proving a failure is a greater success, than is ordinarily secured by an equal amount of missionary effort. The slaveholders in expelling us, have not destroyed, but greatly increased our influence against oppression even in Kentucky; and at the same time given us opportunity to go from town to town, and State to State, addressing thousands of our fellow citizens, and as 'exiles,' furnished with double power to waken to duty and move to action many of the indifferent and wavering. Planting ourselves on the Gospel platform, we confidently look for the triumph of our cause, and are willing to labor in the North, or return to the South, just as God in his providence shall open the way. Extensive intercourse with friends at the North furnishes evidence that future laborers in Kentucky will be sustained both by prayer and contributions, and also that their numbers will be greatly increased."

NORTH-CAROLINA.

From Rev. Daniel Worth, New-Salem, Randolph Co., Sept. 30, 1859.

"I am happy to announce that revival influences are felt in several of our churchesconversions have occurred at different points within a few weeks. On Saturday last we commenced a meeting which continued through the Sabbath, and afterwards on alternate evenings since. The result up to the present is that nine are hopefully converted, and several come forward for prayers each evening. Thank God for the blessed work: souls are converted-sinners are made to feel, and even our adversaries confess that the power of God rests frequently on our assemblies."

Favorable indications continued up to the time of his arrest. At that time there had been twenty-five or more hopeful conversions. The facts in relation to the work in North-Carolina are so fully stated in the body of the report, that we omit any further extracts.

MISSOURI.

From Rev. Stephen Blanchard, Oregon, Holt Co., March, 1860.

"The past quarter I have had appointments here, three Sabbaths out of four, and in Forrest City once a month. The remainder of my time has been occupied in preaching in the country. My congregations have, as a general thing, been much larger in the country than in the places named above, for the reason doubtless that there is there less slave capital, and the people are not so much prejudiced against me. Many, especially those from Southern States, have been taught to believe that the Bible sustains slavery, hence the importance of preaching a Gospel opposed to alavery, intemperance, and war, opposed to all sin. In some places mob violence has been threatened, and I am sorry to say that some ministers have countenanced treating those who may differ with them on the subject of slavery with a coat of tar and feathers, but as yet no violence has been shown, and my congregations have been peaceable and quiet.

"Slaves are fast passing away from these northern counties and are being carried South, (where their condition will probably be worse than here;) it will be but a few years, as I believe, before this soil, now worked more or less by slaves, will be tilled by

From the same :

"During the winter and spring I sold some copies of the Compendium of Helper's Impending Crisis; about the first of April I sold a copy to an editor in this place. During the session of the Circuit Court the copy was taken before the Grand-Jury. One witness (the lady in a part of whose house we live) was called before the jury, and put under oath, to ascertain whether I had offered to sell her Helper's book, or the Life of Frederick Douglas, the latter having been seen in her possession. The news flew through the town, that a resident of the town, with myself, was going to be arrested. I am informed that an indictment was made out by the jury, and handed to the District-Attorney to prosecute; but the Judge told him that such an indictment could not be sustained, it had been tried in several instances in this State, and had failed: he advised them to drop it, which they did.

"Some time ago, in conversation with a slaveholder, I told him that I considered it my right, on all suitable occasions, to speak on the subject of slavery, and he very cordially gave his assent. I am happy to say that I have been favored with some tracts of the Boston and Cincinnati Societies, and have distributed some of them, not neglecting the slaveholder. I hope I may be supplied with anti-slavery and other tracts, for gratuitous distribution, as I am confident they will do much good at the present juncture. Now is the time to do something for God and the oppressed. The advocates of slavery are divided in their sentiments; slaveholders themselves now say that the South has asked too much at the hands of the North. The light of God's truth should be flashed upon the minds of the people, giving the moral or Bible-aspects of the slavery question; it will secure their attention and do good,"

KANSAS

From Rev. S. L. Adair, Osawatomie, September, 1860:

"The walls of our meeting-house still stand uncovered. Without aid, nothing more can be done to it this year.

"God's judgments are upon us. Our crops are cut off: wheat and oats are an entire failure, corn almost so; no potatoes yet, and almost no vegetables of any kind. Prairies browned and burning, water very scarce; almost no money to buy food with. Hundreds are every week leaving Southern Kansas; some to winter elsewhere, many not expecting to return again. Some seem much hardened by the hand of God being thus laid upon them; others are more tender, and ready to talk on the subject of religion. My prayer is, that God will give us a spiritual harvest.

"Sabbath-breaking greatly prevails throughout this region. Professors of religion are becoming more lax in the observance of the Sabbath-day. There is more or less intemperance, liquor is sold in secret mostly. Political anti-slavery makes some stir, but true anti-slavery, the brotherhood of man, often receives the cold shoulder, or a sneer from many professed anti-slavery men.

"Better schools have been had the past year than heretofore. Infidelity abounds, but seems not quite so bold as formerly. I have for some time past been delivering a course of lectures on Revelation and Science, which has attracted considerable attention, and I think is producing a decidedly good effect on the minds of a number of young men much under the influence of infidel philosophy. Nothing that I have ever attempted here has seemed to meet with a better reception. I have delivered eight lectures, and the desire to hear them seems still to increase.

"There are many Universalists in the community, but no preachers among them. Campbellites, Disciples, Reformers, "Christians," so called, are all the same here. They are making great efforts in places near this. They baptize and receive multitudes into the Church. I think the mass of them know nothing of true religion. The more I see and hear, as I travel round among the people, the more do I feel that sectarianism will yet exhibit some of its worst features in Kansas."

From Rev. Harvey Jones, Wabaunsee, K. T., April 4th, 1860:

"To-morrow I expect to close my labors in Kansas. It is with many regrets that I leave the lovely country, and especially this beloved church and deeply interesting field of labor. The five years I have speut at Wabaunsee I humbly trust have not been spent altogether in vain, to say nothing of efforts elsewhere — of a little church gathered at Zeandale, and a neat house of worship secured to them. At this place we have now a church of sixty-four members—the second in numbers, if indeed it be not the first—in the Territory. Through the aid of the American Congregational Union, and the liberality of kind friends in Connecticut, they have a nest and really beautiful and the liberality of kind friends in Connecticus, they have a heat and really beautiful stone church edifice, nearly ready to be occupied, free from debt. During these five years some thirty souls or more have, as I trust, been brought to accept Christ's salvation. Others, who had wandered from the fold, have been brought back. In a year or two at most, this church will, I trust, become self-supporting. They would even attempt it now, were it not for the impossibility of obtaining a market for produce, and the very low price of that which can be sold. That part of a minister's salary which must be cash, the neable him to live must still be furnished through missionary changes. cash, to enable him to live, must still be furnished through missionary channels.

"For several months past there has been much more than the usual religious interest in the Church and in the community. Though there has not been what would be tech-nically called a 'revival,' yet the results have been precious. Some ten or twelve, we have reason to hope, have been really brought to Christ. Others are in a most hopeful state; and, what I feel is occasion of the most heart-felt gratitude, the church has, as a whole, come into a more spiritual and active state than I think ever before.

"At our communion, the first Sabbath in March, five united with the church, and seven more last Sabbath; three of these, however, by letter. A number of others, we hope, will unite at an early day."

From Rev. J. Copeland, Clinton, Douglas Co., August 25th, 1860:

"On the first of June I resumed my labors at Kanwaca, preaching every other Sabbath, holding weekly prayer-meetings, and visiting from house to house as I have been able. Some members of that church have been led to a more faithful discharge of Christian duty and greater fervency in prayer; and I have been cheered from time to time with indications that the preaching of the word is not in vain there. There is a strong infidel influence there, and Unitarian preaching every Sabbath; but I trust the Gospel will prevail against it all.

"We have been under the necessity of expelling one of the members of the church of Kanwaca. The charges against him were, absenting himself from public worship and from all church-meetings, selling or permitting the sale of intoxicating liquors, and harboring kidnappers, with which Kansas is infested.

"Our weekly church prayer-meetings have been blessed to the increase of spirituality in the church. I have of late increased my pastoral visitations, and in several instances seen indications of influences of the Spirit of God upon the hearts of sinners. Such indications cheer me in my labors, and inspire the hope that God will yet appear in glory to build up Zion and cause these moral wastes to rejoice and blossom as the rose. My heart is more than ever set upon this desirable consummation.

"The appalling drought is distracting the minds of the people, and causing even Christians to ask, with deep solicitude: 'What shall we eat and wherewithal shall we be clothed?' Some think that one third of the people are leaving the Territory. I did expect to call on the brethren this fall to give of their crops towards the support of the Gospel, but not a member of either of the churches in which I minister will raise this year, so far as I know, a bushel of grain or vegetables of any kind. And so it is all around us."

In a later communication Mr. Copeland reports conversions in the Sabbath-schools, and gives encouraging facts in relation to religious inquiry among the youth. He speaks also of the labors of a Christian brother, upwards of threescore, who devotes the Sabbath and other portions of the week to missionary labors. "He visits the schools, frequently addressing the scholars, and urging them to immediate repentance; distributes tracts and books; visits from house to house, conversing and praying with the people." Mr. Copeland adds: 'Nearly all the members of our churches are engaged in Sundayschool labors. A church edifice was being erected during the past year, and nearly finished, when a tornado laid it in ruins. We are soliciting aid to enable us to rebuild it." Mr. C. alludes to the sufferings of the people in consequence of the drought, and adds: "I trust God is thus purifying us in the furnace of affliction, humbling us, and preparing us to serve him more faithfully. The trials of ministers and churches in Kansas are great; our enemies are numerous and strong; but the Gospel is making decided progress." against out of the first state of the state

From Rev. John H. Byrd, Atchison:

"Our church edifice is progressing, and we hope to get into the basement early this fall. At my appointments, (Sumner, Burns, and Winthrop,) which now take up my time, the attendance and apparent interest in our meetings are encouraging.

"The drought has been very severe in this Territory, but less so in this neighborhood than elsewhere. Many people are moving away, and several Methodist ministers are obliged to turn aside from the ministry to seek elsewhere, or in other ways, means of support. It is expected that times will be increasingly hard for a year to come in all

"I send you an advertisement which I recently cut from a St. Joseph, Mo., paper. Just think of a freeman taken up, thrust into prison, and there to be sold because no master comes to claim him as a slave.

"'NEGRO TAKEN UP .- Taken up in the city of St. Joseph, Mo., April 27th, A.D. 1860, one Negro Boy, named John Finley, about nineteen years old, five feet ten inches high, of a copper color, has a scar over the left eye, says he was born free in the city of Louisville, Kentucky, and that his mother's name was Easter Finley. Unless his owner come forward within three months from the date of this advertisement, and prove said slave, and pay all charges, the said Negro Boy, John Finley, will be sold at the court-house door, in the city of St. Joseph, Buchanan county, Mo., for cash in hand, which said sale will be on the 30th day of July, A.D. 1860, between the hours of nine o'clock in the forencon and five o'clock in the afternoon of said day.

" 'M. D. MORGAN, Sheriff,

" Buchanan county, Mo.'

"Some time since, the colored people of this town were organized into a Baptist church. Last Sabbath they had engaged a prescher of their own color from St. Joseph Mo., but a white minister unexpectedly came in his place. It appears that the colored preacher is a slave, and his commission from the Lord to preach the Gospel to every creature is limited by the condition that he should not go where slave property is unsafe. A considerable number of colored persons are settling here."

IOWA.

From Rev. O. Emerson, Jr., missionary at large:

"WOLF CREEK, August 9th, 1860.

"I reached home last evening from a three weeks' missionary tour. As stated supply here I have been engaged four months, half the time, reserving the remainder for general missionary work. During the year I have assisted in the formation of three churches. One at Avon, in Buchanan county, at Albion and Marietta in Marshall county, and at Cedar Falls in Black Hawk county. During the year I have preached to eight or ten destitute churches at their request, laboring to strengthen the things that remain, administer ordinances, and assist in renewing their ministerial supply. Some of these fields have been by these efforts supplied with ministers. In some ten or twelve places I have preached in behalf of the Association, and made small collections. During the last winter I assisted other ministers in protracted meetings at five different places. In two of these places several conversions occurred; and in all an improved state of things was apparent.

"Nearly all my work has been done in places where the cause of religion is low, and the churches, where there are any, feeble, and the members widely scattered. This work is such as few ministers like to do, and much of it seems very barren of immediate results. Yet it must be done. I engage in it mostly because circumstances in early life required me thus to labor, and subsequent experience has taught me the importance of the work. The most interesting feature of the present time is, the diffusion of antislavery truth among the people through the agency of the pending political canvass. I have deemed it a privilege to comply with a request of my fellow-citizens to speak to them on the present 'political issues,' which, like the phrase, 'Southern Institutions,' means little else than stavery."

From Rev. G. J. Cummins, Evangelist.

"Reform principles are on the advance in the West; but we need more true men, who will not be gagged for a piece of bread, or for popularity. There are some men laboring in the West under pay from Missionary societies, who profess to be anti-slavery, yet the people do not know that they are from any thing they say in the pulpit.

"The cause of vital piety, I think, is on the advance, especially among reformera When last in Floyd county, the brethren and sisters thought it a small matter to go three or four miles to the Thursday five o'clock prayer-meeting; and in all our churches we not only pray once a month for the slave, but in revival meetings, prayer-meetings, and preaching, we feel it to be our duty to remember those in bonds as bound with them, and to pray that war and intemperance may cease, and for the world's salvation.

"Meeting houses are scarce, and what there are, are generally in towns, and in the hands of pro-slavery churches. I have only preached four times in a church during the year, and sometimes in a small school-house, packed close with anxious listeners, standing on a bench, with not room enough to kneel. You that live in cities know but little of the inconvenience of such things; but God blesses our efforts."

From a missionary:

"PLYMOUTH, Cerro Gordo County. "When I last wrote you, I was, I think, engaged in a meeting on Lyme Creek. There were several hopeful conversions there; two have united with our church, and we hope to receive others. Several have united with the Methodists and 'United Brethren in Christ.' Upon the close of that meeting, I commenced one in this place, which was greatly blessed. Christians were revived, and quite a number of persons hopefully converted. Seven have since been added to our little church. In the two places, five adults and eight children received the ordinance of baptism. At the close of the meeting in this place, I was called to assist Bro. La Due, in Rockford, Floyd Co., where the Lord has done a good work. Thus, you see, the Lord has not utterly forsaken us. We will thank him for his past goodness, and trust him for the future. Our weekly and monthly meetings are kept up with more than usual interest; our Sunday-schools, also, have opened with more than common encouragement. I have been able to meet all my appointments for the last three months, although my health has at times been feeble.

From another missionary:

"WATERLOO, Black Hawk County. "The providence of God has smiled upon us, giving us health and an abundant harvest. We are stronger, pecuniarily, than at my last report. We have also, at an expense of $500, completed, nearly, our new house of worship, without adding to our debt. Last Thursday, we dedicated our house to the service of Almighty God. It was an occasion of great interest to our people; a time of rejoicing in our Israel. We have rented our slips to sustain the pulpit, and to relieve us of some embarrassing debts on our church. Our house seats about 250 persons easily, and we could rent several more slips if we had them. This may indicate to you the measure of our outward prosperity. Since our last report, we have received to our communion, three in the Congregational church, by letter, and four by profession. Also three by letter, to the Presbyterian church, making the additions to the churches under my care, during the quarter now reported, ten. At our next communion, just at hand, seven or eight are proposing to unite by letter. We feel that we are blest of the great Head of the Church in our efforts, and ask your prayers for the outpouring of his Holy Spirit, in its converting power upon the impenitent, and in its quickening power upon his Zion."

MINNESOTA.

From a missionary:

"BROOKLYN, Austin P. O., June 12, 1860.

"The quarter ending June 10, has been one of 'labors more abundant.' About the first of March, my brother at Austin commenced a protracted effort, about six miles from Austin. After a few days' labor, he had a slight shock of the palsy, and was obliged to leave the field. I continued the meeting two weeks longer. The Lord was present by his Spirit, not only to convince of sin, but to lead a goodly number of souls to himself. At the close of the meeting, I organized a Congregational Union Church of seventeen members. A weekly prayer-meeting, also a female prayer meeting, and Sabbath-school and Bible class have been established in that place, as the result of the revivals. The Sabbath-school numbers between thirty and forty. This is the Lord's doings, and blessed be his name. A good degree of interest continues among that people."

From Rev. H. M. Nichols, Minneapolis, March 31, 1860:

"During the month of December, the church came together, resolved, if possible, to heal old difficulties, and the result was a harmonious adjustment of the difficulties, and the disposition to work together faithfully for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. About the first of the new year, it became apparent that the Spirit of God was among us, and at our first inquiry-meeting we found six present, inquiring what they should do to be saved. During the remainder of the winter, the gentle dew of God's grace descended upon us. Some twenty or more have become the subjects of this gracious work, and at our communion season in March, ten united with the church on profession, and twelve by letter. The inquiry meeting has been the best means we have used in the work. A number of the children of the Sabbath-school have given good evidence of conversion; and the children's meetings, conducted by some older member, are not the least interesting of our meetings. The female prayer-meeting is well attended, and has been a very important agency, and in our social meetings, our female members have borne their part of the responsibility. Our sisters have just organized and put in operation a Tract and Benevolent Society, for visiting every family in the place, not connected with some religious Soc.ety. Our Sabbath school is flourishing, numbering about one hundred, and holds a concert every month; it circulates fifty copies of the Well Spring. Forty copies of the Tract Journal are distributed in the congregation, and thirty copies of the Christian Press. Our congregation during the winter has averaged about two hundred in the morning and three hundred in the evening. I have been giving a course of eight lectures to young men; they have been crowded, and I think have not been without good results."

From the same:

"The beautiful house of worship of the Plymouth Church in this place, is in ashesthe work of the liquor interest. Last week, a young man died here of delirium tremens. I was with him at his death, and felt called upon last Sabbath evening to speak on the subject of temperance, with reference to his death, charging the responsibility home upon the liquor traffic of the town. I spoke as God gave me strength, pointedly and closely. The next morning a Dashaway Club was formed of some of our hard drinking young men. The ladies of the town, to the number of fifty and over, banded together, and on Tuesday visited all the rumsellers, requesting them to relinquish the traffic or leave the place. The liquor dealers were fixe infuriated mad hounds. At twelve o'clock Wednesday night, our beautiful church was discovered to be on fire. An indignation mass-meeting was held last night, and a vigilance committee of fifty appointed to act. The town will be cleared of liquor. But we are without a church. I can not tell what we shall do. We have a church-meeting to-night. Other churches in town have already extended invitations to us, to occupy their houses of worship."

From the same, May 28, 1860:

"There has been a great improvement in the public sentiment here on the temperance question; but our laws are so weak and defective, that we are not able immediately to make a c'ear sweep of the whole liquor business. The Republican paper in this town, the Atlas, is doing a good work in temperance matters.

"At our communion this month, we received twelve into the church—three of them on profession. We are not without occasional cases of inquiry now. I feel encouraged that God is with us, and he will in some way enlarge the door of our usefulness, as a church."*

WISCONSIN.

From a missionary in Racine county, August 25th, 1860:

"Our Sabbath and social weekly meetings have experienced the influence of the Spirit. in the conversion of souls. I assisted the pastors in two neighboring parishes, where about seventy-five professed conversion to Christ. About twelve miles from here, I assisted in a protracted meeting of two weeks. A number of souls were converted. Nine family altars were erected; aged men, also men of influence, some of whom were infidels, were subjects of the work. In the busy season of the year, God's grace and power were unusually displayed in the conversion of some who had been considered almost beyond the reach of mercy. My own church manifests an increased attachment to the word of God.

• As Mr. Nichols was making preparation to come East to solicit aid in rebuilding the church edifice, he was anddenly called away from his earthly labors. Accompanied by his wife and little son, and his brother-in-law, which his two youthful daughters, he went to bathe with them in Lake Calloum. The children got into deep water. Mr. Nichols and Mr. Claveland rushed to the rescue. Mr. C., who could not swim, grasped Mr. N., and carried him down. Mrs. N. attempted to reach them; and finding herself sinking, called to Mrs. C., who was following, to go back and take care of the other children left on the shore. The budges were all receivered, all lying near each other, in water fifteen feet deep. Mr. N. was so extensively known, and so generally esteemed, that his audden death occasioned much grief, while a sympathicing community mourn over the distress eccasioned by this awful dispensation of Providence.

"The anti-slavery and temperance cause are making advancement in Church and State. We have to lament that the United States courts are continually overriding the State courts, on the question of human freedom."

From a missionary in Bad Axe county, July 1st, 1860:

"My appointments have been met with punctuality, and the great reformatory questions have received due attention. The doctrines of the cross constitute the leading themes, but their bearing upon the great moral questions which agitate the age is exhibited with fidelity. Ignorance and prejudice, however, lead many to oppose and avoid such ministrations. Many of the people in this region are from Virginia, Kentucky, Southern Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and are afflicted with Southern predilections; yet some of them are among the staunchest friends of a freedom-breathing Gospel. I have taken occasion from the position of the Association on tobacco to enforce the duty of abstinence from that nauseating narcotic; it is hoped with some success. At one of my appointments there is a strong excitement on the subject of temperance, occasioned by the introduction of a whisky-saloon, very much to the grief and annoyance of the quiet and orderly inhabitants of the town.

"The crops never looked as promising in the recollection of the oldest residents as at the present time, and the people feel much encouraged. This county is as rich a farming county as any in the State, and will turn off a large surplus of grain the present year. I have preached on the subject of Missions at several appointments, and explained the position of the Association, and urged its claims. The friends are becoming interested in it, and will soon begin to give practical demonstrations of their favor. For their own spiritual welfare, as well as for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, I feel it a duty to inculcate upon Christians the practice of Christian bene-

"Several places where we have no churches are most promising for good results. The studious, active, enterprising habits of live Yankees are greatly wanting in the emigrants from Southern Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and consequently it is more difficult to make progress in Sabbath-schools, and in building up intelligent churches. Universalism and Materialism are producing mischievous effects in some localities. Our reliance is upon the Divine blessing on a patient, laborious, and earnest inculcation of truth to secure the grand end-the salvation of the soul."

From another missionary:

"A large part of the people neglect the house of God. I have visited most of the families in the village, and many in the vicinity, and have been kindly received; but they have not been induced to come and hear the Gospel preached. There is a lamentable indifference to religion, and disregard of divine institutions in the community, and by many families who have come from the Eastern States, who were formerly regular in their attendance on the sanctuary. Sabbath desecration is less, I am told, than in past years, and there has been a decided reform in regard to temperance."

From a Welsh missionary:

"Two houses of worship, being frame buildings, have been erected: one at Bangor, the other at Fish Creek. One church has been organized at Bangor. The Welsh are the most numerous settlers at Fish Creek and Vale Head. The Sabbath is well observed. The best movements of the day, such as missionary work, discountenancing intemperance and slavery, have their sympathy and aid.

"The Germans are the most numerous settlers at Bangor and vicinity; they have the best locations, as they came there first, but they have no place for public worship. The Sabbath is openly descrated, and now they are in course of erecting two large buildings, within forty rods of our church, one for a brewery, the other for a theater and 'Bier Hall.'"

From another missionary:

"I have recently preached six anti-slavery sermons, bringing God's word to bear fully upon American slavery. Much expitement and discussion, and evidently some permanent good, have resulted from it. I have calls in every direction to preach on that subject, but I am sorry that my ill-health prevents my responding to many of them. It is one of the strangest things that comes within the range of my observation, that a professing Christian can give any countenance to the existence, not to say, extension, of American slavery. Notwithstanding all that has been done in the cause of human freedom, there never was a time when Christian anti-slavery societies and missionary societies were more needed, or could do more good, than at the present. As in many other things, so in the cause of liberty, especially, is there a tendency to superficiality. The nation and the churches have need to come back to first principles; to restore the old landmark of righteousness, that the light may rise in obscurity, and the darkness become as noondsy."

ILLINOIS.

From Rev. H. H. Hinman :*

"After the sickness and death of my wife, and a temporary suspension of my labors, there followed an increased interest in my congregation at Esmen; a blessed revival, and the hopeful conversion of twelve persons, mostly youth, one of whom has since died in the triumphs of faith. Ten persons united with our church in Sunbury, and one with the Baptist church in Pontiac.

"During the month of December, a discussion took place at Pontiac, between Rev. J. Bettleheim, M.D., formerly a missionary to Japan, and myself, upon the question: 'Is American Slavery a Moral and Social Evil?' The discussion continued two evenings, was well attended, and most happy in its results. The discussion turaed mainly upon the question, 'Was Hebrew servitude a system of chattel slavery?' This was followed by a very interesting discussion in Sunbury upon the question, 'Is the decrine of Popular Sovereignty, as applied to slavery, in accordance with justice and sound policy?'

"In the mean time Dr. Bettleheim published a series of six lengthy articles in the Democratic county paper, in defense of slavery as a divine institution, after the close of which I replied, through the same medium, in a similar number of articles, and of similar length.

"In many respects the indications of progress in the cause of Christianity and reform are cheering, but the present political excitement is tending greatly to the prometion of intemperance, and to divert public attention from the desolating influence of this great injusty."

From Rev. A. L. Rankin, who is acting as an Evangelist:

"Salval, Marion County, September 1st, 1860.

"During this quarter I have visited on the Illinois Central R. R., the following places, Carbondale, DuQuoin, Tameroah, Ashley, Richview, Hoylton, Sandoval, Kinmundy, and Decatur. At Carbondale, Jackson Co., there is a growing anti-slavery sentiment, and a streng temperance influence, liquor being banished from the place. It has a population of 1260. The New School Presbyterians have located a college there. DuQuoin is also occupied by the New School, and has some New-England element, and some anti-slavery feeling. At Tameroah, there is some prospect of the organization of a church. Ashley will be a place of some importance, as the western terminus of a railroad, now in progress of construction to the eastern line of the State. Ashley has a Congregational element, which I hope will ere long be gathered together. Richview and Hoylton, are light spots in the midst of surrounding darkness, as Washington county is one of the most benighted in 'Egypt,' mobbing being quite in vogue there.

"Sandoval and Kilmundy have had the labors of Bro. D. Gilmer, one of the most consistent anti-slavery men of the State. He has gone to his final resting-place, having fallen asleep in Jesus a short time since. The care of the other points will fall upon me, until a successor can be procured, for the interests there are too great to be left without preaching. Decatur has about 5000 souls, but there has been little in the form of an anti-slavery religion there, though located in the center of the State.

"At the request of Bro. Emery at Quincy, I made a trip over the Great Western R. R., visiting Springfield, Jacksonville, Greggsville, Pittsfield and Quincy. Learning that Bro. Sturtevant, Jr., was lying very low with dysentery, I stopped at Hannibal, Mo., to see and assist him if necessary. I was greatly gratified to find his church, antislavery in its organization, in a flourishing condition, even in Missouri. Though not yet one year old, it is self-sustaining and has completed a neat church edifice, and is free from debt. The membership is of New-England origin. Not far from Hannibal is another Congregational church, strictly anti-slavery, among the Germans, aided by the A. H. Missionary Society. The church is of recent organization. We expect much from these churches. Rollins, the Emancipation candidate for Congress, has just been elected from the Hannibal district. I also spent a few days in St. Louis, and was greatly struck with the contrast, in the condition of public sentiment on the slavery question, with that of my first visit, but a few months after the murder of Lovejoy, in Alton. Here no man could with safety express a sentiment adverse to slavery. Now you hear it discussed in the family, popular sasemblies, hotels, business houses, newspapers and streets, with as much freedom as in New-York, and much more frequently.

"On the Ohlo and Mississippi R. R., I visited the following places. Twenty five miles east of St. Louis, is Lebenon, with 1000 souls. If a men could be permanently located there, much good could be accomplished. The same is true of Trenton, twenty miles farther east. Carlisle is truly a missionary field; it is the seat of justice for Clinton Co., and is certainly the most wicked, drunken place I ever wisited. It has 1200 souls. Middleton, Xenia, Flora, and Clay City, are new places growing rapidly, and destitute of preaching, except what is occasionally heard from ministers passing. At Olney, a town of 2000 souls, I found a few Free Presbyterians, whom I hope to gather together some time. I was told, that near Newton, Jasper county, there is a collection of New-England families, Congregational and anti-slavery, who are anxious to be visited by a Congregational minister.

"The weather has been unusually sultry, accompanied with a drought of six weeks. The harvest, the extreme hot weather, together with the strong political excitement, impede access to the people during the first quarter, and the influence of the latter will continue to affect my labors for the next quarter. The Republicans are expending an unusual amount of labor upon Egypt, and are greatly reducing the Democratic majorities. This, of course, stirs up opposition; thus the excitement increases as the election approaches. You can excreed get a man to listen to any thing but the political issues of the day. Good will come out of it, however. While some of the Republican speakers do not take the bold ground they should, still much truth is elicted, and prejudice overcome. Many of them, such as Lovejoy, Allen, Schurz, etc., do not fear to tell the whole truth. Occasionally the Republicans get mobbed, and their meetings are broken up. They have in every case rabled again, and compelled respect, and the mobbing has only increased their bold denunciations of slavery and intensified their hatred of it. Negronal ching, in this negro-catching county, is growing daily more unpopular."

From Rev. William Holmes, another Evangelist:

"I have labored in the counties of Washington, Randolph, Perry, Jackson, Union and Alexander. The two last I visited on a tour of exploration. By visiting schools, by the distribution of tracts, by conversation and prayers, and by the preaching of the Gospel, I have endeavored to scatter the light of truth and love, and to sow the seeds of knowledge, temperance, purity, benevolence, peace and liberty, and of true godliness.

"I have been permitted to present the principles and objects of the A. M. A. to several of the Reformed Presbytarian churches of Southern Illinois; to state the claims which the Association has on all Christians to enable it to carry out these principles and objects. On the 7th of May a Congregational church was organized at Sparts, Randolph

Co., with favorable prospects.

"Away back from the railroads there are many very needy communities; these who need the light of the blessed Gospel, to instruct, to comfort and to elevate them. In Jackson Co. I found a community thus needy, (such indeed, as to their needs may be found in every county in Southern Illinois.) They felt their need, and had been praying that God in his mercy would supply their need. I preached to them as to a people ready prepared of the Lord, and left them carrying with me their prayers and blessings. Oh! how cheering it is to find a people thus prepared. It is like an oasis in the desert.

^{*} Mr Hinman salled for Western Africa, Nov. 1st, 1860, to join our Mendi mission.

"I am happy to be enabled to state that the cause of education is advancing. Indeed this is almost the only hope there is for Southern Illiquis, ag'to the future—the education of the rising generation. The free school system works well here. New school-houses are being built and additional teachers employed. Thus a foundation is being laid whereon by God's grace shall arise a superstructure of intelligence and virtue, of righteousness and love.

"One often finds here traces of the savage spirit of slavery. I lately passed a field —a field of blood—where a poor fugitive from slavery was shot down dead, and left weltering in his blood. A short time since, I saw another, who in escaping landed near Cairo. Three years ago, two men took him across the River Muddy. He, mistrusting them, started to run; they fired on him, and he played 'possum' and fell. They left him in charge of a boy; when he rose up, the boy ran, and the poor slave, with several shot in him, got away hid himself, and finally found himself among friends.

"It is greatly to be lamented that very much of the preaching here lacks two things, namely, truth and love. Instead of bringing the truth of the Gospel to bear against the errors that exist, and the holy love of the Gospel to bear against the spirit of selfishness, that prevails, it is a perpetual prophecy of smooth things; and the people love to have it so.

"One sometimes meets with a strong intelligent opponent of slavery, who is at the same time as much opposed to the Church and to vital godliness. This is very painful to witness, and it is still more painful to learn that it is by the sanction of ministers and professed Christians to the system of slavery that this result is brought about.

"Whatever breaks into and scatters the miserable democracy, as it is called, that prevails in the counties of Southern Illinois, must be regarded as a blessing. Whether Republicanism will or will not do what God commands and the country need, it is a clear gain to have it instead of democracy, and I am happy to state it is superseding it in Southern Illinois

"Southern Illinois is a most beautiful part of the Lord's vineyard, and there are many parts quite healthy still unoccupied. The land is good. A fine opportunity is afforded for new settlemen's. Christian men instead of spending so much money to reach other and further places, would here find suitable locations where they could work for the Lord. We need a dozen or more colporters, men of faith and of the Holy Spirit to converse, and pray with parents and children, and distribute the seed of temperance, freedom and true religion. A few ministers of the Gospel are greatly needed, to bear aloft the banner of a true Gospel, and exalt the Lord our Righteousness."

From a missionary:

"There was a church organized in Salem, Ill., on the second Sabbath of January last, with 13 members. It has since increased to 27. There is in connection with it a flourishing Sunday-school, having 15 teachers and 80 scholars. There are two Bible classes in the school; one composed of young men and one of young ladies.

"The great battle on the slavery question is being fought in this part of the State. Until recently, the subject has been but little discussed. And even now the friends of the oppressed labor under great disadvantage. We are misrepresented, and slandered in our paper, without having the privilege of replying. Truth is gaining ground. God is with us; we will not fear what man can do."

From another missionary:

"Our little revival last winter was very profitable to the church, as well as to those who for the first time became interested in religion. The converts are getting along very well.

This county is filling up mostly from the Middle and Southern States. There are a good many Germans, and a few French, in and around the towns along the river, some of them Catholics and some Lutherans.

"There are not more than five or six self-sustaining churches in the county, that is, that are able to support preaching all the time; and there are whole townships, six miles square, without a single evangelical church or Sabbath-school.

"Pro-elavery is the rule; Anti-slavery the exception. As for temperance, it is almost entirely overlooked; while intemperance is silently and steadily on the increase."

From a missionary in Whiteside county:

"We have completed our house of worship in this place. It is small, but neatly furnished. Our prospects, with the blessing of God upon our efforts, were in my estimation, never better. In the township of Clyde, six miles from Morrison, where I have been preaching Sabbath afternoons for the last quarter, I have organized a Congregational church of nineteen members. They have no house of worship yet, but meet in a school-house. Fourteen of the persons have been professors. Five have recently been converted. At no time as yet has the house been sufficient to contain the entire congregation. A weekly prayer-meeting has been established, which is well attended. Fifty are connected with one of the Sabbath schools, there being two within the bounds of the congregation. The spirit of the Lord seems to be operating upon the hearts of the people with more than ordinary power."

From another missionary:

"Sabbath-schools are organized in almost every neighborhood; and when I visit the different schools, and see the little folks earnestly engaged in reading God's word, or aversing, and answering questions concerning truth and duty, I see a power which, if properly wielded, can not fail to produce glorious results. But these schools are frequently mere neighborhood enterprises for the purpose of passing a leisure hour on the Sabbath, before and after which the children are too often allowed to sport and stroll about in idleness.

"We are having accessions to our population from every quarter of the Union, and from the old country: a mixed multitude, which to form into a working, efficient agency for truth, is a great and arduous work. For this we labor, and trusting in God, patiently wait."

INDIANA.

From a missionary:

"The events and occurrences of the past afford lessons of instruction to help me out at the present, and to guide me through the future. Sectarianism and pro-slaveryism offer stubborn and determined resistance to the truth. The baneful influence of these forms of evil manifested itself in my field during the last year more than usual. When many souls were convicted, and deeply anxious for their salvation, sectarian bigots were very active, diverting the attention of the anxious from the all-important question of immediate surrender of the whole soul to Christ, by disputing about ordinances, etc. Pro-slavery men also stirred up the prejudices common in this State against our abolitionism.

"Notwithstanding this, we progress, as is shown by our statistical report. I feel stronger than I did one year ago; not that I have any thing in myself that can be a proper foundation for this confidence, but God, having blessed us by this gracious visitation, created a thirst for the divine presence that will give him no rest till he comes again to confer his gracious favors."

From Rev. Levin Wilson, Evangelist, Cynthiana, Posey county:

"In company with my brother Lewis, I left home for Dewitt and Logan counties, Illinois. We found many friends, among them brother McCormick. We all preached, and as I have since learned, 'accomplished a good work.'

"I went to Linnville, Warrick county, by request of a number of the best citizens, to deliver a 'Lecture contrasting Christianity and Slavery.' The Methodist church was freely given for their use; but several expedients were resorted to in order to keep the people from hearing me. Two Campbellite preachers got up a meeting at the same time in the Old-School Baptist church. A mob was formed, eggs procured, and plenty of whisky drank to 'make them fearless.' Evening came, the church was filled to overflowing, a number of the rowdies came into the house, and for a while greatly disturbed the congregation; but they soon left; then we had a very still and attentive audience. Quite a number, however, lingered about the door. The lecture was near two hours in length, (the close of which was the appointed time for egging,) and they were too drunk to execute their contemplated wickedness. As I retired from the church, some lewd fellow of the baser sort, being himself screened, threw a brick at me, but without effect. I have been threatened at other places which I have visited, but nothing serious has taken place."

From the same:

"We have infidelity of the Owen school; and Universalism abounds. There are two schools of Baptists: old or hard Baptists, and General Baptists. Both are loose in discipline, and are pro-slavery. The Episcopal Methodists are also dumb on the slavery question. Besides these, we have some Episcopaliars, Unitarians, Campbellites, Catholics, Lutherans, and other German societies. None are opposed to whisky-drinking, save the Methodists; and none to slavery, save one small German society. Whisky-making, murdering, rapine, and drunkenness, with Sabbath-breaking, swearing and rowdyism in general, are the order of the day. There is no great interest in religion among the various sects; no revivals, and not much plety among them. I think, however, that truth is advancing: freedom and righteousness of course follow."

From a missionary:

"I preached at different places, in churches, solvol-houses, and cottages, sometimes alone, and at others in company with ministers of different denominations, holding several days' meetings in succession; also doing some colporter work in Posey, Gibson, and Pike counties. In the school-house in Pike county, with the Cumberland Presbyterians, we had a revival.

"Education is somewhat behind the times in Southern Indians. A large portion of the adults can not read or write. The children are much in advance of their parents in this respect. The colored people are greatly neglected and oppressed in Indians. They are taxed as other people, but not allowed to send their children to the public schools. A large portion of the population are from the Southern States, some of them strong pro-slavery men, while others are as true to the anti-slavery principles as any in the country."

From another missionary:

"My great business at Evansville and in the vicinity was to spread the truth, and awaken an interest in spiritual things, by distributing tracts, by conversation, reading the Bible, and praying with the people from house to house.

"Evansyille contains about 16,000 inhabitants. The people are not well educated, compared with those of northern cities. There seems not so much a lack of churches, as a dearth of vital piety. Ministers exhort inquirers to give their names for admission to the churches, and then their fears are calmed; they settle down on a dead hope, to bring forth the fruits of death. The more thinking part of the people are led thus to believe that there is no vital power in religion to save from sin.

"The people are simple and impressible, and earnest conversation and prayer will frequently bring tears to their eyes; but when the missionary is gone, they are easily diverted by evil influences. Estreest, warm-hearted missionaries, to remain permanently among them, are greatly needed. To such missionaries Southern Indiana offers a glorious harvest. We have a few good laborers there, but the work is too great for them."

MICHIGAN.

From a missionary, Berrien county, May 8, 1860:

"Revival.

"About the first of February, I commenced holding extra services, hoping for help, but not knowing whence it would come; yet I dared not shrink from the effort to which I felt the Lord called me. Numbers of the church had been praying earnestly for a revival; and we soon began to see the indications of the Lord's presence in a special sense. For want of help, I was obliged to feel my way along, hardly daring to call it a series of meetings. Rev. Geo. Clark came to my aid, and labored acceptably and with great faithfulness. The work in wed steadily and quietly on; constantly increasing in power, until the meeting closed. There were nearly forty hopeful submissions to Christ. Last Sabbath, May 6.h, was a blessed day, we had a communion season, and received twenty-one into the church, and we expect to receive as many more during the spring, by letter and profession. We have a young converts' meeting every week, which is very interesting."

From another missionary, July 14, 1860:

"Labors at Livonia-Skepticism.

"I have devoted every alternate Sabbath to preaching in Livonia, for the past three months; having a morning service in the Union meeting-house, and an afternoon service at the center of the town. Both of my congregations have gradually increased from the beginning. Each now numbers about one hundred.

"Here has been one of the strongholds of infidel itinerant lecturers. I have adapted my preaching to the peculiar characteristics of such a people—having in view the two-fold work of demolishing the religion of skepticism and establishing the religion of Christ crucified. It has been my uniform custom to announce beforehand my subject, which has secured a larger audience, and a higher interest in the theme.

"In the commencement of my labors, the few Christians in attendance from abroad were beset, at the close of the service, by earnest disputations, and multiplied objections and questions; but gradually this state of things gave place to earnest and quiet though fulness; and now the most profound, earnest, and at times solicitous attention is the leading characteristic of my meetings. So that I am not without hopes of a permanent good to this people, especially if providence should open the way for more concentrated labor in the future."

From another missionary:

"It is to be lamented that so little interest is felt in the subject of missions and the heathen at home and abroad, but I have every reason to believe that your paper, the American Missionary, is doing a good work in this respect. The mass of our people in the West take no missionary paper, many of them no religious paper. And hence the gratuitous circulation of your paper is accomplishing incalculable good. You may not at odee perceive it, but it is nevertheless doing its work, and doing it thoroughly. It will pay financially, morally, and spiritually. It will return to your Society, in the end, much more than the cost of the paper."

OHIO.

From Rev. J. G. Brice, Agent and Missionary at large in Southern Ohio.

"I am satisfied, from personal observation, that the cause for which we are laboring is stendily on the advance, and ere long our principles must control and give life and spirit to all other mission Boards. I am more and more convinced, each day of my life, not only of the necessity there was for our present organization, but also of the final success that shall ultimately crown our efforts. It is of God, and can not be overthrown. In the early propagation of Christianity, the primitive Christian suffered even unto death. It was then utterly impossible for any one to live godly in Christ Jesus, carry out the principles of the Gospel, and labor for the establishment of a religion that taught love to God and men, without meeting with every species of indignity. They were reviled, beaten, imprisoned, and put to death. Our principles are the same. Like them, we are opposed to all the crimes and wrongs that are in the world, excluding and denouncing every system of iniquity. As genuine religion is always the same, in a greater or less degree the same opposition may be expected; and, therefore, the persecution that we and our missionaries have met in the prosecution of our work, is a test of the purity and goodness of it. Let us not be disheartened, but 'thank God, and take ourage.'

"The persecutions that have prevailed in past ages of the Church, have always been overruled for good. The Lord has made, and will continue to make 'the wrath of man to praise him.' The imprisonment of brother Worth, and the sufferings endured by the exiles from Kentucky, brother Fee and his companions, have tended greatly to commend the truth and grace of the Gospel. These persecutions are awakening the attention of men, and leading them to investigate our principles; and, together with the meek, patient, forgiving spirit exhibited under wrongs, and the peace and inward supports enjoyed by these sufferers, are making deep impressions on many minds heretofore timid or indifferent to the wrongs of the oppressed.

"The anti-slavery cause, in Church and State, is progressing. Men are gradually taking higher ground and a firmer stand against slavery—that system of wrong and injustice; are more out-spoken in their rebuke of it, and labor more for its extermination. The temperance cause is to some extent revived, and in many places renewed efforts are being made for the reclamation of the inebriate. In this work, as in labor for the removal of oppression, the missionaries of temperance are sometimes called 'to suffer trouble as evil-doers,' though not 'unto bonds.'

"There is one feature of our work which is not only gratifying to me, but greatly encouraging. It is uniting together the different denominations who sympathize in the religious and moral reforms of the day. Under it, sectarian and denominational prejudices are disappearing, and Christians of different evangelical denominations are becoming more closely and tenderly united in the bonds of Christian love and fellowship, and in their efforts to extend the cause of truth and rightousness in the world. They are willing to stak minor differences, which have heretofore separated them, and join heartily in the great work of bringing back this revolted and lost world to God. An elder of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, in giving me, a few days age, his dodnation, made this remark: 'This is given to sid you in your noble Christian work.' I visit, in my work, ten or eleven different religious denominations, and my entrance among them has been always cordial and kind; and if they were not told, it would be difficult for them to know to which one of them I belonged."

From a missionary:

"In February last we held in Felicity a very interesting series of meetings. The Lord blessed us with an outpouring of his Spirit. The result was the quickening of the children of God, and the conversion of scale. Twenty-one were received into the church on profession of faith. Since that time I have, every Sabbath evening, met a Bible class, composed of the aged and the young. It has been sustained thus far with interest.

"The Sabbath-school at Felicity is in a flourishing condition. Quite a number of colored children attend it. On the lest fourth of July, a union celebration was proposed, but it was soon manifest that some were unwilling to take part in the celebration, unless our colored children were excluded. This we unanimously refused to dc. Our superintendent asked the children, Shall we go without the colored children? No! was their reply. The result was, the whole thing fell through."

From another missionary:

"In the Southern part of Ohio, where your missionary has been laboring for the last three of four winters, there is much missionary labor to be performed among the colored people. In many of the towns and villages, circuit-riders, connected with the African Methodist-Episcopal Church, hold meetings about once a month. But in the settlements some ten or fifteen miles back in the woods, they have little or no religious instruction; and the result is, that Sabbath desceration and nearly every vice provail. Most of the people are from the South, and are very ignorant. Their ideas of right and wrong are very vague. They both need and want to be instructed. It was the privilege of your missionary to labor among some of this class, last fall and winter; and in a settlement of some fifty or sixty, nearly one half professed faith in Christ.

"There are fragments of Sabbath-schools in nearly every village, and with some

"There are fragments of Sabbath-schools in nearly every village, and with some competent person to take the lead, they might be greatly incressed, and made a great blessing to the young. The use of tobacco is very common, even among children. Intemperance, also, prevails to an alarming extent. The labors of a faithful colporter in distributing tracts upon these vices, would be a great blessing to this people, particularly to the young."

From another missionary:

"I have recently visited Bloomfield, Jay county, Indiann; I commenced preaching 24th of August; continued eleven days; and organized a church of twenty-eight members, which is now ministered to by brother Marcus.

"The church, as are others to which I minister, is on the Union basis—receiving

"The church, as are others to which I minister, is on the Union basis—receiving those having a Christian experience with a righteous practice. The people receive heartly the idea of Christians uniting upon principles of purity, bearing testimony against popular sins. The testimony there is decided against alavery and oppression all its forms. There was more interest than I have found for many months. Four-year ministers were present at different stages of the meeting. Many of them took part in the exercises. The meeting was truly a union meeting. The number of conversions was larger than the number of additions to the church. A treasury was formed for the poor.

"The churches here on the border, to which brother Fee and I minister, are from forty to one bundred and twenty-five miles apart. We can reach them only occasionally; they need a resident pastor. These churches meet with opposition because of their testimony against slavery. Conservatism prevails in the popular churches, and of course among the people. The people need a constant light."

From a missionary:

"Miami county, of which Troy is the county-seat, was originally settled by natives of Kentucky and Virginis, who brought with them their pro-elavery prejudices. The deep and cruel prejudice sgainst color, and the bitterest hatred against the friends of the slave, obtain to a large extent in this county, and especially in this town. Hence the difficulty of sustaining a decidedly anti-slavery church. This country, known as the Miami Valley, is probably the richest in sgricultural resources in the State, if not in the Union. Distilleries are numerous, and the capital invested in the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors is immense. Leading men, both in Church and State, are interested in the traffic. This furnishes another reason why it is difficult to sustain a church in this town that excludes from its fellowship slaveholders and their abettors, and all those engaged directly or indirectly in the liquor traffic.

"Our congregations are steadily on the increase Occasionally the house, which has a commodation for about four hundred and fifty, is filled to overflowing. Of late, a large proportion of our evening congregations has been composed of young people."

"We welcome the uncared-for colored children into our school, in consequence of which the attendance is comparatively small. There have been two conversions in the Sabbath-school.

"The cause of God and suffering humanity seems to be, on the whole, in an encouraging state. True, there is much open, and more secret, opposition to a pure, uncompromising Gospel, and the adherents of a sin-rebuking church have to make great sacrifices to maintain their position; but, trusting in the promises of the Lord Jesus Christ, and believing in the final and glorious triumph of truth, we are determined to live by it, or die in its defense."

From another missionary:

"Your rule in relation to tobacco, I think eminently fitting and proper. I write from sad experience. It has been almost ten years since I quit the use of tobacco, yet to this day I have not recovered the vigor of mind or body lost by the use of the vile abomination. I was a slave to it, and only quit it when I felt that it was impossible for me to 'render my body a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God,' and continue its use. It was the strength derived from earnest prayer which enabled me to overcome it.

"I preach sgainst its use. When I came into this church quite a number of the brethren were engaged in raising it. I told them, in a sermon on love to our neighbor, that I thought it is consistent for Christians to raise and traffic in that which was doing so great an amount of injury to the hodies and souls of men.

so great an amount of injury to the bodies and souls of men.

"This year I know of only about half an acre, planted by one of the church members; this is planted by one of our elders. It is indeed discouraging when one in whom the church has placed so much confidence as to make him an office bearer, a leader, should set such an example. He formerly raised a great deal of tobacco, for a small farmer, but quit. Yet I suppose there still remains a longing after the 'leeks and onions' of Egypt—so be has returned to his idol. I thank God for raising up George Trask to fight this great evil. Would that there were thousands of such 'fanatics' among the mininstry of the land."

PENNSYLVANIA.

From a missionary in this State:

"The past quarter has been one of deep interest in our little church. We have enjoyed a precious season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord the past winter. For many years before, we have not been favored with so interesting a work of grace. Our former revivals have not been characterized by so deep a feeling and solemn at liness, indicating the presence of the Spirit of God, as the present one. A great moral change has taken place in our village, once noted for wickedness. We can not report so large a number of conversions as is witnessed in some places, but all the converts appear de-

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

"We held a series of meetings in the village, with the assistance of Rev. Mr. Henry, of Ellington, for about four weeks and they were well attended, and solemn. A general interest was felt in the meeting. Almost the whole community were conversing and inquiring upon the subject of religion. The Lord had long and justly passed us by, but now we greatly rejoice in the good accomplished. To our God be all the praise. There are over twenty hopeful conversions, most of them heads of families, though some are youths. Eight family altars have been erected, and we have now quite a strong company of praying ones in our village. Oh! that we might increase until error shall give way to truth, and wickedness fade away forever! Almost the whole community were conversing and inquiring upon the subject of religion. I have attended meetings, laboring night and day, nearly all winter, and the Lord has been pleased to grant us some precious fruits. Our meeting-house is about completed, and we expect soon to have it dedicated: that will be a joyful event to us."

From another missionary:

"In almost every direction from us, but particularly in the north and north-east, at a distance of from twenty-five to forty miles from Mercer, rock-oil has been discovered by boring. The fabulous yield of oil by the wells, is exciting the avarice of the people, and emigrants are pouring in, from almost every direction, to the particular localities of the wells. And, as might be expected, that emigration brings a class of society which is neither religious nor moral. The consequence is a great increase of immorality, drunkenness, gambling, Sabbath-breaking, etc., in the particular localities where the emigrants are most thickly crowded. Every where, and in all places, there is great need of bold, faithful, earnest, affectionate preaching.

"In connection with much that is gratifying as to increasing intelligence, progressive education, good morals, and propriety of conduct, there is much to deplore, in all that relates to that sound and earnest type of religion, that leads men and women to devote, prayerfully, earnestly, and persistently, their time, talents, wealth, and lives to the ennobling work and service of Christ."

NEW-JERSEY.

From a missionary in this State:

"God has mercifully visited us with saving power. Seeing the numbers of young men in this city, my heart was moved to make a special effort in their behalf. Accordingly, with the last quarter I commenced a series of lectures on the parable of the Prodigal Son. These were listened to, by numbers crowding most unusually into our sanctuary. Through the whole series, consisting of fourteen lectures, the interest has been very great, and the results immediately following are apparent.

"All through the last fall and winter, the spiritual life of the church had been reviving, and an ardent desire for the salvation of souls was manifested. We had held district prayer-meetings in different parts of the city at private residences. In these, prevailing prayer was offered.

"Nearly all the older pupils, and some of the teachers in our Sabbath-school, have been converted. Lately, the work has extended to persons of maturer years, and heads of families now are beginning to bow before the Cross. A lady, once a church-member, having been led astray by an infidel husband, has openly confessed her errors and warned the young against similar delusions. Others, who were supposed to have been ordinarily faithful as Christians, have declared that in the new life which they have at last found, it seems to them as if they had before known nothing of real religion. On the first Sabbath in April fifty persons were admitted to our church on profession of their faith; and on the succeeding communion season in May, ten more were added to this number, thus making sixty souls in all."

graph fields at the company for a section of the company of the co

NEW-YORK.

From Rev. John Lowrey, Saratoga Springs:

"Anti-slavery ministers do not appear to come here much, and those who do come. are generally silent on the great sin of the church and the pation. Prayer-meetings are held every morning at five o'clock in our church by a few brethren. Our congregations in the daytime on the Sabbath, are smaller than ever before; many of those who generally attend with us have been so engaged on the Sabbath, that they have not time to attend public worship. The Sabbath is desecrated here, and is made more a day of feasting than of sacred rest. At the preaching at nine o'clock on Sabbath evenings, we have had large congregations, mostly of colored persons, who come here to earn a few dollars during the visiting season. Many of them profess religion, and all of them are well-behaved and regular in attending church. The Sabbath-school is in a languishing condition. Most of the scholars we have gathered in, have been induced to attend other schools, partly by pro-slavery prejudice, and partly by inducements of excursions, clothing, and other presents being held out to them.

We have had several discussions with slaveholders, while distributing the papers you sent; some of them expressed a willingness to read them. One Sabbath, while distributing tracts, I saw a colored woman taking care of a child, and learning that she was a slave, claimed by a man who lived in Tennessee, but was visiting at the Springs with his family, and was taking care of the children, I told her how she could be free, and exhorted her to improve the present opportunity. She decided not to return to slavery, and is now rejoicing in civil and religious liberty, and it is very cheering to hear her tell in meetings, in her artless manner, the Lord's gracious dealings with her. The husband is still in bondage. May God speedily deliver him."

From the same:

"We have a numerous congregation, Sabbath evenings especially, composed chiefly of colored people The young men formed a literary association, and meet every Thursday evening, in the church, for mutual improvement -lectures and discussions. A union prayer-meeting, so-called, has been held here every day this summer in the Baptist, Presbyterian, and Methodist churches alternately, but as these meetings have been under pro-slavery influences, I do not learn that they have been attended with many good results. The State Temperance Convention has been held here, but the people took very little interest iu the meetings."

From Rev. H. H. Garnet, pastor of the Shiloh colored church, New-York City:

"My labors, during the year, have been principally confined to this city, occasionally extending to localities round about. The majority of my congregation are young persons. We have one young man, a member of the church, who is in his last year in the Union Theological Seminary in this city. He is a young man of promise and piety, and of a fair education. It has also been a pleasant part of my duty to visit the colored schools, seven of which we have in New-York. I have twice visited my brethren in Orange county. In the month of July, I went to Middletown, and preached on Sabbath afternoon in the Presbyterian Church. The negro-pews were abandoned on that occasion. In the evening, I preached in the Methodist church, to a very large congregation. The colored people were crowded into the negro-pews. I presented, plainly and faithfully, the subject of Christian equality, and received some response from the friends of the Redeemer. In August, I visited the southern portion of the county, and preached and spoke to very large assemblies, in Unionville, the Clone valley; and in the vicinity of those places I met with but one church where the negro-pew is not tolerated, and in that, a talented colored man had for many years been the chorister."

OBITUARY NOTICE-DEATH OF REV. NOAH EMERSON.

This venerable minister of Christ, long a resident of Hollis, N. H., died at the Reservation of the Shinnecock Indians, in the town of Southampton, Long Island, July 9, 1860. Early last winter he became deeply interested in the remnant of this tribe of Indians, and corresponded with us in relation to his laboring as a missionary among them. He commenced his labors there early in May, and continued them till the day of his death, preaching three times, and holding a Bible class on the Sabbath, and visiting the people at their homes during the week. He preached twice, and held his Bible class as usual, July 8th, and expected to have preached a third time at 5 o'clock, but immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis, and was immediately after the services of the Bible class, he was stized with paralysis. diately taken to his lodgings. Every thing that the skill of the physician and the min-istration of kind friends could do, was in vain. Without any apparent recovery of con-sciousness, he died about half-past twelve o'clock that night.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

The relations of this much esteemed brother to our Association were peculiar. He wished to cooperate with us, and desired that his labors should be under the supervision of our Executive Committee, and subject to its approval, but, he expressly stipulated, "without pay." When he might have claimed exemption from labor on account of infirmity, his labors were volunteered to the little church to which he minis ered; to which, and to the whole community, he greatly endeared himself by his labors of love. His funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. W. N. Cleveland, from the very appropriate text: "Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord. Yes, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.'

From Rev. A. G. Beman, Missionary Agent to the Colored People:

"There are some true and earnest friends, who desire the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, as it is to be represented in the character and condition of the African race. They feel that the Gospel is for them—that they need its blessed truths and elevating spirit—and that it is the duty as well as the privilege of those who have the means, under God, to bestow it upon thom.

"I can not give that cheering account of the progress of the cause of total abstinence from the use of all intextesting liquors, as a beverage, that I should be glad to. Some few I find true and faithful in the great and good cause. On the other hand, multitudes seem hastening to a drunkard's grave, while the Bible declares: "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God." Mothers are trembling withanxiety over the impending fate of their sons, and wives speak with sorrow and anguish of their husbands.

"On the subject of the use of tobacco in smoking and chewing, I hardly know what to say. I can not describe this wide-spread and deep-seated ovil—sin. Many of the young men, according to their own statements, are spending for this degrading vice from ten to sixty dollars a year. One minister told me that his cigars cost more than thirty dollars a year! How enormous the expense in every town, village, and city in the land. How well nigh impossible is it to 'break the tempter's fatal power!' Yet there is much of the spirit of improvement among individuals in all parts of the country.

"I find many persons who have never heard of the existence of the American Missionery Association, and its band of noble laborers in this and in foreign lands; they know nothing of its operation in Africa, the West-Indies, the United States, and in Canada, for the Christianization and elevation of the colored race. When these missions Canada, for the Christianization and elevation of the colored race. When these missions are described their hearts rejoice. It encutrages them to know that there are so many efforts made to preach a free and pure Gospel in the world. That there are so many Christian men and women who are willing to leave all and go to the dark land of heathenism, to preach Christ and him cracified to the perishing, shows the vital power of the Christian religion. Why should not such facts be placed in the hands of all the colored people? Is there not reason to hope that, in this way, much good would be done, and that from among the twenty-three thousand colored people of New-England, from among the hundreds of thousands in the country, some would be quickened to a higher life, and offer themselves to go as lights into the dark corners of the earth? A thousand such might find open doors of ussulness among the African race on the globe.

"God hasten the day when a consecrated host shall go forth and every where "stand thousand such might not open doors of usefulness among the African race on the globe.

"God hasten the day when a consecrated host shall go forth and every where 'stand up for Jesus.' May more and more Obristian effort be made to accomplish this grand and glorious object; then shall the day dawn—"when Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hands' (long shackled by slavery, superstition, and ignorance) 'unto God.' Every where I have found ministers and Obristiaus ready to cooperate with and encourage me in this work, and to all I hereby express my grateful acknowledgments."

AND THE RESERVE AND THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PART

The American Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists of Ohio and Pennsylvania, Auxiliary to the American Missionary

Rev. Howell Powell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, President; Robert R. OWENS, of Newark, Treasurer; Rev. EDWARD T. EVANS, of Newark, Secretary.

Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionary Society of Wisconsin and Illinois.

Rev. Robert Williams, Sparta, Wisconsin, President; Rev. Rees EVANS, Cambria, Wisconsin, Secretary; Hugh Elias, Esq., Genesee, Wisconsin, Treasurer.

We have received no report of these two auxiliaries.

The above should have been inserted, with the other auxiliaries, on a former page of this report, but were inadvertently omitted.

to the transfer the section of the transfer to the transfer to the transfer to the transfer to the transfer to Visit in a substant of the substantial and the the expression of the commence of the control of th The state of the s young smarry of the payment of the print with the payment of the p

the common communication and the common of t

The Property of American States of the Committee and and the first and the substitution of the subs

Superior of the property of the State of the the supplied on head out till refund to a treatment threshold, the

The property of the state of the second second second second second the property of the second That I a tour me to through him one his hor was investigate visit page And the state of t The proof of the processing of the following of the first of the second and radial residence during the second district the state of the second district the s Laure Denger Deer eiler gelichte in telle war den alle ander gelanden.

in the same bearing the framework out a second or the same same and the same of Company Some Francis Company of the State of the South State of the State of State of State of the State of t there has been good any property of the careful of on a companie of the street end of the local terms of the and waters and the statement that it is the statement of the statement of

The broad and the species being a constitution of the first and the species of th

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

THE COUNTY OF STATE OF STATE OF STATE OF THE STATE OF STA

the manufacture of the Chapter Statement of the control of the con

BY REV. JOHN MORGAN, D.D.,

OF OBERLIN, O.

CHRIST'S MISSIONARY CHARGE.

"ALL power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."—MATT. 23: 18-20.

NEVER were words uttered of more stupendous significance. We have become too familiar with them easily to appreciate their extraordinary import. The wonderful personage who put forth claims so lofty, had, to the dismay of his disciples, suffered a felon's doom; but he has now burst the bars of death and is among his apostles again; and just as he is about to ascend to his Father, he gives utterance to these pregnant sayings. They again put forward the grandeur of his claims, now confirmed by his resurrection-they enjoin upon his disciples the wonderful duty of converting all the nations, baptizing and instructing them, and promise them his perpetual presence to the end of the world. The plan of operations here disclosed is so vast, and the execution enjoined on so insignificant a company of men, that had not the manifestations of Jesus Christ been most impressive and convincing, his plan and injunction and promise, must have appeared the products of a disordered brain. But to those who had witnessed his works and heard his instructions, the text seemed words of truth and soberness,-his command and promise sank into their hearts,-the flame of faith spread into other hearts,-and Christendom both of the past and the present is the result. The missionary enterprise in all the phases of its history has found its authority and inspiration in these and similar utterances. It is wholesome for us on occasions like the present to seek a fresh impulse in our great work from the inspiring influence of the great words of our Lord.

1. We will first ponder a little the introductory portions of the text. It was not to the eleven alone, but to all who are called to missionary labor, that Jesus said: "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth." The eleven were representative men, who could not in the nature of things be competent to convert all the nations; and the responsibility of this mighty enterprise was therefore to descend to many generations of successors. We may without presumption reckon ourselves among them. To us, then, Jesus says: "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth."

- (1.) We see that these are not the words merely of the Absolute Deity in Christ, but of him, who, being human and brother of our race, is drawn into such mysterious union with the Infinite One, that all the fullness of the Godhead really dwells in him, to be wielded for our behoof. Though conscious of his high relation to God, he had with a brother's heart, toiled and taught, and suffered, and died, in our world, to redeem us from sin and woe. He is now about to go up to his Father's right hand, and to sit with him on the throne of the universe. He is to sway all authority in heaven and in earth,—to rule over men and angels, and all the powers of nature; and this sway he is to exercise for the same ends for which he was cradled in the manger and suffered on the cross. It was for man he toiled and humbled himself to a malefactor's death, and it is for man he reigns in heaven and over earth.
- (2.) But it was especially to prepare the eleven to receive the commission to evangelize the nations, that he announced his investiture with universal dominion. He wished them to take this great idea fully into their minds, that they might ever know and feel that the enterprise committed to them, stupendous as it was, rested on a solid basis. They would remember the manifestations of divine power and wisdom which they had witnessed from him-they would remember his victory over the king of terrors-but to encourage their hearts in the midst of their arduous work, while breasting the opposition of wicked men and the malign powers of the unseen world, they would chiefly recall these comprehensive words spoken for the very purpose of assuring them that He whose love and sympathy they had enjoyed so richly on earth, raised to heaven's throne, possessed and exercised power fully adequate to sustain and prosper them in preaching the Gospel to every creature, and making all mankind disciples of their Master. As Stephen did when he was exercising the functions of an evangelist, they could see him who called himself the Son of Man standing clothed with divine prerogatives at the right hand of God. to assert at the belover History in its past of the table
- I now pass from the introduction to consider a little more particularly the missionary orders given by our Lord to the eleven and their successors.

ANNUAL DISCOURSE.

The command is expressed in the words, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the mane of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Though the weight of critical authority is against the genuineness of the "therefore" in this passage, yet, as an ancient annotation, the word, I think, correctly indicates the logical connection. The idea that our Lord assigns his universal power and authority as the basis of the command, imparts to the whole and to every part of it a higher significance. It enhances the obligation and the interest of a profound study of its import. And the longer and deeper our study, the richer and more glorious will that import appear to be.

(1.) The command is not merely, go and teach all nations, but, as the marginal translation literally gives it, go and make disciples of all nations. The next verse employs a different word, rightly translated teaching, which would not here express the mind of Christ. The command, as given, is nothing short of an injunction binding the disciples to convert all the nations to the obedience of the Gospel.

It would be pressing the words too far to make them enjoin the conversion of every individual of every nation; but their natural force would be maimed and crippled, and their proper effulgence eclipsed, if we should make them enjoin less than the conversion of the great mass of every kindred and tribe and people, including the prevailing majority of men of every rank and degree, the kings transformed to nursing fathers, and the queens to nursing mothers of divine truth and heavenly piety.

Such a result would not exceed the glowing pictures of prophetic prediction, setting forth that all the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord, and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before him. "It is a light thing," says God to the Messiah, "that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel; I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth." Daniel compares the kingdom of God to a stone cut out from a mountain without hands, which smites the colossal image symbolizing the kingdoms opposed to God, and itself becomes a great mountain, filling the whole earth. And in literal language, this great prophet predicts that the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High.

I am aware that some excellent men think that sweeping judgments inflicted by the hand of Christ will exercise an influence of mighty significance in accomplishing this grand result, and doubtless it is true that the judgments of the great King of Israel abroad in the earth, are necessary that the inhabitants of the world may learn righteousness. But judgments without the preaching of the Gospel would have no tendency to effect the conversion of the nations. It is still true that those who in obedience to Christ's command and with faith in its proper import, aim to make disciples to their Master of all mankind, are succeeding in their work, God confirming their words by all needful attestations and providential operations and judgments.

It was indeed a sublime scene, when He who had so meekly submitted to death and so unostentatiously risen again, gathered his eleven humble apostles around him, and calmly gave them the wondrous commission to convert the world. And it is marvellous, too, that with entire simplicity of faith, these eleven uninfluential men accepted the commission, and entered upon the vast undertaking.

(2.) It was an important part of the great commission of those who were commanded to convert all the nations, that they were to baptize them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. They were not to perform on their converts a mere mysterious ceremony, but a rite symbolical of the highest and most glorious relations. By baptism it was most beautifully and impressively set forth, that the sins of the converts were washed away, that the guilt and power of their iniquities were abolished, that they henceforth were no longer unclean, but holy—"that they were washed, that they were sanctified, that they were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." Baptism was to be the sign and seal of the great fact that not by works of righteousness that they had done, but according to his mercy God had saved them by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost, shed on them abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour.

By baptism thus gloriously significant, the converted nations were to be consecrated and set apart to the experience of all that is involved in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Names in the ancient times were significant, and were employed sometimes to express the leading characteristics of the persons who bore them; and thus we are to understand the terms in the text before us. The converts were to be consecrated to the name of the Father, as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and through him the Father of every disciple and the Father of our race, the Father in a higher and happier sense than that of Creator, a sense which involves the communication of all the communicable good which belongs to our Lord Jesus Christ. It is in this relation that the convert cries to God, Abba, that is, Father, sharing in the experience by which Jesus in his native Hebrew, gave to God this most endearing of names.

Baptism into the name of the Father, as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, implies baptism into the name of the Son; but as it was intended that we should here have in outline, - here in the grand commission to make Christianity universal, - the fullness of the high relations to which Christianity introduces us, the primitive missionaries were expressly commanded to baptize explicitly also into the name of the Son. This sacred name belongs to our Lord, - as the Angel told his Virgin mother, - because the Holy Ghost came upon her and the power of the Highest overshadowed her, imparting to her child the divine nature and perfections, that Word which was in the beginning with God and was God, in whom the whole Godhead is consciously concentrated for manifestation, becoming flesh in him, and dwelling among us that we might see him as the only begotten of the Father full of grace and truth, and receive of his fullness even grace for grace. Into his name as the way to the Father, and thus the truth and the life, the missionary baptizes the converted sinner. In him by union with our poor nature, God is manifested as Immanuel, God with us and for us. Into the hearts of those who come to God by him, the Father sends forth the Spirit of his Son, and the Son communicates to those who have by faith united themselves to him and become members of his body, that Spirit which without measure dwells in him. And for this reason, as well as because he partakes of their flesh and blood, he is not ashamed to call them brethren.

We may hence see why it is one part of the missionary's commission, that he should baptize those whom he converts to Christ, into the name of the Holy Ghost. That name assures the convert that, believing on Christ, it belongs to his privilege and portion to have the Spirit of his Heavenly Father, the Spirit of the only begotten Son, dwell in his soul, in closest and most effective union with his own spirit, making him think the thoughts, put forth the choices, and exercise the feelings of his Saviour, and drawing all his inward being into sympathy and harmony with him, his doings and sufferings. It is specially with respect to the function of the Spirit of God, as the subjective or inward source and spring of holy spiritual life and well-being, that he is called the Holy Spirit, and it is as actuated by him that the saints are designated as spiritual.

